THE LIFE AND REIGN OF King Charles the First.

MANY Writers have divided the Reign of a Prince from his Life, and ſo have given the Actions without the Man; the Political Occurrences without the Genius, that gave a Riſe and a Turn to them. It ſhall be the preſent Deſign, to write the Life as well as the Reign of this unfortunate Prince, and give all the true Characters of his Perſon along with a Relation of all the Affairs of his Government: To which purpoſe, it will be proper to give ſome Account of his Birth, Childhood, Youth, and Education; to view him from his Cradle to his Crown.

Born Nov. 19. 1600.

Charles, a younger Son of James VI. King of Scotland, and of Anne his Wife Daughter of the King of Denmark, was born at Dunfermling on November 19. 1600, ſo weak an Infant, that upon apprehenſion of his ſhort Life, they haſtned on his Baptiſm, without a more decent Delay and thoſe ſuitable Ceremonies that would have otherwiſe attended his Admiſſion into the Church: Born and Baptiz'd in ſomewhat of Surprize and Confuſion; as it were beginning the World in a kind of Preſage how he was to end it.

Titles conferr'd on him, 1601.

In the ſecond Year of his Age, 1601, he was created Duke of Albany, Marqueſs of Ormond, Earl of Roſs, and Baron of Ardmanock, Titles much greater than the Revenues to ſupport them: A ſecond Son of the Royal Blood in Scotland muſt have been, as in leſs Noble Families, a ſort of Dependent on the elder Brother.

His Succeſſion foretold in 1603.

In 1603 there was ſuch an Augury made of his future Greatneſs, as deſerves to be here related. When his Royal Father King James was preparing for his Remove to the Throne of England, a certain old Laird of the Highlands came to take his ſolemn Leave of the Court, and was for that purpoſe admitted into the Bed-chamber, where he found himſelf in the Preſence of his Majeſty, the Queen, and Royal Children. He addreſs'd himſelf to the King with a long deal of ſage Advice and affectionate Wiſhes. He then, overlooking Prince Henry, applied himſelf directly to Duke Charles, and kiſs'd his Hand with ſo much Ardency and Devoutneſs, as if he meant to pay ſome extraordinary Honours to him. The King, to correct his ſuppoſed Miſtake, ſeem'd to take him off, and to direct him toward his elder Son, who, as Heir of the Crown, had a Title to his firſt and greateſt Reſpect and Obſervance. But the antient Laird would not be guided, nor diverted from his earneſt Applications to the little Duke; and ſaid, He was not miſtaken; he knew to whom he addreſs'd himſelf: This Child whom he now ſaw in the Nurſe's Arms, ſhould be greater than his elder Brother, and ſhould convey his Father's Name and Titles to ſucceeding Generations. An Hiſtorian obſerves, that "This then was conceived to be Do- Perinchief.
"tage; but the Event gave it the Credit of a Pro-
"phecy, and confirmed that Opinion, that ſome
"long-experienc'd Souls in the World, before their
"diſlodging, arrive to the height of Prophetick Spi-
"rits. It is commonly ſaid, there be more of theſe Inſtances of Foreſight or Second-ſight, and moſt extraordinary Preſages, in Scotland than in any other Country. One Example of the like nature, in foretelling the Fortune of Infants, is credibly given in the Life of Archbiſhop Spotſwood, born in Scotland in the Year 1565. "When he was no ſooner brought "into the World, but this remarkable Paſſage did
"accompany his Birth: For among the reſt that "were preſent (not ordinary Goſſippers, but Wo-
"men of good note) there was one among them,
"who in a ſober tho' in a prophetick Fit, taking
"the Child in her Arms, called aloud to the reſt
"in theſe or the like terms; You may all very well
"rejoyce at the Birth of this Child, for he will become

" the Prop and Pillar of this Church, and the main and " chief Inſtrument in the defending of it.

Committed to the Governance of the Lady Cary.

To return to our young Duke Charles; When the King had given Orders for his Journey toward England: He appointed the Queen to follow him about twenty Days after, and in the mean time left his Commands, that the Prince ſhould remain at Striveling, the Princeſs Elizabeth with Alexander Earl of Linlithgow, and our Duke of Albany with the Lord Fyvie Preſident of the Seſſion. Soon after he was committed to the Care and Governance of the Lady Cary, as a Reſpect and Reward to her Husband Sir Robert Cary, who had been ſent from the Engliſh Council with the firſt News of Queen Elizabeth's Death.

Brought into England, and made Knight of the Bath and Duke of York, in 1604.

In the next Year 1604, he fell into ſome Indiſpoſition, and was hardly fit for change of Air till toward October; when, by eaſie Stages, he was brought to the Engliſh Court at Windſor: and there, to give him the more Princely Figure, he was created Knight of the Bath on January the 5th, and the Day after was inveſted with the Title of Duke of York, to naturalize him in Engliſh Honours.

Committed to the Tuition of Mr. Murray in 1605.

In 1606 it ſeem'd to be now time to take him from his Governeſs; and from the treating him as a Child, to put him into a Manly way of Education. He was now therefore committed to the Tuition of Mr. Thomas Murray, a Scot, a Man of Learning and Prudence, tho' a Favourer of Presbytery; which yet he could never inſtill into his Pupil, who paid him all juſt Reſpect, made him afterwards his Secretary, and beſtow'd on him the Provoſtſhip of Eaton in 1621, where at 59 Years of Age he was buried in April 1623. and left behind him many valuable Papers, which after a long Darkneſs were lately brought to Light, and are now in the Hands of a moſt Reverend Prelate of this Church.

A forward Scholar.

Under this Tutor he was diligent and ſtudious; and the more ſo, becauſe ſome Imperfections of his Body diſpos'd him to the better Improvements of his Mind: for he was a weakly Boy, with his Legs growing crooked, that made his Gate ſlow and ungraceful: this made him leſs inclin'd to Sports and Exerciſes of Activity, and ſo more at leiſure for his Book and his Pen. A Writer of his Life tells us, " His Proficiency in Letters was ſo eminent, that " Prince Henry taking notice of it, to put a Jeſt " upon him, one day put the Cap of Archbiſhop " Abbot (who was then with the Prince, the Duke, " and other of the Nobility, waiting in the Privy " Chamber for the King's coming out) on his Bro- " ther's Head; adding, That if he continued a good " Boy, and follow'd his Book, he would make him one " day Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Which the Child " took in ſuch Diſdain, that he threw the Cap upon " the Ground, and trampled it under his Feet with " ſo much Eagerneſs, that he could hardly be re- " ſtrained. Among thoſe People now, who delight to draw Predictions from every Humour, or little Frolick of a Child, ſome would make this Action to be a Preſage of the Ruin of Epiſcopacy under his Adminiſtration: Others would have it not ominous to the Order, but to the Perſon of the Archbiſhop, who fell under his Diſpleaſure, and the Conſequence of it, a long Suſpenſion from his Office. But wiſer Folks were content to take it only for a Sign of Bigneſs of Spirit, and a Humour that did not love Jeſting or Levity. The ſame Writer, Dr. Perinchief, obſerves, " That his Childhood was blemiſhed with a " ſuppoſed Obſtinacy; for the Weakneſs of his Bo- " dy inclining him to Retirements, and the Imper- " fections of his Speech rendring Diſcourſe tedious " and unpleaſant, he was ſuſpected to be ſome- " what perverſe: But more Age and Strength fit- " ting him for Manlike Exerciſes, and the publick " Hopes inviting him from his Privacies, he deli- " vered the World of ſuch Fears.

Made Knight of the Garter in 1611.

In 1611 he was made Knight of the Garter, being now advanc'd into a more hopeful Youth, and labouring under little Imperfection, except that of ſome natural Impediment in his Speech, which made him heſitate and a little ſtammer, and made Converſation leſs agreeable to him. An Hiſtorian ſays, L'eſtrange. that " though this vocal Impediment accompanied " him till the fatal Stroke, yet was it to wiſe Men " an Index of his Wiſdom: therefore Obloquy never " play'd the Fool ſo much, as in imputing Folly " to him; ſince there was never, or very rarely, " known, a Fool that ſtammered.

Duke of Cornwal on the Death of his elder Brother.

A new Proſpect open'd to him upon the Death of Prince Henry, who had made himſelf Gracious and Popular, and therefore left his ſucceeding Brother under a leſs Advantage of the People's Eſteem and Favour. He died on November 6. 1612. His Brother Charles was immediately honour'd with the Dukedom of Cornwal, and the Regalities of it; and attended his Funeral as chief Mourner December 7. On the 14th of February following, he performed the Office of Brideman to the Princeſs Elizabeth his Siſter, who on that Day was married to Frederick V. Prince Elector Palatine; a Match which tho' unfortunate in the firſt Conſequences of it, yet extremely happy in laying in a Foundation for a Proteſtant Line of Succeſſion to the Crown of England.

Prince of Wales in 1616.

In 1616, being now of a manly Age and Inclination, he was upon Novemb. 3. created Prince of Wales, Earl of Cheſter and Flint, the Revenues thereof being aſſigned to maintain a Court for him as apparent Heir of the Crown. He had now worn off the Love of Retirement, and a ſedentary Life, and had outgrown many of the firſt Infirmities of Conſtitution. So that he had now Strength and Genius to apply himſelf to Action, and (as Tradition and Writers agree) " He grew ſo perfect in Vaulting, Riding " the great Horſe, Running at the Ring, Shooting " in Croſs-bows, Muskets, and ſometimes in great " Pieces of Ordnance, that if Principality had been " to be the Reward of Excellency in thoſe Arts, he " would have had a Title to the Crown this way " alſo; being thought the beſt Markſman, and moſt " graceful Manager of the great Horſe, in the three " Kingdoms.

Not yet a Medler in Politicks.

The Prince choſe rather to divert himſelf in theſe Martial Exerciſes, than to be at the Head of any Political Meaſures. He enjoy'd his Privacies in the very Court, and left the Miniſtry of State-Affairs entirely to his Father and his Favourite Council. Some thought he did this to avoid the Jealouſies of the old King, who had conceiv'd ſome ill Reſentments of the Popularity of Prince Henry, and would be the more kind and eaſie to Prince Charles, if he ſaw leſs reaſon to ſuſpect his Ambition and forward Humour. Others would more enviouſly aſcribe it to a Narrowneſs of Mind, and an Incapacity of Greatneſs. But thoſe had moſt Charity and Truth in their Conjectures, who ſuppos'd it the Effect of Modeſty and filial Duty that reſtrain'd him from being officious in meddling with thoſe Matters, which were not yet come to be his immediate Concern.

Chief Mourner at the Queen's Funeral in 1618.

The Queen his Mother died on March 2. 1618. Upon this Loſs, he is ſaid to have diſcovered a great Evenneſs of Spirit, bewailing it only with a juſt meaſure of Grief, without any affected Sorrows: A true inward Concern, that Nature and Gratitude rais'd in him; for ſhe was obſerv'd to be moſt tender and affectionate to this Son above all her other Children. Under theſe Impreſſions of a deep unfeigned Sorrow, he choſe to be chief Mourner at her Funeral, when her Corps was carried from Denmark-Houſe to the Chappel of Henry VII. at Weſtminſter, and there interr'd with great and due Solemnity.

The King put in mind of his better Education.

The Death of the Queen was, not long after, followed with a ſharp Sickneſs of the King. On which occaſion, we are told that many of the King's Friends were apprehenſive of his Death, and began to lament the Proſpect of thoſe Dangers that might enſue upon it: In particular, Dr. Andrews, then Biſhop of Ely, as a Confeſſor to His Majeſty, took an opportunity of expreſſing to him " the ſad Condi-

" tion

" tion of the Church, if God ſhould at that time " determine his Royal Life; the Prince having been " only converſant with Scotchmen, who made up " the greateſt part of his Family, and were ill-affe- " cted to the Government and Worſhip of the Church " of England. Of this the King is ſaid to have be- come ſo very ſenſible, that he made a ſolemn Vow, If God ſhould pleaſe to reſtore his Health, he would ſo in- ſtruct the Prince in the Controverſies of Religion, as ſhould ſecure his Affections to the preſent Eſtabliſhment. Which he did with ſo much Succeſs, that when he was gi- ving Inſtructions to the Chaplains that were to wait upon the Prince into Spain, he charg'd them to de- cline, as far as poſſible, all Diſputations in the Points of Religion: " But, ſays he, if any emergent Diſ- " putes ſhall happen, my Son is able to moderate " in them: At which the Divines could not con- tain their Smiles: The King taking notice of their ſeeming to queſtion his Judgment of the Prince's Abilities, added, with ſome vehemence, CHARLES ſhall manage a Point in Controverſie with the beſt-ſtudied Divine of you all. And indeed, This was a Talent in him, that did afterward appear in a moſt eminent degree; though many believ'd, that the want of this Accompliſhment would have been more happy; and that he would have been better able to Protect the Church, if he had not pleas'd himſelf with contending and Diſputing for it.

In Feats of Chivalry 1620

In the twentieth Year of his Age, on March 24. 1620, which was the Anniverſary of King James's coming to the Crown of England, he performed a Juſting at Whitehall, together with ſeveral of the Nobility; wherein he is ſaid to have acquitted him- ſelf with a ſingular Air and Spirit of Bravery and Honour. Some believ'd, that the Reputation he thus gain'd in Martial Exploits, would drive him too much upon the Love of Arms, unleſs he ſhould have foreign Campaigns ſufficient to divert the Heroick Humour.

Goes into Spain in 1623.

In 1623 the Prince was ſent into Spain to make his Addreſſes to the Infanta, and thereby to procure the Reſtitution of the Palatinate to his Brother-in- law, the Prince Elector. The Hiſtory of this Affair has been at large delivered in the preceding Reign: And therefore it need here only be obſerved, that after an in-effectual negotiating Love and Intereſt in Spain, he arriv'd at Portſmouth on the 5th of October with his whole Retinue, and went next Day to the King at Royſton; and ſoon after making his Entrance into London, he was receiv'd by the People with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy: and pub- lick Thanks were given in all Churches throughout England and Scotland for his ſafe Return. The Sub- jects were the better pleas'd that he came home without his Errand; for, in general, they had no good Opinion of a Spaniſh Match. And the King was ſatisfied with the Diſappointment, becauſe he found the Spaniſh Councils averſe to his main De- ſign, which was Reſtoring the Palatinate; and there- fore he ſoon ſent Orders to diſſolve the Treaty of Marriage, ſpeaking it in publick, That he would never marry his Son with a Portion of his only Siſter's Tears.

Attends upon the King in his laſt Agonies.

The King falling into an Ague and Fever, was very apprehenſive of approaching Death, and deſi- ring on Thurſday, March 24, to have the Sacrament adminiſtred to him, he receiv'd it with great Devo- tion, profeſſing to the Prince his Son, who ſtood by him, that He had received a ſingular Comfort thereby, and therefore wiſh'd that he and all his Friends would partake of that Comfort whenever they came to lie under a like proſpect of Death. The King departed this Life on Sunday, March 27, 1625.

Succeeds his Father in 1625.

The Privy Council immediately met, and drew up the Form of a Proclamation to proclaim the new King; which was publiſhed at Theobalds (where the King died) that Evening, and the next Day at Weſtminſter and London, with uſual Ceremonies, and very hearty Acclamations. In the Evening of this Monday, March 28, the King came to the Palace of St. James: On the Day following, all the Privy Counſellors of the late King were ſworn into his preſent Majeſty's Council; by whoſe Advice, a Commiſſion was granted to authorize the Great Seal, Privy Seal, and Signet, till new ones could be pre- pared: And other Commiſſions were iſſued out for continuing the Powers of the Judges, Juſtices of Peace, Sheriffs, and all other Civil Officers, whoſe Truſt did by Law determine with the King. It is beſt to give the Orders of the Council as they were formally paſt.

Orders of Council.

I. Order'd, " That a Commiſſion be granted to " authorize the Great Seal, Privy Seal, and Sig- " net, till new ones be prepared.

II. " That Commiſſions be iſſued out with all con- " venient ſpeed for the Authorizing of all Judges, " Juſtices of the Peace, Sheriffs, and other the " Officers of Civil Government.

III. " That Proclamation be made to authenticate " Proceedings of Juſtice, and Preſervation of the " Peace.

IV. " That all Powers of the reſpective Embaſſies be " continued, and Notice given to foreign States " and Potentates; and the like Proclamations " and Commiſſions be order'd in Scotland and Ire- " land, &c.

V. " That a Parliament be ſummoned according to " his Majeſty's Pleaſure; and the Solemnization " of his late Majeſty's Funeral, and his own Co- " ronation, be likewiſe then repreſented.

The Council, when they roſe, immediately at- tended the King at St. James's, where the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the reſt, gave Thanks to His Majeſty for putting a Confidence in them, who had before ſerv'd his Royal Father; and then preſen- ted the ſaid Orders or Reſolves for his Majeſty's Approbation: Who did accordingly approve them, and commanded the Execution of 'em by ſeveral Proclamations. By another particular Proclamati- " on of the ſame Date, the King ſignified his Affli- " ction for his Father's Death; and that he, being " his only Son and undoubted Heir, is inveſted " and eſtabliſhed in the Crown Imperial of this " Realm, and all other his Majeſty's Realms, Do- " minions, and Countries, with all the Royalties, " Pre-eminences, Stiles, Names, Titles, and Dig- " nities to the ſame belonging. And he declared, " That as he for his part ſhall, by God's Grace, " ſhew himſelf a moſt benign and gracious Sove- " raign Lord to all his good Subjects in all their " lawful Suits and Cauſes; ſo he miſtruſteth not, " but that they on their parts, will ſhew themſelves " unto him their natural Liege Lord, moſt loving, " faithful, and obedient Subjects.

Funeral of K. James.

The Council at the ſame time mov'd the King, that his Father's Funeral might be ſolemnized, and his own Nuptials in France confirm'd, before the Sitting of the Parliament: To both which the King agreed. Accordingly, on the 23d of April, the Bo- dy of King James was conducted by the Nobility and great Officers of State, from Theobalds to Den- mark-houſe in the Strand, from whence it was carried with a very pompous Solemnity on May 17, to the Abbey-Church at Weſtminſter; the Herſe was fol- lowed by the King himſelf as chief Mourner, ſup- ported by the Earls of Arundel and Pembroke, with his Train carried up by twelve Peers of the Realm. After an elegant Sermon, preach'd by John Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, the Corps was interr'd in Henry VII.'s Chapel, built for the Dormitory of our Eng- liſh Princes.

Forces rais'd for Recovery of the Palatinate.

The King thought himſelf in Honour oblig'd to be early in his Preparations for a War toward the Recovery of the Palatinate. To purſue this good Deſign (which might have been more happily re- ſerv'd for the Counſels of the Parliament) General Muſters were made in ſeveral Counties, and twelve thouſand Men were rais'd, of which, eight thouſand were to rendezvouz at Plimouth: Coat and Conduct 1625. Money were ordered to be paid by the Country, and they to be reimburſed at the King's Exchequer. And becauſe Complaint was made of theſe Forces being diſorderly in their March, a Proclamation was firſt iſſued for their good and quiet Behaviour: and ſoon after a Commiſſion was granted, to execute a ſtrict Diſcipline by Martial Law. Theſe Methods gave occaſion to ſome Debates among the Judges, and to ſome Diſcontents among the Common People.

Concluſion of the Match with France.

The King's next and chiefeſt Care, was to conclude his own Match with Henrietta Maria a Daughter of France. The Articles of Marriage had been ſign'd by K. James on the 11th of May, and by the French King on the 14th of Auguſt following; and in March the ſaid Articles were ſigned at Paris by the Engliſh Embaſſadors, the Earls of Carliſle and Holland. So that after a needleſs Diſpenſation from Rome, nothing now remain'd but the Ceremony of Eſpouſals; for which the King ſent over his Procuratorial Letters for the Duke of Chevreux to act in his Name: and on May 11. the Solemnity was performed by Cardinal Richlieu, upon a Theatre erected for that Purpoſe before the Altar in the Church of Noſtre Dame in Paris, the Lady being given by her two Brothers, the King, and Monſieur. The D. of Buckingham was ſent over to conduct Her Majeſty into England: He came to Paris May 24, from whence he attended the Queen on June 2. toward Amiens, and forward to Bulleign, where the Royal Navy lying ready for Her, ſhe embark'd June 12. and was brought ſafe, though a little ſick, to Dover: where the King met her in the Morning June 13, and taking Coach the ſame Day for Canterbury, the Marriage was that Night conſummated. On June 16. their Majeſties entred London, where great Preparations had been made to receive them; but moſt of the Shew and Appearance was omitted, becauſe the Plague was now encreaſed in the City and Suburbs. The Queen ſettled with her Family in Denmark or Somerſet Houſe, which had been fitted up for her Reception, with a Chapel for Popiſh Service, according to the Articles of Marriage; and a Convent for Capuchin Friers.

Great Plague.

Some People reflecting on the latter end of King Charles's Reign, have look'd on it as a very inauſpicious Omen, that it began thus with a raging Peſtilence. As if this firſt Calamity did portend all the other publick Evils which followed after: But Cauſes and Events are known only to the wiſe God. The Reign of King James began with a like ſpreading Contagion, which was not then a Prognoſtick of ſucceeding Miſeries; for Peace and Plenty were the peculiar Bleſſing of all his Reign. An Hiſto-rian makes it farther remarkable, "That theſe two "Plagues, that of the Father, this of the Son, were "Natives both of one Pariſh, White Chapel, yea un- "der the ſame Roof, and iſſued forth on the ſame "Day of the Month: Such Correſpondence was "there in their Entrance, &c. It is leſs to be admir'd that the Plague ſhould often begin in that Part of the Suburbs where the Butchers have their Shambles ſo cloſe and unclean: And it was more common for the Plague to reign in London, when the Streets and Lanes were ſo very narrow, and the Houſes for the moſt part ſo very ſordid, that Air and Sweetneſs were the only Strangers. Whereas ſince the Rebuilding of the City, the Streets are open, the Paſſages clear, the Windows large, the Cottages of the Poor are remov'd farther into the Fields, and many other Obſtructions of breathing are taken away: So as ſince the Fire, the Plague has never broke out in this populous City. God long avert the Judgment!

L'eſtrange.

Conjectures on the Match with France.

Others have thought, that this Reign began with a greater Judgment in the King's Marriage with Popery and France: Two Evils with which the Intereſt of this Church and Nation could bear no Alliance. The young King indeed was in this excuſable, that he did not meerly follow his own Inclinations, but ſubmitted to the Judgment of his Father and the Parliament, who had jointly concerted this Match, and had carried it ſo far, as not to leave room for an honourable Retreat. But however, conſidering the Malignity of Popiſh Religion, the Imperiouſneſs of French Government, the Influence of a ſtately Queen upon an affectionate Huſband, and the ſhare ſhe muſt have in the Education of her Children; it was even then eaſie to foreſee, that this unequal Match might prove very fatal to our Engliſh Prince and People, and lay-in a Vengeance to future Generations.

The firſt Parliament June 18.

On June 18th, according to Summons, the Parliament began at Weſtminſter; where the Lords being habited in their Robes, and the Commons attending, his Majeſty, ſeated in his Royal Throne, ſpoke thus:

King's Speech.

"I Thank God, that the Buſineſs to be treated on "at this time is of ſuch a nature, that it needs "no Eloquence to ſet it forth; for, I am neither "able to do it, neither doth it ſtand with my Na- "ture to ſpend much time in Words. It is no new "Buſineſs, being already happily begun by my Fa- "ther of bleſſed Memory who is with God, there- "fore it needeth no Narrative: I hope to God, you "will go on to maintain it as freely as you adviſed "my Father to it. It is true, he may ſeem to ſome "to have been ſlack to begin ſo juſt and ſo glorious "a Work; but it was his Wiſdom that made him "loth to begin a Work until he might find a Means "to maintain it. But after that he ſaw, how much "he was abuſed in the Confidence he had with other "States, and was confirmed by your Advice to run "the Courſe we are in, with your Engagement to "maintain it; I need not preſs to prove how wil- "lingly he took your Advice: for, the Preparations "that are made are better able to declare it, than "I to ſpeak it. The Aſſiſtance of thoſe in Germany, "the Fleet that is ready for Action, with the reſt "of the Preparations, which I have only followed "my Father in, do ſufficiently prove that he en- "tred into this Action.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I hope you do remember, that you were pleaſed "to employ me to adviſe my Father to break off "thoſe two Treaties that were on foot: ſo that I "cannot ſay, that I came hither a free unengaged "Man. It's true, I came into this Buſineſs wil- "lingly and freely, like a young Man, and conſe- "quently raſhly; but it was by your Intereſt, your "Engagement: So that though it were done like a "young Man, yet I cannot repent me of it; and I "think none can blame me for it, knowing the "Love and Fidelity you have borne to your King, "having my ſelf likewiſe ſome little Experience of "your Affections. I pray you remember, that this "being my firſt Action, and begun by your Advice "and Intreaty, what a great Diſhonour it were to "you and me, if this Action ſo begun ſhould fail "for that Aſſiſtance you are able to give me. Yet "knowing the Conſtancy of your Love both to me "and this Buſineſs, I needed not to have ſaid this, "but only to ſhew what Care and Senſe I have of "your Honours and mine own. I muſt intreat you "likewiſe to conſider of the Times we are in, how "that I muſt adventure your Lives (which I ſhould "be loth to do) ſhould I continue you here long; "and you muſt venture the Buſineſs, if you be ſlow "in your Reſolutions: Wherefore I hope you will "take ſuch grave Counſel, as you will expedite what "you have in hand to do; which will do me and "your ſelves an infinite deal of Honour; you in "ſhewing your Love to me, and me that I may "perfect that Work which my Father hath ſo hap- "pily begun.

"Laſt of all, Becauſe ſome malicious Men may, "and, as I hear, have given out, that I am not ſo "true a Keeper and Maintainer of the true Religion "that I profeſs; I aſſure you, that I may with S. Paul "ſay, that I have been trained up at Gamaliel's "Feet; and although I ſhall be never ſo arrogant 1625. " as to assume unto my self the rest, I shall so far " shew the End of it, that all the World may see, " that none hath been, nor ever shall be, more de- " sirous to maintain the Religion I profess, than I " shall be.

"as

" Now because I am unfit for much speaking, I " mean to bring up the Fashion of my Predecessors, " to have my Lord Keeper speak for me in most " things: therefore I have commanded him to speak " something to you at this time; which is more for " Formality, than any great matter he hath to say " unto you.

Then the Lord Keeper declared,

Lord Keeper's Speech.

" That the King's main Reason of calling the Par- " liament, besides the beholding of his Subject's " Faces, was to mind them of the great Engage- " ments for the Recovery of the Palatinate, impos'd " on his Majesty by the late King his Father, and " by themselves who brake off the two Treaties with " Spain; also to let them understand, that the suc- " ceeding Treaties and Alliances, the Armies sent " into the Low Countries, the Repairing of the Forts, " and the Fortifying of Ireland, do all meet in one " Centre, the Palatinate; and, that the Subsidies " granted the last Parliament are herein already " spent, whereof the Accompt is ready, together " with as much more of the King's own Revenue.

His Lordship farther recommended three Circumstances.

" First, the Time. All Europe being at this Day " at the Pool of Bethesda, the first stirring of the " Waters must be laid hold on; wherefore his Ma- " jesty desires them to bestow this Meeting on him, " or rather on their Actions, and the next shall be " theirs, as soon and as long as they please, for do- " mestick Business. Secondly, Supply. If Subsidies " be thought too long and backward, his Majesty " desires to hear, and not to propound the way. " Thirdly, the Issue of Action; which being the first, " doth highly concern his Majesty's Honour and Re- " putation, for which he relies upon their Loves " with the greatest Confidence that ever King had " in his Subjects; witness his Royal Poesie, Amor " Civium Regis Munimentum: And he doubts not, " but as soon as he shall be known in Europe to be " their King, so soon shall they be known to be a " Loving and Loyal Nation to him.

Opening of this Parliament did promise Joy and Satisfaction.

There were many Reasons to dispose the Hearts of the People to be fill'd with Content and Joy at this Opening of the Parliament. 1. The very Call of it so immediately after his Accession to the Throne, was grateful to the People of England, who always think themselves most safe under a Sitting Parliament. 2. His Speech to the Lords and Commons was more close and pertinent, as well as more tender and affectionate than the like Applications of his Royal Father, who had used himself to Harangues, rather than to the natural Propriety of Thoughts and Words. 3. He wisely resolv'd the War into the Advice of the last Parliament, and made himself their Agent and Instrument only in persuading his Father to break off the Treaties. 4. He remov'd the Jealousies which had been unhappily rais'd of his Inclinations to Popery, upon account of his Treaty with Spain, and his Match with France; Popular Jealousies, which indeed he could never perfectly remove, though he gave this solemn Assurance, and liv'd and died a Proof of it. 5. He ask'd for Supplies upon the right Bottom of letting the Subjects know, that the Money granted in last Parliament was already spent in the Uses assign'd for it; and that the Account of those Expences was ready to be laid before them. In a word, Here were All the wise and just Measures that a new Prince could take to render himself Acceptable to his People, and Considerable to all the World. The more Wonder and Pity, that this happy Beginning of a Reign should proceed unfortunately, and conclude most miserably. 1625.

Speaker chosen and presented.

June 21. the Commons presented Sir Tho. Crew Kt. and Serjeant at Law for their Speaker, and his Majesty approv'd the Choice; which was thought the more agreeable, because he had been Speaker in the last Parliament of King James, and was the better acquainted with Affairs now depending. The House began with various Debates: Some insisted, " That " the Grievances mentioned, but not redressed, in " last Parliament, should be now considered: Others " call'd for an immediate Account of the last Subsi- " dies granted for Recovery of the Palatinate: O- " thers for putting the Laws in Execution against " Priests and Jesuits, and such Papists as resorted " to the Houses and Chapels of foreign Ambassa- " dors: Others declaim'd against the Dangers of " Arminianism, and the spreading of those Tenets " by some late Writers, especially Mr. Montague. Debates in the House of Commons.

On the other hand, it was dutifully urg'd by the King's Friends in that House, " That they had rea- " son to thank his Majesty for calling a Parliament " upon his first coming to the Crown, as the surest " way to keep up a right Understanding between " him and his People: That since he began to reign, " the Grievances were none, or so few and inconsi- " derable, that they were not yet worth a Com- " plaint: That they could not but remember, how " his Majesty, when Prince, had been very instru- " mental in soliciting the Cause of Parliament and " People with his Royal Father, and had yet done " nothing but in pursuance of the Measures taken " in that former Reign; that therefore it would be " the Wisdom of this House to sweeten all things " between the King and his People, and to express " their Duty by an effectual Supply, and therewith " to offer nothing but a humble Petition for the " Honour and Safety of Religion.

A publick Fast.

The Plague encreasing, the Commons mov'd the Lords to join in a Petition to the King for a publick Fast, whereunto their Lordships readily concurr'd; and the King as freely consenting, a Proclamation was issued forth for a Day of Fasting and Humiliation throughout the Kingdom; and the King commanded the Archbishop and six other Bishops to draw up a Form of Prayer to implore the Divine Mercy to stop the raging Pestilence, and to avert the Famine that seem'd to be now threatned by the extraordinary wet Weather; and to beg God's Blessing upon the Fleet now ready to put to Sea. This Fast was solemnly kept by both Houses of Parliament on Saturday Jul. 2. and throughout all England on Wednesday Jul. 20.

Grant of two Subsidies.

After some Disgust between the King and the Commons, in relation to Mr. Montague, they unanimously presented two Subsidies; which being confirm'd by the Lords, were offer'd to his Majesty, with the usual Desire of his gracious Acceptance. The Lord Conway, Secretary of State, signified to the Lords and Commons together, That his Majesty did kindly accept the Bill for two Subsidies, but, that the Necessities of our present Affairs were so urgent, as to require their farther Advice and Assistance; and so opened the Grounds and Reasons of the War, and the Expences requisite for a Support of it. Then the Lord Keeper deliver'd a short Message from the King to both Houses, That as to the Petition of the Lords and Commons touching Religion, his Majesty was pleased at first to give them a gracious Assurance, and had now sent them a fuller Answer, to give them Satisfaction in every Particular.

Other Bills depending.

The Houses were preparing several Acts; as, " against Giving and Taking of Bribes for Places of " Judicature; To restrain the arbitrary Pressing of " Soldiers; To grant the Tonnage and Poundage " for one Year only; and some other Bills in Agi- tation: But, by reason of the great Increase of the Plague, the two Houses moved his Majesty for a short Recess; and accordingly on Monday July 11. they adjourn'd to Oxford, to reassemble there on the first day of August.

Adjourn'd to Oxford Aug. 1.

In

1625. In the time of this Receſs, there happen'd an Action at Sea that made the King ſuffer very much in the Affections of his People, and in the Eſteem of foreign Proteſtants. King James, in his laſt Treaty with France, had promis'd the lending of ſome Ships to the French King upon reaſonable Conditions, ſuppoſing them to be employed only againſt the King of Spain, or his Allies, in Italy. To perform this Engagement, Captain John Pennington was ſent in the Vantguard, a principal Man of War, with ſeven Merchant Ships of great Burthen and Strength, to ride upon the Coaſts of France for the Service of that King; who, inſtead of employing them againſt a common Enemy, had now reſolv'd to make another uſe of them againſt his own Proteſtant Subjects, to block up the Harbour of Rochel, and ſo reduce the Town to his abſolute Subjection. Captain Pennington was ſenſible of this ill Deſign, and therefore ſent back a Memorial to the Duke of Buckingham, Lord High Admiral, to decline the Service, and to bring home the Ships in Safety and Honour; but he ſoon received Letters from the Duke, and a Warrant from Secretary Conway, in the King's Name, to command him to deliver up the Ships to the hands of ſuch French-men as his Chriſtian Majeſty ſhould appoint, but not to deſert his own Charge over them. Theſe Orders were deliver'd to him by the hands of the French Ambaſſadour, together with a Letter from the French King, requiring him to receive aboard a certain Number of French Soldiers, and his Admiral the Duke of Montmorance, and ſo to join againſt the Rochellers. Pennington very bravely refuſed; upon which a Diſpute ariſing, the French Ambaſſadour's Secretary came two ſeveral times to the Captain's Ship, to Proteſt againſt him as a Rebel to his King and Country: But at the making of the laſt Proteſt, enforced with Challenges and Threats, the Soldiers and Mariners grew into ſuch a Fury and Tumult, that they got up their Anchors and ſet Sail for England, ſaying, like true Engliſh Sea-men, that they would rather be hang'd at home, than be Slaves to the French, and fight againſt the Proteſtant Religion. When they came to anchor in the Downs, Captain Pennington ſent an Expreſs to the Duke of Buckingham, to inform him of what had happen'd; and to aſſure him, that All his Men would ſooner be hang'd than return again into France. But the King, upon importunity of the Queen, ſent an expreſs and ſtrict Order to Pennington, to put his former Inſtructions, without delay, in execution; to reſign his Ship called the Vantguard, with all her Furniture, into the hands of the Marquis D'effiat; and, to require the ſeven Merchant Ships to put themſelves into the Service of the French King, under the utmoſt Penalty. Upon this Pennington ſail'd back to Diep, and put the Vantguard into the abſolute Power of the French King, and delivered up the other Ships for the ſame purpoſe; who were weighing Anchor, and making away, but upon a Shot from Pennington they came in again; only Sir Ferdinando Gorge ſtoutly brought off his Ship called the Neptune. The Companies in the reſt unanimouſly declar'd againſt ſerving the French, and quitted their Ships all but one Man; and Pennington himſelf came away for England. This Expedition was fatal to the King's Intereſt, brought on a Jealouſie of the new Queen, and rais'd a general Odium againſt the Duke of Buckingham.

Bravery of the Engliſh Sea-men.

On Monday Aug. 1. the Parliament reaſſembled at Oxford, and on Thurſday Aug. 4. the Lords and Commons were commanded to attend his Majeſty in the ſpacious Hall of Chriſt Church, where the King made this Speech to them.

Parliament at Oxford.

My Lords, and you of the Commons,

King's Speech.

" WE all remember, that from your Deſires and Advice my Father, now with God, " brake off thoſe two Treaties with Spain, that were " then in hand. Well you then foreſaw, that as " well for regaining my diſpoſſeſs'd Brother's Inhe- " ritance, as Home Defence, a War was likely to " ſucceed: And that as your Counſels had led my " Father into it, ſo your Aſſiſtance in a Parliamen- " tary way to purſue it, ſhould not be wanting. " That Aid you gave him by Advice was for Suc- " cour of his Allies, the Guarding of Ireland; and " the Home-part, Supply of Munition, preparing " and ſetting forth of his Navy. A Council you " thought of and appointed for the War, and Trea- " ſurers for iſſuing of the Monies: And to begin " this Work of your Advice, you gave three Subſi- " dies and as many Fifteens, which with ſpeed were " levied, and by Direction of that Council of War " (in which the Preparation of this Navy was not " the leaſt) diſburſed. 1625.

" It pleaſed God at the Entrance of this Prepara- " tion (by your Advice begun) to call my Father " to his Mercy, whereby I enter'd as well to the " Care of your Deſign as his Crown. I did not then " as Princes do of Cuſtom and Formality, reaſſemble " you, but that by your farther Advice and Aid I " might be able to proceed in that which by your " Counſels my Father was engaged in. Your Love " to me, and Forwardneſs to further thoſe Affairs, " you expreſſed by a Grant of two Subſidies yet un- " gathered; although I muſt aſſure you by my ſelf " and others, upon Credit taken up, and aforehand " diſburſed, and far ſhort as yet to ſet forth that " Navy now preparing; as I have lately the Eſti- " mate of thoſe of Care, and who are ſtill employed " about it, whoſe Particular of all Expences about " this Preparation ſhall be given you, when you " pleaſe to take an Account of it.

His Majeſty having ended his Speech, commanded his Secretaries, the Lord Conway and Sir John Cook, more particularly to declare the preſent State of Affairs; which they did, with reference to Germany, France, the Low Countries, Denmark, Sweden, and Italy: and then returning to our Condition at home; a Fleet ready to put to Sea, and an Army lying at Plimouth; and ſo preſſing for proportionable Aid.

The preſent Poſture of Affairs declar'd by the Secretaries of State.

Then the Lord Treaſurer added, " That the late " King, when he died, was indebted to the City of " London one hundred and twenty thouſand Pounds, " beſides Intereſt; indebted for Denmark and the " Palatinate one hundred and fifty thouſand Pounds; " indebted for his Wardrobe, forty thouſand Pounds. " Theſe Debts lie upon his preſent Majeſty, who " is indebted to London ſeventy thouſand Pounds, " that he has laid out; for his Navy twenty thou- " ſand Pounds, and twenty thouſand Pounds for " Count Mansfield; for Mourning and Funeral Ex- " pences for his Father, forty two thouſand Pounds; " for Expences concerning the Queen, forty thouſand " Pounds; and that, beſides all this, the Navy would " require, for the intended Expedition, three hun- " dred thouſand Pounds.

And the King's Debts by the Lord Treaſurer.

Theſe great Occaſions of Supply made ſome Members of the Houſe of Commons take Advantage of the King's Neceſſities, and improve the popular Diſcontents; which the King might have eaſily allay'd by ſoft Words, and Reformation of ſome few Abuſes: But finding the King not much diſpos'd to pleaſe them, they flew into higher Pretenſions, complaining, " That the Treaſury was miſemployed; " that evil Counſels guided the King's Deſigns; that " all our Neceſſities were owing to a wrong Ma- " nagement; that they ought to Petition the King " to take a more faithful Council; that it was not " ſafe to grant more Money, till Grievances were " redreſs'd; that it ſhould be declared, againſt what " Enemy the Fleet and Army were intended; that " Court Offices were ſold; that the King had not " yet given a full Anſwer to their Petition concern- " ing Religion; nor about the Impoſition upon " Wines; that all Miſcarriages were in greateſt mea- " ſure owing to the Potency of the Duke of Buck- " ingham, upon whom they reflected with great Se- " verity, that he had broke the Match with Spain, " to make that with France upon much harder terms; " that

The H. of Commons are diſpleas'd.

1625. " that Papiſts were openly encourag'd, and ſome " Prieſts and Jeſuits had obtain'd Warrants of Par- " don diſpenſing with expreſs Statutes.

Conference between Lords and Commons.

A Conference was held between the Lords and Commons upon the Subject of theſe Debates, and more eſpecially upon the Eſtabliſh'd Religion. When the Conference was over, both Houſes were ordered to meet at Chriſt-Church, to receive an Anſwer to their Petition concerning Religion: To every Clauſe whereof his Majeſty anſwered in a Parliamentary way, upon Aug. 7. And becauſe the Foundation of all the enſuing Troubles was laid in theſe Apprehenſions of the Growth of Popery; it will be proper to give the Petitions and Anſwers in their Order at large.

Petitions of Parliament, and his Majeſty's Anſwer.

To the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

Moſt Gracious Soveraign,

" IT being infallibly true, that Nothing can more " eſtabliſh the Throne, and aſſure the Peace and " Proſperity of the People, than the Unity and " Sincerity of Religion; We your moſt humble and " loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Tempo- " ral, and Commons of this preſent Parliament aſ- " ſembled, hold our ſelves bound, in Conſcience " and Duty, to repreſent the ſame to your Sacred " Majeſty, together with the dangerous Conſequen- " ces of the Increaſe of Popery in this Land, and " what we conceive to be the principal Cauſes " thereof, and what may be the Remedies.

" The Dangers appear in theſe Particulars:

I. " In their deſperate Ends, being both the Sub- " verſion of Church and State; and the Reſtleſneſs " of their Spirits to attain theſe Ends, the Doctrine " of their Teachers and Leaders perſuading them, " that therein they do God good Service.

II. " Their evident and ſtrict Dependence upon " ſuch Foreign Princes, as no way affect the Good " of your Majeſty and this State.

III. " The opening a way of Popularity to the " Ambition of any who ſhall adventure to make " himſelf Head of ſo great a Party.

The principal Cauſes of the Increaſe of Papiſts, are;

I. " The want of the due Execution of Laws a- " gainſt Jeſuits, Seminary Prieſts, and Popiſh Re- " cuſants; occaſioned partly by the Connivency of " the State, partly by Defects in the Laws them- " ſelves, and partly by the manifold Abuſe of Of- " ficers.

II. The interpoſing of Foreign Princes, by their " Ambaſſadors and Agents, in favour of them.

III. " Their great Concourſe to the City, and " frequent Conferences and Conventicles there.

IV. " The open and uſual Reſort to the Houſes " and Chapels of Foreign Ambaſſadors.

V. " The Education of their Children in Semi- " naries and Houſes of their Religion in Foreign " Parts, which of late have been greatly multiplied " and enlarged for entertaining of the Engliſh.

VI. " That in ſome Places of your Realm, your " People be not ſufficiently inſtructed in the Know- " ledge of true Religion.

VII. " The licentious Printing and Diſperſing of " Popiſh and Seditious Books.

VIII. " The Employment of Men ill-affected in " Religion, in Places of Government, who do, " may, or ſhall countenance the Popiſh Party.

The Remedies againſt this outrageous and dangerous Diſeaſe, we conceive to be theſe enſuing.

I. " That the Youth of this Realm be carefully " educated by able and religious Schoolmaſters, and " they to be enjoined to Catechize, and inſtruct " their Scholars in the Grounds and Principles of " true Religion. And whereas, by many Complaints " from divers Parts of the Kingdom, it doth plain- " ly appear, That ſundry Popiſh Scholars, diſſem- 1625. " bling their Religion, have craftily crept in, and " obtained the Places of Teaching in divers Coun- " ties, and thereby infected and perverted their " Scholars, and ſo fitted them to be tranſported to " the Popiſh Seminaries beyond the Seas; That " therefore there be great care in Choice and Admit- " ting of Schoolmaſters, and that the Ordinaries " make diligent Enquiries of their Demeanours, and " proceed to the removing of ſuch as ſhall be faul- " ty, or juſtly ſuſpected.

His Majeſty's Anſwer.

This is well allowed of: And, for the better Performance of what is deſired, Letters ſhall be written to the two Archbiſhops, and from them Letters to go to all the Ordinaries of their ſeveral Provinces to ſee this done; the ſeveral Ordinaries to give Account of their Doings herein to the Archbiſhops reſpectively, and they to give Account to his Majeſty of their Proceedings herein.

II. " That the ancient Diſcipline of the Univer- " ſities be reſtored, being the famous Nurſeries of " Literature and Virtue.

Anſw. This is approved by his Majeſty, and the Chancellour of each Univerſity ſhall be required to cauſe due execution of it.

III. " That ſpecial Care be taken to enlarge the " Word of God throughout all the Parts of your " Majeſty's Dominions, as being the moſt power- " ful Means for planting of true Religion, and " rooting out of the contrary. To which end, a- " mong other things, to adviſe your Biſhops, by " Fatherly Entreaty and tender Uſage, to reduce " to the peaceable and orderly Service of the " Church ſuch able Miniſters as have been formerly " ſilenced, that there may be a profitable Uſe of " their Miniſtry in theſe needful and dangerous " Times; and, that Non-Reſidency, Pluralities, and " Commendams, may be moderated: Where we can- " not forbear moſt humbly to thank your Majeſty " for diminiſhing the Number of your own Chap- " lains, not doubting of the like Princely Care for " the well-beſtowing of the reſt of your Benefices, " both to the Comfort of the People, and the En- " couragement of the Univerſities, being full of " grave and able Miniſters unfurniſh'd of Livings.

Anſw. This his Majeſty likes well, ſo as it be applied to ſuch Miniſters as are peaceable, orderly, and conformable to the Church-Government: For Pluralities and Non-reſidencies they are now ſo moderated, that the Archbiſhops affirm, there be now no Diſpenſations for Pluralities granted; nor no Man now is allowed above two Benefices, and thoſe not above thirty Miles diſtant: And for avoiding Non-reſidence, the Canon in that caſe provided ſhall be duly put in execution. For Commendams, they ſhall be ſparingly granted, only in ſuch caſes where the Utility and Smallneſs of the Biſhoprick requireth. Alſo his Majeſty will cauſe that the Benefices belonging to him ſhall be well beſtowed. And, for the better propagating of Religion, his Majeſty recommendeth to the Parliament, that Care may be taken, and Proviſion made, that every Pariſh ſhall allow a competent Maintenance for an able Miniſter; and, that the Owners of Parſonages Impropriate would allow to the Vicars, Curates, and Miniſters, in Villages and Places belonging to their Parſonage, ſufficient Stipend and Allowance for Preaching Miniſters.

IV. " That there may be ſtrict Proviſion againſt " Tranſporting of Engliſh Children to the Semina- " ries beyond the Seas, and for the recalling of them " who are already there placed; and for the Pu- " niſhment of ſuch your Subjects as are Maintain- " ers of thoſe Seminaries, or of the Scholars; con- " ſidering, that beſides the ſeducing of your Peo- " ple, great Sums of Money are yearly expended " upon them, to the impoveriſhing of this King- " dom.

Anſw.

1625. Answ. The Law in this case shall be put in execution: And farther, there shall be Letters written to the Lord Treasurer, and also to the Lord Admiral, that all the Ports of this Realm, and the Creeks and Members thereof, be strictly kept, and strait Searches made to this end: A Proclamation shall be to recall both the Children of Noblemen, and the Children of any other Men, and they to return by a Day: Also Maintainers of Seminaries, or Scholars there, shall be punished according to Law. 1625.

V. "That no Popish Recusant be permitted to "come within the Court, unless your Majesty be "pleased to call him upon special Occasion, agree- "able to the Statute of 3 Jacobi. And whereas "your Majesty, for preventing of apparent Mis- "chiefs both to your Majesty and the State, hath "in your Princely Wisdom taken Order, that none "of your natural-born Subjects not professing the "true Religion as by Law established, be admit- "ted into the Service of your Royal Consort the "Queen; we give your Majesty most humble "Thanks, and desire that your Order herein may "be observed.

Answ. If his Majesty shall find or be inform'd of any Concourse of Recusants to the Court, the Law shall be strictly followed: And his Majesty is pleased that by Proclamation the British and the Irish Subjects shall be put in the same case. And as his Majesty hath provided in his Treaty with France, so his Purpose is to keep it, that none of his Subjects shall be admitted into his Service, or into the Service of his Royal Consort the Queen, that are Popish Recusants.

VI. "That all the Laws now standing in force "against Jesuits, Seminary Priests and others, ha- "ving taken Orders by Authority derived from "the See of Rome, be put in due execution. And "to the Intent they may not pretend to be surpri- "zed, that a speedy and certain Day be prefixed "by your Majesty's Proclamation for their Depar- "ture out of this Realm and all other your Domi- "nions, and not to return upon the severest Penal- "ties of the Law now in force against them; And "that all your Majesty's Subjects may be thereby "admonished not to receive, comfort, entertain, "or conceal any of them, upon the Penalties which "may be lawfully inflicted. And that all such Pa- "pists, Jesuits, and Recusants, who are and shall "be imprisoned for Recusancy or any other cause, "may be so strictly restrained, as that none shall "have Conference with them, thereby to avoid the "Contagion of their corrupt Religion. And that "no Man who shall be suspected of Popery be suf- "fered to be a Keeper of any of your Majesty's Pri- "sons.

Answ. The Law in this case shall be put in execution, and a Proclamation shall be to the effect desired: And such Restraint shall be made as is desired: And no Man that is justly suspected of Popery shall be suffered to be Keeper of any of his Majesty's Prisons.

VII. "That your Majesty be pleased to take such "Order as to your Princely Wisdom shall be expe- "dient, that no natural-born Subject, or strange "Bishops, nor any other by Authority from the "See of Rome, confer any Ecclesiastical Orders to "exercise any Ecclesiastical Function whatsoever "toward or upon your Majesty's natural Subjects "within your Dominions.

Answ. This is fit to be ordered according as is provided; and it shall be so published by Proclamation.

VIII. "That your Majesty's Learned Council "may receive Order and Commandment to consider "of all former Grants of Recusants Lands, that such "of them may be avoided as are made to the Recu- "sants Use or Interest, out of which the Recusant "receiveth any Benefit, which are either void or "voidable by the Law.

Answ. The King will give Order to his learned Council to consider of the Grants, and will do according as is desired.

IX. "That your Majesty will be likewise plea- "sed strictly to command all your Judges and Mi- "nisters of Justice, Ecclesiastical and Temporal, "to see the Laws of this Realm against Popish Re- "cusants to be duly executed: And namely, That "the Censure of Excommunication be declared and "certified against them, and that they be not absol- "ved but upon publick Satisfaction, by yielding to "Conformity.

Answ. His Majesty leaves the Laws to their course, and will order in the point of Excommunication as is desired.

X. "That your Majesty will be pleased to remove "from Places of Authority and Government all such "Persons as are either Popish Recusants, or accor- "ding to Direction of former Acts of State to be "justly suspected.

Answ. This his Majesty thinks fit, and will give Order for it.

XI. "That present Order be taken for disarming "all Popish Recusants legally convicted or justly "suspected according to the Laws in that behalf, "and the Orders taken by his late Majesty's Privy "Council upon reason of State.

Answ. The Laws and Acts in this case shall be followed, and put in due execution.

XII. "That your Majesty be also pleased, in re- "spect of the great Resort of Recusants to and about "London, to command forthwith, upon pain of "your Indignation and severe Execution of the "Laws, that they retire themselves to their several "Countries, there to remain confined within five "miles of their Places.

Answ. For this the Laws in force shall be forthwith executed.

XIII. "And whereas your Majesty hath strictly "commanded and taken Order, that none of the "natural-born Subjects repair to the hearing of "Masses or other superstitious Service at the Cha- "pels or Houses of foreign Ambassadors, or in any "other places whatsoever; We give your Majesty "most humble Thanks, and desire that your Order "and Commandment therein may be continued and "observed, and that the Offenders herein may be "punished according to the Laws.

Answ. The King gives Assent thereto, and will see that observed which herein hath been commanded by him.

XIV. "That all such Insolencies as any that are "Popishly affected have lately committed, or shall "hereafter commit to the Dishonour of our Religi- "on, or to the Wrong of the true Professors there- "of, be exemplarily punished.

Answ. This shall be done as is desired.

XV. "That the Statute of 1 Eliz. for the pay- "ment of Twelve-pence every Sunday by such as "shall be absent from Divine Service in the Church, "without a lawful Excuse, may be put in due ex- "ecution, the rather for that the Penalty by Law "is given to the Poor, and therefore not to be dis- "pensed withal.

Answ. It is fit that this Statute be executed, and the Penalties shall not be dispensed withal.

XVI. "Lastly, That your Majesty would be plea- "sed to extend your Princely Care also over the "Kingdom of Ireland, that the like Courses may be there 1625. "there taken for the reſtoring and eſtabliſhing of "true Religion there.

Anſw. His Majeſty's Cares are and ſhall be extended over the Kingdom of Ireland, and he will do all that a Religious King ſhould do for the reſtoring and eſtabliſhing true Religion there.

"And thus (moſt gracious Soveraign) according "to our Duty and Zeal to God and Religion, to "your Majeſty and your Safety, to the Church and "Commonwealth, and their Peace and Proſperity, "we have made a faithful Declaration of the pre- "ſent Eſtate, the Cauſes and Remedies of this in- "creaſing Diſeaſe of Popery; humbly offering the "ſame to your Princely Care and Wiſdom. The "Anſwer of your Majeſty's Father, our late Sove- "raign of famous Memory, upon the like Petition, "did give us great comfort of Reformation; but "your Majeſty's moſt gracious Promiſes made in "that kind, do give us Confidence and Aſſurance "of the continual Performance thereof. In which "Comfort and Confidence repoſing our ſelves, we "moſt humbly pray for your Majeſty's long conti- "nuance in all Princely Felicity.

It is plain, that as nothing could more become the Wiſdom and Honour of the Parliament, than to make ſuch a Petition; ſo nothing could better aſſert the Zeal and Affection of the King, than to give ſuch an Anſwer. The Petition ſhews, that the Jealouſies of Popery were then very high; and the Anſwer aſſures them, that the King will effectually ſuppreſs thoſe Fears and Jealouſies. But indeed Political Jealouſies are like the Conjugal, when they are once raiſed, it is hard to extinguiſh 'em. Promiſes of Fidelity are not believ'd; Reconciling Favours are ſuſpected; and the ſtricteſt Guard upon Innocence will be thought Guilty. There is no reaſon to doubt, but that his Majeſty was ſincere in theſe Royal Aſſurances he gave his People: And for a more full Conviction, at the time of Reading the Petition and Anſwer it was farther intimated to the Commons, "That as his Majeſty took well "their minding him of the Care of Religion, ſo he "would have done and granted the ſame things if "they had not petitioned for them. That he did "not place this Anſwer to their Petition as a Wheel "to draw on other Affairs and Deſigns, but he "leaves them to move in their own Spheres; and "what he hath done in this Particular comes from "theſe two Fountains, Conſcience and Duty to his "Father, who in his laſt Speech recommended un- "to him the Perſon, but not the Religion, of his "Queen.

The Petition and Anſwer were wiſe and moderate.

Next to the Dangers of Popery, the greateſt Grievance of the Commons was, to ſee the Duke of Buckingham in the exceſſive Favours of the King, the prime Miniſter, the higheſt Officer, and in effect the ſole Mover of the Court. The Favourites of every Prince were alway odious to the Engliſh People, and were frequently ſet upon by Engliſh Parliaments. Not only Self-love, Envy, Ambition, Diſguſt, Revenge, and ſuch like Paſſions, do naturally create an Averſion to any one Subject who ſeems to engroſs and appropriate to himſelf the common Father of the People; but the laudable Affections that prompt to Equity and Impartiality, Tenderneſs to our Prince, and Love to our Country, all conſpire to make every indifferent Perſon an Enemy to the one powerful Fellow-member, that commands the Head, and uſurps over the whole Body. This Reſentment had been very loud in the preſent Seſſion; Speeches and Replies had been very ſevere: And therefore the Duke thought it proper to make ſome Apology and Defence for himſelf. He took an Opportunity of doing this when Both Houſes were thus together to receive his Majeſty's Anſwer as before related. "He began with acquainting the Lords "and Commons, that by the King's Command he "was to give an Account of the Fleet, and the Pre- "parations thereof. He ſaid, that the firſt and the laſt time he had the Happineſs to ſpeak in that "Auditory, it was of the Spaniſh Treaty, and then "he was ſo happy as to be honoured and applauded "by both Houſes of Parliament; and he made no "queſtion but ſpeaking now with the ſame Heart, "he ſhould be no leſs acceptable to them. He re- "queſted the Houſe of Commons to believe, that "if any Member had, in Diſcharge of his Conſci- "ence, or in his Zeal for Reformation, ſpoke any "thing which might ſeem to reflect upon ſome par- "ticular Perſons; He ſhould be the laſt Man that "would apply this to himſelf, becauſe he was con- "fidently aſſured of two things; firſt, that they "would be juſt not to fall upon him without cauſe; "and ſecondly, that he himſelf ſhould do nothing "unſuitable to the Character of a faithful Engliſh- man. Then he proceeded to ſum up the Objecti- ons rais'd againſt him, and to give particular An- ſwers to them. The Objections were by way of Quære; 1. By what Counſel thoſe Deſigns and Actions of War were carried on and enterpriſed? Anſ. By the Counſel of the Parliament, appointed according to the Act of both Houſes, March 23. 1623. &c. 2. Why did not his Majeſty declare the Enemy preſently upon granting thoſe three Subſidies? Anſ. His Majeſty conſidered the ſtate of Chriſtendom at that Seaſon, and found it full of Danger to declare the Enemy, for three Reaſons, &c. 3. Whether a conſiderable Sum of Money be yet required? Anſ. Forty thouſand Pounds is yet neceſſary, &c. 4. Why was not this want of Money foreſeen, but now only thought upon unexpectedly and dangerouſly, conſidering the Sickneſs? Anſ. It was foreſeen before, but interrupted by unfortunate Accidents, &c. 5. Who gave Counſel to his Majeſty ſo ſuddenly, when the Sickneſs was ſo dangerouſly ſpread, to convene this Parliament? Anſ. His Majeſty commanded him to ſay, that it was the Buſineſs it ſelf that gave this Counſel, and the Neceſſity of it, &c. 6. Is not the time of the Year too far ſpent for the Navy to go forth? Anſ. The King anſwer'd this formerly; Better half the Navy periſh, than the going thereof ſhould be ſtayed. 7. Whether thoſe eight Ships lent to the French King, which were employed againſt the Rochellers, were not paid with the Subſidy Money? Anſ. Thoſe eight Ships were employed at the Charge of the French King, &c. 8. Whether the Duke, having been our Servant to break the Match with Spain, made not a worſe Match with France, and upon harſher terms? Anſ. I hope the contrary will appear by the Anſwer to your Petition. 9. Did not the Duke ſerve us in breaking the two Treaties with Spain, out of ſpleen and malice to Conde Olivares? Anſ. There was no reaſon to hate Olivares, who was the Means to make him happy in obliging this Nation with Papers received from his Hands, &c. 10. Why ſhould the Duke ſpeak of immenſe Charges which the Kingdom is not able to bear; as, to aſſiſt the King of Denmark with thirty thouſand Pounds per Month, Count Mansfield with twenty thouſand Pounds a Month, the Low Countries with eight thouſand Pounds a Month, and two thouſand ſix hundred Pounds a Month for Ireland? Anſ. Make the King Chief of the War by a Diverſion, and he will give a greater Advantage to all his Allies, than by any Monthly Allowance, &c. 11. But where is the Enemy? Anſ. Make the Fleet ready to go out, and the King bids You name the Enemy your ſelves, &c.

And Objections againſt him anſwered.

The Duke of Buckingham, a potent Favourite, fatal to his Maſter.

All Court Favourites odious to the Engliſh People.

After the Commons were returned from the Upper Houſe on this Tueſday Auguſt 9. a Report was made of his Majeſty's Anſwer, and of the Duke's Defence: Upon which the Members differ'd. Some were for preſent Supply in Gratitude to his Majeſty's gracious Anſwer; and urg'd, that this Supply was not for the King's own particular Wants, but for the Honour and Defence of the Kingdom; and, that it might prove dangerous not to comply with the King in ſuch a modeſt and juſt Deſire. Others were of a contrary Mind, and ſaid, It was rather their Duty to preſent to the King, how he might live glorious at

The Duke's Plea in Parliament.

1625. home, and be feared abroad, by having his Deſigns better managed, and an Enemy declared: that we ought to be more ſecured from Domeſtick Foes, before we engage againſt any foreign Enemy: that the great Sums given for Honours and Offices would go far in ſetting out the Fleet, &c. After warm Debates, they agreed to conſider farther of the Matter to morrow.

Meſſage from the King to the H. of Commons.

Accordingly, on Wedneſday Aug. 10. while the Commons were going to reaſſume the Debate, they receiv'd a Meſſage from the King, wherein his Majeſty took notice, "that he perceived the Houſe intended to enter into conſideration of divers Heads "concerning the King and the Commonwealth; that "he was pleaſed with their good Intentions, but "deſired them to conſider his Affairs, which requir'd a ſpeedy Diſpatch, and indeed a quick Supply. He offer'd the Parliament ſhould meet again "in Winter, at what time they pleaſe, upon his "Royal Word, and then ſit till they had perfected "all things for the common Good: and, in concluſion, deſired them to conſider, that this was the "firſt Requeſt he had ever made to them.

The Influence of this Meſſage upon the H. of Commons.

Upon this Meſſage ſome Members earneſtly preſſed the giving of two Subſidies, and two Fifteens, in regard to his Majeſty's Honour, and the Neceſſity of Publick Affairs. But others replied, That Neceſſity was a dangerous Counſellor, and might be a continual Argument of Supplies in all Parliaments: that thoſe Miniſters who had put the King and Kingdom into ſuch Neceſſity, ought to anſwer for it: that there was as much Neceſſity for Redreſs of Grievances as for Grant of more Subſidies, &c. The Houſe at laſt agreed upon a Declaration, drawn up in this Form:

They draw up a Declaration.

"WE the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, of "the Commons Houſe of Parliament, being "the Repreſentative Body of the whole Commons "of this Realm, abundantly comforted in his Majeſty's late gracious Anſwer touching Religion, "and his Meſſage for the care of our Health; do "ſolemnly proteſt and vow, before God and the "World, with one Heart and Voice, That we are "all reſolved, and do hereby declare, that we will "ever continue moſt Loyal and Obedient Subjects "to our moſt gracious Soveraign Lord K. Charles; "and that we will be ready, in convenient time, "and in a Parliamentary way, freely and dutifully "to do our utmoſt Endeavours to diſcover and reform the Abuſes and Grievances of the Realm and "State, and in like ſort to afford all neceſſary Supply to his moſt excellent Majeſty upon his preſent "and all other his juſt Occaſions and Deſigns; "moſt humbly beſeeching our ſaid dear and dread "Soveraign, in his Princely Wiſdom and Goodneſs, "to reſt aſſured of the true and hearty Affections of "his poor Commons, and to eſteem the ſame to be "(as we conceive it is indeed) the greateſt worldly Reputation and Security that a juſt King can "have; and to account all ſuch as Slanderers of the "Peoples Affections, and Enemies to the Commonwealth, that ſhall dare to ſay the contrary.

The King offended at it.

This Declaration was ſent to the King by ſuch of the Privy Council as were Members of the Houſe: and if his Majeſty would have ſeem'd pleas'd with it, and would have commanded Buckingham to make his Peace with the Commons, and would have promis'd a Redreſs of Civil Grievances as graciouſly as he had anſwer'd the Complaints about Religion, and have ſo comply'd with the Genius of the Nation; he might then have made himſelf ſafe at home, and very conſiderable abroad. But it ſo happen'd, that he thought the Duke a neceſſary Inſtrument by no means to be laid aſide; and apprehended, that the Grievances of a ſix Month's Reign ought not to be objected to him; and, that nothing elſe ought to interrupt an immediate Supply. Upon theſe Thoughts, on Friday Aug. 12. the King ſent a Commiſſion directed to ſeveral Lords for the Diſſolution of the Parliament. Whereupon the Uſher of the Black Rod was ſent to call up the Commons to the Lord's Houſe: But they being reſolv'd into a Grand Committee, and knowing the Deſign of the Meſſage, refuſed to admit the Meſſenger, or to let the Speaker take the Chair, till Mr. Glanvil, Chairman of the Committee, had made a Report in a kind of Proteſtation. Then the Houſe went up, and having heard his Majeſty's Commiſſion read, it was accordingly executed, and the Parliament diſſolved. 1625.

Diſſolves the Parliament by Commiſſion.

To the general Diſcontent of the People.

This abrupt Diſſolution, tho' founded upon ſome weighty Reaſons, was a great Unhappineſs to King and Kingdom: It left a deep Impreſſion of Diſcontent upon the Minds of the People, and created a Diffidence and Jealouſie between the King and all ſucceeding Parliaments.

Acts paſſed in this Parliament.

At this Parliament, begun and holden by Prorogation at Weſtminſter the 13th Day of June, Anno Regis Caroli primo, 1625. theſe Acts were paſs'd.

I. "An Act for the Puniſhing of divers Abuſes "committed on the Lord's-day, commonly called "Sunday.

II. "An Act to enable the King to make Leaſes "of Lands, Parcel of the Dutchy of Cornwal.

III. "An Act for the Eaſe of obtaining Licenſes "of Alienation, and in the pleading of Alienations "with Licenſe, or of Pardons of Alienation without Licenſe, in the Court of Exchequer or elſewhere.

IV. "An Act to reſtrain Tippling in Inns and "Ale-houſes.

V. "An Act for the Subſidy of the Clergy.

VI. "An Act for two Subſidies of the Temporalty.

VII. "An Act that this Seſſion of Parliament "ſhall not determine by his Majeſty's Aſſent to this "and ſome other Acts.

VIII. "An Act to confirm an Agreement between "the King and the Copyholders of Macclesfield in "the County of Cheſter.

IX. "An Act for the Settlement of an Agreement "of the Tenants of Chelvenham and Aſhby alias "Charleton, between the King and Sir Charles Grival, Knight.

The King proceeds to a War.

The Parliament being diſſolved, the King purſued his Deſigns of War, and order'd the Fleet to be ſpeedily put to Sea. He made a League with the United Provinces againſt the Emperour and King of Spain, for reſtoring the Liberties of Germany. The States, by their Ambaſſadors, deſir'd to enter into this League: upon which the Duke of Buckingham and the Earl of Holland were ſent to the Hague to conclude the ſame, and to comfort the King's diſtreſſed Siſter with the Hopes of Reſtitution.

A Proclamation againſt the Papiſts.

To gratifie the Deſires of the late Parliament, and to keep his Royal Word, the King wiſely iſſued out his Proclamation to command the Return, within a time limited, of all Engliſh Youth bred up in foreign Schools and Seminaries: That no Biſhop, Prieſt, or other Perſon in Orders by Authority of the See of Rome, ſhould preſume to confer Eccleſiaſtical Orders, or exerciſe his Function or Juriſdiction towards any of his natural Subjects: and, That all Statutes in force againſt Jeſuits, &c. be put in due execution.

But want of Money to carry on the War, muſt drive the King upon ſome Meaſures of Supply that were extraordinary, and therefore thought illegal. That of borrowing from the Subjects by their own Conſent was firſt tried, as the moſt inoffenſive: To which purpoſe, the King directed his Letters to the Lords Lieutenants in the ſeveral Counties, in manner following.

The King's Letters for a Loan.

Right Truſty and Well-beloved,

"IT hath been ſo uſual a thing for Kings and Princes of this Realm to make uſe of their Subject's good Affections, by borrowing ſome ſuch "competent Sums of Money of Perſons able to lend,

1625. " as might ſupply thoſe preſent Occaſions for pub-
" lick Service which cannot attend that length of " time wherein it can be raiſed by Contribution
" by the generality of our Subjects. As we have " not only preſent occaſion to make the like Trial,
" by borrowing from ſome private Gentlemen and
" others; but alſo of your Sincerity and Endeavours
" in furtherance of the Service; that is to ſay, in
" taking ſome courſe either out of your own Know-
" ledge and Experience, or by any other Means and
" Inſtruments which you like beſt, to make colle" ction of as many Perſons Names within the Coun-
" ty wherein you are Lieutenant, as may be of A" bility to furniſh us with ſeveral Sums at this " time; and therefore to return in a Book, both
" the Names of the Perſons, their Dwellings, and
" what Sums you think they may ſpare; that we
" may thereupon direct our Privy Seals unto them,
" according to the Form of this encloſed. And for " your farther Inſtruction in this caſe, on whoſe
" Truſt we do ſo much repoſe, we wiſh you to ad-
" viſe herein with your Deputy-Lieutenants, as
" thoſe from whom we have ſpecial Cauſe to pro-
" miſe our ſelves all good Offices of Duty and Affe" ction. To which we muſt add thus much farther,
" That we do not at this time intend to deal with
" any Noblemen, neither are you to deal with any " of the Clergy, becauſe we have reſerved that Di-
" rection to the Metropolitans of the ſeveral Pro-
" vinces; to proceed only with ſome ſpecial Per-
" ſons, that are known to be Men of Wealth and
" Ability, and not meerly ſubſiſting upon thoſe
" Livings which in moſt Places are far inferiour to
" that Maintenance we could wiſh them. By which
" courſe and conſideration of ours, tho' you may " perceive how much we deſire to procure this Loan
" without inconveniency to any, which is only in" tended for the Service of the Publick; yet muſt
" we aſſure you, that we had no greater cauſe at " any time than now to make uſe of your Integri-
" ty and Induſtry in reſpect of your Election of the " Lenders, and of your conſtant Demonſtration
" both of Diligence and Affection to the Service.
" Having now delivered unto you as much as for " the preſent can be expected from us, we will refer
" you for any farther Direction unto our Privy
" Council, as hereafter occaſion ſhall require: To " whom our Pleaſure is, you do return your Certi" ficates in Manner and Form as is aforeſaid, at the
" moſt within twenty Days after the Receipt of theſe
" our Letters. Given, &c.

Letters of the Comptroller under the Privy Seal.

Accordingly, in purſuance of this Method, the Comptroller of the King's Houſhold, by Order of the Council, iſſued forth Letters in the King's name, under the Privy Seal, to the ſeveral Perſons return'd by the Lord Lieutenants, with a Preamble of Grounds and Reaſons, and then concluding, " The " Sum which we require of you by theſe Preſents is
" ..... which we do promiſe in the Name of " Us, our Heirs and Succeſſors, to repay to you, or
" your Aſſigns, within eighteen Months after the " Payment thereof unto the Collector. The Perſon
" we have appointed to collect it is ..... to
" whoſe Hands we do require you to ſend it with-
" in twelve Days after you have received this Privy
" Seal; which, together with the Collector's Ac-
" quittance, ſhall be ſufficient Warrant unto the " Officers of our Receipt for the Repayment hereof
" at the time limited. Given at, &c.

The Collectors of this Loan were appointed to pay into the Exchequer the Sums received, and to return the Names of ſuch as diſcovered a Diſpoſition to delay or excuſe the Payment of the Sums required of them.

An ill Project.

This Project did not ſo much anſwer the King's Occaſions, as it treaſur'd up the Peoples Murmurs and Complaints: for, the King's borrowing what the Parliament deny'd to give, was to arraign the Judgment of the Commons; and for Subjects to have their Abilities valued by the Lieutenants, was a way of Taxing without Precedent; and to have the particular Sum demanded, took away all appearance of a voluntary Loan; and to have the Names return'd of thoſe who ſhould refuſe or delay, as well as of thoſe who ſhould freely lend, was to regiſter the King's Subjects in different Columns of Enemies and Friends: Beſides, the Lenders could hardly expect to be repaid without a Parliamentary Fund; and yet a following Parliament might be ſo far from thinking it a juſt Debt, that they would rather refuſe the Diſcharge, for fear it ſhould encourage the like Practice in other Intervals of Parliament. 1625.

Warrants from Privy Council againſt the Papiſts.

To help allay theſe popular Diſcontents, the Privy Council iſſued out Warrants for the Diſarming of Popiſh Recuſants; and directed expreſs Letters to the principal Lords of that Communion, requiring them to render their Arms and Furniture thereunto belonging, together with all their Habiliments of War, to be removed into Places convenient, and to remain there during the King's Pleaſure. Inſtructions were likewiſe ſent to the Lord Lieutenants, to examine into the Truth and Reaſon of a prevailing Report, That there was a great and unaccuſtomed Reſort to the Houſes of Papiſts, that there were frequent Aſſemblies, ſolemn Entertainments, and a ſpecial Intercourſe of Letters between them; and to enquire and ſearch if there were any Preparation of Men or Arms, or Practice of Arms, or Endeavours of Alteration among Perſons diſcontented with the preſent Government.

The Fleet ready to Sail.

The Fleet was now ready, and ten brave Regiments were deſigned for this Expedition. The Duke, Lord Admiral, declin'd to go in Perſon; which rais'd a greater Prejudice againſt him, that he ſhould be ſo forward in his Counſels for the War, and yet recede from an actual Service in it. To ſupply his place, Sir Edward Cecil was created Lord Viſcount Wimbleton, and had the Command of the whole Fleet, the Earl of Eſſex being Vice-Admiral under him. This Sir Edward Cecil was a third Son of Thomas Earl of Exeter, train'd up a Soldier in the Netherlands upon continual Service for thirty five Years, being firſt Colonel of Foot, and at the Battle of Newport Commander of the Engliſh Horſe; General of the Forces ſent by King James againſt the Spaniards and Imperialiſts. So that he came with the Reputation of a Land Soldier, not of a Seaman; and ſeem'd not ſo fit for the Voyage, as for the Deſcent upon Spain. His being a Stranger to the Navy was the worſe reſented, becauſe in the Choice of Officers for this Service, Sir Robert Manſel, a true old Sea-Commander, was neglected; which much diſguſted the common Seamen, who naturally love a Fellow-Sailor.

Lord Wimbleton General at Sea and Land.

The Expedition at Sea unfortunate.

In the beginning of October (too late a Seaſon) the Fleet, conſiſting of eighty Ships, the Ann Royal, a Ship of twelve hundred Tun, being Admiral, put forth from Plymouth for the Coaſts of Spain; and after four days Sail met with a furious Storm, which ſo diſpers'd the Ships, that fifty of 'em were miſſing for ſeven Days: but they join'd again upon the Coaſts of Spain, where they found a Prize put into their hands, the Spaniſh Shipping in the Bay of Cadiz, weak and eaſie to be taken; but in Negligence and ill Conduct, they ſuffer'd 'em to eſcape. To regain ſome Honour, the Forces landed, and Sir John Boroughs took a ſmall Fort; but the Soldiers finding good ſtore of the rich Wines, took a liberty in them, and had expos'd themſelves to the Enemy, if they had not been commanded Aboard again: when the General putting to Sea, intended to wait for the Plate-Fleet, which was daily expected from the Weſt-Indies: But the ill Condition of his Men, by reaſon of a general Contagion, oblig'd him to return home with Diſhonour in November following.

Return of the Fleet.

This unfortunate Expedition encreas'd the Jealouſies and hard Apprehenſions of the People. Some little Enquiries were made into the Miſcarriage. The General and other Officers were examin'd before the 1625. Council, where they threw the blame upon one another, and only prov'd it to be among them a very ill-manag'd Deſign. When the Forces were landed at Plymouth in December, a Proclamation iſſued forth, to command that no Soldiers of the Fleet ſhould depart from their Colours, or be diſcharged of their Service, till the King ſhould ſignifie his Pleaſure: So the Companies were diſperſed into ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom. Orders were likewiſe ſent for the better exerciſing of the Train'd-Bands, and for aſſigning old Officers, experienc'd in the Low-Country Wars, to take their Poſts in the ſeveral Counties, there to muſter and diſcipline the Militia, and make them ready for the publick Service. But the People did not like theſe Appearances of War without the countenance of a Parliament.

A Parliament to be ſummon'd.

And therefore the King wiſely determin'd to call a Parliament to meet in February following: And to prepare for their more amicable Meeting, his Majeſty enjoin'd the Archbiſhops and Biſhops to proceed againſt Popiſh Recuſants by Excommunication, and other Cenſures of the Church; and to uſe all lawful means of bringing them to publick Juſtice. Eſpecially he recommended to their vigilant Care, the unmasking and repreſſing of thoſe who were not profeſs'd Papiſts, yet diſaffected to the true Religion, and kept cloſe their evil Inclinations, and ſo by ſecret Means and Slights did encourage and advance the Growth of Popery. This Command was ſeconded by a Proclamation, requiring that all convicted Papiſts ſhould, according to the Laws of this Realm, remain confined to their Dwelling-places, or within five Miles thereof, unleſs upon ſpecial Licenſe firſt obtained in neceſſary Caſes.

Wiſe Methods to prepare for a happy Meeting.

Some Courſes taken that diſoblig'd the People.

This Method was prudent and popular; but ſome other Courſes were taken very diſagreeable. The Duke of Buckingham was allow'd to throw his Marks of Diſpleaſure upon thoſe Members who had oppos'd him in the laſt Parliament: of which, one of the chief was the Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, Lord Keeper, whom the Duke had openly reprov'd at Chriſt-church in Oxford, for ſiding againſt him; the Biſhop ſtoutly anſwered, That he was indeed engaged with William Earl of Pembroke, and other worthy Patriots, to labour the Redreſs of the Peoples Grievances, and in ſo good a Cauſe he was reſolved to ſtand upon his own Legs. If that be your Reſolution (ſaid the Duke) look you ſtand faſt: and ſo they parted, never to be reconcil'd; for ſhortly after the Biſhop was ſequeſtred from the Council-Table, from the Seal, and from the Preſence of the King, tho' he retained the Name of Lord Keeper, till now upon October the 30th, the Seal was given to Sir Thomas Coventry at Hampton-Court, who was that Day ſworn of the Privy Council, with the Stile and Dignity of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England. Other Tokens of Prejudice were ſhewn againſt ſome of the leading Members in the laſt Houſe of Commons, who were now made Sheriffs, that they might be incapable of being elected within their ſeveral Counties: Among theſe Gentlemen were Sir Edward Coke, who had been Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, and therefore reſented it as the greater Indignity to have this Office put upon him. To avoid it, if poſſible, he drew up Exceptions againſt the Oath of a Sheriff, and ſent them to the Attorney-General, who by Order of Council did attend the Judges, and received their Opinion, that of the four Articles objected by Sir Edward Coke, they found no reaſonable Cauſe to make any Alteration, only in one of the ſaid Articles, viz. You ſhall do all your Pain and Diligence to deſtroy and make to ceaſe all manner of Hereſies and Errors, commonly called Lollaries, within your Bailywick from time to time, to all your power, and be helping to all Ordinaries and Commiſſioners of the Holy Church, and favour and maintain them as oftentimes as you ſhall be required: which part of the Oath, as obſolete and irreligious, they did agree ſhould be left out of the Oath to be adminiſtred to Sir Edw. Coke High Sheriff.

Sir Edward Coke, and all other Sheriffs for the future. And an Order of Council was accordingly made to that effect: which reform'd the Oath, but did not excuſe the Perſons. Another Practice diſpleaſing to the Country, was the King's directing his Precepts to all Sheriffs, commanding them to make Proclamation, That all ſuch as had Forty Pounds a Year, or more, of Lands or Revenues, in their own hands or the hands of Feoffees, and are not yet Knights, do at their Perils prepare to preſent themſelves in his Majeſty's Preſence by the 31ſt of January, to receive the Order of Knighthood. This indeed was old Law and Cuſtom; but, to reinforce it now, when the Value of Eſtates was ſo much diſproportion'd to the Quality of Knights, was thought at beſt to be but a legal Oppreſſion. The faireſt Pretence for it was to do Honour to the King's Coronation.

Perſons compell'd to take the Honour of Knighthood.

For the King had declar'd his Intentions to be ſolemnly crown'd upon Candlemas-day; and required all Perſons, who by reaſon of their Offices and Tenures were bound to perform any Duties at that Solemnity, to pay their Attendance, and perform their reſpective Service: and gave Orders to the Earl Marſhal, and Lord Chamberlain, to prepare for the Rites and Ceremonies of creating ſeveral Knights of the Bath.

Coronation appointed.

By this time the Plague abating, the King ordained a General Thankſgiving to be celebrated on Sunday the 29th of January in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter and Places adjacent, and on February the 19th in all other Places of the Kingdom: For which purpoſe, by the King's Command, a Form of Prayer and Thankſgiving was drawn up by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of London, Durham, Rocheſter, and St. Davids. The Number of thoſe that died this Year within and without the Walls of the City of London, and in the Liberties and nine out-Pariſhes, from the 16th of December 1624, to the 15th of December 1625, was in total, Fifty four thouſand two hundred ſixty and five; whereof there died of the Plague, Thirty five thouſand four hundred and ſeventeen.

Thankſgiving for the Plague ceaſing.

To prepare for the Coronation, ſeveral Biſhops (among whom Biſhop Laud) were appointed to meet at White-hall upon Wedneſday, Jan. the 4th, to conſult and draw up a Form of the Service and Ceremonies to be then uſed. And becauſe the Biſhop of Lincoln, as Dean of Weſtminſter, was to have a chief Part in thoſe Ceremonies, the King, offended with him, order'd that he ſhould not appear, but his Place ſhould be ſupply'd by Biſhop Laud. A double Grief to Biſhop Williams, to be himſelf kept abſent, and to have his Office executed by one for whom he had the leaſt Affection.

Ceremonial for Coronation.

On Thurſday, Feb. 2. the King began his Proceſſion from Weſtminſter-hall, and entred the Abbey-Church a little before Ten in the Morning, attended by the Aldermen of London, eighty Knights of the Bath in their Robes, the King's Serjeants at Law, Sollicitor and Attorney Generals, the Judges, Barons, Biſhops, Viſcounts, and Earls, in their Parliament Robes, going before the King two and two uncover'd. After them follow'd the Officers of State, being eight Earls and one Marquis, according to their reſpective Places, bearing the Swords, the Globe, the Sceptre, the Crown, the Lord Mayor of London carrying the ſhort Sceptre, two Biſhops carrying one the Golden Cup, the other the Communion Plate. Next before his Majeſty went the Earl of Arundel as Earl Marſhal of England, and the Duke of Buckingham as Lord High Conſtable for that Day. The King, habited in white Sattin, went under a rich Canopy, ſupported by the Barons of the Cinque-Ports, the King having on each hand a Biſhop, and his Train of Purple-Velvet carried up by the Maſter of the Robes, and the Maſter of the Wardrobe. At the entring into the Church, Biſhop Laud delivered into the King's hands the Staff of King Edward the Confeſſor, with which the King walked

Then the Archbiſhop of Canterbury preſented his Majeſty to the Lords and Commons and People there preſent, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, who gave their Aſſent and joyful Approbation. After Sermon the King went to the Altar, and took the Coronation Oath in this manner.

Coronation Oath.

Archbiſhop. Sir, Will you grant and keep, and by your Oath confirm to the People of England, the Laws and Cuſtoms to them granted by the Kings of England your lawful and religious Predeceſſors, and namely the Laws, Cuſtoms, and Franchiſes, granted to the Clergy by the glorious King St. Edward your Predeceſſor, according to the Laws of God, the true Profeſſion of the Goſpel eſtabliſh'd in this Kingdom, agreeable to the Prerogative of the Kings thereof, and the ancient Cuſtoms of the Realm?

King. I grant and promiſe to keep them.

Archb. Sir, Will you keep Peace and godly Agreement (according to your Power) both to God, the Holy Church, the Clergy, and the People?

King. I will keep it.

Archb. Sir, Will you, to your Power, cauſe Law, Juſtice, and Diſcretion, to Mercy and Truth, to be executed to your Judgment?

King. I will.

Archb. Sir, Will you grant to hold and keep the Laws and rightful Cuſtoms which the Commonalty of this your Kingdom have? And will you defend and uphold them to the Honour of God, ſo much as in you lieth?

King. I grant and promiſe ſo to do.

One of the Biſhops. Our Lord and King, We beſeech you to pardon, and to grant and to preſerve unto us, and to the Churches committed to your Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and do Law and Juſtice: and that you would protect and defend us, as every good King to his Kingdoms ought to be Protector and Defender of the Biſhops and the Churches under their Government.

King. With a willing and devout Heart I promiſe and grant my Pardon, and that I will preſerve and maintain to you, and the Churches committed to your Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and due Law and Juſtice; and that I will be your Protector and Defender to my Power, by the aſſiſtance of God, as every good King in his Kingdom in Right ought to protect and defend the Biſhops and Churches under their Government.

Then the King aroſe, and was led to the Communion-Table, where he took a ſolemn Oath in ſight of all the People, to obſerve all the Premiſes; and laying his hand upon the Bible, ſaid,

The things which I have here promiſed I ſhall perform and keep. So help me God, and the Contents of this Book.

After the Oath, the King was placed in the Chair of Coronation, and was anointed by the Archbiſhop, and inveſted with the Robes of King Edward the Confeſſor, and had the Crown of King Edward put on his Head, and his Sword girt about him. He offer'd this Sword, with two others, and ſome Pieces of Gold and Silver at the Communion Table. He was afterwards conducted by the Nobility to the Throne; where this Exhortation was read to his Majeſty.

Stand and hold faſt from henceforth the Place to which you have been Heir by the Succeſſion of your Forefathers, being now deliver'd to you by the Authority of Almighty God, and by the hands of us and all the Biſhops and Servants of God. And as you ſee the Clergy to come nearer to the Altar than others; ſo remember, that in all Places convenient you give them greater honour, that the Mediator of God and Man may eſtabliſh you in the Kingly Throne to be a Mediator betwixt the Clergy and the Laity, and that you may reign for ever with Jeſus Chriſt the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. 1625.

It is a Juſtice to the World to give theſe Particulars of the Coronation, becauſe ſome Offence and Exceptions were afterward made to part of them; and they were ſeverely charg'd upon Biſhop Land as his arbitrary Innovations.

A Reſtraint upon the Members a great Prejudice in the enſuing Parliament.

The Opening of the Parliament drew near: but before their Meeting, there appear'd ſome perſonal Grudges in the Duke of Buckingham that ſtruck at the Honour and Freedom of both Houſes. Some Members of the late Houſe of Commons, the Duke's Opponents, were made incapable of ſerving their Counties by having the Sheriffalties obtruded on them; as, Sir Edw. Coke made Sheriff of the County of Bucks, Sir Rob. Philips of Somerſet, and Sir Tho. Wentworth of Yorkſhire. The like Hardſhip was now uſed toward ſome Members of the Upper Houſe, as the Earl of Briſtol and the Biſhop of Lincoln, both under the Duke's Diſpleaſure. The Earl of Briſtol had fell out with the Duke in the Court of Spain, upon Principles of Integrity and Open-dealing; for this little Diſſention the Duke repreſented him to King James under ſuch a Character of being diſaffected to the King's Intereſt, that the Earl, upon his Return to England, was firſt diſgracefully ſtopt at Calais; and when he came to Dover, the Duke uſed all poſſible Inſtigations that he might be immediately committed to the Tower: when the Marquis of Hamilton and the Earl of Hertford oppos'd this arbitrary Deſign; The Duke however prevail'd, that a Letter ſhould be wrote to him by the Lord Conway, not to come to Court, nor to the King's Preſence, till he had anſwer'd to ſome Queries which his Majeſty ſhould appoint the Council to put to him. After the Death of King James, the Duke had Power to proſecute the ſame Reſentments; and not only kept him at a diſtance from Court, but had him remov'd from all his Offices and Employments: nor could he be ſuffer'd to come to an Account for the Monies expended in the King's Service, nor permitted to come to the Parliament which was diſſolv'd at Oxford. Upon iſſuing out the Writs for this new Parliament, the Earl's Call was wilfully omitted. Senſible of this Injury to his Right of Peerage, he petition'd the King to have the uſual Writ of Summons, as a Privilege never denied to any Peer of the Realm, to aſſiſt in the great Council of the Nation: He only received Anſwer by the Lord Conway, That the King was no ways ſatisfied, and therefore he muſt propound to him, Whether he would rather ſit ſtill and enjoy the Benefit of the late King's Pardon in Parliament, or to wave it, and put himſelf upon Tryal for his Negotiation in Spain; and that to one of theſe he muſt truſt to, and give a direct Anſwer. The Earl did directly anſwer, That he had been already queſtion'd upon twenty Articles by a Commiſſion of the Lords, and had given, as he preſum'd, full Satisfaction: That he did not wave the Pardon granted by King James in Parliament; nor would he wave any Privilege of being duly call'd to the preſent Seſſion. But ſtill receiving no Writ, when the Parliament ſat, he petition'd the Houſe of Lords, ſhewing, "That he being a Peer of the "Realm, had not receiv'd a Summons to Parlia- "ment; and deſires their Lordſhips to mediate "with his Majeſty, that he may enjoy the Liberty "of a Subject, and the Privilege of his Peerage, &c. This Matter being referred to a Committee of Privileges, the Earl of Hartford reported, That it was neceſſary their Lordſhips ſhould beſeech his Majeſty, that a Writ of Summons may be ſent to the Earl of Briſtol, as alſo to ſuch other Lords whoſe Writs are ſtopped, except ſuch as are made incapable to ſit in Parliament by Judgment of Parliament, or other legal Judgment. Upon this a Writ was directed to him; but the Lord Keeper ſent a Letter with it, commanding him, in his

As on 3 Commoners and 2 Lords.

Earl of Briſtol not call'd by Writ of Summons.

1625. his Majesty's Name to forbear his personal Attendance: which indeed made the Writ a formal Mockery; and therefore the Earl first answered the Lord Keeper by Letter dated from Dorset-Court, Mar. 31. 1626. and then again petition'd the House of Lords for their wise Consideration how far this might trench upon the Liberty and Safety of the Peers, and the Authority of their Letters Patents, to be in this sort discharged by a Letter missive of any Subject without the King's hand.

Bishop of Lincoln not summon'd to Parliament.

The like Affront was given to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, late Lord Keeper; who falling under the imperious Duke's Displeasure, had not only the Seal taken from him, but was denied to do his Homage to the King with the rest of the spiritual Lords at the Coronation, or to do his Office as Dean of Westminster in assisting at that Solemnity; and had now no Parliamentary Summons sent to him. This Omission he represented to the King in a respectful Letter, as the withdrawing of a Favour which had not been denied to any Prisoners or condemned Peers in his Father's Reign; beseeching that he might have leave to make his Proxy, if his personal Attendance must not be permitted. When upon a Motion in Parliament he did receive his Writ, he had likewise a particular Charge from the Keeper not to appear in Person, and had some difficulty to get his Proxy left with the Bishop of Winchester.

These Restraints upon the Members of both Houses must be acknowledg'd to have been the passionate Efforts of the Duke of Buckingham, which sounded ill, and were enough to prejudice the Parliament before their Meeting.

Opening of the Second Parliament.

On Monday the 6th of February this second Parliament began. If his Majesty had chose the later gracious Custom of speaking himself to the two Houses, it might have left the better Impressions of Duty and Affection. But the King being placed in his Royal Throne, the Lords in their Robes, and the Commons below the Bar, it pleased his Majesty to refer them wholly to the Lord Keeper; who spoke thus:

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of the House of Commons,

Speech of the Lord Keeper.

"YOU are here assembled by his Majesty's Writs and Royal Authority to hold a new Parliament, the general, ancient, and powerful Council of this renowned Kingdom; whereof if we consider aright, and think of that incomparable Distance between the supreme Height and Majesty of a mighty Monarch, and the submissive Awe and Lowliness of a Loyal Subject, we cannot but receive exceeding comfort and contentment in the Frame and Constitution of this highest Court, wherein not only the Prelates, Nobles, and Grandees, but the Commons of all degrees have their part, and wherein that high Majesty doth descend to admit, or rather to invite the humblest of his Subjects to Conference and Council with him of the great, weighty, and difficult Affairs of the King and Kingdom: a Benefit and Favour whereof we cannot be too sensible and thankful; for sure I am, that all good Hearts would be both sensible and sorrowful, if we did want it. And therefore it behoveth all, with united Hearts and Minds, free from Distraction and Diversion, to fix their Thoughts upon Counsels and Consultations worthy of such an Assembly, remembring, that in it is presented the Majesty and Greatness, the Authority and Power, the Wisdom and Knowledge of this great and famous Nation. And it behoveth us to magnifie and to bless God, that hath put the Power of Assembling Parliaments in the hands of him, the Virtue of whose Person doth strive with the Greatness of his Princely Lineage and Descent, whether he should be accounted major or melior, a greater King, or a better Man; and of whom you have had so much Trial and Experience, that he doth as affectionately love, as he doth exactly know and understand the true Use of Parliaments; witness his daily and unwearied Access to this House before his Access to the Crown; his gracious Readiness to all Conferences of Importance; his frequent and effectual Intercession to his blessed Father of never-dying Memory for the Good of the Kingdom, with so happy Success, that both this and future Generations shall feel it, and have cause to rejoyce at the Success of his Majesty's Intercession. And when the Royal Diadem descended upon himself, presently, in the midst of his Tears and Sighs for the Departure of his most dear and Royal Father, in the very first Consultation with his Privy Council, was resolved to meet his People in Parliament: And no sooner did the heavy hand of that destroying Angel forbear those deadly Strokes which for some time did make this Place inaccessible, but his Majesty presently resolved to recall it, and hath now brought you together, and in a happy time, I trust, to treat and consult with uniform Desires and united Affections, of those things that concern the general Good. 1625.

"And now being thus assembled, his Majesty hath commanded me to let you know, that his Love and Affection to the Publick moved him to call this Parliament; and looking into the Danger and spreading of that late Mortality, and weighing the multitude of his Majesty's pressing Occasions and urging Affairs of State, both at home and abroad, much importing the Safety and Stare of this Kingdom; the same Affection that moved him to call it, doth forbid him to prolong the Sitting of this Parliament. And therefore his Majesty resolving to confine this Meeting to a short time, hath confined me to a short Errand; and that is, that as a thing most agreeable to the Kingly Office, to the Example of the best Times, and to the Frame of modern Affairs, his Majesty hath called you together to consult and to advise of provident and good Laws, profitable for the Publick, and fitting for the present Times and Actions: for upon such depends the Assurance of Religion and of Justice, which are the surest Pillars and Buttresses of all good Government in a Kingdom: For his Majesty doth consider, that the Royal Throne on which God out of his Mercy to us hath set him, is the Fountain of all Justice; and that good Laws are the Streams and Quills by which the Benefit and Use of this Fountain is dispersed to his People. And it is his Majesty's Care and Study, that his People may see with Comfort and Joy of Heart, that this Fountain is not dry, but they and their Posterity may rest assured and confident in his time to receive as ample Benefit from this Fountain by his Majesty's Mercy and Justice, as ever Subjects did in the time of the most eminent Princes amongst his noble Progenitors; wherein as his Majesty shews himself most sensible of the Good of the Publick, so were it an Injury to this great and honourable Assembly, if it should be but doubted that they shall not be as sensible of any thing that may add to his Majesty's Honour; which cannot but receive a high degree of Love and Affection, if his Majesty succeeding so many Religious, Wise, and Renowned Princes, should begin his Reign with some Additions unto those good Laws which their happy and glorious Times have afforded. And this his Majesty hath caused me to desire at this time especially above others: for his Majesty having at his Royal Coronation lately solemnized the sacred Rites of that blessed Marriage between his People and him, and therein by a most holy Oath vowed the Protection of the Laws, and Maintenance of Peace both to Church and People; no time can be so fit for his Majesty to advise and consult at large with his People as this present time, wherein so lately 1625. " his Majeſty hath vowed Protection to his People, " and they have proteſted their Allegiance and Ser- " vice to him.

" This is the Sum of that Charge which I have " received from his Majeſty to deliver unto you, " wherein you ſee his Majeſty's Intent to the Pub- " lick: And therefore his Deſire is, that according " to that Conveniency of Time which his Affairs " may afford, you will apply your ſelves to diſpatch " the Buſineſs of this Parliament.

The Speech not grateful.

This Speech was the leſs acceptable becauſe the King was himſelf ſilent, which ſome ſuſpicious Tempers did not fail to repreſent as an Indication that the King was out of Humour with his People. Beſides, the Matter of this Speech, and the Dreſſing of it, had a peculiar Air of Greatneſs, which would have ſomewhat better became the King than his Miniſter.

Sir Heneage Finch Speaker.

On Wedneſday Februar. 8. the Commons preſented Sir Heneage Finch, Kt. Serjeant at Law and Recorder of London, for their Speaker; who having made the accuſtomed Excuſes, and receiv'd his Majeſty's Command to ſerve, he made a very flouriſhing Speech, with ſome extraordinary Flights and Figures, that were a peculiar Infirmity of that Age, and more eſpecially of that Perſon. He concludes more ſedately thus: " But I may weary your Majeſty, and loſe " my ſelf, and forget for whom I am a Speaker. " Cuſtom gives me the Privilege, as an humble Suitor on the Behalf of the Houſe, to preſent their " few Petitions unto your Majeſty. The firſt, That " for the better attending this publick and important Service, our ſelves and our neceſſary Attendants may, with your Majeſty's tender Allowance, be free both in our Perſons and Goods from " Arreſts and Troubles, according to our ancient " Privileges. 2. The next, That ſince for the preparing and drawing on to Concluſion ſuch Propoſitions as ſhall be handled in the Houſe, Debate " and Diſpute will be neceſſary, and by variety of " Opinions Truth is oftentimes beſt diſcerned; your " Majeſty will likewiſe, according to our ancient " Uſage and Privilege, vouchſafe us Liberty and " Freedom of Speech, from which I aſſure my ſelf " Duty and Loyalty to your Majeſty will never be " ſevered. 3. That when Occaſions of moment " ſhall require, your Majeſty, upon our humble " Suit, and at ſuch times as may beſt ſort with your " Occaſions, will vouchſafe us Acceſs to your Roy- " al Perſon. 4. That the Proceedings of the Houſe " may receive a favourable Interpretation at your " gracious Hands, and be free from Miſconſtru- " ctions.

His Speech to the King.

Good Beginning in the Houſe of Commons.

The Commons began with very dutiful Reſpects, in thanking the King for his late gracious Anſwer to their late Petition for Religion. Then a Bill was brought in, to adminiſter an Oath for rendring a true Account of all General and Publick Taxes, Rates, and Collections. Another againſt ſcandalous Miniſters. A Committee for Grievances, and another for ſecret Affairs, to ſit every Friday and Wedneſday during Parliament. They complain'd of the Miſcarriage of the Fleet to Cadiz, of evil Counſellors about the King; of the Miſemployment of the Publick Revenue; and other Political Diſorders. A Committee was likewiſe named for Religion, to reſtrain the growth of Popery.

The Kings Meſſage for Supply.

The Commons expect Redreſs of Grievances.

While theſe Matters were debating, Mr. Secretary Cook delivered a Meſſage from the King to the Commons, declaring his Majeſty's Occaſions for Supply: And the Neceſſity and Expedition of this Supply were farther urg'd by William Earl of Pembroke in a Conference which the Lords deſired with the Commons. But the Commons, before they would enter into Conſideration of Money Bills, called for a Report from the Committee of Grievances, and found theſe Reſolutions agreed upon.

1. Reſolved, That the Diminution of the Kingdom in Strength and Honour is a general Evil which we ſuffer under. As 2. The increaſe and countenancing of Papiſts. 3. The not guarding of the narrow Seas. 4. Plurality of Offices in one hand. 5. Sales of Honour and Places of Judicature. 6. Delivery up of Ships to the French. 7. Miſemployment of three Subſidies and three Fifteens, &c. And they order'd, that the Duke of Buckingham, who was more particularly concern'd in the occaſion of theſe Grievances, ſhould have notice given, that the Houſe intend ſuddenly to reſume the Debate of theſe Matters. In the Speeches upon this Subject, Mr. Clement Cook let fall this warm Expreſſion, It is better to die by a Foreign Enemy, than to be deſtroy'd at home. 1625. Reſolutions of the Committee of Grievances.

The Lords more inclin'd to immediate Supply.

The Lords ſeem'd more complying with the King's Deſires, and appointed a Committee to conſider of the common Safety and Defence; who reported their Opinion, that one Fleet ſhould be preſently ſet to Sea to prevent the Invaſion of our Coaſts, and to annoy the King of Spain; that another be ſet out to defend our Channel, and ſecure our Ships from Pirates; and, that due Conſideration ſhould be had of maintaining the Armies under the King of Denmark and Count Mansfield. The Lords deſired a Conference with the Commons upon this Subject-matter: But the Commons not reliſhing a Supply without Redreſs of Grievances, return'd Anſwer, That they did deſire to have a good Correſpondency with their Lordſhips, and would be ever careful of the Safety and Defence of the Kingdom, and maintain their own Privileges; and, that for this Reaſon they would immediately proceed againſt the Duke.

But the Commons reſolve to have the publick Grievances firſt conſider'd.

Upon notice of this Ferment in the Houſe of Commons, the King wrote this Letter to the Speaker, to be communicated to the Houſe.

King's Letter to the Speaker.

Truſty and Well-beloved,

" HAving aſſembled the Parliament early in the " beginning of the Year, for the more timely " Help and Advice of our People in our great and " important Affairs; and having of late not only " by Meſſage but alſo of our ſelf put our Houſe of " Commons in mind of our preſſing Occaſions, and " of the preſent Eſtate of Chriſtendom, wherein " they have equal Intereſt with us, as well in re- " ſpect of their own former Engagements, as of " the common Cauſe; we ſhall not need to tell " them with what Care and Patience we have, in " the midſt of our Neceſſities, attended their Re- " ſolutions: But becauſe their unſeaſonable Slow- " neſs may produce at home as ill Effects as a De- " nial, and hazard the whole Eſtate of things a- " broad; we have thought fit, by you the Speaker, " to let them know, that without more loſs of time " we look for a full and perfect Anſwer of what they " will give for our Supply, according to our Expe- " ctation and their Promiſes. Wherein as we preſs " for nothing beyond the preſent ſtate and conditi- " on of our Subjects, ſo we accept no leſs than is " proportionable to the Greatneſs and Goodneſs of " the Cauſe: Neither do we preſs them to a pre- " ſent Reſolution in this, with a purpoſe to preci- " pitate their Counſels, much leſs to enter upon " their Privileges; but to ſhew that it is unfit to " depend any longer upon Uncertainties, whereby " the whole weight of the Affairs of Chriſtendom " may break in upon us on the ſudden, to our Diſ- " honour and the Shame of this Nation. And for " the Buſineſs at home, we command you to pro- " miſe them in our Name, that after they have ſa- " tisfied us in this our reaſonable Demand, we ſhall " not only continue them together at this time ſo " long as this Seaſon will permit, but call them " ſhortly again to perfect thoſe neceſſary Buſineſſes " which ſhall be now left undone: And now we " ſhall willingly apply fit and ſeaſonable Remedies " to ſuch juſt Grievances which they ſhall preſent " unto us in a dutiful and mannerly way, without " throwing an ill Odour upon our preſent Govern- " ment, or upon the Government of our late bleſſed " Father: And if there be yet who deſire to find fault,

" we 1625. " we ſhall think him the wiſeſt Reprehender of " things paſt, who, without reflecting backward,

" can give us Counſel how to ſettle the preſent
" Eſtate of things, and to provide for the future
" Safety and Honour of the Kingdom.

The Letter not acceptable.

This Letter pleas'd the leſs, becauſe it was an expreſs Demand of Supply, which had been ſooner given upon a Deſire of it; and becauſe it inſiſted upon that Supply before the Redreſs of Grievances, which uſually preceded or at leaſt attended upon all former Aids.

A Meſſage to the ſame effect.

The King's Occaſions were ſo importunate, that, beſides the Letter, he ſent a Meſſage to the Houſe by Sir Richard Weſton, to ſollicit their more ſpeedy Aſſiſtance for theſe Reaſons:

1. That his Majeſty's Fleet being return'd, and the Victuals ſpent, the Men muſt of neceſſity be diſcharged, and their Wages paid, or elſe an aſſured Mutiny will follow, which may be many ways dangerous at this time.

2. That his Majeſty hath made ready about forty Ships to be ſet forth on a ſecond Voyage to hinder the Enemy, which want only Victuals and ſome Men, which without preſent Supply of Money cannot be ſet forth and kept together.

3. That the Army which is appointed in every Coaſt muſt be preſently diſbanded, if they be not preſently ſupplied with Victuals and Cloaths.

4. That if the Companies of Ireland lately ſent thither be not provided for, inſtead of defending that Country, they will prove the Authors of Rebellion.

5. That the Seaſon of providing healthful Victuals will be paſt if this Month be neglected.

" And therefore his Majeſty commanded me to " tell you, That he deſired to know, without far-
" ther delaying of time, what Supply you will give " him for theſe his preſent Occaſions, that he may
" accordingly frame his Courſe and Counſel.

The Commons returned this Anſwer.

Anſwer of the Commons to the K.'s Meſſage.

Moſt Gracious Soveraign,

" YOur Majeſty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects,
" the Commons now aſſembled in Parliament,
" in all Humility preſent unto your Royal Wiſdom
" this their Loyal Anſwer to the Meſſage which " your Majeſty was pleaſed, by the Chancellor of " your Exchequer to ſend unto them; deſiring to
" know, without any further deferring of Time,
" what Supply they would give to your Majeſty
" for your preſent and extraordinary Occaſions;
" that you might accordingly frame your Courſes
" and Counſels. Firſt of all, they moſt humbly
" beſeech your Majeſty to know, and reſt aſſured,
" that no King was ever dearer to his People than
" your Majeſty; no People more zealous to main" tain and advance the Honour and Greatneſs of " their King than they; which, as upon all occa-
" ſions, they ſhall be ready to expreſs, ſo eſpe-
" cially in the ſupport of that Cauſe wherein your
" Majeſty and your Allies are now juſtly engaged.
" And becauſe they cannot doubt but your Maje-
" ſty, in your great Wiſdom, even out of Juſtice,
" and according to the Example of your moſt fa" mous Predeceſſors, will be pleaſed graciouſly to " accept the faithful and neceſſary Information
" and Advice of your Parliament; which can have
" no end but the Service of your Majeſty and Safe-
" ty of your Realm, in diſcovering the Cauſes and
" propoſing the Remedies of theſe great Evils,
" which have occaſioned your Majeſty's Wants,
" and your Peoples Grief.

" They therefore in confidence and full aſſu-
" rance of Redreſs therein, do with one conſent
" propoſe (though in former time ſuch courſe hath
" been unuſed) that they really intend to aſſiſt and
" and ſupply your Majeſty in ſuch a way, and in
" ſo ample a meaſure, as may make you ſafe at " home and feared abroad. For the diſpatch
" whereof they will uſe ſuch Diligence as your
" Majeſty's preſſing and preſent Occaſions ſhall 1625.
" require.

This Anſwer ſeem'd to be very reſpectful and ſincere, and if his Majeſty could have taken it in that obliging Senſe, and have made a ſoft and eaſie return of Confidence in them, the Seſſions might have been happy, and the Aid ſufficient. But his Majeſty was pleaſed to be impatient of Delays; and either mov'd by his own Diſpoſition to be reſolute, or prevailed upon by the Duke of Buckingham to ſkreen him from all danger, he thought fit to ſend this Reply in a Letter to the Speaker.

Mr. Speaker,

The K.'s Reply in a Letter to the Speaker.

" THE Anſwer of the Commons delivered by
" you, I like well of, and do take it for a
" full and ſatisfactory Anſwer, and I thank them
" for it; and I hope you will with all expedition
" take a courſe for performance thereof, the which
" will turn to your own good as well as mine.
" But for your Clauſe therein of preſenting of Grie-
" vances, I take that but for a Parentheſis in your " Speech, and not a Condition: And yet for an-
" ſwer to that part I will tell you; I will be as
" willing to hear your Grievances as my Predeceſ-
" ſors have been, ſo that you will apply your
" ſelves to redreſs Grievances, and not to enquire af-
" ter Grievances. I muſt let you know, that I will " not allow any of my Servants to be queſtioned
" amongſt you; much leſs ſuch as are of eminent
" Place and near unto me. The old Queſtion was,
" What ſhall be done to the Man whom the King
" will Honour? But now it hath been the labour
" of ſome, to ſeek what may be done againſt him
" whom the King thinks fit to Honour. I ſee
" you ſpecially aim at the Duke of Buckingham;
" I wonder what hath ſo alter'd your Affections
" towards him: I do well remember, that in the
" laſt Parliament in my Father's time, when he " was an Inſtrument to break the Treaties, all of " you (and yet I cannot ſay all, for I know ſome
" of you are changed; but yet the Houſe of Com" mons is always the ſame) did ſo much Honour
" and Reſpect him, that all the Honour conferr'd
" on him was too little; and what he hath done
" ſince to alter or change your Minds I wot not:
" but can aſſure you, he hath not medled or done
" any thing concerning the Publick or Common-
" wealth, but by ſpecial Directions and Appoint" ment, and as my Servant; and is ſo far from
" gaining or improving his Eſtate thereby, that I
" verily think he hath rather impaired the ſame.
" I would you would haſten for my Supply, or " elſe it will be worſe for your ſelves: for if any " Ill happen, I think I ſhall be the laſt ſhall feel
" it.

This Reply had no good effect.

If his Majeſty had gone no further in this Reply than the firſt Paragraph of it, Things and Men had been eaſily reconciled. But to inhibit their Enquiry into Grievances, and declare a Protection to that Miniſter who was thought the Cauſe of 'em, and to urge a Supply with a ſort of Menace of their ſuffering by the denial of it; this was ſoon improved into higher Jealouſies and Fears: And that part of the Houſe which under a freedom of venting their diſpleaſure would have been the ſooner ſatisfied, began now to gain a greater Reputation to their Complaints, and to gather ſtrength upon the Royal Oppoſition. For indeed all popular Diſcontents have ſomewhat of the Nature of Torrents; give them a little room to run and they quickly draw off themſelves: but if you offer preſently to obſtruct the Courſe, they ſwell and ſpread the more.

The majority of the Houſe fell now directly on the Duke, as the chief Cauſe of all publick Miſcarriages. And Dr. Turner, a Phyſitian, propoſed theſe Queries to the Houſe as grounded upon Common Fame.

1. Whe-

1625 Queries of Dr. Turner against the D. of Buckingham.

1. Whether the Duke being Admiral be not the cauſe of the loſs of the King's Royalty in the Narrow Seas?

2. Whether the unreaſonable, exorbitant and immenſe Gifts of Money and Land beſtowed on the Duke and his Kindred, be not the cauſe of impairing the King's Revenues, and impoveriſhing of the Crown?

3. Whether the multiplicity of Offices, conferred upon the Duke and others depending upon him (whereof they were not capable) be not the cauſe of the Evil Government of this Kingdom?

4. Whether Recuſants in general, by a kind of connivency, be not born out and encreaſed by reaſon of the Duke's Mother and Father-in-Law being known Papiſts?

5. Whether the ſale of Honours, Offices and Places of Judicature, and Eccleſiaſtical Livings and Promotions (a ſcandal and hurt to the Kingdom) be not through the Duke?

6. Whether the Dukes ſtaying at home, being Admiral and General in the Fleet of the Sea and Land Army, were not the cauſe of the bad ſucceſs and overthrow of that Action? And whether he did give good direction for that Deſign?

All theſe are famed to be ſo.

Two Queſtions on the Queries of Dr. Turner.

Hereupon two Queſtions were debated in the Houſe.

1. Whether the ſix Heads delivered by Dr. Turner, to be the cauſe of the Evils that were grounded upon common Fame, be to be debated in Parliament?

2. Whether an Accuſation upon common Fame, by a Member of this Houſe, be a Parliamentary way?

Some Members diſtinguiſhed between Common Fame and Rumour; this latter they ſaid was rather the Murmurs of private People, but the former was a Vox Populi, or general Voice of the Nation, which muſt be admitted as a Ground of Enquiry; which Common Fame tho' it was no Argument for a definitive Sentence, yet was it a proper Reaſon for previous Inquiſition. So the Houſe came to this Reſolution:

Reſolution of the Houſe of Commons.

That Common Fame is a good Ground of Proceeding for this Houſe, either by Enquiry or preſenting the Complaint (if the Houſe finds cauſe) to the King or Lords.

The next Day the Commons were reaſſuming the Debate, when Sir Richard Weſton delivered to the Houſe this ſecond Meſſage from his Majeſty.

A ſecond Meſſage from the King.

" His Majeſty hath taken notice of a ſeditious " Speech utter'd in the Houſe by Mr. Clement Cook; " the Words are ſaid to be to this effect: That it were " better to die by an Enemy than to ſuffer at home: Yet " his Majeſty in wiſdom hath forborn to take any " courſe therein, or to ſend to the Houſe about " it, not doubting but the Houſe would in due " time correct ſuch an Inſolence. But his Maje- " ſty hath found that his Patience hath wrought " to an ill effect, and hath embolden'd one ſince " to do a ſtrange Act, in a ſtrange way and un- " uſual; that is, Dr. Turner, who on Saturday laſt, " without any Ground of knowledge in himſelf, or " Proof tender'd to the Houſe, made an Enquiry " of ſundry Articles againſt the Duke of Bucking- " ham as he pretended, but indeed againſt the " Honour and Government of the King and his " late Father. This, his Majeſty ſaith, is ſuch an " Example that he can by no means ſuffer, tho' " it were to make enquiry of the meaneſt of his " Servants, much leſs againſt one ſo near unto " himſelf; and doth wonder at the fooliſh Im- " pudency of any Man, that can think he ſhould " be drawn out of any End to offer ſuch a Sa- " crifice, much unworthy the Greatneſs of a King " and Maſter of ſuch a Servant. And therefore " his Majeſty can no longer uſe his wonted Pa- " tience, but deſireth the Juſtice of the Houſe a- " gainſt the Delinquents; not doubting but ſuch " courſe will be taken, that he ſhall not be con- " ſtrained to uſe his Regal Authority to right " himſelf againſt theſe two Perſons.

Upon delivery of this Meſſage, Dr. Turner ſtood up and explain'd himſelf, and juſtified his late Propoſals to the Houſe. The Debate upon it being put off to another Day, Dr. Turner being then indiſpos'd, wrote a Letter to the Speaker in his further Vindication. This Reſentment of the King did but encreaſe the Ferment againſt the Duke: So, as on the Monday following, Sir William Walter repreſented to the Houſe, that he thought the cauſe of all Grievances was that which happen'd in the Court of King Lewis XI. of France; i. e. All the King's Council rode upon one Horſe: And therefore the Parliament ought to adviſe his Majeſty as Jethro did Moſes, to take Aſſiſtants rightly qualified, &c. Sir John Elliot made another bold and ſharp Speech upon the Subject of ill-Management and Grievances. But to qualifie theſe Heats with all reſpect to the King, and with a deference to the neceſſity of publick Affairs, the Commons on March 27. voted three Subſidies and three Fifteens, and an Act thereupon to be brought in as ſoon as Grievances were preſented to his Majeſty and anſwered by him. And then they proceeded to receive Informations againſt the Duke; and ordered he ſhould have notice of it.

1626. Dr. Turner explains and juſtifies himſelf.

Houſe of Commons vote three Subſidies and two Fifteens.

This ſo affected the King who had reſolved to defend the Duke, that on March 23. he ſent a Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, that they ſhould attend his Majeſty to Morrow at Nine-a-Clock in the Morning in the Hall of his Palace at White hall; and that in the mean time all Proceedings in the Houſe and Committee ſhould ceaſe.

Accordingly on March 29. the Lords and Commons attending, the King made this Speech to them.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech to both Houſes.

" I Have call'd you hither to Day, I mean both " Houſes of Parliament, but it is for ſeveral " and diſtinct Reaſons: My Lords, you of the " Upper Houſe, to give You thanks for the Care of " the ſtate of the Kingdom now; and not only for " the Care of your own Proceedings, but for inci- " ting your fellow Houſe of the Commons to take " that into their Conſideration. Therefore, my " Lords, I muſt not only give you thanks, but I " muſt alſo avow, that if this Parliament do not " redound to the good of this Kingdom (which I " pray God it may) it is not Your Faults. And " you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, I am " ſorry that I may not juſtly give the ſame " thanks to You; but that I muſt tell you, that I " am come here to ſhew you your Errors, and as I " may call it unparliamentary Proceedings in this " Parliament. But I do not deſpair, becauſe you " ſhall ſee your Faults ſo clearly by the Lord " Keeper, that you may ſo amend your Proceed- " ings that this Parliament ſhall end comfortably " and happily, though at the beginning it hath had " ſome Rubs.

Then the Lord Keeper, by the King's Command, ſpake to this effect:

The King's Mind more fully expreſt by the Lord Keeper.

" That they were here aſſembled, by his Maje- " ſty's Commandment, to receive a Declaration of " his Royal Pleaſure; intended only to the Houſe " of Commons, tho' delivered in the preſence of " both Houſes. That no King was ever more lov- " ing to his People, or better affectioned to the " right uſe of Parliaments. That when his Maje- " ſty hath received Satisfaction of his reaſonable " Demands, he will hear and anſwer their juſt " Grievances. That never King was more jealous " of his Honour, nor more ſenſible of the Neglect " and Contempt of his Royal Rights. That there " be ſome particular Proceedings wherein his Ma- " jeſty is aggrieved. 1. That a ſeditious Speech " had been utter'd by Mr. Cook; for which the " Houſe had not duly cenſur'd him. 2. That Dr. " Turner had adviſed the Houſe to enquire upon " ſundry Articles againſt the Duke of Buckingham 1626. " without Knowledge or Proof: And yet the Houſe " had been ſo far from correcting his Inſolency, " that Committees walked in the ſame ſteps, and " proceeded in a like unparliamentary Inquiſition. " That as to the Duke, his Majeſty knew the ſin- " cerity of his Proceedings; and muſt believe that " their aim at him is directly to wound the Honour " and Judgment of himſelf and his Father. That " as to the Supply voted for him, it was delatory " and ſcanty; for the Meaſure of it, ſo far from " making him ſafe at Home and feared Abroad, as " contrariwiſe to expoſe him both to Danger and " Diſeſteem: and for the Manner of granting it, " it was in it ſelf very Diſhonourable and full of " Diſtruſt. That therefore his Majeſty commands " them to go together, and by Saturday next re- " turn their final Anſwer. That his Majeſty " doubteth not, but after his gracious Admoniti- " on, they will in due time obſerve and follow " the better ſort of Members; which if they ſhall " do, his Majeſty is moſt ready to forget what " ſoever is paſt.

Then his Majeſty thus further expreſſed himſelf.

The King reſumes his Speech. " I muſt withall put you in mind a little of times " paſt. You muſt remember, that in the time of " my bleſſed Father, you did with your Counſel " and Perſwaſion perſwade both my Father and " Me to break off the Treaties: I confeſs I " was your Inſtrument for two Reaſons; one was " the fitneſs of Time; the other, becauſe I was ſe- " conded by ſo great and worthy a Body as the " whole Body of Parliament. Then there was no " Body in ſo great Favour with you as this Man " whom you ſeem now to touch, but indeed my " Father's Government and mine. Now that you " have all things according to your Wiſhes, and " that I am ſo far engaged that you think there is " no retreat; now you begin to ſet the Dice and " make your own Game. But I pray you be not " deceived: it is not a Parliamentary way, nor is it " a way to deal with a King. Mr. Cook told you, " It was better to be eaten up by a Foreign Enemy than " to be deſtroyed at Home. Indeed I think it is more " Honour for a King to be invaded, and almoſt de- " ſtroyed by a Foreign Enemy, than to be deſpi- " ſed by his own Subjects.

" Remember that Parliaments are altogether in my " Power for their Calling, Sitting and Diſſolution; " therefore as I find the Fruits of them good or e- " vil, they are to continue, or not to be. And re- " member that if in this time, inſtead of mending " your Errors, by delay you perſiſt in your Errors, " you make them greater and irreconcilable: where- " as, on the other ſide, if you do go on cheerfully " to mend them, and look to the diſtreſſed Eſtate of " Chriſtendom, and the Affairs of the Kingdom, as " it lieth now by this great Engagement, you will " do your ſelves Honour; you ſhall encourage me " to go on with Parliaments, and I hope all Chri- " ſtendom ſhall feel the good of it.

A ſevere way of ſpeaking to an Engliſh Parliament. It muſt be acknowledged this was a Severity of ſpeaking; that from whatever Spirit of Honour it might proceed, and how agreeable ſoever it was to the later Notions of Majeſty, yet it had not been the uſual Language of an Engliſh Prince to an Engliſh Parliament. King Henry VIII. who had moſt of the Arbitrary Monarch in him, took the Members apart when he had a mind to fright them; and ſpoke always with an artificial Temper to a whole Houſe, or the whole Body together. The preſent King might poſſibly have carried his Point by a like Art of ſoft ſpeaking; but to throw by all Inſinuation and Court Addreſs, and receive the Commons in ſo blunt a manner, as they thought it to be Upbraiding and Menacing; This reliſhed ill with moſt of them, and alienated them from his Majeſty's Perſon and Intereſt more and more.

For when they returned to their Houſe and fell upon debating of the Speeches delivered by the King and the Lord Keeper, they reſolved themſelves into a grand Committee, and order'd the Doors to be lock'd, and no Member to go forth; and all other Proceedings to ceaſe till the Houſe ſhould come to a Reſolution in this Matter. 1626. That did not reliſh well.

The King being informed of the great Exceptions taken at his late Speech, and the explanatory Charge given by the Lord Keeper, commanded the Duke to give Satisfaction at a Conference of both Houſes in the Painted Chamber, held for that purpoſe, on March 29.

The Duke was to excuſe the King's Speech. He laboured to excuſe the King's preſcribing a ſhort Day for their granting a Supply; and aſſured them his Majeſty would give a longer time if the Buſineſs did require their further Conſideration. He let them underſtand, that the King's inſiſting upon a larger Aid than they had yet voted, was owing to the great Neceſſity of his Affairs, and the benefit of being enabled to carry the War to the Enemies Door. That his Majeſty did not mean to interrupt their Proceeding upon Grievances; but only hop'd that they would not ſo much ſeek Faults as the Means to redreſs them.

Which made the Diſguſt greater. But as this Apology was made by an unacceptable Man, ſo perhaps the very making of it did but obſtruct the King's Buſineſs; becauſe it confeſt the doing ſomewhat that wanted an Apology.

The Duke addreſſes himſelf to both Houſes. At the ſame time the Duke made an Addreſs to both Houſes in his own behalf; and gave them an Account of his Negotiation in the Low Countries, and of the Management of the Fleet; and concluded with intreating their charitable Opinion of him and his Actions. Then the Lord Conway ſtood up and endeavour'd to vindicate the Duke from the ſeveral Jealouſies rais'd againſt him; and laid before them an Account of the Sums of Money diſburs'd for the War. But all this could not divert the Commons from proceeding in their Enquiries into publick Grievances, and from preparing a humble Remonſtrance to the King in this Form.

Remonſtrance of the Commons.

Moſt Gracious Soveraign,

" WHereas your Majeſty hath been pleaſed of " late, at ſundry times and by ſeveral means, " to impart unto us your Royal Pleaſure touching " ſome Paſſages and Proceedings in this preſent Par- " liament: We do firſt, with unſpeakable Joy and " Comfort, acknowledge your Majeſty's Grace and " Favour, in that it hath pleaſed you to cauſe it to " be delivered unto us by the Lord Keeper of your " Great Seal in your own Royal Preſence, and be- " fore both Houſes of Parliament, That never King " was more loving to his People, nor better affected to the " right uſe of Parliaments; withall profeſſing your " moſt gracious Reſolution, To Hear and Redreſs our " juſt Grievances. And with like comfort we acknow- " ledge your Majeſty's Goodneſs ſhining at the very " entrance of your glorious Reign, in commanding " the Execution of the Laws eſtabliſhed to preſerve " the true Religion of Almighty God; in whoſe " Service conſiſteth the Happineſs of all Kings and " Kingdoms.

" Yet let it not diſpleaſe your Majeſty, that we " alſo expreſs ſome ſenſe of juſt Grief intermix'd " with that great Joy, to ſee the careful Proceed- " ings of our ſincere Intentions ſo miſreported, as " to have wrought Effects unexpected, and we hope " undeſerved.

" Firſt, Touching the Charge againſt us in the " matter concerning Mr. Cook, we all ſincerely pro- " teſt, that neither the Words mentioned in your " Majeſty's Meſſage, nor any other of ſeditious ef- " fect were ſpoken by him, as hath been reſolved " by the Houſe without one negative Voice. How- " ſoever, in a Speech occaſionally utter'd, he let " fall ſome few Words which might admit an " ill Conſtruction; whereat the Houſe being diſ- " pleaſed at the delivery of them, as was expreſſed 1626. " by a general and inſtant check, he forthwith ſo " explained himſelf and his Intention, that for the " preſent we did forbear to take them into Conſi- " deration, which ſince we have done; and the ef- " fect thereof had before this appeared, if by im- " portant Buſineſſes of your Majeſty's Service we " had not been interrupted.

" by

" The like interruption did alſo befall us in the " Caſe of Dr. Turner; wherein the Queſtion being " formerly ſtated, was ordered to be taken that ve- " ry Day on which we received your Majeſty's " command to attend you.

" But for our own Proceedings, we humbly be- " ſeech your Majeſty to be truly informed, that be- " fore that Overture from Dr. Turner (out of our " great and neceſſary care for your Honour and " Welfare of your Realm) we had taken into ſe- " rious Conſideration the Evils which now afflict " your People, and the Cauſes of them, that we " might apply our ſelves unto the fitteſt Remedies: In " the purſuit whereof, our Committees (whatſoever " they might have done) have in no particular pro- " ceeded otherwiſe, than either upon ground of " Knowledge in themſelves, or Proof by examinati- " on of Witneſſes or other Evidence. In which " courſe of Service for the Publick Good, as we " have not ſwerved from the Parliamentary ways " of our Predeceſſors, ſo we conceive that the diſ- " covery and reforming of Errors is ſo far from lay- " ing an Aſperſion upon the preſent Time and " Government, that it is rather a great Honour " and Happineſs to both: yielding Matter to great " Princes wherein to exerciſe and illuſtrate their " nobleſt Virtues.

" And altho' the grievous Complaints of the " Merchants from all Parts, together with the " common Service of the Subjects well affected to " thoſe who profeſs our Religion, gave us occaſion " to debate ſome Buſineſſes that were partly Fo- " reign, and had relation to Affairs of State; yet " we beſeech your Majeſty to reſt aſſured, it was " exceeding far from our Intention either to tra- " duce your Counſellors or diſadvantage your Ne- " gotiations.

" And though ſome Examples of great and po- " tent Miniſters of Princes, heretofore queſtion'd in " Parliament have been alledg'd, yet was it with- " out paralelling your Majeſty's Government or " Councils to any Times at all, much leſs to Times " of exception.

" Touching the Letter of your Majeſty's Secre- " tary, it was firſt alledged by your Advocate " for his own Juſtification, and after, by direction " of the Committee, produced to make good his " Allegation.

" And for the ſearch at the Signet Office, the " Copy of a Letter being divulged, as in your Ma- " jeſty's name, with pregnant cauſe of Suſpicion, " both in the Body and Direction thereof, to be " ſuppoſititious; the Committee out of deſire to be " cleared therein, did by their Order ſend ſome of " themſelves to the Signet Office, to ſearch whether " there were any Records of Letters of that Nature, " without Warrant to the Officer for any, much " leſs for a general Search.

" But touching Publick Records, we have not for- " born as often as our Buſineſſes have required to " make ſearch into them; wherein we have done " nothing unwarranted by the Laws of your Realm, " and the conſtant uſage of Parliaments. And if " for the eaſe of their Labours, any of our Commit- " tees have deſired the help of the Officers, Reperto- " ries, or Breviats of Direction, we conceive it is " no more than any Subject in his own Affairs " might have obtained for ordinary Fees.

" Now concerning your Majeſty's Servants, and " namely the Duke of Buckingham, we humbly be- " ſeech your Majeſty, to be informed by us your " faithful Commons, who can have no private End " but your Majeſty's Service and the Good of our " Country; that it hath been the ancient, conſtant, 1626. " and undoubted Right and Uſage of Parliaments, " to queſtion and complain of all Perſons of what " Degree ſoever found grievous to the Common- " wealth, in abuſing the Power and Truſt commit- " ted to them by their Soveraign. A courſe ap- " proved not only by the Example in your Father's " Days of famous Memory, but by frequent Prece- " dents in the beſt and moſt glorious Reigns of your " noble Progenitors, appearing both in Records and " Hiſtories; without which Liberty in Parliament, " no private Man, no Servant to a King, perhaps " no Counſellor, without expoſing himſelf to the " hazard of great Enmity and Prejudice, can be a " means to call great Officers into queſtion for their " Miſdemeanours; but the Common-wealth might " languiſh under their Preſſures without Redreſs. " And whatſoever we ſhall do accordingly in this " Parliament, we doubt not but it ſhall redound to " the Honour of the Crown and Welfare of your " Subjects.

" Laſtly, We moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty " graciouſly to conceive, that though it hath been the " long cuſtom of Parliaments to handle the matter " of Supply with the laſt of their Buſineſſes; yet at " this time, out of extraordinary Reſpect to your " Perſon and Care of your Affairs, we have taken " the ſame into more ſpeedy Conſideration, and moſt " happily on the very Day of your Majeſty's Inau- " guration, with great Alacrity and unanimous " Conſent: After a ſhort Debate we grew to the " Reſolution for a preſent Supply, well known to " your Majeſty.

" To which, if addition may be made of other " great things for your Service, yet in conſultation " amongſt us, we doubt not but it will appear that " we have not receded from the Truth of our firſt " Intention, ſo to ſupply you as may make you " ſafe at Home and feared Abroad; eſpecially if " your Majeſty ſhall be pleaſed to look upon the " way intended in our Promiſe, as well as to the " meaſure of the Gift agreed.

" With like Humility we beſeech your Majeſty " not to give ear to the officious Reports of private " Perſons for their own Ends, which hath occaſion- " ed ſo much loſs of Time, nor to judge our Pro- " ceedings whilſt they are in Agitation; but to be " pleaſed to expect the Iſſue and Concluſion of our " Labours, which we are confident will manifeſt " and juſtify to your Majeſty the Sincerity and " Loyalty of our Hearts; who ſhall ever place in a " high degree of Happineſs the performing of that " Duty and Service, which may moſt tend to your " Majeſty's Honour and the Good of your King- " dom.

The King not pleas'd with the Remonſtrance.

Upon delivery of this Remonſtrance, a fair and affable Return from his Majeſty might have been well accepted, and had poſſibly reſtor'd a good underſtanding. But the King either conſcious of his own Integrity and the Fidelity of the Duke, or being reſolutely bent upon a War, and perfectly averſe to all Meaſures that might ſeem to retard it, only told them; that he could give no preſent Anſwer; but deſired the Houſe to Adjourn for a Week, as the Lords had done: and they Adjourn'd accordingly.

Some Diſcontents even in the Houſe of Lords.

As to the Houſe of Lords, though his Majeſty in his Speech of March 29. had diſtinguiſh'd them from the Commons by his particular Thanks and Approbation: yet ſome occaſions of Offence did ſoon offer, that raiſed ſome unhappy Jealouſies among them. They thought it was ſome Intrenchment on the Liberties of Peerage, that Writs were not iſſued to ſome of their Fellow-Peers; and when by importunity iſſued, were yet attended with expreſs Orders that they ſhould not appear in Perſon.

Another Grievance to them was, that ſome of the Scotch and Iriſh Nobility pretended to claim a Precedency of the Engliſh Lords; which they reſented as an Indignity and Affront to their Quality and Ho-

1626. nour; and presented a Petition to the King in the Names of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, representing, that whereas the Peers and Nobility of England had heretofore in Civility yielded, as to Strangers, Precedency to such Nobles of Scotland and Ireland as, being in Titles above them, had resorted hither: Now divers of the Natural-born Subjects of those Kingdoms resident here do, by reason of some late created Dignities in those Kingdoms of Scotland and Ireland, claim Precedency of the Peers of this Realm, which tended to the Disservice of his Majesty, and to the great Disparagement of the English Nobility; which they shew by several Reasons; and they humbly beseech his Majesty that the Prejudice and Disparagement of the Peers and Nobility of this Kingdom be redressed. To which Petition his Majesty gave a favourable Answer; that he would take Order therein. Another offence was taken at the infringing of their Liberties, by the King's committing in time of Parliament the E. of Arundel to the Tower, without expressing the Cause of his Commitment. It was conceiv'd to be about the Marriage of the Lord Maltravers, the Earl's eldest Son, to the Sister of the young Duke of Lenox. The Earl of Arundel having been committed in March last, the Lords were immediately sensible of their Honours and Privileges being concerned in this matter; and were entring intring into Debates upon it, when the Lord Keeper signified to the House, that he was commanded to deliver this Message from his Majesty unto their Lordships, viz. That the Earl of Arundel was restrained for a Misdemeanour that was personal to his Majesty, and lay in the proper knowlege of his Majesty, and had no relation to Matters of Parliament. But the Lords appointing Committees to search for Precedents, did upon their Report come to this unanimous Resolution: That the Privilege of this House is, that no Lord of Parliament, the Parliament sitting, or within the usual times of Privileges of Parliament, is to be Imprisoned or Restrained without Sentence or Decree of the House, unless it be for Treason or Felony, or refusing to give Surety of the Peace. Upon which, they ordered a Remonstrance or Petition of the Peers, concerning the Claim of their Privileges from Arrests and Imprisonments during the Parliament; which the whole House presented to his Majesty on April 19. and next Day the Lord President delivered this Answer from the King; That their Lordships having spent some time about this Business, and it being of some consequence, his Majesty should be thought rash, if he should give a sudden Answer thereto, and therefore will advise of it, and give them a full Answer in convenient time. This Answer being for several Days deferred, on the 2d of May their Lordships ordered, that the Lord Keeper should move his Majesty for a speedy and gracious Answer to their Petition. On the 4th of May, his Lordship reported this farther Answer from the King. It is a Cause wherein he hath had a great deal of Care, and is willing to give their Lordships Satisfaction, and hath it in his Consideration how to do it; and hath been interrupted by other Business, wherein Mr. Attorny hath had occasion of much Conference with him (as their Lordships are acquainted) but will with all Conveniency give their Lordships Satisfaction, and return them an Answer. On the 9th of May, the Lords suspecting the Delay to be a Denial of Justice, drew up this other Petition to the King.

The Earl of Arundel's Imprisonment another Grievance to the Lords.

Resolution of the Rights of Peerage.

Petition to the King.

Not favourably answered.

May it please your Majesty,

Another Petition of the Lords.

" WHereas the whole Body of the Peers, now assembled in Parliament, did on the 19th Day of April exhibit to your Majesty an humble " Remonstrance and Petition, concerning the Privi- " vilege of Peers in Parliament, and in particular " touching the Earl of Arundel; whereupon we re- " ceived a gracious Answer, That in convenient " time we should receive a fuller Answer, which " we have long and dutifully attended: And now " at this time so great a Business being in handling " in the House, we are pressed by that Business to " be humble Suiters to your Majesty for a gracious " and present Answer.

On May 11. the Lord President reported this Answer from his Majesty: That he did little look for such a Message from the House; that himself had been of the House, and did never know such a Message from the one House unto the other. Therefore when he received a Message fit to come from them to their Soveraign, they shall receive an Answer. When the Lords desired to know at what part of the Petition his Majesty took Exception, the Lord President further reported to them; The Exception the King taketh is at the Peremptorines of the Term, to have a present Answer. And the King wonders at your Impatience, since he hath promised an Answer in convenient time. It is very plain that King Charles had little of the King-craft which was professed by his Father: and therefore he made most of his Answers in Parliament so blunt and rough, that a direct denial of Requests had been often more Gracious than his way of promising Satisfaction to them. Their Lordships still pursued their Petitions, till about the beginning of June the Earl of Arundel was at last restored to his Liberty; and coming to the House rendred his humble Thanks unto his Majesty for this gracious Favour to him, and gave their Lordships also most hearty Thanks for their frequent Intercessions to the King for him: protesting Loyalty and all faithful Service to his Majesty.

1626. The King offended with the Lords.

The Earl at last set at Liberty.

But that which most occasioned, and continually improved the Discontents in the House of Lords, was the Contest between the D. of Buckingham and the Earl of Bristol. They had begun their Emulation in the Court of Spain, where the Duke had been most officious to please the Prince, and the Earl had thought himself more serviceable to the Honour of the Nation. The Earl at his return, upon the Suggestions of the Duke, was debarred access to his Majesty, was examined by a Committee of Lords at the King's appointment, was kept under Restraint, and was denied his Writ to Parliament; and when upon Intercession of the Lords he had the usual Summons, yet he received with it an Order not to make his Personal Appearance: Upon which he sent a Petition to the House, setting forth the Wrong done to him; and desiring to be heard in the House, that he might there clear himself, and prefer his Accusation against the Duke of Buckingham. This so highly offended the King, that he sent this Message by the Lord Keeper to the House of Lords.

The greatest disturbance in the House of Lords was the Quarrel between the Duke of Buckingham and E. of Bristol.

" His Majesty hath heard of a Petition preferred " unto this House by the Earl of Bristol, so void of " Duty and Respects to his Majesty, that he hath " great Cause to punish him. He hath also heard " with what Duty and Respectfulness to his Majesty " your Lordships have proceeded therein; which, " his Majesty conceiveth to have been upon the " Knowledge you have, that he hath been restrained " for matters of State; and his Majesty doth there- " fore give your Lordships Thanks for the same, and " is resolved to put the Cause upon the Honour and " Justice of your Lordships and this House. And " therefore his Majesty commands me to signifie to " your Lordships his Royal Pleasure, that the Earl " of Bristol be sent for as a Delinquent, to answer " in this House his Offences committed in his Nego- " tiations before his Majesty's being in Spain, and " his Offences since his Majesty's coming from Spain, " and his scandalizing the Duke of Buckingham im- " mediately, and his Majesty by Reflection: With " whose Privity, and by whose Directions the Duke " did guide his Actions, and without which he did " nothing. All which his Majesty will cause to be " charged against him before your Lordships in this " House.

Upon this Message the Lords made an Order, that the Earl of Bristol should be brought to the Bar of their House on Monday May 1. When he stood there the Lord Keeper acquainted him, " That the Attor- " ney General, in his Majesty's Name, was there " ready to Charge him with High-Treason, and o- " ther Offences and Misdemeanours of a very high " Nature. The Articles against him were then exhibited

Earl of Bristol brought to the Bar and charged with High-Treason.

1626. hibited by Sir Robert Heath Attorney General, upon the several Heads of 1. Offences done and committed by the Earl of Briſtol before his Majeſty's going into Spain, when he was Prince. 2. Offences done and committed by the ſaid Earl during the time of the Princes being in Spain. 3. Offences done and committed by the ſaid Earl after the Princes coming from Spain.

The Earl's Anſwer. The Earl anſwer'd; "That he had already lodged a Petition in the Houſe, April 19. to be heard "in his Accuſation of the Duke of Buckingham; and "therefore deſired that their Lordſhips would in "order firſt receive his Charge againſt the ſaid Duke "and the Lord Conway, and not ſuffer his Teſtimo- "ny to be invalidated by an Impeachment till his

His Charge againſt the Duke of Buckingham. "Charge was firſt heard. So he tender'd to the Houſe his Articles againſt the Duke; which the Clerk received, and he withdrew. And his Petition exhibited the 19th of April was read over; and the Lords Reſolv'd upon the Queſtion: That the ſaid Earl's Charge againſt the Duke of Buckingham and the Lord Conway ſhould be preſently read.

The Earl being ſhortly after called in again to the Bar of the Lords Houſe, made a long and elegant Speech, defending his own Innocence and Honour, and charging the Duke with very many ill Counſels and arbitrary Actions. After which, upon a Promiſe to anſwer the Attorney General's Charge as ſoon as might be, he was remitted to Mr. Maxwel the Gentleman Uſher, in whoſe Houſe and Cuſtody he remained.

Articles againſt the Duke of Bucks. Then were read the Articles of the Earl of Briſtol againſt the Duke of Buckingham, dated May 1. 1626. to this effect:

I. "That the Duke of Bucks did ſecretly combine "with Count Gondamor to carry the Prince into "Spain, to be inſtructed in the Roman Religion; and "thereby to ſubvert the true Religion here Eſta- "bliſhed.

II. "That Mr. Porter was firſt ſent into Spain "upon this Deſign; and at his Return impoſed up- "on the King and Prince to obtain what the Duke "had before plotted.

III. "That the Duke at his arrival in Spain ſhew- "ed himſelf popiſhly affected, by abſenting from "the Proteſtant Service conſtantly uſed in the Earl "of Briſtol's Houſe, and even by kneeling and ado- "ring the Sacrament of the Maſs; which gave the "Spaniards ſuch hopes of the Prince's Converſion, that "they propoſed harder Conditions for Religion than "what had been before agreed to.

IV. "That the Duke had many times, in preſence "of the Earl, mov'd the Prince to write a Letter to "the Pope, which the Earl vigorouſly oppoſed, and "hinder'd the writing during his ſtay in that Court; "but after he the Earl was come away, the Duke "did extort ſuch a Letter to the Pope.

V. "That the Pope being inform'd of the Duke's "Inclination in point of Religion, ſent the Duke a "Bull in Parchment, to perſwade and encourage him "to pervert the Prince.

VI. "That the Duke had ſo behaved himſelf in "Spain as to be odious to that King and Court; and "therefore he broke off the Match upon his own "Indignation, not out of Service to this Nation.

VII. "That ſo intending to croſs the Marriage, "he made uſe of indirect means, and conceal'd ma- "ny things from his late Majeſty to advance his "own Ends.

VIII. "That for the ſame purpoſe he had abus'd "both Houſes of Parliament by a falſe Relation of "thoſe Affairs.

IX. "That he gave great Scandal by his perſonal "Behaviour in the Court of Spain; and left there a "blemiſh upon the Engliſh Nation.

X. "That he had been in great part the Cauſe of "the Ruin of the Prince Palatine.

XI. "That in his Reports to the two Houſes he "had wronged him the Earl in point of his Honour "and of his Liberty.

XII. "That he the Earl had revealed theſe Miſ- 1626. "carriages of the Duke to the late King, who had "promiſed to hear him at large four Days before "his Sickneſs; upon which the King was much "preſſed and vexed by the Duke, and ſhortly after "died.

The Articles of the ſaid Earl againſt the Lord Conway, delivered and read at the ſame time were 11 in number; to the purpoſe of proving the ſaid Lord Conway to be the Duke's Servant and Creature, and a Promoter and Abetter of all Miſcarriages committed by the Duke.

After reading the ſaid Articles, the Lords order'd, that the King's Charge againſt the Earl of Briſtol ſhould be firſt heard, and then the Charge of the ſaid Earl againſt the Duke; yet ſo that the Earl's Teſtimony againſt the Duke ſhould not be prevented, prejudiced or impeach'd. On the Day following, The King interpoſes in the Duke's behalf. the Lord Keeper delivered to the Houſe a Meſſage from the King to this effect, "That the Articles ex- "hibited againſt the Duke of Buckingham are ſuch, "as the King of his own knowledge can teſtify the "Duke's ſincere Carriage in them; that they had "been cloſed in the Earl's own Breaſt for two Years "contrary to his Duty, and were now vented by "way of Recrimination; and that therefore they "ſhould put a difference between his Majeſty's "Charge againſt one that appeareth as a Delinquent, "and the Recrimination of the Earl of Briſtol a- "gainſt his Majeſty's Witneſs.

The majority of the Lords were more inclin'd to eſpouſe the Earl's Cauſe, upon a better Opinion of his Character and Perſon than they had of the Duke's; and being more apt to pity his Misfortunes, that he had incurred the King's diſpleaſure only by oppoſing the Duke's Ambition. Upon appearance of this In- The Lords Houſe more inclin'd to the Earl than to the Duke. clination in the Houſe, there was an endeavour to remove the Earl's Cauſe out of their Lordſhips Cogniſance, and to proceed againſt him by way of Indictment in the King's Bench. But this attempt did but gain the Earl more Friends in the Upper Houſe, in being ſenſible that taking the Cauſe out of their Houſe would infringe their Liberties, and leave an imputation upon their Honour and Juſtice; and therefore they ſtopt the Revocation of it.

About a Fortnight after the delivering in thoſe Articles by the Attorney General, the Earl gave in his Anſwer, and introduc'd it with an eloquent Speech: wherein he firſt aſſerted his conſtant and ſtrict adherence to the Proteſtant Religion; and then inſiſted upon his Honour and Integrity in his Negotiations in Spain: And then exhibited his full Anſwer to the ſeveral Articles preferr'd againſt him; and then concluded with another Speech, wherein "he "hop'd their Lordſhips would not only find him "far from blame, but a faithful Servant to his "late and preſent Majeſty; and that therefore "their Lordſhips would take ſuch Courſe as they "in their Wiſdom ſhould think fit, not only for "upholding the Honour and Reputation of a Peer "of this Realm, but likewiſe for becoming humble "and earneſt Suitors to his Majeſty, that he may "be reſtor'd to his Majeſty's moſt gracious Favour, "which above all worldly things he moſt deſireth. The Earl's Anſwer and Vindication of himſelf.

But the Proceeding of the Lords in this Caſe was now interrupted by an Impeachment of the Duke prepared in the Houſe of Commons; which upon May 8 was delivered at a Conference of both Houſes, and held them two Days. It was manag'd by eight Members and ſixteen more Aſſiſtants; the managers were Sir Dudley Diggs, Mr. Herbert, Mr. Selden, Mr. Glanvil, Mr. Pym, Mr. Sherland, Mr. Wandeford, and Sir John Elliot. Impeachment againſt the Duke by the Commons.

Sir Dudley Diggs began with thanking their Lordſhips for condeſcending to this Conference: He then repreſented the publick Grievances and Complaints of the People; and then came to this Application. The Commons therefore wondering at the Evils which they ſuffered, debating of the Cauſes of them, found they were A Conference between the two Houſes.

many,

1626. many, like many Lines to one Circumference, of decay of Trade and ſtrength, of Honour and Reputation in this Kingdom; which as in one Centre, met in one great Man the Cauſe of all, whom I am here to name, the Duke of Buckingham Then pauſing a while, he read the Preamble to the Charge, and then ſpoke in general to the Grounds and Reaſons of it; comparing the Engliſh Monarchy to the World, the Commons to the Earth and Sea, the King to the Sun, the Lords to the Stars and Planets, and the Duke of Buckingham to a prodigious Comet. And finally inferring, that all the Grievances complain'd of by the Commons were to be imputed to the Duke only, and to his Procurement.

The Subſtance of the Articles and of the Duke's Anſwer afterwards given in to them.

The Articles of Impeachment and the Duke's Anſwer.

I. Article. " That he the ſaid Duke, being young " and unexperienc'd, had with exorbitant Am- " bition, and for his own Advantage procured " and engroſſed into his own hands ſeveral great " Offices.

The Duke's Anſwer. " As to the Places he holds " three only are worthy the name of Offices, viz. the " Admiralty, the Wardenſhip of the Cinque Ports, " and Maſterſhip of the Horſe; for which he ac- " knowledgeth the Bounty and Goodneſs of his moſt " gracious Maſter, who prevented his deſires in ask- " king for them. And that there be many Prece- " dents both in ancient and modern Times, that one " Man eminent in the Eſteem of his Soveraign hath " at one time held as great and as many Offices.

II. Art. " That he the ſaid Duke, in the 16th of " the late King, did give to the Earl of Notting- " ham for the Office of Admiral three thouſand " Pounds; and did procure from the late King " an Annuity of one thouſand Pounds per Annum, " to be paid to the ſaid Earl for his ſurrendry, " to obtain to himſelf a Grant of the ſaid Of- " fice during Life.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That he obtained a Grant " of the Office of Admiralty freely, and without " any Contract or Bargain with the late Lord Ad- " miral, who ſurrender'd it willingly without any " Promiſe; and received a Penſion at the King's own " Free-will and Pleaſure. And he affirms, that his " Majeſty's Navy is in better State by much, than " ever it was in any precedent Time whatſoever.

III. Art. " That in the 22d of the late King, he " gave to Edward Lord Zouch, Lord Warden of " the Cinque Ports, for ſurrender of the ſaid Of- " fice one thouſand Pounds, and procured him " an Annuity of five hundred Pounds yearly.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That the Lord Zouch being " grown in Years, and unfit to execute ſo great a " Truſt, and willing to reſign it, and treating with " other Noblemen upon ſome Recompence for it, " he did indeed agree to give him one thouſand " Pounds in Money, and five hundred Pounds year- " ly for his ſaid ſurrender, the King being privy to " it, and his own Intentions therein being juſt and " honourable.

IV. Art. " That he the ſaid Duke, by reaſon of " his ſaid Offices, ought to have ſafely guarded " the Seas; whereas, ever ſince the Diſſolution " of the two Treaties 21 Jacobi, he had neg- " lected the performance of his ſaid Office and " Duty, and broken the Truſt committed to " him.

The Duke's Anſwer. " Whatever Loſſes have hap- " pen'd to the King's Subjects during that time, are " not owing to his want of Care and Diligence. " For that he had encreaſed the ordinary Guard al- " lowed for the Narrow Seas; and ſuch further " Proviſion is now made as will give good Satis- " faction.

V. Art. " That a Ship called the St. Peter of New- 1626. " haven, laden with Goods of the Subjects of " France, in time of Peace with that Kingdom, " was taken at Sea by direction of the ſaid Duke, " and brought to Plymouth as a Prize, where di- " vers Goods, to the Value of twenty thouſand " Pounds were taken out for the benefit of the " ſaid Duke, and the Ship with the reſidue of " her Goods ſent into the River of Thames and " there detained. Upon which there was an Ar- " reſt at Newhaven of two Engliſh Merchant Ships, " to the great diſturbance of Trade, and preju- " dice of the Merchants.

The Duke's Anſwer. He ſets forth the Fact, and " hopes it will ſufficiently appear, that he hath not " done any thing herein which was not juſtifiable " and grounded upon deliberate and well adviſed " Counſels and Warrants.

VI. Art. " That the ſaid Duke abuſing the Lords " of the Parliament in the 21ſt of King James, " with pretence of ſerving the State, did oppreſs " the Eaſt India Merchants, and extorted from " them ten thouſand Pounds to releaſe their " Ships which he had ſtopt from their intended " Voyage.

The Duke's Anſwer. " He reciteth the matter of " Fact, and proves the Compoſition made by the " Company with his late Majeſty by legal Proceed- " ings, and advice of Counſel; and refers himſelf to " the Judicial Acts which prove the contrary to what " is alledg'd againſt him.

VII. Art. " That about the end of July laſt, he the " ſaid Duke as Admiral, did by indirect and " ſubtle Means and Practiſes, procure one of the " principal Ships of his Majeſty's Navy Royal, " call'd the Vantguard, and ſix other Merchant " Ships to be put into the hands of the French " King.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That this Article was ſo " mix'd with Actions of great Princes, that he dar'd " not in his Duty publiſh every Paſſage thereof: " but he could affirm, that thoſe Ships were lent " to the French King at firſt without his privity; " and when he knew it, he did that which belong'd " to an Admiral of England and a true Engliſh-man.

VIII. Art. " That the ſaid Duke, knowing the ſaid " Ships were intended to be employ'd againſt " thoſe of the Reformed Religion in the Town " of Rochel, did procure the ſaid Ships to be de- " livered, that they might be ſo uſed and em- " ploy'd, as they accordingly were againſt the " Town of Rochel.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That he was ſo far from " practiſing, or conſenting that the ſaid Ships ſhould " be ſo employ'd, that he believed the Pretence of " the French King, that he would uſe thoſe Ships " againſt Genoa; and when it was diſcover'd that " they would be employ'd againſt thoſe of the Re- " ligion, he did by all fit and honourable Means " endeavour to divert that courſe.

IX. Art. " That whereas Titles of Honour were " wont to be conferr'd as the Rewards only of " Virtue and Induſtry: he the ſaid Duke had " perverted that Ancient and moſt Honourable " Way, and had enforced ſome that were Rich " to purchaſe Honour: As the Lord R—— Ba- " ron of T——, to the prejudice of the Gentry " and diſhonour of the Nobility.

The Duke's Anſwer. " He utterly denies compel- " ling the Lord R—— to buy his Title of Honour; " who was before willing to have given a much " greater Sum, but could not then obtain it; and " he did now obtain it by Sollicitation of his own " Agents.

X. Art.

1626. X. Art. " That whereas no Places of Judicature " ought to be procured for any Reward, Bribe " or Gift, he the ſaid Duke in the 18th of King " James, did procure of the ſaid King the Office " of High-Treaſurer of England, to the Lord " Viſcount M..... now Earl of M..... for the " Reward of twenty thouſand Pounds: And in " the 16th of the ſaid King, did procure the Of- " fice of the Maſter of the Wards for Sir L. C. af- " terward Earl of M..... for the Reward of " ſix thouſand Pounds.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That he received not, or " had a Penny of either of thoſe Sums to his own " Uſe: nor did he know of the procurement of them.

XI. Art. That he had procured divers Titles of Ho- " nour to his Mother, Brothers, Kindred and " Allies, of ſmall Eſtates, to the prejudice of " the Nobility and the damage of the Crown.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That as to procuring ſome " few Honours for thoſe who were ſo near and dear " unto him, the Law of Nature and the King's Roy- " al favour may plead for his excuſe.

XII. Art. " That he had obtained a Grant from " the Crown of divers Manors, parcel of the " Dutchy of Lancaſter, and of other Lands and " Rents belonging to the Crown; and had like- " wiſe receiv'd exceeding great Sums of Money " for his own uſe without Accompt, to the great " diminution of the Revenues of the Crown, ac- " cording to Schedules annex'd.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That he doth acknowledge " the bountiful Hand of his late Majeſty; but as " to the immenſe Sums and Values which are ſug- " geſted to have been given to him, there be great " miſtakes in the Schedules, to which he will give " particular Anſwer in another Schedule.

XIII. Art. " That whereas nothing ought to be " adminiſtred to the Royal Perſons of Kings in " their Sickneſs, without Conſent and Direction " of ſome of their known Phyſicians: the ſaid " Duke without any ſufficient Warrant, did un- " duly cauſe and procure certain Plaiſters, and " a certain Drink or Potion to be given to his " late Majeſty; after which divers ill Symptoms " did appear upon his ſaid Majeſty, who did " attribute the Cauſe of his growing worſe to the " ſaid Plaiſter and Drink.

The Duke's Anſwer. " That he was by infinite " bonds of Duty and Thankfulneſs obliged to be " tender of the Life and Health of his late Soveraign " Maſter. That he did neither apply nor procure " the Plaiſter or Poſſet-drink in the Charge term'd " a Potion to his late Majeſty, nor was preſent " when the ſame was firſt taken or applied. But " that his Majeſty being ſick of an Ague, enquir'd " how he the Duke had lately recovered from the " like Diſtemper: and he told his Majeſty that the " Earl of Warwick's Phyſician had cured him with " a Plaiſter and Poſſet-drink. The King deſired to " have the like Medicines ſent for; but the Duke " delayed it, till the King commanded them to be " fetch'd by an expreſs Meſſenger, and firſt took " them in his the Duke's abſence. When the King " grew worſe, he the Duke heard a rumour as if his " Phyſick had done the King hurt; and that he the " Duke had adminiſtred it without Advice. The " Duke acquainting the King herewith, his Maje- " ſty with much Diſcontent anſwer'd thus: They are " worſe than Devils that ſay it. He humbly prays " their Lordſhips not only to conſider the Truth of " this Matter, but alſo to commiſerate the ſad " thought which this Article hath revived in him.

The ſeveral Articles having been enlarged and aggravated by the reſpective Members choſen out for Management, Sir John Elliot concluded the Impeachment in a bitter Speech; ending thus:

" I conclude by preſenting to your Lordſhips the " particular Cenſure of the Biſhop of Ely, reported in " the 2d of Rich. I. and to give you a ſhort view of his " Faults. He was firſt of all noted to be Luxurious. " Secondly, He married his own Kindred to Perſon- " ages of higheſt Rank and Places. Thirdly, No " Man's Buſineſs was done without his help. Fourth- " ly, He would not ſuffer the Kings Council to ad- " viſe in matters of State. Fifthly, He grew to ſuch " a height of Pride, that no Man was thought wor- " thy to ſpeak unto him. And Laſtly, His Caſtles " and Forts of Truſt he did obſcuris & ignotis homi- " nibus tradere. His Doom was this, Per totam In- " ſulam publice proclamatur, pereat qui perdere cuncta " feſtinat, opprimatur ne omnes opprimat. 1626. Sir John Elliot's concluding Speech

The Duke concluded his Anſwer with referring all to the Judgment of their Lordſhips; " acknowledg- " ing how eaſie it was for him in his younger Years, " and unexperienc'd, to fall into thouſands of Er- " rors; but hoping he had been preſerv'd from run- " ning into any heinous and high Miſdemeanours " and Crimes. In whatſoever he had unwittingly " offended, he claimed the Benefit of his late and " preſent Majeſty's Pardon; and hopeth, and will " daily pray, that for the future he ſhall by God's " Grace ſo watch over his Actions both Publick and " Private, that he ſhall not give any juſt Offence to " any. Concluſion of the Duke's Anſwer.

The Duke having put in this Anſwer, earneſtly moved the Lords to ſend to the Commons to expedite the Reply; and the Commons did as earneſtly deſire a Copy of his Anſwer.

But the King did ſeem reſolv'd that this Proceſs ſhould never end in a formal Trial. The faithful Maſter was more than equal to the wiſe Prince: The more popular Odium the Duke lay under, he became the nearer Object of Royal Favour. If his Majeſty could have a little inclin'd an Ear to the Voice of the People, and could have excluded this Favourite from his Councils and his Preſence, while the Cry was loud againſt him, he might in all appearance have better protected his Servant, and better defended his own Royal Honour. But he was impatient of all Proceedings againſt the Duke; and therefore to execute ſome diſpleaſure on the principal Actors, he commanded Sir Dudley Diggs who open'd the Impeachment, and Sir John Elliot who concluded the laſt Article, to be both committed to the Tower. And on May 11. the King came to the Houſe of Lords and expreſſed his Reſentments in this manner: The King reſolv'd to prevent a Trial. Impriſons the two Members of the Houſe of Commons.

My Lords,

" THE cauſe and only cauſe of my coming to " you this Day is, to expreſs the ſenſe I have " of all your Honours: for he that toucheth any of " you toucheth me in a very great meaſure. I have " thought fit to take Order for the puniſhing ſome " inſolent Speeches lately ſpoken. I have been too " remiſs heretofore in puniſhing ſuch Speeches as " concern my ſelf: Not that I was greedy of their " Monies, but that Buckingham through his impor- " tunity would not ſuffer me to take notice of them, " leſt he might be thought to have ſet me on, and " that he might come the forwarder to his Trial. " And to approve his Innocency, as touching the " matters againſt him, I my ſelf can be a Witneſs " to clear him in every one of them. Makes a Speech full of Reſentment to the Lords.

" I ſpeak not this to take any thing out of your " hands, but to ſhew the Reaſon why I have not " hitherto puniſhed thoſe inſolent Speeches againſt " my ſelf. And now I hope you will be as tender " of my Honour, when time ſhall ſerve, as I have " been ſenſible of yours.

The ſame Day a Meſſage was brought from the Commons to their Lordſhips by Sir Nathaniel Rich, to make Declaration, " That they hold it a thing " of dangerous conſequence, both for the preſent " and future times, that a Man of ſo great Eminence, " Power, and Authority, being Impeached and Ac- " cuſed Motion of the Commons to commit the Duke.

1626. " cuſed of ſuch high Crimes and Offences, ſhould " yet enjoy his Liberty, &c. Wherefore they re- " commend it as their unanimous Deſire, that their " Lordſhips would be pleaſed forthwith to commit " the Perſon of the ſaid Duke to ſafe Cuſtody. Upon which the Duke made a Speech, to deſire his Trial might be haſtned, that he might no longer ſuffer than needs muſt. " And now (ſays he) that " my Accuſer hath not been content only to make " my Proceſs, but to preſcribe to your Lordſhips " the manner of your Judgment, and to judge me " before I am heard, I ſhall not give way to any of " their unjuſt Demands, &c.

The Duke angry.

The Commons more incenſed.

But the quick Reſentments of the King, and the ſeeming Defiance of the Duke, did but irritate the Commons to a more importunate Proſecution. They reſolved therefore to proceed in no other Buſineſs, till they had Satisfaction in this Cauſe. They turned the Houſe into a grand Committee, and fell upon conſidering Ways and Means how to ſecure their Rights and Liberties. In which Committee Sir Dudley Carleton made a very reconciling Speech, and mov'd the Houſe not to intrench upon his Majeſty's Prerogatives, leſt it ſhould bring him out of Love with Parliaments: He urg'd the Neceſſity of a good Correſpondence to be kept up between the King and his People: He laid ſome blame upon Sir Dudley Diggs and Sir John Elliot, and inferr'd that they ſpoke beyond their Commiſſion; And this (ſays he) drew his Majeſty, with other inſolent Invectives, to uſe his Regal Authority in committing them to the Tower.

Caſe of Sir Dudley Diggs.

The Words imputed to Sir Dudley Diggs were, That he did forbear to ſpeak farther of that (meaning the Plaiſter apply'd to his late Majeſty) in regard of the King's Honour. Upon which a Proteſtation was drawn up and thus taken by every Member.

I Proteſt before Almighty God and this Houſe of Parliament, that I never gave Conſent that Sir Dudley Diggs ſhould ſpeak theſe Words that he is now charged withall, or any Words to that effect. And I have not affirmed to any that he did ſpeak ſuch Words, or any to that effect.

Within few days after Sir Dudley was releaſed from the Tower, and coming into the Houſe made there a Proteſtation, that the Expreſſion charg'd upon him was far from his Words, and never came into his Thoughts. He thank'd the Houſe for their Reſpects unto him, and ſaid, he had received from his Majeſty a gracious Teſtimony of his Satisfaction. But ſtill the Duke could not digeſt the Affront; he affirmed to the Houſe of Peers, that ſome Words were ſpoken at the late Conference by Sir Dudley Diggs which ſo far did trench upon the King's Honour, that they are interpreted Treaſonable. After long Debate, thirty ſix Lords made a voluntary Proteſtation, upon their Honours, That the ſaid Sir Dudley Diggs did not ſpeak any thing at the ſaid Conference which did or might trench on the King's Honour; and if he had they would preſently have reprehended him for it.

Caſe of Sir John Elliot.

Not long after, Sir John Elliot was alſo releaſed, and coming into the Houſe diſcharged himſelf of the offenſive Paſſages in his late Charge againſt the Duke, and obtained a Vote of the Houſe, that He had not exceeded the Commiſſion given him in the late Conference.

So as Things were not yet carried ſo high, but that a little mutual Compliance might have ſtill made a happy Seſſion. But his Majeſty had ſo much Affection for the Duke, and ſo much Occaſion for immediate Supply, that he could not bear the Thoughts of a Trial that might be provoking and long depending: And therefore the Day after the Duke had put in his Anſwer, the King wrote this Letter to the Speaker, dated June 9.

Truſty and Well-beloved, We greet you well.

King's Letter to the Speaker.

" OUR Houſe of Commons cannot forget how " often and how earneſtly we have called upon them for the ſpeeding of that Aid which they " intended us for our great and weighty Affairs, concerning the Safety and Honour of Us and our " Kingdoms. And now the time being ſo far ſpent " that unleſs it be preſently concluded, it can neither bring us Money nor Credit by the time which " themſelves have prefixed, which is the laſt of this " Month, and being farther deferred would be of " little Uſe, we being daily advertiſed from all " Parts of the great Preparations of the Enemy ready to aſſail us; We hold it neceſſary by theſe " our Letters to give them our laſt and final Admonition, and to let them know, that we ſhall account all farther Delays and Excuſes to be expreſs " Denials. And therefore we will and require you " to ſignifie unto them, that we do expect that they " do forthwith bring in their Bill of Subſidy to be " paſſed without Delay or Condition, ſo as it may " fully paſs the Houſe by the end of the next Week " at the fartheſt: Which if they do not, it will " force us to take other Reſolutions. But let them " know, if they finiſh this according to our Deſire, " that we are reſolved to let them ſit together for " the Diſpatch of their other Affairs ſo long as the " Seaſon will permit, and after their Receſs to bring " them together again the next Winter. And if by " their Denial or Delay any thing of ill conſequence " ſhall fall out, either at home or abroad, we call " God and Man to witneſs, that we have done our " Part to prevent it, by calling our People together " to adviſe with us, by opening the Weight of our " Occaſions unto them, and by requiring their timely Help and Aſſiſtance in theſe Actions wherein " we ſtand engaged by their own Counſels. And " we will and command you, that this Letter be " publickly read in the Houſe. 1626.

Not well received by the Houſe of Commons.

Theſe were thought too hard Words by the Commons, who had their Money yet in their hands, and were reſolv'd to have a Redreſs of ſome Grievances as an Equivalent for it: And therefore their only Anſwer at preſent was an earneſt Petition to the King concerning the Dangers ariſing from the Increaſe and the Impunity of Popiſh Recuſants; giving a Catalogue of many in Commiſſion and Truſt who were either profeſs'd Papiſts themſelves, or had Popiſh Wives and Children: and then deſiring that the aforeſaid Parties, and all others ſo ill affected, be put out of ſuch Commiſſions and Places of Authority wherein they now are in his Majeſty's Realm of England, contrary to the Acts and Law of State in that behalf.

Their Anſwer.

Then a Committee was appointed to prepare an Anſwer to his Majeſty's late Letter; and the Subſtance of it was delivered by the Speaker in a Speech before the King, wherein he preſented the Anſwer of the Houſe fairly wrote in Parchment, ſaying, " This Parchment contains two things, the one by " way of Declaration, to give your Majeſty an Account and humble Satisfaction of their clear and " ſincere Endeavours and Intentions in your Majeſty's Service: and the other an humble Petition " to your Majeſty for the Removal of that great " Perſon the Duke of Buckingham from Acceſs to " your Royal Preſence.

They proceed to a Remonſtrance.

His Majeſty not giving a favourable Anſwer, the Commons proceeded to draw up a Remonſtrance; which they had no ſooner finiſh'd, but they had Intimation that the Parliament would be that Day Diſſolv'd: upon which, they ordered every Member of the Houſe to have a Copy of the ſaid Remonſtrance; which was to this effect:

" WE your loyal and faithful Subjects the " Commons — retarded in the Proſecution " of Publick Affairs —— think it our Duties to declare thoſe Interruptions and Preventions —— In " the firſt Parliament, the Commons then aſſembled —— preſenting two Subſidies —— were preſſed by means of the Duke of Buckingham to enlarge that Supply, which conceiving not to be " there 1626. " there effected, he procured an Adjournment to " Oxford, and there a Diſſolution. —— Before the " Choice of this preſent Parliament, he procured the " late Members to be made Sheriffs, to preclude " them from the Service of this Houſe. —— Now " enquiring into Grievances, we found that the moſt " preſſing and comprehenſive Miſchief and Grie- " vance that we ſuffer'd was fundamentally ſettled " in the vaſt Power and enormous Actions of the " ſaid Duke. —— We have made a Parliamentary " Charge againſt him —— in which we have been " interrupted and diverted by Meſſages procured " through Miſinformation from your Majeſty —— " Two of our Members have been committed to " cloſe Impriſonment. —— Notwithſtanding our " Declaration againſt the Duke for Plurality of Of- " fices, he has ſince procured the Office of Chan- " cellour of the Univerſity of Cambridge. —— We " cannot hope for the Service of your Majeſty and " the Safety of the Nation, ſo long as we thus ſuf- " fer under the Preſſures of the Power and Ambiti- " on of the ſaid Duke. —— Your Majeſty has been " adviſed to New Counſels, and in particular to levy " the Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage, which " determined upon the Death of your Royal Father, " and were never payable to any of your Majeſty's " Anceſtors, but only by a ſpecial Act of Parlia- " ment. —— We proteſt to your Majeſty and the " whole World, that until this great Perſon be re- " moved, we are out of hope of any good Succeſs —— " but no ſooner ſhall we receive Redreſs and Relief " in this, but we ſhall proceed to accompliſh your " Majeſty's own Deſire.

The King hearing that this Remonſtrance was under a Preparation in the Houſe, reſolved to part with the Parliament rather than with the Duke, and was giving Orders for a Diſſolution; when the Houſe of Peers, in great Reſpect to his Majeſty's Intereſt and Honour, preſented this Addreſs to him for continuing the Seſſions.

The Lords Addreſs againſt a Diſſolution.

May it pleaſe your excellent Majeſty,

" WE your faithful and loyal Subjects, the " Peers of this Kingdom, having received " this Morning a Meſſage from your Majeſty, inti- " mating an Intention to diſſolve this Parliament; " remembring that we are your Majeſty's hereditа- " ry Great Council of the Kingdom, do conceive " that we cannot deſerve your Majeſty's gracious " Opinion expreſſed in this Meſſage unto us, nor " diſcharge our Duty to God, your Majeſty, and " our Country, if after Expreſſion of our great and " univerſal Sorrow, we did not humbly offer our " loyal and faithful Advice to continue this Parlia- " ment, by which thoſe great and apparent Dan- " gers at home and abroad, ſignified to us by your " Majeſty's Command may be prevented, and your " Majeſty made happy in the Duty and Love of " your People, which we hold the greateſt Safety " and Treaſury of a King: for the effecting where- " of, our humble and faithful Endeavour ſhall ne- " ver be wanting.

The King reſolute to diſſolve the Parliament.

After this, the Lords ſent ſeveral of their Members to intreat his Majeſty to give Audience to the whole Houſe of Peers: But the King returned Anſwer, That his Reſolution was to hear no Motion to that purpoſe, but he would diſſolve the Parliament; and immediately cauſed a Commiſſion to paſs under the Great Seal to that purpoſe: Which Commiſſion being read in the Upper Houſe, in Preſence of the Commons, the ſaid Parliament was diſſolved on the 15th of June.

Done on June 15.

To take off, if poſſible, the Diſcontents and Murmurs of the People on this occaſion, his Majeſty publiſhed A Declaration of the Cauſes of Diſſolving the two laſt Parliaments —— Given at Whitehall the 30th day of June in the ſecond Year of our Reign.

Declaration of Reaſons for Diſſolving the two laſt Parliaments.

Wherein his Majeſty aſſerts, " That the Calling, " Adjourning, Proroguing, and Diſſolving of Par- 1626. " liaments, do peculiarly belong unto himſelf by an " undoubted Prerogative inſeparably united to his " Imperial Crown; of which, as of his other Regal " Actions, he is not bound to give an Account to " any but to God only. That coming to the Crown, " he found himſelf engaged in a War with a potent " Enemy, invited and encouraged therein by the " humble Advice of both the Houſes of Parliament " in the Life of his Father. That after his Death " ſummoning a new Parliament at Weſtminſter, and " by reaſon of the Plague adjourning it to Oxford, " and deſiring a farther Supply, he found them ſo " ſlow, and ſo full of Delays and Diverſions, and " the Contagion ſo much encreaſing, his Majeſty " diſſolved that Parliament. That after this, by " Advice of his Privy Council and his Council of " War, he continued his Preparations and former " Reſolutions, tho' it pleaſed God not to give the " Succeſs which was deſired. That he ſummoned " a new Parliament to meet on Febr. 6. at the firſt " Meeting whereof he did forbear to preſs them " with any thing which might have the leaſt Ap- " pearance of his own Intereſt. That the Commons, " on March 27. Voted three Subſidies and three Fif- " teens, and on Apr. 26. upon ſecond Cogitations, " added a fourth Subſidy. His Majeſty, with much " patience, expected the Performance of what the " Commons had thus promiſed; but they, being a- " buſed by the violent and ill-adviſed Paſſions of a " few Members of the Houſe for private and perſo- " nal Ends ill-beſeeming Publick Perſons truſted by " their Country, not only neglected, but wilfully " refuſed to hearken to all the gentle Admonitions " which his Majeſty could give them; and neither " did nor would intend any thing but the Proſecuti- " on of one of the Peers of this Realm. —— Where- " upon his Majeſty wrote a Letter to the Speaker, " dated June 9. 1626. Notwithſtanding which Let- " ter, read in the Houſe, being a clear and graci- " ous Manifeſt of his Majeſty's Reſolutions, they " never ſo much as admitted one Reading to the " Bill of Subſidies; but inſtead thereof, they prepa- " red and voted a Remonſtrance, containing as well " many diſhonourable Aſperſions upon his Majeſty, " as dilatory Excuſes for their not proceeding with " the Subſidies. Wherefore his Majeſty, upon ma- " ture Adviſement, diſcerning that all farther Pati- " ence would prove fruitleſs, on the 15th inſtant he " diſſolved this unhappy Parliament: Since which " he hath put on this Reſolution, that he will go " on cheerfully and conſtantly in Defence of the " Faith and true Religion, and (notwithſtanding " ſo many Difficulties and Diſcouragements) will " take his Sceptre and Sword into his Hand, and " not expoſe the Perſons of the People committed " to his Charge to the inſatiable Deſires of the King " of Spain, who hath long thirſted after an univer- " ſal Monarchy; nor their Conſciences to the Yoke " of the Pope of Rome: And, that at home he will " take that care to redreſs the juſt Grievances of his " good Subjects as ſhall be every way fit for a good " King.

This was ſeconded by a Royal Proclamation taking notice of a Remonſtrance drawn up by a late Committee of the Commons, intended to have been preſented to his Majeſty, " Wherein were many things " contained to the Diſhonour of the King and his " Royal Father. Of which ſeveral Copies have been " ſcattered; and therefore, for ſuppreſſing of this " inſufferable Wrong, his Majeſty commands all " Perſons who have any Copies or Notes of the ſaid " Remonſtrance, forthwith to burn the ſame, that " the Memory thereof may be utterly aboliſhed.

King's Proclamation againſt an intended Remonſtrance of the Commons.

On the ſame Day the Parliament was diſſolv'd, the Earl of Briſtol was again committed to the Tower, and the Earl of Arundel again confined to his own Houſe: which, with many other ſteps of Diſtinction, did unhappily improve the general Diſcontent of the Lords and Commons.

Earl of Briſtol again committed. Earl of Arundel confin'd.

1626. A ſham Information againſt the Duke of Buckingham in the Star-Chamber.

Soon after an Information was preferred by the King's ſpecial Command in the Star Chamber, againſt the Duke of Buckingham for high Offences and Miſdemeanours, and in particular for the Plaiſter applied to King James, according to the laſt Article preferred againſt him by the Commons. The Duke put in his Anſwer, and divers Witneſſes were examined. But it came to no judicial Hearing, and was therefore ſuſpected to be an Evaſion of Juſtice rather than a Proſecution of it.

Privy Council declare for Tonnage and Poundage, tho' not yet given by Parliament.

To take off the Complaint in Parliament of the illegality of receiving Tonnage and Poundage without a ſpecial Act of the Legiſlature, the Privy Council now declared, that the ſaid Revenue hath been conſtantly continued for many Ages, and is a principal and moſt neceſſary part of the Revenue of the Crown; and in the two laſt Parliaments had been thought upon, but could not be ſettled by their Authority by reaſon of the Diſſolutions, tho' it was ſufficiently intended to have been confirmed by Parliament, as it hath been from time to time by many Deſcents and Ages. Whereupon they Order'd, that all ſuch Duties and Merchandizes ſhall be levied and paid; and an Inſtrument for that purpoſe was paſſed under the Great Seal. For the King having depriv'd himſelf of the proſpect of all Parliamentary Aids, and yet reſolving to proſecute the War, it was neceſſary to project all poſſible Ways and Means of raiſing Money; which put the King and his Miniſtry upon ſome Inventions which indeed nothing but a Neceſſity could excuſe, and the People would not excuſe that Neceſſity.

Projects of getting Money.

By Forfeitures of Recuſants.

One Method was to improve the Forfeitures ariſing to the Crown by the execution of the Laws againſt Prieſts, Jeſuits and Popiſh Recuſants; wherein there had been great Abuſes by ſome inferiour Officers, who had oppreſſed ſuch Recuſants without advantage to the King. And therefore the King grants a Commiſſion to the Arch-Biſhop of York, Sir John Savile and others, To Treat and make Compoſition with the ſaid Recuſants for all Forfeitures in not going to Church, under ſuch Conditions and Immunities as they ſhall ſee meet and convenient, according to ſuch Inſtructions as his Majeſty hath or ſhall give for that purpoſe: his Majeſty rather deſiring their Converſion than Deſtruction. This was juſtly ſuſpected as a Toleration of Popery in thoſe who could purchaſe it; and as a Power diſpenſing with the common courſe of the Penal Laws.

By granting Crown Lands.

A Proclamation was likewiſe publiſhed declaring the King's Reſolution to make his Revenue certain, by granting his Crown Lands, as well holden by Copy as otherwiſe, to be from henceforth holden in Fee-Farm. This too was diſliked as a Project of impoveriſhing the ſtated Revenue of the Crown, by raiſing preſent Fines.

By requiring Loans and Contributions.

The King's Letters were ſent to the Nobility and Gentry, that according to the Precedents of former Times, upon extraordinary Occaſions, they would grant him their private Aſſiſtance by way of Contribution, or of Loan; expecting from them ſuch a large and cheerful Teſtimony of their Loyalty as may be acceptable to himſelf, and exemplary to his People. But this was reſented as a way of asking by Authority, and an Extortion rather than a Deſire.

By Ship Money.

Several Petitions againſt this new Impoſition.

Then a peculiar Charge was laid upon the ſeveral Ports and Maritime Counties, to furniſh and ſet out Ships for the preſent Service, in ſuch and ſuch proportionable Numbers; Twenty for the City of London, &c. The County and Ports of Dorſet preſented a Plea of Excuſe to the Council Table; and alledg'd that this was an Impoſition without Precedent. The Lord Mayor and Commonalty of London made a like Petition; and pleaded for an abatement at leaſt of the number of Ships requir'd of them. But the Council gave a general Anſwer, That Petitions and Pleadings againſt a neceſſary Command did but obſtruct the publick Service, and were therefore by no means to be admitted. This burthen was ſuch a terror to the Sea-Forts, that many of the Inhabitants remov'd higher into the Country to avoid the vexation of it. Their withdrawing encreas'd the burthen of thoſe who ſtaid behind: And therefore an Order was iſſued out, that leſt the deſerting of the Coaſts, Ports and Sea-Towns, ſhould expoſe thoſe Places to become a Prey, and invite the Enemy to an Invaſion, the Inhabitants who had withdrawn themſelves to inland Places were required to return with their Families and Retinues, and there to abide during the times of Hoſtility and Danger. 1626.

The King more and more engaged in Foreign Quarrels.

For the King found himſelf more and more engaged in Foreign Quarrels. The King of Denmark had took up Arms againſt the Emperor, in an Alliance with the Princes of the Lower Saxony, and therein claim'd the Aſſiſtance of the Crown of England for the Reſtitution of the Elector Palatine. Hereupon the King ſent a Fleet to be join'd with the Daniſh Ships to ſecure the River Elbe, and ſo prevent the Tranſporting of Commodities for the Service of the Spaniards. And beſides this Aid by Sea, the King ſent over Six thouſand Land Men, under the Command of Sir Charles Morgan, to augment the Army of the King of Denmark, who fought the Imperialiſts under the Command of Count Tilly on Aug. 27. near Luttern; where the King and his Confederates being forc'd to an unequal Battle were entirely defeated.

Eſpecially in a new Rupture with France.

And beſides theſe open Breaches with Spain and the Empire, the King was now further embarraſs'd in a new Rupture with France. The firſt occaſion of it was the King of France's employing our Engliſh Ships againſt his Proteſtant Subjects at Rochel, when by Treaty they were lent only to aſſiſt the French upon the Coaſts of Italy: This was reſented as a breach of Faith in the French King; and made the Engliſh People ſo extremely jealous of our own Court, that nothing leſs could be done than to demand a Reſtitution of our Ships, and a Reaſon why they had been ſo employ'd againſt the Rochellers. The King of France juſtified the putting them upon that Service by the neceſſity of his Affairs; and excuſed the preſent reſtitution of them on a pretence, that his Subjects, by whom they were now mann'd, would not yet deliver them. Our Ships having been thus diſhonourably employ'd, and more injuriouſly detain'd; the Duke of Bucks, as Lord Admiral, did by expreſs Commiſſion make a Repriſal on the French, by ſeizing the St. Peter of Newhaven and other French Merchants. This provok'd the King of France not only to deny the giving up our Seven Ships lent to him, but lay to an Arreſt upon our Merchants Goods in his Dominions, to the value of Three hundred thouſand Pounds. Theſe Feuds were thought to be induſtriouſly improv'd by an Emulation between the two prime Miniſters of each Nation, Cardinal Richlieu and the Duke of Buckingham; this latter having been deſign'd Ambaſſadour to France for compoſing of the Differences, was by the other's Envy deny'd Acceptance by the French King. Upon which the Duke is ſaid to have ſworn in a Rage, That ſince he was fobidden to enter in a peaceable manner into France, he would force his Paſſage with an Army. But however upon Reaſons of State the two Kings were reconciled; and ſome Satisfaction being made to the French Merchants, the French King reſtored the Engliſh Ships, and releaſed the Imbargo on their Goods at the beginning of May 1626. which ſeem'd to make up perfect Peace and Union. But Diſtaſts and Jealouſies were ſtill remaining; and both Courts were diſpos'd to break upon a ſmall occaſion.

The Queen ſuſpected of doing ill Offices between Engl. and France.

This made the King and Duke the more jealous of the Queen's Family, as ſending Intelligence, and ſpreading Reports, and doing other ill Offices between the two Nations. It had been agreed by the Articles of Marriage, that the Queen ſhould chuſe her own Servants of her own Country and Religion; and ſhould in particular have a certain number of Prieſts for her Houſhold Chaplains, together with a Biſhop, who ſhould exerciſe all Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction 1626. diction in Matters of Religion. Theſe Men being courted by the Engliſh Papiſts, and zealouſly ſupported by the Queen's Favour, had opportunities to ſhew a very zealous Partiality for their own Country and the Romiſh Communion; growing forward and inſolent, and putting the Queen upon ſuch courſes as created Diſtruſt and Unkindneſs between the King and Her.

The King reſolves to ſend away the Queens French Servants.

His Majeſty repreſented this uneaſineſs to his Brother of France, imputing it to the crafty and evil Counſels of the Queen's Domeſticks, contrary to her own Inclinations; and ſo declared he could no longer bear with thoſe that were the known cauſes and fomenters of this Diſturbance. He could give many Inſtances of their rude Behaviour, but he thought one might ſuffice, that without his knowledge they had made his Royal Conſort walk to Tybourn to pay her Devotions there. In ſhort, that they had ſo much abuſed his Patience, and affronted his Perſon, that he was reſolved no longer to endure it. Before any Anſwer was return'd from France, on July 1. toward Evening, the King, attended by the Duke of Buckingham, the Earls of Holland and Carliſle, and other principal Officers, came to Somerſet Houſe, and having commanded the appearance of all the Queen's Servants, the King ſpoke his Mind to them in this manner.

Gentlemen and Ladies,

Makes a Speech to them.

" I Am driven to that extremity, as I am perſonal-
" ly come to acquaint you, that I very earneſtly
" deſire your return into France. True it is, the De-
" portment of ſome amongſt you hath been very in-
" offenſive to me; but others again have ſo dallied
" with my Patience, and ſo highly affronted Me,
" as I cannot, I will not any longer endure it.

The Biſhop of Mende and Madam St. George, who had given the greateſt Offence, began to make their Apologies: but the King turn'd from them, ſaying only, I name none, but I tell you my Reſolution. As ſoon as the Queen heard it, ſhe fell into a high Paſſion, and upbraided his Majeſty with the utmoſt Diſaffection to her. He tried all the moſt kind and tender ways to pacify her; and when he had uſed all gentle Perſwaſions, he roundly bid her be ſatisfied, for it muſt be ſo. This Action indeed did ſeem to be ſome Indignity put upon the Queen; and it was a greater hardſhip upon her Servants, who had moſt of them ſold their Effects in France to purchaſe a dependence on the Engliſh Court, and were now worſe than Baniſh'd home. But as there was a Provocation for it, ſo there was in one reſpect a happy Conſequence in it: For after this Set of Creatures were diſmiſt, the Queen grew much more Endearing to his Majeſty, and he moſt Firm and Fond in his Affections to her.

The Queen enraged.

The Lord Carleton ſent to the French Court.

The King ſent over the Lord Carleton to the French Court to give advice of this Action, and prevent all hard conſtructions of it. But the French King immediately declared his ill Reſentments of it, and denied Audience to the Lord Carleton, and complained of an expreſs violation of the Articles of Marriage; and for an immediate Act of Hoſtility ſeiz'd upon One hundred and twenty Engliſh Ships that were then in his Ports and Rivers.

Declaration of War againſt France.

Upon this the King of England publiſhed a Declaration of War againſt France, expreſſing the Grounds of it to be, 1. That the Council of France had obſtructed the landing of Count Mansfeild's Army contrary to promiſe; with whom the French ſhould have joined for relief of the Palatinate. 2. That the King of France contrary to the Articles with his Proteſtant Subjects, had block'd up their Towns, Gariſons and Forts. 3. That the King of France had committed an Example of great Injuſtice in full Peace, by ſeizing 120 Engliſh Ships, with all their Merchandiſe and Artillery.

A Fleet ſent to the

The King prepares a Fleet of Thirty Men of War, and ſent them at the beginning of October under the Command of the Earl of Denbigh to relieve the Rochellers; who being then beſieged and greatly diſtreſſed, had ſued to the King of England for his Protection and Defence. But this Fleet going out too late, ſuffered ſo much by adverſe Winds and Storms, that they were not able to reach the French Coaſts, but were driven back into our own Harbours, and left the Rochellers not only to deplore their own Miſery, but perhaps to ſuſpect our Integrity. 1626. relief of Rochel.

While the King found himſelf under theſe various Difficulties, he commanded his Council to adviſe by what means and ways he might be furniſhed with Monies ſuitable to theſe great Occaſions. After conſulting many Days, they came to this Reſolution: That the urgency of Affairs not admitting the way of Parliament, the moſt ſpeedy, equal and convenient Means would be by a General Loan from the Subject, according as every Man was Aſſeſſed in the Rolls of the laſt Subſidy. King adviſes with Privy Council how to raiſe Money. They adviſe the Method of Loan.

Upon this Reſult the King publiſhed a Declaration, to inform his People that the urgency of his occaſions would not give leave to the calling of a Parliament; but aſſuring them this way ſhould not be made a Precedent, and promiſing in the Word of a Prince, Firſt, To Repay all ſuch Sums of Money as ſhould be lent without Fee or Charge. Secondly, That not one Penny ſo borrowed ſhould be expended otherwiſe than on the Publick Service. A Declaration for it.

The King choſe his Commiſſioners for receiving of this Loan, and gave them theſe private Inſtructions. Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners.

1. " To ſet themſelves a good Example in freely
" ſubſcribing to the beſt of their own Ability.
2. " To require a Loan from others according " to the Rates in the laſt Book of Subſidy: a Man
" of 100*l.* in Goods to lend 100 Marks, and he
" of 100*l.* in Lands to lend a full 100*l.*
3. " To uſe all poſſible endeavours to cauſe every " Man to lend cheerfully, upon conſideration of " Honour, Intereſt and common Safety.
4. " To appoint the Payment within fourteen
" Days, or at leaſt one half within that time, and
" the remainder before the 20th of December.
5. " That they treat apart with every one; and " if any any refuſe, they ſhall examine them upon
" Oath, and charge them upon Allegiance not to
" diſcloſe whatever their Anſwer is.
6. " That they begin with ſuch Perſons as are " likely to ſet the beſt Examples.
7. " That they certifie to the Privy Council in " Writing, the Names, Qualities and Dwelling-
" places of all Refractory Perſons.
8. " That upon lending the Sums requir'd, his " Majeſty will remit their Grant upon the late Be" nevolence, and accept what was paid on that ac-
" count as a part of the preſent Loan.
9. " That they admit of no Suit to be made, or
" Reaſons to be given for the abating of any Sum.
Laſtly, " The Commiſſioners are required upon " their Faith and Allegiance, not to impart their
" Inſtructions to any others.

Divers Lords of the Council were appointed to repair into their ſeveral Countries for advancement of this Loan: But no Art or Intereſt could bring off a Free People from murmuring at it, as an arbitrary and illegal Impoſition. This Reluctancy of private Perſons made the Government more ſevere in execution of the Project; and this ſeverity of the Government made People more and more averſe to it. Thoſe who ſuffered for their Oppoſition grew Popular; and diſpleaſing of the Court was now thought a demonſtration of Conſcience and Honour. So as the ſteps taken to proſecute this Deſign made the Deſign it ſelf much the more odious. The People murmur at it.

Sir Randolph Crew ſhewing himſelf diſſatisfied, was remov'd from his Place of Lord Chief Juſtice, and Sir Nicholas Hide was put in his room, a Creature of the Duke's, and he who had drawn up his Anſwer to the late Impeachment in Parliament. Thoſe who oppoſed it were puniſh'd by the Court.

1626. The Biſhop of Lincoln ſpoke publickly againſt the Loan; for which, a Complaint was ſent up to the Lords of the Council, and upon this Occaſion an Information of other pretended Matters was preferred againſt him in the Star-Chamber.

The Benchers of Lincolns-Inn demurring upon it as not in due Form of Law, received a Letter of Reproof from the Lords of the Council, with a Command to return the Names of the Refractory.

The Gentry in ſeveral Counties refuſing to Subſcribe, were bound over by Recogniſance to appear at the Council Table; and there refuſing to comply, were many of them committed to Priſon.

The Common ſort who deny'd the Rates requir'd of them, were by Warrant of the Council, directed to the Commiſſioners of the Navy, impreſt to ſerve in the Ships ready to go out in his Majeſty's Service. And others of them in and about London were made to appear before the Lieutenant of the Tower, by him to be enrolled among the Land Forces; with a Reaſon declar'd, that they who refus'd to aſſiſt with their Purſes ſhould ſerve in their Perſons for the common Defence.

None ſo forward as the Papiſts.

And that which added to the Popular Diſguſt was, That the Papiſts were all forward and liberal upon this occaſion; and the Proteſtant Subjects who were more ſparing of their Liberty and Property, were all hunted into the Reproach of being Puritans. And it was imputed to the Court as an Obſervation of theirs, that in this Teſt of Allegiance the Papiſts were exceeding Orthodox, and the Puritans were the only Recuſants.

The Court Biſhops and ſome of the Clergy were too buſie in it.

Another great Unhappineſs was this; The Biſhops at the King's Requeſt were moſt of them zealous to promote this Supply of the Publick Neceſſities; and earneſtly preſs'd their Clergy to contribute their beſt Aſſiſtance in it. Hence ſome were more officious than became their Function in ſuch a ſecular Affair: And others were ſo indiſcreet as to make it a Doctrine of their Pulpits to urge the Duty of Anſwering whatever the King demanded. In particular,

Caſe of Sibthorp.

Dr. Sibthorp, Vicar of Brackley, preach'd upon this Subject at Northampton on Feb. 22. 1626. at the Lent Aſſizes; and having his Sermon licenſed by the Biſhop of London, he publiſh'd it under the Title of Apoſtolick Obedience, with a Dedication to the King. The whole Scope of it was to advance the Loan, and to juſtifie the King's impoſing publick Taxes without Conſent of Parliament; and to prove that the People, in point of Conſcience, were bound to ſubmit to the Regal Will and Pleaſure. For which he was afterward called in queſtion, and cenſured by the Parliament: But yet he gain'd his Ends at Court, being made Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majeſty, Prebendary of Peterborough, and Rector of Burton Latimers in Northamptonſhire; from which he was ejected in the Civil Wars, and enjoy'd them again at the Reſtoration, dying in April 1662. One who ſpeaks moſt favourably of the Royal Party, ſays, He was a Perſon of little Learning, and of few Parts, only made it his Endeavours, by his Forwardneſs and Flatteries, to gain Preferment.

Caſe of Manwaring.

Dr. Roger Manwaring promoted the ſame Cauſe in two Sermons preach'd before the King and Court at Whitehall, wherein he advanc'd theſe new Doctrines: "That the King is not bound to obſerve the Laws "of the Realm concerning the Subject's Rights and "Liberties, but that his Royal Will and Command "in impoſing Loans and Taxes, without common "Conſent in Parliament, doth oblige the Subject's "Conſcience upon pain of eternal Damnation. That "thoſe therefore who refuſed to pay this Loan, of-"fended againſt the Law of God and the King's ſu-"preme Authority, and became guilty of Impiety, "Diſloyalty, and Rebellion, &c. For which he was Cenſured by the next Parliament, but ſoon after by the Court preferr'd to the Rectory of Stamford Rivers in Eſſex, to hold with his Vicarage of S. Giles in the Fields, London: and Dean of Worceſter in 1633. and Biſhop of St. Davids in 1635. dying at Caermarthen in Privacy and Poverty on July 1. 1653. Theſe laſt Sermons were firſt preach'd at Oatlands before the King in July 1627. and publiſh'd under the Title of Religion and Allegiance: but bearing immediate Relation to the Loan, they were fit to be mention'd under this Year 1626. 1625.

Having thus paſs'd through the two firſt Years of this unfortunate Reign, and deliver'd the full Series of Civil Affairs; it will be proper to take a Review of the State of Religion and the Church, as very much affecting the Peace and Policy of this Reign.

State of Religion in theſe 2 firſt Years of King Charles I.

Two Days after the Parliament began, a Convocation was opened at St. Paul's on Monday June 20. 1625. Dr. John Bowles was choſen Prolocutor, who had been made Dean of Salisbury in July 1620. and was preferred to the See of Rocheſter in 1630. No Eccleſiaſtical Buſineſs was done, nor any Motion made toward it in the Upper or Lower Houſe. During their Seſſion, on June 24. the King commanded the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with ſix other Biſhops (not in a Synodical Capacity) to draw up a Form of Prayer for the Publick Faſt. On June 25. all the Biſhops who were then in Town were introduced in a Body, to wait upon the Queen, and to kiſs her Hand. On July 7. Mr. Richard Mountague, Canon of Windſor, and Fellow of Eaton, Rector of Stamford Rivers, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majeſty, was brought to the Bar of the Houſe of Commons, to anſwer for his Book entitul'd An Appeal to Cæſar, which was there charged upon him, to be contrived and publiſhed to put a Jealouſie between the King and his well affected Subjects, and to contain many things contrary to the Articles of Religion eſtabliſh'd by Parliament; and that the whole Frame thereof was an encouragement to Popery.

Convocation without Buſineſs.

Mr. Mountague queſtion'd in the Houſe of Commons for his Appeal to Cæſar.

Account of the Book and the Author.

This Cauſe had began in the 21ſt. of King James, when this Learned Man had publiſh'd a former Book entitled, A new Gagg for an old Gooſe, in anſwer to a Popiſh Book, call'd A Gagg for the new Goſpel. When upon a Suggeſtion that he had receded from ſome Doctrines of the Reformed Churches, and had too much ſoftned ſome of the Roman Tenets; he was then queſtion'd in Parliament, and the Cauſe being of dubious Points of Belief, was referr'd to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; who expreſſed his diſlike of the Book, and gave the Author a ſolemn Admonition. Some other Biſhops, who were called of the Arminian Party, had a different Notion of Mr. Mountague's Opinions, and encouraged him to re-aſſert them, and defend them in another Treatiſe to be dedicated to the King; and as an Appeal to his Royal Judgment and Authority, to be entiled Appello Cæſarem. The Archbiſhop diſallowed the Book, and endeavoured to ſuppreſs it: But the other Biſhops atteſted their Approbation of it, and haſtned the Edition. The Houſe now appointed a Committee to examine the Errors of it, and gave the Archbiſhop Thanks for his former Admonition to the Author; whoſe Books they voted to be contrary to the eſtabliſh'd Articles, to tend to the King's Diſhonour, and to the Diſturbance of Church and State: For which they aſſign'd him a time of Anſwer, and took Bond for his Appearance under the Penalty of Two thouſand Pounds.

The King interpoſes for Mr. Mountague.

But on Saturday, July 9. the King himſelf interpos'd, and ſignified to the Commons, that What had been ſpoken in their Houſe, and determin'd againſt Mr. Mountague, was diſpleaſing to him. He hop'd one of his Chaplains might have as much protection as the Servant of an ordinary Burgeſs. This was look'd upon as an arbitrary Obſtruction of Juſtice, and would but have incenſed the Houſe to have proceeded more ſeverely, if on their next Day of ſitting, Monday, July 11. the Parliament had not been prorogued to Oxford, where they met again on Monday, Aug. 1.

Convocation at Oxford without the Prolocutor.

Here at Oxford there was a very ſmall appearance of Convocation. Dr. Bowles, the Prolocutor, abſented himſelf for fear of the Infection, Dr. Thomas Goad officiating in his Place; their Meeting was kept in the Chapel of Merton College. The only Motion remem-

1625. remember'd in Hiſtory, is that of the Learned Dr. James, who propoſed that all the Manuſcript Works of the Fathers, in the Libraries of each Univerſity, and elſewhere in England, might be peruſed; and that ſuch places in them as had been corrupted in Popiſh Editions, might be faithfully printed according to the moſt ancient Copies: A very laudable Deſign; but the Motion dropt without conſidering of it. The Encouragement he deſired for it was poſſibly the ſame which he recommends in one of his own Letters. "If every Church-man that hath 100 l. "per Annum and upward, will lay down but a Shil- "ing for every Hundred toward theſe publick Works, "I will undertake the Reprinting of the Fathers, "and ſetting forth five or ſix Volumes of Orthodox "Writers, comparing of Books printed with printed "and written, collating of Popiſh Tranſlations with "the Greek, and generally whatſoever ſhall concern "Books, or the Purity of them, I will take upon "Me to be Magiſter Sancti Palatii in England.

Convocation did nothing but give their Money.

The Convocation having neither deſired nor received any Royal Licenſe to treat of Eccleſiaſtical Matters, kept only to that Civil Purpoſe, for which they were chiefly called, together with the Parliament, of aſſiſting the King with a reaſonable Aid, and accordingly made a Grant of three Subſidies, which was confirmed by Act of Parliament, as had been the Cuſtom ever ſince the Act of Submiſſion; ſince which time the Taxes of the Clergy were paſſed into Secular Laws, when before that Act they were enjoin'd and levy'd by Synodical Conſtitutions, under the Penalty of Spiritual Cenſures.

Mr. Mountague applies to the King.

Mr. Mountague ſeeing himſelf under the diſpleaſure and proſecution of the Houſe of Commons, made no Application to either Houſe of Convocation (who without the King's Direction did not apprehend that the Cauſe fell regularly under their Cogniſance) but wrote a humble Letter to his Majeſty, dated July 29. 1625. wherein he firſt plainly laid open the State of his Caſe, and then Petition'd that by his Majeſty's Authority and Wiſdom, he might be protected from thoſe who had no Power over his Perſon, as being his Majeſty's Servant in Ordinary; nor over his Book as being wrote by the Command of his Royal Father, and authoriz'd by his preſent Majeſty himſelf; and then concluded with this Declaration, "That if "he could not really and throughly anſwer what- "ſoever was, or could be imputed to him in any of "his Books, he would no farther deſire any Favour "or Protection, but would be willingly left to the "Power of his Enemies,

The Biſhops intercede for him in a Letter to the Duke.

The Biſhops of Rocheſter, Oxford and St. David's, who had a kind Opinion of Mountague and his Writings, and ſeemed very ſenſible of the Danger to the Church, in allowing Points of Divinity to be examined and judg'd by the Commons in Parliament, uſed all poſſible Endeavours to ſtop this Method of Proceeding; and knowing the Duke of Buckingham to have the greateſt Influence upon the King, they begg'd his Interceſſion in this Letter, dated Auguſt 2.

May it pleaſe your Grace,

"WE are bold to be Suitors to you in the Be- "half of the Church of England, and a poor "Member of it, Mr. Mountague, at this time not a "little diſtreſſed. We are not Strangers to his Per- "ſon, but it is the Cauſe which we are bound to be "tender of. The Cauſe we conceive (under correcti- "on of better Judgment) concerns the Church of "England nearly. For that Church when it was Re- "formed from the Superſtitious Opinions broach'd "or maintain'd by the Church of Rome, refuſed the "apparent and dangerous Errors, and would not "be too buſie with every particular School-Point.

"Now, may it pleaſe your Grace, the Opinions "which at this time trouble many Men in the late "Book of Mr. Mountague, are ſome of them ſuch as "are expreſly the Reſolved Doctrine of the Church "of England, and thoſe he is bound to maintain. "Some of them are ſuch as are fit only for Schools, 1626. "and to be left at more liberty, for Learned Men to "abound in their own Senſe, ſo they keep themſelves "peaceable and diſtract not the Church. And there- "fore to make any Man ſubſcribe to School Opini- "ons, may juſtly ſeem hard in the Church of Chriſt, "and was one great Fault of the Council of Trent. "And to affright them from thoſe Opinions in which "they have (as they are bound) ſubſcribed to the "Church, as it is worſe in it ſelf, ſo may it be the "Mother of greater Danger.

"May it pleaſe your Grace further to conſider, "that when the Clergy ſubmitted themſelves in "the time of Henry VIII. the Submiſſion was ſo "made, that if any Difference Doctrinal, or other, "fell in the Church, the King and the Biſhops were "to be Judges of it in the National Synod or Con- "vocation; the King firſt giving leave under his "broad Seal to handle the Points in Difference. "But the Church never ſubmitted to any other "Judge, neither indeed can ſhe though ſhe would.

"And we humbly deſire your Grace to conſi- "der, and then to move his moſt Gracious Maje- "ſty (if you ſhall think fit) what dangerous Con- "ſequences may follow upon it. For, Firſt, If any "other Judge be allowed in matter of Doctrine, "we ſhall depart from the Ordinance of Chriſt, "and the continual Courſe and Practice of the "Church. Secondly, If the Church be once brought "down beneath her ſelf, we cannot but fear what "may be the next Stroke at it. Thirdly, It will "ſome way touch the Honour of his Majeſty's dear "Father, and our moſt dread Sovereign of glori- "ous and ever bleſſed Memory, King James, who "ſaw and approv'd all the Opinions of this Book. "And he in his rare Wiſdom and Judgment, would "never have allowed them, if they had croſſed with "Truth and the Church of England. Fourthly, We "muſt be bold to ſay, that we cannot conceive what "uſe there can be of Civil Government in the Com- "mon-wealth, or of Preaching, or external Mini- "niſtry in the Church, if ſuch fatal Opinions as "ſome which are oppoſite and contrary to theſe "delivered by Mr. Mountague are, ſhall be public- "ly taught and maintained. Fifthly, We are cer- "tain that all or moſt of the contrary Opinions "were treated of at Lambeth, and ready to be pub- "liſhed; but then Queen Elizabeth of famous Memo- "ry, upon notice given how little they agreed with "the Practice of Piety and Obedience to all Govern- "ment, cauſed them to be ſuppreſſed; and ſo they "have continued ever ſince, till of late ſome of them "have received Countenance at the Synod of Dort. "Now this was a Synod of that Nation, and can "be of no Authority in any other National Church "till it be received there by publick Authority. "And our hope is, that the Church of England "will be well adviſed, and more than once over, "before ſhe admit a Foreign Synod, eſpecially of "ſuch a Church as condemneth her Diſcipline and "manner of Government; to ſay no more.

"And further, We are bold to commend to your "Grace's Wiſdom this one Particular. His Majeſty "(as we have been informed) hath already taken "this Buſineſs into his own Care, and moſt wor- "thily referred it in a right Courſe to Church con- "ſideration. And we well hoped, that without "further trouble to the State, or breach of Unity "in the Church, it might ſo have been well and or- "derly compoſed, as we ſtill pray it may.

"Theſe things conſidered, we have little to ſay "for Mr. Mountague's Perſon; only thus much we "know, he is a very good Scholar, and a right "honeſt Man: A Man every way able to do God, "his Majeſty, and the Church of England great "Service. We fear he may receive Diſcouragement; "and (which is far worſe) we have ſome cauſe to "doubt this may breed a great Backwardneſs in able "Men to write in the Defence of the Church of "England, againſt either home or foreign Adverſa- "ries, 1626. " ries, if they ſhall ſee him ſink in Fortune's Repu-

" tation, or Health, upon occaſion of his Book.
" And this we moſt humbly ſubmit to your Grace's
" Judgment, and Care of the Church's Peace and " Welfare. So commending your Grace to the Pro" tection of Almighty God,

We ſhall ever reſt at your Grace's Service,

Apr. 2. 1625. Jo. Roffen. Jo. Oxon. Guil. Menevs.

The Duke eſpouſed the Cauſe.

The Duke's eſpouſing this Cauſe, and the King's reproving the Houſe of Commons for meddling in it, did but more exaſperate the adverſe Party, who were now Enemies to Mountague not as an Arminian, but as an Inſtrument (in their Thoughts) of Arbitrary Power. And it was indeed the State Intereſt that gave the great Diſtinction to theſe School Opinions. Thoſe Divines who adher'd to the more rigid Opinions of St. Auſtin, Calvin, and the Synod of Dort, they were at this time of the Country Party, in favour with the People, and with the prevailing ſide in Parliament; ſo they eſtabliſh'd to themſelves the Reputation of being ſound and orthodox Proteſtants: while the other Divines who went back to the Foundations of Religion, and to the Import of the Scriptures, and to the Senſe of the Primitive Fathers, in rejecting the hard Decrees of Reprobation, and in reconciling the Will of Man with the Grace of God; they were eminently of the Court-Party, and Favourites of the King and the Duke: and under a Prejudice upon this Civil more than a Religious Account, they were charg'd with Popery and Arminianiſm, only to make them the more odious to the Common People. Even the Arminians in Holland ſuffer'd more as a State Faction than as a Religious Sect; they were found Adverſaries to the Rights and Liberties of the People; and it was under that Character they were made Hereticks, rather than for their abſtracted Notions in Divinity. And it was the ſame now in England; the Doctrinal Controverſie would have created no great Difference, if there had not been a Political Diviſion in it.

Arminians hated as a Civil Faction.

Many Anſwers to Mr. Mountague's Book.

It was this very Reaſon that now inflam'd the Commons againſt Mr. Mountague; and they would have ſhewn their Indignation at his having ſuch an Intereſt at Court, if this Parliament had not been ſo very abruptly diſſolv'd. And this again encreas'd the Prejudice againſt what they now call'd the Arminian Party; and the Cry againſt them was ſo popular, that many Divines were encouraged to confute the Principles of Mr. Mountague's Book, and to repreſent them as falſe and pernicious. In this Deſign Dr. Sutcliff, Mr. Burton, Mr. Rowſe, Mr. Yates, Mr. Wotton, and even a Biſhop of the Church, Dr. Carleton, engaged themſelves. Their Writings ſerv'd to heighten the Jealouſies of the wiſer, and to confirm the Prejudices of the weaker Men. This was ſoon improv'd into ſuch a univerſal Diſlike of the dreadful Name of Arminianiſm, that even the King and the Duke began to think it not ſafe and honourable to ſupport a Cauſe that was generally run down by the Voice of the People: And therefore at the opening of the ſecond Parliament, ſummon'd to meet Feb. 162⅝, the Duke ſeem'd inclinable to drop his Concern for Mountague, the better to reconcile himſelf to ſome of the leading Members: And for the ſame reaſon his Majeſty was diſpos'd to leave Mr. Mountague to the free Proſecution deſign'd againſt him, and not to interpoſe in his favour; that he might not thereby interrupt his more important Affairs. Biſhop Laud, who was a zealous Friend to the Perſon and Opinions of Mr. Mountague, was ſenſible of this Intention of the Court to deſert him: It was on ſuch a Proſpect that he made this Entry in his Diary, Jan. 29. Sunday. I underſtand what D. B. had collected concerning the Cauſe, Book, and Opinions of Richard Mountague, and what R. C. had determined with himſelf therein. Methinks I ſee a Cloud ariſing and threatning the Church of England: God of his Mercy diſſipate it.

The King and Duke were inclined to deſert Mr. Mountague

As ſoon as the Parliament began Feb. 6. the Commons had an immediate Eye upon Mountague, and reſolv'd to call him to Account. This rais'd the Curioſity of many Peers to underſtand what the Tenets were, and how they differ'd from the Calviniſtical Opinions which were commonly called the Doctrine of the Church, and were then the generally received Senſe of the Articles of it. To this end, a Conference was procured by the Earl of Warwick to be held in the Duke of Buckingham's Houſe in Preſence of his Grace and many others of the Nobility, upon Saturday Feb. 11. between Dr. Buckeridge Biſhop of Rocheſter and Dr. White Dean of Carliſle on the ſide call'd Arminian, and Dr. Morton Biſhop of Litchfield, and Dr. Preſton Preacher of Lincolns-Inn, on the other ſide. This Conference was again renew'd in the ſame Place upon Friday Feb. 17. wherein Mr. Mountague himſelf appear'd in the room of Biſhop Buckeridge. The Succeſs of theſe Conferences was differently reported, according to the different Affection of the Hearers. The Parliament in the mean time began with returning Thanks to the King for his gracious Anſwer to their late Petition for Religion. And when the Houſe of Commons fell upon the Subject of Grievances, thinking their Liberty and Property to depend much on the eſtabliſh'd Faith and Worſhip, they appointed a Committee to conſider of the State of Religion and the Growth of Popery. To this Committee the Houſe referred the Examination of Mr. Mountague's Appeal to Cæſar; who on Apr. 18. making their Report by Mr. Pym to the Houſe, theſe Articles were drawn up againſt him.

Articles of the Commons againſt Mr. Mountague

" THat he the ſaid Richard Mountague, in or about
" the 21ſt Year of the Reign of our late Sove-
" raign King James of famous Memory, hath cau-
" ſed to be printed, and in his Name to be publiſh-
" ed, one Book called An Anſwer to the late Gagg of
" Proteſtants; and in or about Ann. 22. of the ſame
" King, he cauſed to be printed and publiſhed one
" other Book entitled A Treatiſe of the Invocation of
" Saints; and likewiſe in the firſt Year of his Ma-
" jeſty's Reign that now is, he procured to be " printed, and in his Name to be publiſhed, ano-
" ther Book entitled An Appeal to Cæſar: In every
" of which Books he hath maintained and confirm" ed ſome Doctrine contrary or repugnant to the " Articles agreed by the Archbiſhop and Biſhops of " both Provinces and the whole Clergy holden in
" the Convocation at London 1562. for avoiding di-
" verſity of Opinions, and for eſtabliſhing Conſent
" touching true Religion: All which appears in the " places hereafter mentioned, and in divers other " places and paſſages of the ſame Books: And by
" his ſo doing, hath broken the Laws and Statutes
" of this Realm in that caſe provided, and very " much diſturbed both the Peace of Church and
" Commonwealth.

I. " Whereas in the 35th Article of the Articles
" aforementioned it is declared, That the ſecond
" Book of Homilies doth contain a godly and whol-
" ſome Doctrine, in the 16th Homily of which
" Book it is determined, That the Church of Rome
" as it is at preſent, and hath been for the ſpace of 900
" Years and odd, is ſo far wide from the nature of a
" true Church, that Nothing can be more; He the " ſaid Richard Mountague, in ſeveral places of his
" ſaid Book called the Anſwer to the Gagg, and in
" his other Book called the Appeal, doth adviſedly
" maintain and affirm, that the Church of Rome is
" and ever was a true Church ſince it was a Church.

II. " Whereas in the ſame Homily it is likewiſe
" declared, that the Church of Rome is not built up-
" on the Foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles; and
" in the 28th Article of the ſaid Articles, that Tran-
" ſubſtantiation overthroweth the nature of a Sacrament;

III. " In the 19th Article it is farther determi- " ned, that the Church of Rome hath erred not only in " their Living and Matters of Ceremony, but alſo in " Matters of Faith; he the ſaid Richard Mountague " ſpeaking of thoſe Points which belong to Faith " and good Manners, Hope and Charity, doth in " the ſaid Book called the Gagg, affirm and main- " tain, that None of theſe are controverted in their " Points, meaning the Proteſtants and Papiſts. And " notwithſtanding that in the 31ſt Article it is re- " ſolved, that the Sacrifice of Maſſes in which, as it is " commonly ſaid, the Prieſt did offer Chriſt for the " Quick and the Dead to have remiſſion of Pain and " Guilt too, is a blaſphemous Fable and dangerous De- " ceit; this being one of the Points controverted " between the Church of England and the Church of " Rome, the ſaid Richard Mountague, in his Book " called the Gagg, doth affirm and maintain, that " the controverted Points are of a leſſer and inferior na- " ture, of which a Man may be ignorant without any " danger of his Soul at all; A Man may reſolve to op- " poſe this or that without peril of periſhing for ever.

IV. " Whereas in the 2d Homily entitled Againſt " peril of Idolatry, contained in the aforeſaid Book " of Homilies, approved by the 35th Article afore- " mentioned, it is declared, that Images teach no " good Leſſon neither of God nor Godlineſs, but all Er- " ror and Wickedneſs; he the ſaid Richard Mountague, " in the Book Gagg aforeſaid doth affirm and main- " tain, that Images may be uſed for the Inſtruction of " the ignorant, and Excitation of Devotion.

V. " That in the ſame Homily it is plainly ex- " preſſed, that the attributing the Defence of certain " Countries to Saints is a ſpoiling God of his Honour, " and that ſuch Saints are but Dii tutelares of the " Gentile Idolaters; the ſaid Richard Mountague hath " notwithſtanding, in his ſaid Book entitled A Trea- " tiſe concerning the Invocation of Saints, affirmed " and maintained, That Saints have not only a Memo- " ry, but a more peculiar Charge of their Friends, and " that it may be admitted that ſome Saints have a pe- " culiar Patronage, Cuſtody, Protection and Power, as " Angels alſo have, over certain Perſons and Countries " by ſpecial Deputation, and that it is no Impiety ſo to " believe.

VI. " Whereas in the 17th of the ſaid Articles " it is reſolved, that God hath certainly decreed by his " Counſel, ſecret to us, to deliver from Curſe and Dam- " nation thoſe whom he hath choſen in Chriſt out of " Mankind, and to bring them by Chriſt to everlaſting " Salvation; wherefore they which be endued with ſo ex- " cellent a Benefit of God, be called according to God's " purpoſe working in due ſeaſon, they through Grace o- " bey the Calling, they be juſtified freely, walk religiouſly " in good Works, and at length, by God's mercy, attain " to everlaſting Felicity: He the ſaid Richard Moun- " tague, in the ſaid Book called The Appeal, doth " maintain and affirm, that Men juſtified may fall a- " way, and depart from the ſtate which once they had; " they may ariſe again and become new Men poſſibly, but " not certainly nor neceſſarily: and the better to coun- " tenance this his Opinion, he hath in the ſame " Book wilfully added, falſified, and changed di- " vers Words of the 16th of the Articles before " mentioned, and divers other Words both in the " Book of Homilies and in the Book of Common " Prayer, and ſo miſrecited and changed the ſaid " places. He doth alledge in the ſaid Book called " The Appeal, endeavouring thereby to lay a moſt " wicked and malicious Scandal upon the Church " of England, as if ſhe did herein differ from the " Reformed Churches of England, and from the " Reformed Churches beyond the Seas; and did 1626. " conſent to thoſe pernicious Errors which are com- " monly called Arminianiſm, and which the late fa- " mous Queen Elizabeth and King James of happy " Memory did ſo piouſly and diligently labour to " ſuppreſs.

VII. " That the ſaid Richard Mountague, contrary " to his Duty and Allegiance, hath endeavoured to " raiſe great Factions and Diviſions in this Com- " monwealth, by calling the odious and ſcandalous " Name of Puritans upon ſuch his Majeſty's loving " Subjects as conform themſelves to the Doctrine " and Ceremony of the Ch. of England, under that " Name laying upon them divers falſe and malici- " ous Imputations, ſo to bring them into Jealouſie " and Diſpleaſure with his moſt excellent Majeſty, " and into Reproach and Ignominy with the reſt of " the People, to the great danger of Sedition and Di- " ſturbance in the State, if it be not timely prevented.

VIII. " That the Scope and End of the ſaid Ri- " chard Mountague, in the Books before mentioned, " is to give Encouragement to Popery, and to with- " draw his Majeſty's Subjects from the true Religi- " on eſtabliſhed to the Roman Superſtition, and con- " ſequently to be reconcil'd to the See of Rome: all " which he laboureth by ſubtle and cunning ways, " whereby God's true Religion hath been much ſcan- " dalized, thoſe Miſchiefs introduced which the " Wiſdom of many Laws hath endeavoured to pre- " vent, the Devices and Practices of his Majeſty's " Enemies have been furthered and advanced to the " great Peril and Hazard of our Soveraign Lord the " King, and of all his Dominions and loving Sub- " jects.

IX. " That the ſaid Richard Mountague hath inſer- " ted into the ſaid Book called The Appeal, divers " Paſſages diſhonourable to the late King his Maje- " ſty's Father of famous Memory, full of Bitterneſs, " Railing, and injurious Speeches to other Perſons, " diſgraceful and contemptible to many worthy Di- " vines both of this Kingdom and of other Refor- " med Churches beyond the Seas, impious and pro- " fane in ſcoffing at Preaching, Meditating, and " Conferring Pulpits, Lectures, Bible, and all Shew " of Religion: All which do aggravate his former " Offences, having proceeded from malicious and " envenomed Heat againſt the Peace of the Church, " and the Sincerity of the Reformed Religion pub- " lickly profeſſed and by Law eſtabliſhed in this " Kingdom.

" All which Offences being to the Diſhonour of " God, and of moſt miſchievous Effect and Conſe- " quence againſt the Good of this Church and Com- " monwealth of England, and of other his Majeſty's " Realms and Dominions; the Commons aſſembled " in Parliament do hereby pray, that the ſaid Rich. " Mountague may be puniſhed according to his De- " merits, in ſuch exemplary manner, as may deter " others from attempting ſo preſumptuouſly to di- " ſturb the Peace of Church and State, and the " Book aforeſaid may be ſuppreſſed and burnt.

It does not appear whether theſe Articles were preſented to the King or preferred in any Judicial manner, or whether Mr. Mountague gave in any Anſwer, or made any other publick Vindication. It is moſt probable that the Commons were ſo immers'd in the Impeachment of the Duke of Buckingham, that they had not leiſure to proſecute this inferior Cauſe before their Diſſolution: Nor did the King take any notice of this Complaint, or ſuffer it to be debated in Convocation. He thought it a Diſpute fitter to be ſilenc'd than to be determin'd; and therefore by Advice of his Biſhops, he iſſued out a Proclamation on June 14. declaring, " not only to his own Peo- " ple, but to all the World, his utter diſlike of all " thoſe who to ſhew the ſubtilty of their Wits, or " to pleaſe their own Humours, or vent their own " Paſſions, do, or ſhall adventure to ſtir, or move " any new Opinions, not only contrary but differ- " ing from the ſound and orthodoxal Grounds of the

The Conſequence does not appear.

The King iſſues a Proclamation againſt Innovating in the Doctrine or Diſcipline of the Church.

1626. " the true Religion, ſincerely profeſſed in the Church " of England; and alſo aſſuring his Subjects of his " full and conſtant Reſolution, that neither in mat- " ter of Doctrine, nor Diſcipline of the Church, nor " in the Government of the State, we will admit of " the leaſt Innovation: but by Gods aſſiſtance will " ſo guide the Scepter of theſe his Kingdoms and " Dominions (by the Divine Providence put into his " hand) as ſhall be for the Comfort and Aſſurance " of his Sober, Religious and well affected Sub- " jects, and for the ſuppreſſing and ſevere puniſh- " ing of ſuch as out of any ſiniſter Reſpects or Diſ- " affection to his Perſon or Government, ſhall dare, " either in Church or State, to diſtract or diſquiet " the Peace thereof. He thereupon Commands all " his Subjects (the Clergy moſt eſpecially, both in " England and Ireland) that from thenceforth they " ſhould carry themſelves ſo wiſely, warily and " conſcionably, that neither by Writing, Preaching, " Printing, Conferences, or otherwiſe, they raiſe " any Doubts, or Publiſh or Maintain any new In- " ventions or Opinions concerning Religion, than " ſuch as clearly grounded and warranted by the " Doctrine and Diſcipline of the Church of England, " heretofore publiſh'd and happily eſtabliſh'd by " Authority. Straitly charging all Archbiſhops and " Biſhops in their ſeveral Dioceſes, as alſo Counſel- " lors of State, Judges and Miniſters of Juſtice, " ſpeedily to reclaim and repreſs all ſuch Spirits as " ſhall adventure hereafter to break this Rule of So- " briety, and due Obedience to his Majeſty's Laws, " and this Religious Duty to the Church of God, or " in the leaſt degree attempt to violate this Bond of " Peace: Adding this further Intimation of his Roy- " al Pleaſure, that whoever from henceforth ſhall " take the boldneſs, wilfully to neglect this his Ma- " jeſty's Gracious Admonition; and either for the " ſatisfying of their unquiet and reſtleſs Spirits, or " for expreſſing of their raſh and undutiful Inſo- " lencies, ſhall wilfully break that Circle of Order, " which without apparent danger both to Church " and State may not be broken, his Majeſty will " proceed againſt them with that ſeverity, as upon " due conſideration had of their Offences and Con- " tempts, they and every one of them ſhall de- " ſerve, &c.

This Proclamation did but encreaſe the Fears of Popery and Arminianiſm.

But this wiſe Proclamation was known to be meant not ſo much to reſtrain Mountague, as to diſcourage and ſuppreſs the Anſwers that were made to him; and therefore did but ſerve to improve the Jealouſies of Arminianiſm and growing Popery: which Jealouſies however unreaſonable, did ſo much obſtruct the King's Intereſt, that it had been more happy if he would not have ſeemed a Party in any ſcholaſtick Queſtions.

Caſe of Biſhop Goodman.

Another occaſion that much encreaſed the fears of Popery was a Sermon before the King, on March 26. the fifth Sunday in Lent, Preached by Dr. Goodman Biſhop of Glouceſter; who aſſerted the Real Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in ſuch a poſitive and literal Explication, that his Doctrine ſeem'd to differ little but in Word from the groſs Abſurdity of Tranſubſtantiation. This liberty of treading upon the Borders of Popery, taken before the King himſelf, was an Offence to the greateſt part of the Auditory, and quickly rais'd ſuch a noiſe in Court and Country, that his Majeſty found himſelf oblig'd to ſuffer ſome Cogniſance to be taken of it: And accordingly on Wedneſd. following March 29. there was great Debates in Convocation upon the Subject of this Sermon; but having no Licenſe for that purpoſe, they let fall the Matter without any Reſolutions in it. And his Majeſty thought it a more effectual Method to refer the Conſideration of the Sermon to the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of Wincheſter, Durham and St. David's; who at the King's Command met together on Wedneſday Apr. 12. and after ſome Conſult agreed to give this Anſwer to the King. That ſome things in that Sermon were ſpoken leſs cautiouſly, but nothing falſely. That nothing was innovated by him in the Doctrine of the Church of England. But to avoid Offence, it might be very proper that the Biſhop ſhould preach the Sermon again at ſome time to be choſen by himſelf, and ſhould then ſhew how or wherein he was miſunderſtood by his Auditors; which by Order of the King the Biſhop did accordingly perform. But this was by no means a Satisfaction to the World, becauſe it looked like a reciting and at beſt but a ſoftning of the Error, which ought to have been plainly renounc'd: there being Reaſon enough to ſuſpect that Preacher of leaning toward Popery, who to the ſingle Scandal of his Order was afterward a declared Profeſſor of it.

Archbiſhop and Biſhops give their Opinion not in Convocation.

A Convocation had been ſummon'd to meet a Day after the Parliament, upon Feb. 7. 162⅞. but no matters of Religion were debated in it, excepting the forementioned Subject of Biſhop Goodman's Sermon; of which Archbiſhop Laud has enter'd it in his Diary, March 29. In the Convocation held that Day, there was much debating concerning the Sermon which Gabriel Goodman, Biſhop of Glouceſter, had preached before the King on the Sunday preceding, being the Fifth Sunday of Lent. This debating ſeems to have been only in the Upper Houſe of Convocation, of which the Party offending was a Member, as well as the Writer who took this Note of it. And their Lordſhips ſeem to have enter'd on this Debate by Direction from the King, who immediately after took away the Cauſe from all dependence in Convocation, and referred it to a Committee of Biſhops appointed by his own Royal Authority; who reported their Judgment to the King as before related.

Convocation meets.

Debate in the Upper Houſe.

It is more to be admired, that the Controverſie about Arminianiſm and the Advances toward Popery, ſhould not be once mentioned in Convocation, when it had ſo much divided the Church, and diſturb'd the whole Kingdom, and was now brought into the Houſe of Commons, where the Articles exhibited againſt Mountague muſt to the greateſt degree affect the Church and Clergy. The Reaſon of this paſſive Silence in Convocation is thus accounted for by a Writer who beſt knew the Secret Hiſtory of thoſe Times. " But nothing (ſays he) was of ſuch con- " cernment to a Convocation as the Cauſe of Moun- " tague, vexed and moleſted by the Commons in both " the Parliaments, for ſuppoſed Popery and Armini- " aniſm, matters meerly Doctrinal. And poſſibly it " may be admired, that they ſhould do nothing in a " Matter of their own Peculiar, having his Majeſty " to their Friend: For it appears in the Letter of the " three Biſhops before mention'd to the Duke of " Buckingham, That his Majeſty had taken that Buſi- " neſs into his own Care, and had moſt worthily referred " it in a right Courſe to Church Conſideration. And " it appears alſo by the Breviate, p. 8. that on Sun- " day, April 22. of this preſent Year, His Majeſty " had commanded all the Biſhops to come before him, and " reprehended ſuch as came (being fourteen in Num- " ber) for being ſilent in Cauſes which concerned the " Church, and had not made known to him what might " be profitable or unprofitable for it, the Cauſe whereof " he was ſo ready to promote. But then we are to call " to Mind, that Laud not long ſince had been ſent " by the Duke of Buckingham to conſult with An- " drews, and learn of him what he thought fitting " to be done in the Cauſe of the Church, and more " eſpecially in the Five Articles ſo hotly agitated " between the Remonſtrants and Contra-Remonſtrants " in the Belgick Provinces. And it appears by the " Event, that Andrews did not hold it fit for any " thing to be done in that Particular, as the Caſe " then ſtood; the Truth in thoſe Opinions not be- " ing ſo generally entertained amongſt the Clergy, " nor the Archbiſhop, and the greater part of the " Prelates, ſo inclinable to them, as to venture " the determining of thoſe Points to a Convoca- " tion.

Heylyn's Life of Laud, p. 1. l. 2. p. 146.

There is little more of moment relating to Church Affairs. Biſhop Laud and thoſe other Prelates and Divines who lay under the Odium of Arminians and Popiſhly

1626. Popiſhly affected, becauſe they were of a larger Underſtanding, and a more publick Spirit than many others of their Order, were unhappily engag'd in the Intereſt of the Duke of Buckingham, and very forward in thoſe Meaſures which the King unfortunately took: And their being thus made a Court Faction, brought a popular Diſtruſt and Hatred of them. And a further occaſion now offer'd to render them the more ſuſpected as Inſtruments of a ſomewhat arbitrary Power. His Majeſty's Neceſſities, that aroſe from his not complying with two ſeveral Parliaments, had driven him upon the way of Loan. This Project much diſcontented and diſturbed the People: the King thought it would be a Means to reconcile them, if the Biſhops and Clergy ſhould recommend the Cauſe in their ſeveral parts of the Country. In order to this, Biſhop Laud, Tranſlated from St. David's to Bath and Wells, on June 20. 1626. did now upon the 14th of September following receive a Command from his Majeſty by the Duke of Buckingham, to reduce into form ſome Inſtructions partly Political partly Eccleſiaſtical, to ſhew the urgency of the King's Affairs, and his occaſions of Supply to aſſiſt the King of Denmark, to be publiſhed in all Pariſhes within the Realm. The Duke deliver'd the certain Heads to him, and deſired him to put them into formal Inſtructions by the Saturday following; on which Day, Sept. 16. the Biſhop carry'd them to the Duke who approv'd them, and thence to the King who was as well pleas'd with them, and the next Day they were read before the Lords of the Privy Council, who gave a like Approbation of them: Upon which, on Sept. 21. the King ſent them as Letters of Precept to the two Archbiſhops to be communicated to their Suffragans in this Form:

The Miſfortune of the Bps. who were called Arminian.

Inſtructions to the Clergy in the matter of a Loan.

Moſt Reverend Father in God, Right Truſty and Right well Beloved Counſellor, we greet you well,

" WE have obſerv'd that the Church and the " State are ſo nearly united and knit toge- " ther, that tho' they may ſeem two Bodies, yet in- " deed in ſome relation they may be accounted but " as one; inaſmuch as they are both made up of the " ſame Men, which are differenced only in relation to " Spiritual or Civil Ends. This nearneſs makes the " Church call in the Help of the State, to ſuccour " and ſupport her, whenſoever ſhe is preſſed be- " yond her Strength: And the ſame nearneſs makes " the State call in for the Service of the Church; " both to teach that Duty which her Members know " not, and to exhort them to and encourage them in " that Duty which they know.

" It is not long ſince we order'd the State to ſerve " the Church, and by a timely Proclamation ſettled " the Peace of it: And now the State looks for the " like Aſſiſtance from the Church, that ſhe and all " her Miniſters may ſerve God and us, by Preach- " ing Peace and Unity at Home, that it may be the " better able to reſiſt Foreign Force uniting and mul- " tiplying againſt it. And to the end that they to " whom we have committed the government of the " Church under us, may be the better able to diſ- " poſe of the preſent occaſions, we have, with the " Advice of our Council, thought fit to ſend unto " you theſe Inſtructions following, to be ſent by you " to the Biſhops of your Province, and ſuch others " whom it may concern, and by them and all their " Officers directed to all the Miniſters throughout " the ſeveral Dioceſes; that according to theſe punc- " tually they may Inſtruct and Exhort the People " to ſerve God and Us, and labour by their Prayers " to divert the Dangers which hang over us.

" The Danger in which we are at this time is " great: It is encreaſed by the late Blow given our " good Unkle the King of Denmark, who is the " chief Perſon in thoſe Parts that oppoſed the ſpread- " ing Forces of Spain. If he cannot ſubſiſt there is " little or nothing left to hinder the Houſe of Au- " ſtria from being Lord and Maſter of Germany: and " that is a large and mighty Territory, and ſuch " as ſhould it be gotten, would make an open way 1626. " for Spain to do what they pleaſed in all the Weſt " part of Chriſtendom. For beſides the great Strength " which Germany once poſſeſſed, would bring to them " which are too ſtrong already, you are to conſider, " Firſt, How it enables them by Land, in that it " will join all or the moſt part of the Spaniard's now " diſtracted Territories, and be a means for him " ſafely and ſpeedily to draw down Forces againſt " any other Kingdom that ſhall ſtand in his way. " Nor can it be thought the Low Countries can hold " out longer againſt him, if he once become Lord " of the Upper Parts. And, Secondly, You are to " weigh how it will advantage him by Sea, and " make him ſtrong againſt us in our parricular Do- " minion of the Seas; which is of eaſie Apprehen- " ſion to all Men: And beſides, if he once get Ger- " many, he will be able, though he had no Gold from " India, to ſupply the neceſſity of thoſe Wars, and " to hinder all Trade and Traffick of the greateſt " Staple Commodities of this Kingdom, Cloth " and Wool, and ſo make them of little or no Va- " lue.

" You are to know therefore, that to prevent this " is the preſent Care of the King and State; and " there is no probable way left but by ſending Forces " and other Supplies to the ſaid King of Denmark our " dear Unckle, to enable him to keep the Field, that " our Enemies be not Maſters of all on the ſudden. " You are further to take notice, how both we and " the whole State ſtand bound in Honour and Con- " ſcience to ſupply the preſent Neceſſity of the King " of Denmark: For this Quarrel is more nearly ours, " the recovery of the ancient Inheritance of our dear " Siſter and her Children. The King of Denmark " ſtands not ſo near in Blood unto her as we do: " yet for her and our ſakes that brave and valiant " King hath adventur'd into the Field; and in that " Engagement hath not only hazarded his Perſon, " but as things go now, it may turn to ſome danger " to his own Kingdom and Poſterity, ſhould he not " receive Aid and Succour from us without delay: " which ſhould it happen (as God forbid) will be " one of the greateſt Diſhonours that ever this King- " dom was ſtained withall. Nor is Danger and Diſ- " honour all the Miſchief that is like to follow this " Diſaſter: For if it be not preſently releived, the " Cauſe of Religion is not only likely to ſuffer by it " in ſome one part (as it hath already in a fearful " manner in the Palatinate) but in all places where " it hath gotten any footing: So that if we Supply " not preſently our Allies and Confederates in this " Caſe, it is like to prove the Extirpation of true " Religion, and the Replanting of Romiſh Superſti- " tion in all the neighbouring Parts of Chriſtendom. " And the Coldneſs of this State ſhall ſuffer in all " Places as the Betrayer of that Religion elſewhere, " which it profeſſeth and honoureth at home, which " will be an Imputation never to be waſhed off: " And God forbid this State ſhould ſuffer under " it.

" Neither may you forget rightly to inform the " People committed to your charge, that this War " which now grows full of Danger, was not enter'd " upon raſhly and without Advice, but you are to " acquaint them that all former Treaties by a peace- " ble way were in the latter end of our dear Father " of ever bleſſed Memory diſſolved as fruitleſs and " unfit to be longer held on Foot; and this by the " Counſel of both Houſes of Parliament then Sitting: " So thoſe two great and honourable Bodies of " Peers and People repreſented in Parliament, led " on this Counſel and Courſe to a War with Spain: " To effect this they deſired our Aid and Aſſiſtance, " and uſed us to work our ſaid dear Father to en- " tertain this Courſe. This, upon their Perſwaſi- " ons and Promiſes of all Aſſiſtance and Supply, we " readily undertook and effected, and cannot now " be left in that Buſineſs but with the Sin and Shame " of all Men: Sin, becauſe Aid and Supply for the 1626. " Defence of the Kingdom, and the like Affairs of " State; eſpecially ſuch as are adviſed and aſſumed " by Parliamentary Council, are due to the King " from his People, by all Law both of God and Men: " And Shame if they forſake the King while he pur- " ſues their own Counſel juſt and honourable; and " which could not under God but have been as ſuc- " ceſsful, if it had been followed and ſupplied in " time, as we deſired and laboured for.

" One thing there is which proves a great hin- " drance of this State, and not continu'd among the " People without great Offence againſt God, Detri- " ment both to Church and State, and our great " Diſſervice in this and all other Buſineſs. It is " Breach of Unity which is grown too great and com- " mon amongſt all ſorts of Men. The danger of " this goes far; for in all States it hath made way " for Enemies to enter. We have by all means en- " deavour'd Union, and require of you to Preach " it, and Charity the Mother of it, frequently in " the Ears of the People. We know their Loyal " Hearts, and therefore wonder the more what ſhould " cauſe diſtracted Affections. If you call upon them " (which is your Duty) we doubt not, but that God " will bleſs them with that Love to himſelf, to his " Church, and their own Preſervation, which alone " will be able to bind up the Scatterings of divided " Affections into Strength. To this end you are to " lay before them what Miſeries home Diviſions " have brought upon this and many other King- " doms; and to Exhort all Men to embrace it in " time. The Danger it ſelf, beſides all other Chri- " ſtian and Prudent Motives, is of force enough " (where it is duly conſidered) to make Men join " in all Amity againſt a common Enemy, a great " and growing Enemy; and to do it in time, be- " fore any ſecret and cunning working of his " may uſe one part in a Diviſion to weaken the " other.

" And in the laſt place (but firſt and laſt and all " times to be inſiſted on) you are to call upon God " your ſelves, and to excite the People to join with " you in humble and hearty Prayers unto God, that " he would be pleaſed now, after long Affliction of " his dear People and Children, to look in Mercy " both upon them and us; and in particular for " the Safety of the King of Denmark and that Army " which is left him; that God would Bleſs and Prof- " per him againſt his and our Enemies. Thus you " are to ſtrengthen the Hearts and Hopes of our " Loyal Subjects and People in and upon God: " And whereas the greateſt Confidence Men have in " God ariſeth not only from his Promiſes, but from " their Experience likewiſe of his Goodneſs, you " muſt not fail often to recall to the Memory of the " People with Thankfulneſs, the late great Expe- " rience we have had of his Goodneſs towards us: " For there great and uſual Judgments, which he darts " upon Diſobedient and Unthankful People, are Pe- " ſtilence, Famine and the Sword. The Peſtilence did " never rage more in this Kingdom than of late; " and God was graciouſly pleaſed in Mercy to hear " the Prayers which were made unto him; and the " ceaſing of the Judgment was little leſs than a Mi- " racle. The Famine threatned us this preſent Year; " and it muſt have followed had God rained down " his Anger a little longer upon the Fruits of the " Earth: But upon our Prayers he ſtaid that Judg- " ment, and ſent us a bleſſed Seaſon, and a moſt " plentiful Harveſt. The Sword is the thing which " we are now to look to; and you muſt call the " People to their Prayers again againſt that Enemy, " that God would be pleaſed to ſend the like deli- " verance from this Judgment alſo; that in the ſame " Mercy he will vouchſafe to ſtrengthen the Hands " of his People; that he will ſharpen their Sword, " but dull and turn the Edge of that which is in our " Enemies Hands; that ſo while ſome fight others " may pray for the Bleſſing. And you are to be " careful, that you fail not to direct and hearten our " loving People in this and all other neceſſary Ser- 1626. " vices, both of God, his Church and Us: that we " may have the comfort of our Peoples Service; the " State ſafety; the Church Religion, and the Peo- " ple the enjoying of all ſuch Bleſſings as follow " theſe. And we end with doubling this Care upon " you, and all under you in their ſeveral Places.

Given at our Palace at Weſtminſter, in the Se- cond Year of our Reign, Sept. 21. 1626.

The exe- cuting of theſe In- ſtructions.

Theſe Inſtructions were ſent to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, willing and requiring each of them to ſee the ſaid Inſtructions publiſhed and diſperſed in the ſeveral Dioceſes of their reſpective Province; who accordingly ſent their Orders to every one of their Suffragans to ſee them made known to the worthy Preachers and Miniſters in their Dioceſs, and ſo far as their Lordſhips might in their own Perſons to put theſe things in execution, and to call upon the Clergy under them, in their Preachings and private Conferences to ſtir up all ſorts of People to expreſs their Zeal to God, their Duty to the King, and their Love both to their Country and to one another; that all Good and Chriſtian-like Courſe might be taken for the Preſervation of true Religion, both in this Land and throughout all Chriſtendom.

Theſe Inſtructions though Modeſt and Pious, had not the deſired Effect of quieting the Minds of the People, who generally look'd upon them as a Stratagem of State to promote the raiſing of Money without a Parliament: The leaſt Attempts of that kind will be alway odious to the Engliſh People.

Bp. Laud made Dean of the Cha- pel.

Reforms one great Abuſe.

However, this piece of Service recommended Biſhop Laud more and more to the Favour of the King and Duke: And upon the Death of Dr. Lancelot Andrews, Biſhop of Wincheſter and Dean of his Majeſty's Chapel Royal, on Sept. 22. Laud, now Biſhop of Bath and Wells, was admitted to the Deanery of the Chapel on October 6. in which Office he prevailed with his Royal Maſter to break one very ill Cuſtom that had obtained at Court, ſince the firſt entrance of King James. The Cuſtom was, that at what part ſoever of the Publick Prayers the King came into his Cloſet (which looked into the Chapel) the Divine Service then depending was preſently cut off, and an Anthem ſung, to make immediate way for the Sermon. This had an appearance of Profaneſs, or Contempt of the Liturgy: And therefore this new Dean did very honourably repreſent the Scandal of it to the King; who piouſly comply'd with a Redreſs of it. Biſhop Laud enters the Matter thus in his own Diary: November 14. or thereabout, taking occaſion from the abrupt both Beginning and Ending of Publick Prayer on the 5*th of* November, I deſired his Majeſty King Charles, that he would pleaſe to be preſent at Prayers as well as Sermon every Sunday; and that at whatſoever part of the Prayers he came, the Prieſt then officiating might proceed to the End of the Prayers. The moſt Religious King not only aſſented to this Requeſt, but alſo gave me Thanks. This had not before been done from the beginning of King James his Reign to this Day: Now Thanks be to God it obtaineth.

The Inſo- lence of the Papiſts in Ireland.

The fears of Popery in England were unhappily augmented by the confidence of the Papiſts in Ireland, who were now driving a Bargain for a Toleration, and offered the Terms of maintaining for the King's Service Five hundred Horſe and Five thouſand Foot. To conſider of this Propoſal a great Aſſembly of the whole Nation, both Papiſts and Proteſtants, was called by the then Lord Deputy Falkland to the Hall of the Caſtle of Dublin. The Iriſh Biſhops upon Invitation of the Lord Primate Uſher met firſt at his Houſe; and he and they unanimouſly drew up and ſubſcribed a Proteſtation againſt the Tolerating Popery in this Form:

Archbiſhops and Biſhops in Ireland proteſt againſt any Toleration of Popery.

"THE Religion of the Papiſts is Superſtitious and Idolatrous; their Faith and Doctrine Erroneous and Heretical; their Church in reſpect of both Apoſtatical. To give them therefore a Toleration, or to conſent that they may freely exerciſe their Religion, and profeſs their Faith and Doctrine is a grievous Sin, and that in two reſpects.

1. "It is to make our ſelves acceſſary not only to their Superſtitions, Idolatries and Hereſies, and in a Word to all the Abominations of Popery, but alſo (which is a Conſequent of the former) to the Perdition of the Seduced People which periſh in the Deluge of the Catholick Apoſtacy.

2. "To grant them Toleration in reſpect of any Money to be given, or Contribution to be made by them, is to ſet Religion to Sale, and with it the Souls of the People, whom Chriſt our Saviour hath redeemed with his moſt precious Blood. And as it is a great Sin, ſo alſo a Matter of moſt dangerous Conſequence: the Conſideration whereof we commend to the Wiſe and Judicious; beſeeching the God of Truth to make them who are in Authority Zealous of God's Glory, and of the Advancement of true Religion: Zealous, Reſolute, and Couragious againſt all Popery, Superſtition and Idolatry. Amen.

This bold and ſeaſonable Declaration, drawn up toward the end of 1626. was publiſhed at Chriſt Church, before the Lord Deputy and Council, by one of the Subſcribers Dr. George Downham Biſhop of Derry, in the midſt of his Sermon; wherein he ſpoke much againſt Subordinating Religion to Secular Deſigns, and Mens Proſtituting their Conſcience to wordly Reſpects, and ſetting their Souls to Sale for the Gain of earthly Matters, &c. On the next Sunday the Lord Primate preach'd before the ſame Auditory: The Text was 1 John 5. 15. Love not the World, &c. wherein he made a like Application againſt ſelling Toleration to the Papiſts: Rebuking thoſe Who for worldly Ends, like Judas, would ſell their very Saviour for pieces of Silver. This Conſcience and Courage of the Biſhops did prevent the open Purchaſe of a Toleration of Popery, and put the Government upon finding out another way to maintain Forces for the Defence of that Kingdom.

1627. 3 Car. I.

And now to proſecute the Series of Civil Affairs in the Third of Charles I. 1627. The King engaged in an unſeaſonable War with France, made his Subjects more indifferent in it, by leaving the whole Management to his Favourite the Duke of Buckingham; who obtained a large Commiſſion to be Admiral of the Fleet, and Commander General of all the Land Forces; and to Conduct and Employ them according to ſuch private Inſtructions as he ſhould receive from his Majeſty; and to advance to the Order of Knighthood ſuch Perſons employ'd in the Fleet and Army, as he in his Diſcretion ſhould think fit.

French War committed to the Duke Buckingham.

Who goes with the Fleet.

With theſe full Powers the Duke ſet Sail from Portſmouth on June 27. with a Fleet conſiſting of One hundred Sail of Ships, of which Ten only were the Kings Men of War, and 6 or 7000 Land Soldiers.

To relieve Rochel.

Toward the latter end of July he appeared before the Town of Rochel, and ſent a Meſſage to them to join with him in Relief of the oppreſſed Proteſtants in France. But the Rochellers who were ſo importunate for the coming of the Engliſh, were now afraid of their Appearance, and ſhut their Gates againſt them. Upon this Surprize the Duke ſent Sir William Beecher on Shoar, accompanied by the Duke of Sobiez and commiſſioned with a Letter of Credence from his Majeſty of Great Britain. With ſome difficulty they were admitted into the Town, and the Magiſtrates for their more ſolemn Reception called an Aſſemby, in which Sir William Beecher ſpoke to this Effect: 1627.

The Rochellers now afraid of the Engliſh.

Sir Will. Beecher's Speech to them.

"That the Duke of Buckingham was come with a great Fleet and Army to their Aſſiſtance, which his Royal Maſter had ſent out of a fellow-feeling of their Sufferings, to require from the King of France a performance of the late Articles of Peace, made by the King of England's Mediation on behalf of the Proteſtants in France. Declaring, that if they ſhould now refuſe to accept the deliverance offered to them, he muſt proteſt before God and Man, in the Name of the King his Maſter, that his ſaid Maſter was fully cleared of his Engagements upon Honour and Conſcience for their Relief.

This Declaration was ſeconded by the earneſt Sollicitations of their Friend and Country-man the Duke of Sobiez: But the Magiſtrates and chief Inhabitants were poſſeſſed with ſuch a fear of the King of France his Army then upon a March againſt them; and were many of them ſo governed by a Court-Party in the Town, that they dar'd give no better Anſwer than this of Suſpence and Forbearance: "That they did render all humble and hearty Thanks to his Majeſty of Great Britain for the Care he had of them; and to the Duke for his Forwardneſs and Readineſs to do his beſt Service for their Good. "But they were bound by Oath of Union to do nothing without the common Conſent of the reſt of their Proteſtant Brethren in France. And therefore they muſt pray the King of Great Britain to excuſe them, in deferring the Conjunction of their Forces till they had ſent to the reſt of the Proteſtant Towns, who were of the Union with them. "And in the mean time their Prayers and Wiſhes ſhould be for the happy Progreſs of ſuch Actions as the Fleet and Army ſhould undertake.

Their Anſwer.

Before the Duke of Sobiez went from the Engliſh Fleet into the Town, the Duke of Buckingham communicated his Deſign to him, to land his Army in the Iſle of Oleran near to Rochel; which Sobiez well approved as feaſible and proper: the French Forces in that Iſland being few, and the Forts weakly manned and victualled: Diſſuading him from any Thoughts of landing upon the Iſle of Rhee; becauſe it was farther diſtant from Rochel, and furniſhed with a conſiderable Force of Horſe and Foot, with a Citadel well fortified, and other advantages of repelling Invaders and defending it ſelf.

Buckingham intends a Deſcent on Oleran.

But the Admiral not ſtaying for the return of Sobiez from Rochel, alters his Reſolution, and directs his Courſe to the Iſle of Rhee; and upon July 30. makes near the Shoar. The next Day he ordered a Squadron of Twelve Ships to Ly before the Mouth of Port-Brelen, falling down with the reſt of the Fleet to the Fort de la Pree, againſt which they played with their Canon, ſtill making their Approaches nearer to the Land. Toiras, Governour of the Iſle, being ſufficiently Alarm'd, marched out from the Citadel of St. Martin with all the Strength he could draw together to prevent the Engliſh from landing: But under the Cover of their own Canon, the braveſt of the Engliſh Officers, Sir John Burroughs, Sir Alexander Bret, Sir Charles Rich (with the French Proteſtant Monſieur St. Blanchard) went firſt a Shore, ſoon followed and ſupported by Twelve hundred Men. The Enemy being a thouſand Horſe and Foot beſides Voluntiers, immediately advanc'd up to the Engliſh and began a very warm Encounter, wherein were ſlain Sir William Heyden and ſome hundreds of the Engliſh, with Monſieur Blanchard a Proteſtant Agent from the Duke of Rhoan. On the French ſide the Governour's Brother, the Baron of Chuntal, and ſome few others. By degrees the Engliſh forced their way, made the Enemy retreat, and gained room for 1627. their whole Army to land. The Governour retir'd with his wounded Men to the Citadel of St. Martins, and if the Engliſh had immediately purſued, to all appearance they had been eaſily Maſters of that Place, and of the whole Iſle. The Fort la Pree near the Landing-place, and meanly provided of Men and Victuals, was alſo ſlighted or neglected, when the eaſie taking of it would have beſt prevented the landing of French Recruits, and was moſt proper to ſecure a Retreat for the Engliſh. But five Days being oddly ſpent before the Engliſh Army moved, gave Toiras opportunity to repleniſh and fortifie his Citadel of St. Martins, and to ſend away to Court for Supplies. 'Tis certain the Court were in a great Aſtoniſhment upon this Engliſh Invaſion; the King fell Sick, as if by Impreſſion of the ill News, and ſent his Reſolution to give the Proteſtants honourable Terms, if they would not join with the Engliſh; inviting the Head of the Party, the Duke of Rhoan, with great offers of Money and Honour, to ſecure him from falling in with this great Juncture of Deliverance to his oppreſſed Brethren.

French K. affrighted.

The Duke proceeds. After an ill-tim'd Delay the Duke of Buckingham debark'd all his Land Forces, and ſent back Sobiez and Sir William Beecher to Rochel to ſollicite for ſome Recruits; who by their Intereſt ſoon return'd with five hundred Foot. Upon this the Duke in two Days March came with his Army before St. Martins, and publiſhed a Manifeſto, declaring, "His Royal Ma-

Takes the Town of St. Martin. Upon Approach of the Duke the French quitted the Town of St. Martins, and retir'd into the Citadel, which the Duke preſently block'd up; and raiſing Entrenchments and Batteries, he fired upon the Fort for two Months together, when he might have ſtarv'd it in leſs time, if he had remember'd to ſtop up a Well within his Trenches, from which the Enemy had their ſecret Draught of Water, during the whole time of the Siege.

Death of Sir John Burroughs. Before this place the Engliſh endured much fatigue and loſs; and more eſpecially ſuffered in the Death of that excellent Soldier Sir John Burroughs, who was ſlain on Sept. 20. with a Muſquet ſhot from the Citadel, while he was viewing of the Engliſh Works: His Body was brought over and honourably Interr'd at Weſtminſter.

The Duke his Expedition cenſur'd. This Expedition proving ſo tedious and ineffectual, raiſed many Diſcontents in England. Some murmured that the Admiral had broke his Word with Duk Sobiez, and landed in a wrong Place: Others ſaid his landing was rather a Feint than a real hearty Attempt; for he did not march quick enough after landing, nor did he take the Fort la Pree: Nor was he now in earneſt beſieging St. Martins; for many Preſents and Complements had continually paſſed between him and the Governour. And in ſhort, the generality of the People of England diſliked a War not ſupported by a Parliament; and ſpoke freely for a new Parliament to be called, and for ſome Miniſters to be queſtioned in it.

King ſends Recruits. The King under theſe Perplexities reſolved to ſend a Squadron with Recruits of Men, Ammunition and Proviſion to the Army at Rhee, and commands the Preſs of certain Companies of Marines, to Rendevouz at Plimouth, and thence to be imbark'd for the ſaid Service: Appointing them at firſt to be under the Command of Charles Lord Viſcount Wilmot, but ſoon after Commiſſioning the Earl of Holland to take them into his Charge, Tranſport and Conduct them to the Iſle of Rhee, and there deliver them to the Duke of Buckingham.

Which comes to late. Some Recruits, being about Sixteen hundred Engliſh and Iriſh, arrived at Rhee about the end of September; before which time the French had got into the Harbour, and reliev'd the Citadel with Proviſions in ſight of our Navy and Army. The Governour Toiras affrighted at the freſh Recruits of the Engliſh, was in great Trouble how to ſend Intelligence to the French Court. At laſt one Sandgrein ventur'd out, and eſcaping the Guards got ſafe to the King: And for fear of his Miſcarriage Toiras prevail'd with three of his Gariſon to ſwim aſhore to the main Continent: One of the three got ſafe to Land and deliver'd the Meſſage. 1627. Sandgrein.

French K. advances with an Army. The King of France at this alarm draws down his Army towards Rochel, forming as it were a Blockade as if he deſigned the taking of that Town: When the more immediate Intention was by that means to land Forces upon the Iſland of Rhee, and to put in Proviſions into the beſieged Citadel of St. Martins. And this Deſign was effected, ſeveral little Veſſels getting in with a Supply ſufficient to ſupport the Gariſon, and to encourage them to a longer Defence.

Rochellers at laſt declare for the Engl. The Rochellers at this Juncture put forth a Manifeſto and declared for England; and the Duke of Rhoan gave Commiſſions to raiſe Forces to aſſiſt the Engliſh, in preſervation of the Edict of Peace lately granted and ſince violated by the King of France. On the other hand, the King makes publick Declaration, that he will on his part obſerve the ſaid Edict of Peace; and proclaims the Dukes of Rhoan and Sobiez to be Traitors, and offers Reward for the killing of them. The Reformed were very Unfortunate (if not unjuſt) in theſe Meaſures: If they had heartily received the Engliſh at their firſt Arrival, or had continued to reject the joining with them, they might have either way averted their impending Ruin.

French Fleet. But by this time the French had got a great Supply of Shipping from the Spaiard for their Aſſiſtance, which with their own made up above a hundred Sail, ſuperiour to the Engliſh Navy, with which however they declined Engaging, and propoſed nothing more than to get ſuitable Proviſions into the Citadel, and tire out the Beſiegers. To carry on the ſame Deſign, Toiras ſeem'd to enter into a Treaty of Surrender upon honourable Terms: and prevail'd with the Duke for ſafe Conduct to a Meſſenger ſent to the King of France for leave to come off with Honour. The Duke conſents, on condition that an Engliſh Gentleman ſhould go along with the Meſſenger of Toiras, and be ſuffered to paſs through France into England: And ſo they went together to the French Court; but there in open breach of Faith the Engliſh Gentleman was ſecur'd, while the Agent of Toiras did his Buſineſs effectually.

Toiras outwits the Duke.

Toiras carried on the ſham-Treaty, and ſpun out the Time ſo long, that he gained his Point of receiving a conſiderable Relief of Men, Victuals and Ammunition: And then broke off the Treaty in Deriſion, ordering his Men upon the Walls to advance their Pikes with Mutton and Fowl upon the Heads of them, to reproach the Engliſh with their newly obtained Plenty. And they were further animated with News of the French landing more Forces near the Meadow-Caſtle (a place alſo fatally neglected by the Engliſh) againſt whom the Duke ſent out a ſtrong Detachment, leaving his Trenches unguarded; upon which Advantage the Enemy ſally'd out of the Citadel, and got poſſeſſion of the deſerted Trenches; ſo as when the Engliſh after ſome reaſonable Succeſs had forc'd the new Recruits to take refuge under the Canon of the Citadel, and were returning to their own Camp, they were obliged to diſpute the recovery of their Trenches, and loſt many Lives before they could regain them.

The Duke weary. Under theſe Diſcouragements, about the middle of October, the Duke held a Council of War, and thought of a Reſolution to decamp and reimbark for England. He communicated to Sobiez his Reaſons, that the Seaſon was declining, his Army diminiſh'd, his Proviſions conſum'd, and his Officers adviſing him to Retire.

1627. tire. But Sobiez earneſtly diſſuaded the Duke, told him the Relief brought to the Beſieged was not conſiderable; the Earl of Holland's Fleet was coming with Supplies; the Retreat would draw after it the loſs of Rochel, and bring an irreparable Diſhonour to the King of England, in making ſo great an Enterprize to ſo little purpoſe.

Yet continues the Siege. Upon this the Duke continued the Siege, and ſoon after reſolv'd to Storm the Citadel and Works: Accordingly on Novem. 6. a general Aſſault was made; but after the loſs of many Men, the Fort was found to be Inacceſſible.

The Duke returns inglorious. This Repulſe, with the News of more Forces of the French continually pour'd into the Iſland, inclin'd the Duke to raiſe the Siege and return home. So upon Novem. 8. early in the Morning, the Drums beat, and the Army prepared for a March. Upon their firſt Motions of Retreat, the Enemy appear'd equal in Foot, and far ſtronger in Horſe, ready to fall upon the Engliſh Rear. The Duke ſeveral times drew up the Army in their March, and made a ſtand to offer Battle: But the wary French declin'd an open Fight, having projected a greater Advantage upon leſs hazard. For when the Engliſh in their Retreating had enter'd a narrow Cauſey, having on each Hand Salt-Pits and deep Ditches (wherein the Engliſh had neglected to raiſe a Fort at the entry, and another at the end of it near the Bridge, which if done might have ſecured their Retreat) the French upon this Advantage fell with great Fury upon the Engliſh Horſe, who preſs'd their Foot into great diſorder, and made the Croud ſo tumultuous upon the Bridge that many of the Engliſh were drowned in the River, beſides many that fell into the Salt-Pits, and many falling by the Sword: Yet the Engliſh who had paſſed the Bridge with their true Native Courage rallied again, and drew up to fight their purſuing Enemy, who being afraid of any equal Terms barely repaſs'd the Bridge, which the Engliſh guarded with a ſelect Party all Day, and burnt it down at Night; and without further Attack from the French were put on board the next Day. The Engliſh loſt about 50 Officers, near 2000 common Soldiers, Priſoners of Note 35, and 44 Colours hung up as Trophies in the Church of Noſtre Dame in Paris. The King of France in a bravery diſmiſt the Priſoners, as a kind Token to his Siſter the Queen of England: And when the Lord Montjoy offered a round Sum for his Ranſom, the King told him, his Redemption ſhould be only two couple of Engliſh Hounds. If my Lord look'd on this as a Generoſity of the King, 'tis certain others took it as a ſlight upon his Lordſhip, who had gained more Diſhonour in the Retreat than any other Commander; for having his Troops in the Rear charged by the French, he turn'd and broke in upon the Engliſh Foot, and made ſo much Confuſion, that Sir Charles Rich is reported to have cry'd out, Kill him! Kill him! though he be my Brother.

Retreat dangerous

Loſs of the Engliſh.

When the Duke had thus ſhipp'd his Army on November 9. he ſent in a civil Promiſe to the Rochellers, that he would come again to their Relief; and preſently after ſet Sail for England, and met the Earl of Holland as he was ſetting out from Plimouth, who excuſed his Delay upon theſe Pretences; that when he was firſt ready to go on Board at Plimouth, the Ships with Proviſion were not come out of Chatham; and when the Proviſions were come, time was ſpent before he could get them to a Rendevouz; and when all things were fix'd for Sailing the Winds proved contrary. The Duke of Buckingham himſelf had the greater need of Apologies, going out a hated Favourite, and returning an unfortunate General. All he had to plead was, his acting by Advice of a Council of War, and his want of timely Supplies. The King received him with full Grace and Affection, and only told him, He was glad not to find the Loſs ſo great as Sir Sackvil Crow had repreſented in a Letter to him. But the King's Indulgence made the popular Reſentments greater: Tongues and Pens were ſharpen'd upon this inglorious Expedition; and the Pulpit it ſelf could not be reſtrain'd from ſome Reflections on it: Dr. Moor Prebendary of Wincheſter, a Man of Wit, took occaſion to cite in his Sermon the ſaying of Auguſtus, Quintili Vare redde Legiones, which periſh'd (ſays he) by the Hiſtorian's Account, propter inſcitiam & temeritatem Ducis, dwelling on the Word Ducis with ſuch a particular Emphaſis, as made moſt of the Auditors underſtand the Alluſion.

Apologies of the Duke.

Reflections on him.

The King of France reſolved now upon a formidable Siege of Rochel, and according to the Advice of Montluc, in the Year 1573. he determined to reduce the Town by Famine. In order to which, he drew an entire Circumvallation toward the Continent, with three Forts and many Redoubts, precluding all hopes of Relief by Land; and by Sea the great Miniſter Cardinal Richlieu (who had the utmoſt Zeal for extirpating the Proteſtants) projected the making of a Mole or vaſt Barricado croſs the Channel, about fourteen hundred Yards in length, leaving a ſmall Space in the middle for the flux and reflux of the Sea, and cutting off all other manner of Conveyance.

French K. reſolves now to take Rochel.

Under this ſad Proſpect the Rochellers ſent over the Duke of Sobiez and other Deputies to lay before the King and Council their Petition and Remonſtrance, to this effect: "They firſt thank his Majeſty for the "great Aſſiſtance and Comfort they had receiv'd "by the Fleet ſent in July laſt. Then they take "notice of Application made to the King of Den-"mark to propouud a Peace between the Crowns of "England and France: and if ſuch a Treaty do pro-"ceed, they humbly pray that his Majeſty would "inſiſt upon the Capitulation made between the "French King and the Reformed Churches; which "they on their part had kept inviolable, till they "ſaw the Conditions on the other ſide entirely broke. "They repreſent that they are now to be ſhut up by "Land and Sea, and muſt fall into inevitable Ruin "without ſpeedy Succour: They therefore beſeech "his Majeſty with all poſſible Diligence to ſend "them Supplies, and once more to protect them "with his Royal Navy, to prevent the blocking up "their Harbour, They laſtly entreat his Majeſty "and the Lords of the Council, to have ſo much "pity on their indigent Condition, as to permit a "general Collection to be made for them through "England and Ireland. Concluding with their Re-"ſolutions to hold out a Siege, depending on a ſea-"ſonable Relief from England, being aſſured there-"of by the Duke of Buckingham at his departure, "that he would once more come in Perſon to their "Aſſiſtance.

The Rochellers ſend to the King of Engl.

But alas! the Anſwer could be only good Words: For indeed the Rochellers were not reduc'd to much greater Neceſſities by their Prince, than our King was by his People and his exigent Affairs: Univerſal Diſcontents and repeated Complaints of Grievance. Many Gentlemen ſtood committed for refuſing to comply with the Demands of Loan, and being brought before the Council had been re-demanded to ſeveral Priſons. Sir John Elliot, a Priſoner in the Gate-houſe, had his Petition for Diſcharge rejected. Sir Peter Hayman upon refuſing Compliance to the Loan, was commanded by the Council to go upon his Majeſty's Service in the Palatinate, and did accordingly go. Many of the like Sufferers upon return of a Habeas Corpus were denied Bail. Archbiſhop Abbot in much Favour with the People and the moderate Clergy, was confin'd to a remote Country Houſe, and ſoon after Sequeſtred from his Office and Juriſdiction, given by Commiſſion to thoſe Biſhops whom he reputed his Enemies. Biſhop Williams another Popular Prelate ſuffered many Hardſhips from the Court. The Citizens murmur'd againſt a viſible Decay of Trade, and againſt an arbitrary Impoſt upon ſome Commodities. The Merchants were diſcouraged from building more Ships, when ſo many had been preſſed for the King's Service and not paid. The Mariners came in Multitudes to the Court at White-hall clamouring for

The King able to aſſiſt him.

Great Diſcontents in City and Country.

1627. for their Pay in great Disorder and Confusion. And the Land Forces were kept in Pay without their former Wages.

Advice of Sir Robert Cotton.

In this unhappy state of Affairs, Sir Robert Cotton the judicious Antiquary, was called before the King and Council to deliver his Opinion in point of History and Law, upon the present Juncture of Affairs; which he did to this effect: "That the House of "Austria, from the time of Charles V. had been grasping at a universal Monarchy, which had been Wise and Honest. "all along the Honour and Interest of England to "oppose: And those English Princes who had most "opposed it, had alway the Affections and Hearts "of their People. That this was the Business of "the present Reign, and the Desire of the English "Nation. That to carry on this Design the King "must have Money; and no way to get Money with "Speed, Assurance, and Satisfaction, but by Grant "of Parliament. No way to dispose a Parliament "to suitable Grants but by removing all Jealousies, "especially those relating to Religion and Liberties. "And nothing more plausible than for the Duke of "Buckingham to be the first Adviser of calling such "a Parliament.

Resolution to call a Parliament.

Upon these and such-like Considerations represented to the King, a Resolution was taken at the Council Table on January 29. for a Parliament to meet on the 17th of March following. And to prepare the way, Warrants were sent to all Parts to release the Imprison'd Gentry for the Matter of Loan; according to a precedent Order of Council, by which there were set at Liberty 19 Knights, 13 Esquires, and 4 Gentlemen, who had remained under Confinement in several Counties: 3 Knights, 1 Esquire, and 4 Londoners all Prisoners in the Fleet. 2 Knights, 1 Esq; and 3 Londoners in the Gate-House: Some in the Marshalsea; others in the New-Prison, and several in the Custody of Messengers. One Effect of their Liberty was this, that as fast as the Writs came down to the Counties and Boroughs, those Gentlemen who had thus suffer'd were most in the Peoples Eye to be elected Members, as the fittest to assert their Countries Liberties and Rights. The like gracious Orders were issued from the Council to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, to use great moderation in demanding the Loan from those Citizens who deferred a Compliance with it. And among other Arts of softning, Archbishop Abbot, Bishop Williams, and the Lord Bristol, who had lain under peculiar Hardships, had by express Direction their Writs sent to them to sit in the House of Peers this ensuing Parliament.

Methods to soften the People.

Some unhappy steps.

These ways of Wisdom and Justice could not fail of their natural Effects of Peace and Obedience in the People: But at the same time some unhappy Measures were taken, that serv'd only to renew the late Jealousies and Fears. For on the Day after the Parliament Writs were tested, the King granted a Privy Seal, on January 30. to Philip Burlemach, a Dutch Merchant, to receive Thirty thousand Pounds from the Treasury, to be returned into the Low Countries to Sir William Balfour and John Dalbier, for the raising of a thousand German Horse, with Arms for Horse and Foot, to be sent into England by February 28. which though perhaps a necessary Preparation for his Majesty's Foreign Engagements; yet People suspected it the design of a Standing Army: And the more so, because the King near the same time granted a Commission to twenty three Lords and others, to raise Money by Impositions in the nature of Excise. And the Levying of Ship-Money upon the several Counties was then under Debate in the Council; as if Methods were already concerted to live without Parliaments, if the approaching Parliament should rise without giving Money.

Parliament meets.

The Parliament being assembled on Monday the seventeenth of March, the King began with this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen, 1627.

King's Speech.

"THese Times are for Action: Wherefore for Ex- "amples sake, I mean not to spend much "Time in Words; expecting accordingly that your "(as I hope) good Resolutions will be speedy, not "spending Time unnecessarily, or (that I may better say) dangerously. For tedious Consultations at "this Conjuncture of Time are as hurtful as ill Resolutions.

"I am sure you now expect from me, both to "know the Cause of your Meeting and what to Resolve on: Yet, I think, there is none here but "knows, that common Danger is the Cause of this "Parliament; and that Supply at this time is the "chief End of it: So that I need but point to you "what to do. I will use but few Perswasions: For "if to maintain your own Advices, and as now the "Case stands for the following thereof, the true "Religion, Laws and Liberties of this State, and "the just Defence of our true Friends and Allies be "not sufficient, then no Eloquence of Men or Angels will prevail.

"Only let me remember you, that my Duty most "of all, and every one of yours according to his "Degree, is to seek the Maintenance of this Church "and Common-wealth: And certainly there never "was a Time, in which this Duty was more necessarily requir'd than now.

"I therefore judging a Parliament to be the Ancient, Speediest and Best Way, in this Time of "common Danger, to give such Supply as to secure "our selves, and to save our Friends from imminent "Ruin have called you together: Every Man now "must do according to his Conscience. Wherefore "if you (as God forbid) should not do your Duties, "in contributing what the State at this time needs, "I must in discharge of my Conscience use those other means which God hath put into my Hands, "to save that which the Follies of particular Men "may otherwise hazard to lose.

"Take not this as a Threatning, for I scorn to "threaten any but my Equals, but an Admonition "from him, that both out of Nature and Duty hath "most Care of your Preservations and Prosperities. "And though I thus speak, I hope that your Demeanours at this Time will be such, as shall not "only make me approve your former Counsels, but "lay on me such Obligations, as shall tie me by "way of Thankfulness to meet often with you. For "be assur'd, that nothing can be more pleasing to "me than to keep a good Correspondence with "you.

"I will only add one thing more, and then leave "my Lord Keeper to make a short Paraphrase upon "the Text I have deliver'd you; which is, To remember a thing, to the end we may forget it.

"You may imagine, that I came here with a "doubt of Success of what I desire, remembring "the Distractions of the last Meeting. But I assure you, that I shall very easily and gladly forget and forgive what is past, so that you will at "this present Time leave the former ways of Distractions, and follow the Counsel lately given "you, To maintain the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace.

Remarks on this Speech.

This Speech was thought to have a greater Air of Majesty and Sincerity than of Prudence and Affection. A Parliament call'd for Supply gives more for Asking than for Demanding. When the King referred himself to their contributing what the State needed, he might have omitted the mention of any other Means put into his Hands. And whatever he himself could save, he might forbear to prejudge the losing by the Follies of particular Men. It is pity any Expressions should have wanted an Apology; not to take them as a Threatning, and the Reason given is somewhat too big: I scorn to threaten any but my Equals.

The

1627. The Lord Keeper ſeconded his Majeſty to this effect:

L.Keeper's Speech. " YOU are here to Conſult and Conclude of weighty and urgent Buſineſs. The Pope and " Houſe of Auſtria combine to obtain, one a Spiri- " tual, the other a Temporal Monarchy. France is " ſway'd by a Popiſh Faction, that has broke the Ar- " ticles of Agreement between the King and his Pro- " teſtant Subjects. The Emperor, France and Spain " are in open War againſt Us. The King of Den- " mark is diſtreſſed, the King of Sweden diverted, " and the Low-Country Men diſabled to give Aſſi- " ſtance.

" For this Cauſe the King hath called you toge- " ther, to ſtrengthen our ſelves at Home, and en- " courage our Allies Abroad.

" The great Preparation muſt be Treaſure; for " the giving of which I might preſs many Reaſons: " 1. For his Majeſty's ſake who requires it: to " whom ye owe Duty by the Law of God, the " Law of Nature, and your own Allegiance. 2. " For the Cauſe-ſake, the Charity, Honour and In- " tereſt of aſſiſting our diſtreſſed Friends Abroad. " Laſtly, In Reſpect of the manner of his Majeſty's " Demand, which is in Parliament, the way that " hath ever beſt pleaſed the Subjects of England. — " This way his Majeſty hath choſen, not as the on- " ly way, but as the fitteſt. —— If this be de- " ferred, Neceſſity and the Sword of the Enemy " make way to the others. —— Reſolve of your " Supplies, that they may be timely and ſufficient, " ſerving the Occaſion. Your Counſel, your Aid, " all is but loſt if your Aid be either too little " or too late. And his Majeſty is reſolved, that " his Affairs cannot permit him to expect it over " long.

Sir John Finch Speaker. The Commons choſe Sir John Finch to be their Speaker, who being preſented to the King on Wed- neſday March 19. made a cuſtomary Speech to be excuſed from that Office; but his Choice, as uſually, was by the King approv'd.

Before they entred upon any Debates, there was a bold Letter communicated to the Members, directed To my noble Friends of the Lower-Houſe of Parliament, reciting many Grievances of the State, induſtriouſly diſperſt and commonly called, A Speech without Doors.

Thurſday, March 20. The Houſe ſettled their grand Committees for Religion, Grievances, Courts of Juſtice and Trade, and drew up a Petition to the King for a Faſt; to which the Lords conſented.

The Commons fell upon the Matter of Grievances. Saturday March 22. Publick Grievances were warmly Debated, Billiting of Soldiers, Loans by Benevolences and Privy Seal, Impriſonment of Subjects refuſing to lend, Denial of Releaſe upon Habeas Corpus. The Houſe inclining not to ſupply his Majeſty, till theſe Grievances were redreſt. To which purpoſe many ſmart Speeches were delivered by Sir Francis Seymore, Sir Thomas Wentworth, Sir Edward Cook, Sir Robert Philips, &c. Sir Benjamin Rudyard ſpoke as a Moderator between King and People, and adviſed To truſt the King, and to breed a Truſt in him, by giving him a large Supply according to his Wants, and then proſtrating our Grievances humbly at his Feet. The chief Advocate for the Prerogative was Sir John Cook, Secretary of State, who yet confeſt that Illegal Courſes had been taken, and that a Redreſs muſt be by Laws and Puniſhment. But he reſolved thoſe Courſes into the Law of Neceſſity; and declar'd, that to offer Grievances before a Supply would ſeem a Condition with his Majeſty, a wiſe King jealous of his Honour.

No Supply without Redreſs of Grievances. Monday, Mar. 24. Secretary Cook renew'd the Motion of Supply, as preparatory to the Conſideration of Grievances: Other Members argu'd for preferring the Matter of Grievances, and ſaid They could have no Thanks for giving, till his Majeſty might ſee they had a Right to give.

1628. Tueſday, March 25. Secretary Cook preſented to the Houſe ſome Propoſitions from the King touching Supply; and told them, that as to Aid and Grievances his Majeſty would not ſtand on Precedence in point of Honour. The ſame Committee might conſider both in what Order they pleaſed. Upon which the Houſe reſolved themſelves into a Committee, and made Edward Littleton, Eſq; the Chair-man. They firſt debated the Grievances relating to the Perſon of the Subject: And after many learned Speeches by Mr. Cheſwell, Sir Robert Philips, Sir Edward Cook, Mr. Hackwel, and Mr. Selden, it was Reſolved upon the Queſtion, Nemine Contradicente.

Reſolutions of Liberty and Property. 1. " That no Free-Man ought to be detained or " kept in Priſon, or otherwiſe reſtrained by the " Command of the King or the Privy Council, or " any other, unleſs ſome Cauſe of the Commitment, " Detainer or Reſtraint be expreſſed; for which by " Law he ought to be Committed, Detained or Re- " ſtrain'd.

2. " That the Writ of Habeas Corpus may not be " denied, but ought to be granted to every Man " that is committed or detained in Priſon, or other- " wiſe reſtrained; though it be by Command of the " King, the Privy-Council, or any other, he pray- " ing the ſame.

3. " That if a Free-Man be Committed or De- " tained in Priſon, or otherwiſe Reſtrained by the " Command of the King, the Privy-Council, or " any other, no Cauſe of ſuch Commitment, De- " tainer or Reſtraint being expreſſed; for which " by Law he ought to be Committed, Detained or " Reſtrained: and the ſame be return'd upon a " Habeas Corpus, granted for the ſaid Party, then " he ought to be Deliver'd or Bail'd.

After which the Houſe proceeded to take into Conſideration the Grievances relating to the Property of the Subject in his Goods; and came to this Reſolution, Nemine contradicente.

" That it is the ancient and indubitable Right " of every Free-Man, that he hath a full and ab- " ſolute Property in his Goods and Eſtate: That no " Tax, Tallage, Loan, Benevolence, or other like " Charge, ought to be commanded or levied by the " King, or any of his Miniſters, without common " conſent by Act of Parliament.

Propoſitions from the King. Wedneſday, March 26. the Propoſitions Yeſterday preſented by Secretary Cook from his Majeſty, were now Receiv'd and Read; and were as follow;

1. " To furniſh with Men and Victuals Thirty " Ships to guard the Narrow Seas, and all along " the Coaſts.

2. " To ſet out Ten other Ships for the Relief of " the Town of Rochel.

3. " To ſet out Ten other Ships for preſervation " of the Elbe, the Sound and Baltick Sea.

4. " To levy Arms, Cloath, Victual, Pay and " Tranſport, for an Army of 1000 Horſe and 10000 " Foot for Foreign Service.

5. " To pay and ſupply 6000 more for the Ser- " vice of Denmark.

6. " To ſupply the Forts of the Office of Ord- " nance.

7. " To ſupply the Stores of the Navy.

8. " To build Twenty Ships yearly for the en- " creaſe of the Navy.

9. " To repair the Forts within the Land.

10. " To pay the Arrears of the Office of Ord- " nance.

11. " To pay the Arrears of the Victuallers Office.

12. " To pay the Arrear of the Treaſury of the " Navy.

13. " To pay the Arrears due for the Freight of " divers Merchant Ships imployed in his Majeſty's " Service.

14. " To provide a Magazine for Victuals for " Land and Sea Service.

The

1628. The Debate upon these Propositions was referred to another Day. And the Commons had a Conference with the Lords about a Petition against Recusants prepared in the Upper, and agreed to by the Lower House.

Petition against Popish Recusants.

Monday, March 31. The Petition of both Houses to his Majesty against Popish Recusants was introduc'd by the Lord-Keeper in a short Speech, and then read by him. After Reading, his Majesty spoke thus.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech on this occasion.

" I Do very well approve the Method of your Proceedings in this Parliament; A Jove Principium, hoping that the rest of your Consultations will " succeed the happier. And I like the Preamble of " the Lord-Keeper; otherwise I should have a little " suspected, that you had thought me not so careful " of Religion as I have, and ever shall be, wherein " I am as forward as you can desire. And for the " Petition, I answer, first in general, that I like it " well, and will use these as well as other Means " for the maintenance and propagation of that Religion wherein I have lived, and do resolve to die: " But for the Particulars, you shall receive a more " full Answer hereafter.

" And now I will only add this, that as we pray " to God to help us, so we must help our selves: " For we can have no assurance of his Assistance, if " we do lie in Bed and only Pray without using " other Means. And therefore I must remember " you, that if we do not make Provision speedily, " we shall not be able to put one Ship to Sea this " Year, Verbum sapienti sat est.

King's Answer to the Petition.

After this the Clerk read the first Article of the said Petition, and the Lord-Keeper read his Majesty's Answer unto the same: And so through the whole Eight Articles. To all which his Majesty gave direct and full Satisfaction, concluding That the Mildness that had been used towards those of the Popish Religion, was upon hope that Foreign Princes thereby might be induced to use Moderation towards their Subjects of the Reformed Religion: But not finding that good Effect which was expected, his Majesty resolveth, unless he shall very speedily see better Fruits, to add a further degree of Severity, to that which in this Petition is desired.

Wednesday, April 2. The Propositions sent from the King to the Commons, March 26. were for some time debated, and Speeches on that occasion by Sir Francis Seymour, Sir Nathaniel Rich, Sir John Elliot, Sir Edward Cook, Sir Thomas Wentworth, Sir Henry Martin, who spoke most with some Reflection on the late Managements of War, and seem'd averse to any new Foreign Expeditions. Then the House proceeded to Grievances, and took into Consideration two other Heads of the Liberty of the Subject in his Person, viz. Confinement and Designation to Foreign Imployment; and came to this Resolution.

Further Resolutions upon Liberty and Property.

Resolv'd, " That no Free-Man ought to be Con" fin'd by any Command from the King or Privy" Council, or any other, unless it be by Act of Par" liament, or by other due Course, or Warrant of " Law.

Thursday, April 3. Mr. Secretary Cook brought this Message to the House of Commons from the King.

Message from the King.

" HIS Majesty having understood that some Ru" mours were spread abroad of a sharp Message " yesterday delivered by me; and of some Malici" ous Words that the Duke should speak Yesterday " at the Council Board, he commanded me to tell " you of the Malice of those false Reports; for that " nothing fell from the Duke, or that Board, but " what was for the Good of this Assembly. He " would have you observe the Malice of those Spi" rits that thus put in these Jealousies. Had the " Duke so spoken he should have contradicted him- 1628. " self: For all of Us of the Council can tell, he " was the first Mover and Perswader of this Assem" bly of Parliament to the King: Esteem of the King " according to his Actions, and not these Tales. " His Majesty takes notice of our purpose, that on " Friday we will Resolve upon Supply, which his " Majesty graciously accepts of; and that our free " Gift, without any condition, should testifie to " the World that we will be as far from incroaching " upon his Prerogative, as he will be to incroach " upon our Liberties: And this shall well appear " when we present our Grievances to him, and then " he shall know that we have no Intention to vio" late our Liberties; only let us not present them " with an Asperity of Words. He counts it his " greatest Glory to be a King of Freemen not of " Villains. He thought to have deliver'd this Mes" sage himself, but that he feared it would take us " too much time.

After some Debates on this Message, the House agreed to acknowledge that his Majesty had put a threefold Obligation on them: 1. In giving them Satisfaction. 2. In giving them Assurance (which is a great Law) that he will protect and releive them. 3. In giving them Advice as may befit the Gravity of that Assembly and his own Honour: So they concluded To carry themselves as their Progenitors had before done, who never were mark'd for stepping too far on the King's Prerogative. And then return'd their humble Thanks to his Majesty.

Thanks of the House.

Friday, April 4. Mr. Secretary Cook deliver'd another Gracious Message from the King to assure them of the Enjoyment of their Rights and Liberties. And after some Debate the House came to this unanimous Resolve, That five Subsidies be given to his Majesty: And Mr. Secretary Cook was appointed to acquaint his Majesty with this Resolution.

Five Subsidies granted.

Monday, April 7. Mr. Secretary Cook reported to the House, " The King accepted of the Subsidies, " and was pleased to ask by how many Voices they " were gratned? I said, but by one; his Majesty ask'd " how many were against him? I said, none; for " they were voted by one Voice, and one general " Consent. His Majesty was much affected there" with, and called the Lords in Council, and there " I gave them account what had passed. Besides, it " gave his Majesty no small content, that although " five Subsidies be inferiour to his Wants, yet it is " the greatest Gift that ever was given in Parlia" ment. And now he sees by this he shall have " the Affections of his People, which will be grea" ter to him than all Value. He said, he liked " Parliaments at the first, but since (he knew not " how) he was grown to a distast of them; but " was now where he was before: He loves them, and " shall rejoice to meet with his People often.

Well accepted by the King.

Mr. Secretary further acquainted the House with a Speech of the Duke of Buckingham's, at the Council Table, upon report of the five Subsidies; which was very sweet and popular had it come from any other Person. Sir John Elliot expressed his Dislike, that the Duke's Name should be intermingled with the King's; Contrary to the Custom of our Fathers, and to the Honour of our Times.

Several Members were now appointed to manage a Conference with the Lords, upon the Resolutions of this House relating to the Liberties and Properties of the Subject. Sir Dudley Diggs opened the Conference by way of Introduction. Sir Edward Littleton, of the Inner-Temple, spoke at large upon the Subject of Personal Liberty. Mr. Seldon insisted upon the Precedents in that Matter: And Sir Edward Cook maintained the Argument as to the Rational part of the Law Conference with the Lords upon Liberty and Property.

Tuesday and Wednesday were spent in the Debate about Billeting of Soldiers upon the Subject against Law.

Thursday,

1628. Thurſday, April 10. Mr. Secretary Cook deliver'd this Meſſage from the King, "That his Majeſty de-
A Meſſage from the King. "ſireth this Houſe not to make any Receſs theſe
"Eaſter Holidays, that the World may take notice
"how earneſt his Majeſty and We are for the Pub-
"lick Affairs in Chriſtendom, which by ſuch a Re-
"ceſs would receive Interruption.

This Meſſage was diſpleaſing to ſome Members; Sir Robert Philips ſaid, that in 12 and 18 Jac. upon the like Intimation, the Houſe Reſolv'd, it was in their Power to Adjourn or Sit. Sir Edward Cook declared, The King makes a Prorogation, but this Houſe Adjourns it ſelf. The Matter was referred to a Committee, to conſider the Power of the Houſe to Adjourn it ſelf; to the end, that it being now yielded unto in Obedience to his Majeſty, it might not turn to Prejudice in time to come.

Anſwer of the Commons. Hereupon a Meſſage was ſent to the King, That the Houſe would give all expedition to his Majeſty's Service, notwithſtanding their purpoſe of Receſs. His Majeſty return'd Anſwer, That the Motion had proceeded from himſelf, in regard of his Engagement in the Affairs of Chriſtendom; wiſhed them all Alacrity in their Proceedings, and that there might be no Receſs at all.

Grievances and Supply go together. Friday, April 11. Secretary Cook mov'd to expedite the Vote of Subſidies, and turn it into an Act; Sir Dudley Diggs ſeconded the Motion: But Sir Thomas Wentworth propos'd a middle way, which paſs'd into a Reſolution of the Houſe, That Grievances and Supply go hand and hand.

King preſſes a Supply. Saturday, April 12. Mr. Secretary Cook deliver'd another Meſſage from the King to haſten the Supply; wherein this Paſſage more eſpecially gave Offence, I muſt with ſome Grief tell you, that notice is taken as if this Houſe preſſed not upon the Abuſes of Power only, but upon Power it ſelf; this toucheth the King and Us who are ſupported by that Power.

This gave offence. He was bid to explain what he meant by the Word Power. He anſwer'd, I cannot deſcend to Particulars, or go from that his Majeſty gave me warrant or power to deliver.

About two Days after, Mr. Secretary Cook did again quicken the Buſineſs of Supply. After ſome Debates it was Order'd, "That a ſpecial Commit-
"tee of eight Perſons ſhall preſently withdraw
"themſelves, and conſult together upon ſome Heads,
"and upon the Subſtance of a fair Repreſentation
"to his Majeſty, which the Speaker ſhall deliver
"in his Speech to his Majeſty on Monday next, and
"at the ſame time to deliver the Petition againſt
"Billeting of Soldiers.

Speaker's Speech to the King. Eaſter Monday, April 21. The Commons being admitted to the King's Preſence, the Speaker endeavour'd to ſatisfie his Majeſty in the manner of their Proceedings. "For this purpoſe (ſays he) they "humbly beſeech your Majeſty to take into your
"Royal Conſideration, that although by ancient
"Right of Parliament, the conſtant Cuſtom hath
"been to take into their Conſiderations the com"mon Grievances of the Kingdom, before they en-
"ter upon the matter of Supply: Yet to make a
"full Expreſſion of that Zeal and Affection which
"they bear to your Royal Majeſty, they have in
"this Aſſembly, contrary to the ordinary Proceed-
"ings of Parliament, given your Majeſty's Supply
"Precedency, before the common Grievance of the "Subject, how preſſing ſoever; joining with it
"only thoſe fundamental and vital Liberties of the "Kingdom, which give Subſiſtence and Ability to
"your Subjects.

Toward the end of his Speech he introduc'd the Petition of the Commons concerning the Billeting of Soldiers.

King's ſhort Anſwer. To the Speech and Petition his Majeſty made Reply, "That they ſhould go on ſpeedily with their "Buſineſſes without any more Apologies. And as "to what concern'd their Petition, he would make
"Anſwer in convenient time.

From this Day to Friday, April 25. the Houſe in a grand Committee ſpent moſt of their time in Debate about Martial Law; and in holding two Conferences with the Lords, concerning ſome Reſolves in order to a Petition of Right, tranſmitted from the Lower Houſe to the Upper. 1628. Martial Law a Grievance

Friday, April 25. In another Conference of the Lords and Commons, the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury made a ſmooth and ſoftning Speech, to introduce ſome new Propoſitions from the Upper Houſe, of the ſame Nature with the Commons Petition of Right, only more reſpectful and ſubmiſſive to the King, they were communicated to the Lower Houſe, who were not ſatisfi'd with them.

L. Keeper's Speech to urge the diſpatch of Supplies. Monday, April 28. The King came to the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons being called up, the Lord-Keeper made a Speech to urge a diſpatch of the Supply without longer Debate upon the Liberty of the Subject. "His Majeſty (ſays he) has com"manded me to let you know, that he holdeth the "Statute of Magna Charta, and the other ſix Statutes
"inſiſted upon for the Subjects Liberty to be all in "Force; and aſſures you that he will maintain all
"his Subjects in the juſt freedom of their Perſons,
"and ſafety of their Eſtates. And that he will go-
"vern according to the Laws and Statutes of this
"Realm. And that ye ſhall find as much Securi-
"ty in his Majeſty's Royal Word and Promiſe as
"in the ſtrength of any Law ye can make; ſo that
"hereafter ye ſhall never have cauſe to complain.

The Queſtion who ſhould truſt, King or People. So as the only Queſtion between the King and Parliament was this; Whether his Majeſty's Royal Word and Promiſe, delivered by the Speaker in the King's Name and Preſence was a ſufficient Security for Redreſs of Grievances, and future maintenance of Rights and Liberties? or, Whether this verbal Promiſe ought not rather to be put into a written Law, as a more ſolemn Aſſurance to the People? The firſt was thought moſt conducing to the King's Honour. The ſecond more agreeable to the Conſtitution of Parliaments. Mr. Secretary Cook made a Speech for reliance on the King's Word. Sir Benjamin Rudyard mov'd, that the Effect of the King's Promiſe might be put into a Bill: And it was accordingly order'd, That a Committee of Lawyers do draw up a Bill containing the Subſtance of Magna Charta, and the other Statutes that do concern the Liberty of the Subject.

Meſſage from the King. Thurſday, May 1. While the Bill was preparing, Mr. Secretary Cook deliver'd a Meſſage from his Majeſty, "to know whether the Houſe will reſt on his "Royal Word or no, as declar'd to them by the "Lord-Keeper: If they do, he again aſſures them
"it ſhall be Royally perform'd. There was great
Silence for ſome time in the Houſe; and after ſome Debate it was plain, that no poſitive Anſwer could be given to ſuch a Meſſage. Open Denial had ſeem'd a rude Affront: and expreſs Aſſent had been (in the apprehenſion of moſt) a giving up the Cauſe of Engliſh Parliaments. Not to be anſwer'd.

Friday, May 2. The Houſe reſolv'd themſelves into a grand Committee to debate of this Matter. Some few argued for reſting on his Majeſty's Promiſe; but the far greater Majority agreed that the Legal Security muſt be by ſolemn Act. And Sir Edward Cook propos'd, that to pay all poſſible deference to his Majeſty's Honour, the Bill ſhould not come from the Houſe but from the King. Amidſt theſe Debates another Meſſage was deliver'd from his Majeſty, "that Publick Affairs would not "endure long Debate or Delay: ſo as this Seſſion of Parliament muſt continue no longer than Tueſ-
"day ſevennight. But upon Diſpatch and good
"Correſpondence, there ſhould be another Seſſion
"at Michaelmas next, for the perfecting of ſuch
"things as could not be now done. King ſends another quickning Meſſage.

Senſe of the Commons by their Speaker. Saturday, May 3. After long Debate the Commons agreed upon an Anſwer to all preceding Meſſages, to be preſented to the King by the Mouth of their Speaker; who humbly beg'd his Majeſty's leave to lay hold of his Gracious Offer, which gave them aſſurance, that if they thought fit to ſecure themſelves in their 1628. Rights and Liberties by way of Bill, he would be graciously pleas'd to give way to it. His Majesty's Answer was delivered by the Lord Keeper, that He expected an Answer by their Actions, and not Delay by Discourses —— that they ought to have Confidence in his Royal Word; yet to shew the Sincerity of his Intentions, he is content that a Bill be drawn for a Confirmation of Magna Charta and the other six Statutes insisted upon for the Subjects Liberties, so as it be without Additions, Paraphrases, or Explanations.

Tuesday May 6. Mr. Secretary Cook again press'd the House to rely upon the King's Word. This Importunity was now the more displeasing, because it seem'd to retract the late Intimation of his Majesty's good pleasure for a Bill.

Petition of Right. Thursday May 8. the Bill for Petition of Right was finish'd, and a Clause about Martial Law added to it: And at a Conference it was delivered to the Lords for their Concurrence.

Monday May 12. their Lordships desir'd another Conference with the Commons; wherein, the Lord Keeper declar'd the Result of their Debates in the Upper House upon the Petition of Right, that they had propounded some small Matters to be altered, to make it more sweet, and procure it a passable way to his Majesty: and then communicated a Letter from the King directed to the right-trusty and right-well-beloved the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the Higher House of Parliament. —— In which his Majesty renews his Promise of Governing by Law, and puts them in mind that the Session must draw to an end. This Letter was the same day communicated to the House of Commons, who were much dissatisfied, as thinking the Design of it was only to defeat their Petition of Right.

Opinion of the Lords.

Lords propose a concluding Clause. Saturday May 17. the Lords had another Conference with the Commons, wherein the Lord Keeper propos'd this additional Clause to be put in the Conclusion of the said Petition; We present this our humble Petition to your Majesty, with the Care not only of preserving our own Liberties, but with due Regard to leave entire that Soveraign Power wherewith your Majesty is trusted for the Protection, Safety, and Happiness of the People.

Rejected by the Commons This Clause was oppos'd in several Speeches by Mr. Alford, Mr. Pimm, Mr. Hackwell, Sir Edward Cook, Sir Tho. Wentworth, Mr. Noy, and Mr. Selden, who said, that Soveraign Power was no Parliamentary Word, and there could be no such thing distinct from the Power of the Law, or a legal Prerogative. To admit of such an additional Salvo for a Regal Power, would be to leave the Subject in worse Condition than before, &c.

After this, several Conferences were held; wherein the Lords offer'd Reasons for their Amendment, and the Commons for not consenting to it. On this latter side, Mr. Glanvil made a remarkable Speech as to the Law-part, and Sir Henry Martin as to the Rational-part of not admitting the Acknowledgment of Soveraign Power in the Person of the King.

Monday May 26. the Lords at another Conference agreed with the Commons in the Petition of Right, with these small Amendments: Means instead of Pretext; not warrantable by the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, to be put instead of Unlawful. To which Amendments the Commons readily agreed, and the Bill was engrossed and read a third time, and order'd to be presented to the King. The Bill of Subsidy read the second time, and committed.

Petition of Right agreed on by both Houses.

Wednesday May 28. a Conference between Lords and Commons about the Manner of Delivering the Petition of Right. Agreed, that no Addition or Preface be used to the King, but that the Petition be presented to his Majesty by Command of the Lords and Commons; and his Majesty be desired, that to the Content of his People, he would be pleased to give his gracious Answer in full Parliament.

How to be presented.

Monday June 2. the King in Parliament spake thus.

Gentlemen, 1628.

The King's Speech. " I Am come hither to perform my Duty: I think " no Man can think it long, since I have not " taken so many Days in answering the Petition, as " ye spent Weeks in framing it. And I am come " hither to shew you, that as well in formal things " as in essential, I desire to give you as much Con- " tent as in me lies.

Then the Lord Keeper, after commending the King's Favour to them, desired 'em to hear their own Petition read, and his Majesty's gracious Answer.

The whole Tenour of this Petition of Right was in these four Particulars supported by reference to former Acts of Parliament; and by expressing the late Grievances suffered contrary to the said Acts.

They do therefore humbly pray your most excellent Majesty,

Heads of the Petition of Right. I. " That no Man hereafter be compelled to make " or yield any Gift, Loan, Benevolence, Tax, or " such like Charge, without common Consent by " Act of Parliament: And, That none be called to " make Answer, or take Oath, or to give Atten- " dance, or be confined, or otherwise molested or " disquieted concerning the same, or for Refusal " thereof.

II. " That no Free-man, in any manner, be im- " prisoned or detained without due Process of Law.

III. " That your Majesty will be pleased to re- " move the Soldiers and Mariners, now billeted up- " on divers Inhabitants against their Wills; and, " that your People may not be so burthened in time " to come.

IV. " That all Commissions for proceeding by " Martial Law may be revoked and annulled; and, " that hereafter no Commissions of like nature may " issue forth to any Person or Persons whatsoever, " to be executed as aforesaid, lest by colour of them " any of your Majesty's Subjects be destroyed or put " to Death, contrary to the Laws and Franchise of " the Land.

King's Answer. The King's Answer was delivered in these Words: The King willeth that Right be done according to the Laws and Customs of the Realm; and, that the Statutes be put in due Execution that his Subjects may have no cause to complain of any Wrong or Oppressions contrary to their just Rights and Liberties: To the Preservation whereof, he holds himself in Conscience as well obliged as of his Prerogative.

Not acceptable. If this could have been thought a free and full Answer, it had been a most happy Union of King and Parliament. But the fatal Jealousies were, that the King, in his prefatory Speech, betrayed an unwilling Compliance extorted from him; and, that the final Answer it self was somewhat dubious and reserv'd.

Therefore on the next Day, Tuesday June 3. the King's Answer being read in the House of Commons, occasion'd many Speeches of Complaint, and a Resolution of the House, That an humble Remonstrance be presented to his Majesty, touching the dangers and means of Safety of King and Kingdom.

A Remonstrance intended.

Thursday June 5. this Message was brought from his Majesty by the Speaker.

Message from the King. " His Majesty wisheth you to remember the Mes- " sage he last sent you, by which he set a Day for " the end of this Session (Wednesday June 11.) and " he commands me to let you know, that he will " certainly hold that Day prefixed without Altera- " tion: and because that cannot be if the House en- " tertain more business of length, he requires you " that ye enter not into, or proceed with, any new " business, which may spend greater time, or which " may lay any Scandal or Aspersion upon the State- " Government or Ministers thereof.

This Message serv'd but to improve the Fears and Jealousies of the Commons; and they were put into a new and greater Ferment, when Sir John Eliot coming to that part of the Message which implied 1628. plied their laying Scandal or Aſperſion upon ſome Miniſters of State: The Speaker roſe from his Chair, and apprehending that Sir John was falling on the Duke, he thus enjoin'd him Silence; There is a Command laid upon me, that I muſt command you not to proceed. Upon which Sir John Elliot ſat down; and Sir Dudley Diggs, in great concern, ſaid, Muſt we not proceed? Let us ſit in ſilence. We are miſerable: we know not what to do. And there was a profound Silence in the Houſe for a while; till Sir Nathaniel Rich ſaid, We muſt now ſpeak, or for ever hold our Peace, &c. Some objected, that the Speech lately ſpoken by Sir John Elliot had given Offence (as they feared) to his Majeſty. Upon which the Houſe voted, That every Member of the Houſe is free from any undutiful Speech from the beginning of the Parliament to this day. And ordered, That the Houſe be turned into a Committee, to conſider what is fit to be done for the Safety of the Kingdom, and that no Man go out upon pain of being ſent to the Tower. But the Speaker obtained Leave to go forth. And then the Houſe was reſolv'd into a Committee, Mr. Whitby in the Chair. Mr. Wandesford moved, that they ſhould not fear to make a Remonſtrance of their Rights: And Sir Edward Cook ſpoke out, Let us palliate no longer; if we do, God will not proſper us. I think the Duke of Buckingham is the Cauſe of all our Miſeries; and till the King be informed thereof, we ſhall never go out with Honour, or ſit with Honour here. That man is the Grievance of Grievances, &c. The Houſe agreed upon ſeveral Heads for a Remonſtrance; and while it was moving to be put to the Queſtion, Whether the Duke of Buckingham ſhould not be declared the chief and principal Cauſe of all thoſe Evils? the Speaker (who after he had Leave to go forth, went privately to the King) brought this Meſſage, That his Majeſty commands for the preſent they adjourn the Houſe till to morrow morning, and that all Committees ceaſe in the mean time. And the Houſe was accordingly adjourn'd. The Lord Keeper carried the like Command to the Upper Houſe, where it was likewiſe obey'd.

The Speaker enjoins Silence.

This gives great Offence.

The King commands the two Houſes to Adjourn.

Friday June 6. the Speaker brought a more kind Meſſage from the King, to declare his Majeſty's Intentions not to bar them from what hath been their Right, but only to avoid all Scandals on his Council and Actions paſt. After ſome Debate, the Commons ſent a Meſſage to the Lords, that they would join in a humble Requeſt to the King, that a clear and ſatisfactory Anſwer be given by his Majeſty, in full Parliament, to the Petition of Right. To which the Lords agreed.

And ſends a kinder Meſſage.

Saturday June 7. the King came to the Houſe; and the Commons being ſent for, the Lord Keeper preſented the Requeſt of both Houſes, and ſaid, Requeſt of the two Houſes for a fuller Anſwer to their Petition of Right.

May it pleaſe your moſt excellent Majeſty,

" THE Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and " Commons in Parliament aſſembled, taking " into Conſideration, that the good Intelligence be- " tween your Majeſty and your People doth much " depend upon your Majeſty's Anſwer unto their " Petition of Right formerly preſented, with unani- " mous Conſent do now become moſt humble Sui- " tors unto your Majeſty, that you would be plea- " ſed to give a clear and ſatisfactory Anſwer there- " unto in full Parliament.

The King graciouſly replied,

King's Reply. " The Anſwer I have already given you, was " made with ſo good Deliberation, and approved by " the Judgments of ſo many wiſe Men, that I could " not have imagined but it ſhould have given you " full ſatisfaction. But to avoid all ambiguous In- " terpretations, and to ſhew you there is no Dou- " bleneſs in my Meaning, I am willing to pleaſure " you as well in Words as in Subſtance. Read your " Petition, and you ſhall have an Anſwer that I am " ſure will pleaſe you.

He grants, The Petition was read, and Anſwer given, Soit droit fait come il eſt deſire.

The King proceeded, " This I am ſure is full, yet 1628. " no more than I granted you in my firſt Anſwer; and " for the Meaning of that was, to confirm your Li- ſpeaks. " berties: knowing, according to your own Prote- " ſtation, that ye neither mean nor can hurt my " Prerogative. And I aſſure you, my Maxim is, " That the Peoples Liberties ſtrengthen the King's " Prerogative, and the King's Prerogative is to de- " fend the People's Liberties. You ſee how ready " I have ſhewed my ſelf to ſatisfie your Demands; " ſo that I have done my part: Wherefore if this " Parliament have not a happy Concluſion, the Sin " is yours; I am free from it.

Whereupon the Commons return'd to their Houſe in great Joy, and reſolved ſo to proceed, as to expreſs their Thankfulneſs to his Majeſty. They order'd, that the Grand Committees for Religion, Trade, Grievances, and Courts of Juſtice, ſhould ſit no longer, and the Houſe ſhould proceed only in conſideration of Grievances of moſt moment. Bells ringing and Bonfires were through the whole City, and all true Hearts had a ſhare in the publick Joy.

Joy of the Commons.

If the Commons at this Juncture could have withdrawn their intended Remonſtrance, or the King could have look'd upon it as no Diminution of his Honour; then the Accommodation had been perfect and laſting.

But the Commons thought their Rights and Liberties not ſufficiently aſſerted, without complaining of the ſeveral Inſtances wherein they apprehended a manifeſt breach and Violation of them. So they proceeded to draw up the Particulars of greateſt moment; and in concluſion,

The Remonſtrance goes on.

Friday June 13. it was reſolved upon the Queſtion, That the exceſſive Power of the Duke of Buckingham is the Cauſe of the Evils and Dangers to the King and Kingdom. And ordered, That this be added to the Remonſtrance.

Hatred of the D. of Buckingham.

Tueſday June 17. the Remonſtrance was preſented to the King in the Banquetting-houſe by the Speaker, attended by the whole Houſe. The Subſtance of it was in theſe ſix Branches:

Remonſtrance preſented.

Subſtance of it.

I. " The Danger of Innovation and Alteration " in Religion. This occaſioned, 1. By the great " Eſteem and Favours many Profeſſors of the Romiſh " Religion receive at Court. 2. Their publick Re- " ſort to Maſs at Denmark-houſe, contrary to his " Majeſty's Anſwer to the Parliament's Petition at " Oxford. 3. Letters and Warrants to ſtop Proceed- " ings againſt them. Laſtly, The daily Growth of " the Arminian Faction.

II. " The Danger of Innovation and Alteration " in Government, occaſioned by the Billeting of " Soldiers, by the Commiſſion for procuring one " thouſand German Horſe and Riders, as for the " Defence of the Kingdom; and by a ſtanding Com- " miſſion granted to the Duke to be General at Land " in times of Peace.

III. " Diſaſters in the late Publick Deſigns; as, " the Expedition to the Iſle of Rhee, and that lately " to Rochel, wherein the Engliſh have purchaſed " their Diſhonour with the Waſte of a Million of " Treaſure.

IV. " The Want of Ammunition, occaſioned by " the late ſelling away of thirty ſix Laſt of Pow- " der.

V. " The Decay of Trade by the Loſs of three " hundred Ships taken by the Dunkirkers and Pi- " rates within theſe three laſt Years.

VI. " The not guarding the narrow Seas, where- " by his Majeſty hath almoſt loſt the Regality.

" Of all which Evils and Dangers, the princi- " pal Cauſe is the Duke of Buckingham's exceſſive " Power, and Abuſe of that Power. And therefore " they humbly ſubmit it to his Majeſty's Wiſdom, " Whether it can be ſafe for himſelf, or his King- " dom, that ſo great Power both by Sea and Land, " as reſts in him, ſhould be truſted in the Hands " of any one Subject whatſoever.

1628. The King having heard out the Remonſtrance with ſome Indignation, told the Commons, That he little expected ſuch a Remonſtrance, after he had paſſed the Petition of Right: However, as for their Grievances, he would conſider of them as they ſhould deſerve.

The King angry at it.

It is ſaid, that ſoon after the King order'd a formal Anſwer to be drawn up in Writing to the ſaid Remonſtrance, denying or excuſing the ſeveral Charges in it: And in the mean time he ſent a Meſſage by Sir Humphry May, that he meant to end the Seſſion on the 26th of June. And that he might ſeem ready to redreſs every juſt Grievance, he order'd the Lord-Keeper to report in the Upper-Houſe that his Majeſty had cancell'd the Commiſſion of Exciſe, and the Warrant for putting the Seal thereto. And a Meſſage was ſent to the Commons to ſhew them the ſaid cancell'd Commiſſion and Warrant.

Another Remonſtrance againſt Tonnage and Poundage.

The Commons fell to preparing a Bill for Tonnage and Poundage to the King. In debating there upon it was Order'd, that a Committee be appointed to draw a Remonſtrance to his Majeſty of the Peoples Rights, and of the undue taking of Tonnage and Poundage, and Impoſitions without Act of Parliament, and to ſhew Reaſons why the Houſe cannot in ſo ſhort a time prepare that Bill.

In the ſaid Remonſtrance they declare theſe two things. 1. " That there ought not any Impoſition " to be laid upon the Goods of Merchants exported " or imported, without common conſent by Act of " Parliament, which is the Right and Inheritance " of your Subjects; founded not only upon the " moſt Ancient and Original Conſtitution of this " Kingdom, but often confirm'd and declar'd in di- " vers Statute Laws. 2. That the receiving of " Tonnage and Poundage, and other Impoſitions not " granted by Parliament, is a breach of the Funda- " mental Liberties of this Kingdom, and contrary " to your Majeſty's Royal Anſwer to our late Peti- " tion of Right. And therefore they humbly be- " ſeech his Majeſty to forbear any further receiving " of the ſame, and not to take it in ill part from " thoſe of his loving Subjects, who ſhould refuſe to " make payment of any ſuch Charges without War- " rant of Law demanded.

Subſtance of it.

When the King heard of this ſecond Remonſtrance, he was reſolved to prevent the delivery of it. And therefore on King offended.

Thurſday, June 26. While the Remonſtrance being engroſſed was a reading in the Houſe, the King ſent for the Speaker and the whole Houſe, and ſhew'd his Reſentments in the following Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Speech of Reſentment.

" IT may ſeem ſtrange that I came ſo ſuddenly to " end this Seſſion, before I give my Aſſent to the " Bills. I will tell you the Cauſe, tho' I muſt avow, " that I owe the account of my Actions to God " alone.

" It is known to every one, that a while ago the " Houſe of Commons gave me a Remonſtrance, how " acceptable every Man may judge; and for the Me- " rit of it, I will not call that in Queſtion; for I " am ſure no wiſe Man can juſtifie it.

" Now ſince I am truly inform'd, that a ſecond " Remonſtrance is preparing for me, to take away " the Profit of my Tonnage and Poundage, one of " the chiefeſt Maintenances of my Crown, by al- " ledging, I have given away my Right thereto by " my Anſwer to your Petition. This is ſo prejudi- " cial to me, that I am forc'd to end this Seſſion " ſome few Hours before I meant, being not wil- " ling to receive any more Remonſtrances; to which " I muſt give a harſh Anſwer.

" And ſince I ſee that even the Houſe of Com- " mons begins already to make falſe Conſtructions " of what I granted in your Petition, leſt it be " worſe interpreted in the Country, I will now " make a Declaration concerning the true Intent " thereof.

" The Profeſſion of both Houſes in the time of 1628. " hammering this Petition was no ways to trench " upon my Prerogative; ſaying, they had neither " Intention or Power to hurt it. Therefore it muſt " needs be conceiv'd, that I have granted no new, " but only confirm'd the ancient Liberties of my " Subjects: Yet to ſhew the clearneſs of my Intenti- " ons, that I neither Repent nor mean to Recede " from any thing I have promiſed you, I do here " declare my ſelf, that thoſe things which have been " done (whereby many have had ſome Cauſe to ex- " pect the Liberties of the Subjects to be trench'd up- " on, which indeed was the firſt and true Ground " of the Petition) ſhall not hereafter be drawn in- " to Example for your Prejudice: And from time " to time, in the Word of a King, ye ſhall not have " the like cauſe to complain.

" But as for Tonnage and Poundage, it is a thing " I cannot want; and was never intended by you to " Ask, nor meant by me I am ſure to Grant.

" To Conclude; I command you all that are here " to take notice of what I have ſpoken at this time " to be the true Intent and Meaning of what I gran- " ted you in your Petition: But eſpecially you my " Lords the Judges; for to you only, under me, be- " longs the Interpretation of Laws: For none of the " Houſes of Parliament, either joint or ſeparate " (what new Doctrine ſoever may be rais'd) have " any Power either to make or declare a Law with- " out my Conſent.

A ſurprize to both Houſes.

The King had come to the Houſe ſo unexpectedly that the Lords were not in their Robes, and the Commons had given no Order for the Speaker to deliver the Bill of Subſidies, which had not been yet return'd (as uſually) from the Upper-Houſe. However, the Bill was deliver'd to the Speaker, ſtanding at the Bar of the Lords; who in a ſhort Speech declar'd it to be the greateſt Gift that ever was given to any Prince in ſo ſhort a time. And then the Bill was paſſed with theſe that follow: 1. An Act for the reformation of Abuſes committed on the Lord's Day, called Sunday. 2. The Petition exhibited to his Majeſty concerning divers Rights and Privileges of the Subject. 3. An Act for repreſſing of all unlicenſed Ale-houſes. 4. An Act to reſtrain the ſending over any to be Popiſhly bred beyond the Seas. 5. An Act for five entire Subſidies granted by the Clergy. 6. An Act for the Continuance and Repeal of divers Statutes; with ſeveral Private Acts. As to the Bill prepar'd for Explanation of the Statute 3 Jac. about Leaſes of Recuſants Lands; the King ſaid, " That in this ſhort Time he had not " ſufficient leiſure to conſider thereof; but though " the Title were fair, he found many Errors there- " in; and if at the next Meeting they would amend " thoſe Errors it ſhould paſs.

Bills paſſed.

Parliament prorogued to Oct. 20.

After which, the Lord-Keeper expreſs'd it to be his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that this Seſſion now end, and that the Parliament be prorogued till the twentieth of October next.

General Diſcontents.

Thus broke up that Parliament, wherein were ſome of the greateſt mutual Obligations between King and People, and yet unhappily no Satisfaction on either ſide. The King had yielded to the largeſt Petition of Rights and Liberties, and yet left the People Jealous. The People had granted a Supply beyond Example, and yet left the King uneaſy: In ſhort, the generality went home in Diſcontent. Some at the being interrupted in a Bill of Tonnage and Poundage, which upon foundation of the Subject's Right, ſhould have ſettled and advanc'd the King's Revenue. Some at the King's Omiſſion of Thanks for the Bill of Subſidy, and taking not the leaſt notice of it. Others at the Speech of Prorogation, ſomewhat ſevere and upbraiding: And many at the Prorogation it ſelf, when they deſir'd rather a Receſs by joint Adjournment, that depending Matters might be kept in the ſame Condition to another Meeting.

Hav-

1628. Having thus without interruption related the Affairs of Parliament, we must now return to other matters of State that interven'd.

The Rochellers, block'd up by the King of France, had some dependence on the Word of the Duke of Buckingham, who had promised to come again to their Relief, and had some expectance from the King and Council to whom they had made a very earnest Application. To this purpose a Fleet of about 50 Ships was early fitted out, under the Command of the Earl of Denbigh; who for want of Mariners, or for the Service of a Descent, took in two thousand two hundred able Land-Men; and setting sail from Plimouth on April 17. came to Anchor at Charleboy in the Road of Rochel on May 1. He found twenty Sail of the King of France's Ships riding before the Harbour; and being much superiour in Number and Strength, he sent Advice into the Town, that he would sink the French Ships as soon as the Wind came West, and made a higher Flood. About May 8. the Wind and Tide serv'd accordingly, and the Rochellers expected and sollicited for that season of Deliverance. But the Earl, without attempting the opportunity, weigh'd Anchor and sail'd away, suffering four of the French Ships to pursue as it were the English Fleet, that arriv'd at Plymouth on May 26. This other inglorious Expedition was a greater discouragement to the poor Rochellers; and increas'd the Fears and Jealousies of a Popish Interest at home. Many concluded the whole Design was but a Feint, and meant rather by the Court Party to reduce Rochel than relieve it. Some clamour'd against the Earl of Denbigh, and said nothing better could be expected from his Conduct, who was Brother-in-law to the Duke of Buckingham. Others charg'd it as a Plot in one Clark a Bed-Chamber Man, who had been a chief Commissioner in both the Expeditions, and being a reputed Papist, was suppos'd to be employ'd for an Instrument of Miscarriage.

A Fleet sent to Rochel.

This Expedition inglorious.

One La Brun a French Man, Captain in the English Fleet, gave in Depositions before the Mayor of Plimouth on May 16. which argu'd Treachery or apparent Cowardice in the management of this late Expedition. This Account was certified by the Mayor of Plymouth to the Burgesses of that Town in Parliament; by whom it was communicated to the Council Table, from whence a Letter was directed to the Duke of Buckingham, as Lord High Admiral, dated the 30th of May 1628. To signifie his Majesty's pleasure, that the Earl of Denbigh should return back to relieve the Town of Rochel with the Fleet under his charge, with other Ships prepared at Portsmouth and Plimouth. But for all this Order of Council, no such return was made, nor any enquiry into the obstruction of it.

Complaints of it.

In the same Month of May the English Garison of Stoadt, about twenty Miles from Hamborough on the other side the Elbe, was surrender'd to the Imperialists upon honourable Terms, by the Commander Sir Charles Morgan, who had defended the Place with the utmost Bravery and Resolution.

Sir Charles Morgan surrenders Stoadt.

June 13. Dr. Lamb, a Creature of the Duke's, was set upon in the Streets of London by the Rabble, and so roughly beat, that he died of his Bruises next Morning in the Compter. Some of the Mobb in their Fury were heard to say, that were his Master the Duke there, they would give him as much.

Dr. Lamb kill'd by the Mobb.

This made the Duke more apprehensive of the popular Rage against him; and turn'd that into an Omen which had possibly been otherwise an Accident, viz. on the same Day that Lamb was so assaulted, the Duke's Picture fell down in the High Commission Chamber at Lambeth; though if Lamb had bore no relation to the Duke, he was of himself enough provoking to the Multitude. For he had got the common Reputation of a Conjurer, and had been publickly arraign'd for practising Sorcery and hellish Arts upon the Body of the Lord Windsor. He was further infamous for Vice and Lewdness, having been indicted and try'd for a Rape at the King's-Bench Bar, where he insisted upon his Innocence in such an impudent manner, that his very Language implied the Fact, though he was found not Guilty. This riotous Murther was the unhappy cause of a wider Breach between the Court and City: For on Monday after, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen were sent for to appear at the Council Table and were there examined, and threatn'd that they should lose their Charter if they did not discover and deliver up the principal Agents in the late Uproar; and had in conclusion a Fine of 6000 l. impos'd upon them.

A Terror to the Duke.

July 15. The Earl of Marlborough was remov'd from the Treasury, as a Man too cautious in advancing the King's Revenue, and Sir Richard Weston Chancellor of the Exchequer, was made Lord Treasurer, as a Minister acute and active, and fit for the Necessities of raising Money; Chief Baron Walter for the like reason displac'd. Sir Tho. Wentworth, a Leader of the Country Party in the House of Commons, was near the same time honour'd with a Barony, and brought over to the Court. Bishop Laud was translated to the See of London, Mr. Mountague and Dr. Manwaring were pardon'd and preferred; these and some other of the like Promotions gave more and more disgust to the People, and confirm'd them in the Prejudice that the Court was only a governing Party.

Sir Rich. Weston made Ld. Treasurer.

Other Changes.

A third Fleet was in the mean time preparing for the Relief of Rochel, that by a close Siege was now reduc'd to the last Extremities. The Duke of Buckingham chose to command in Person, and to that end came to Portsmouth, where on August 23. having been at Breakfast with Soubiez and the General Officers, John Felton (late Lieutenant in a Regiment of Foot under Sir John Ramsey) plac'd himself in an Entry through which the Duke was to pass, who walking along with Sir Thomas Frier, and inclining his Ear to him in the posture of Attention, Felton with a back blow stabb'd him on the left-side into the very Heart, leaving the Knife in his Body; which the Duke pulled out with his own Hand, and then fell down, crying only, The Villain hath kill'd me. Felton slipt away, and might have gone off undiscover'd, but that either his Conscience or his Insolence betray'd him. For while the general Rumour was, that the Murderer must be a French Man, and some began to suspect Sobiez as a Party in it, Felton stept out and said, I am the Man who did the Deed; let no Man suffer that is Innocent. Upon which he was apprehended, and sent Prisoner to London. When examin'd before the Privy-Council, he was so obstinately silent, that he was threatned with the Rack; but the Question being put to the Judges, they declar'd it to be no legal way. He made no other Confession than what he had (before the commission of the Fact) wrot in a Paper stich'd in the lining of his Hat; wherein he declar'd the only Motive "to be the late Remonstrance of the Commons a-"gainst the Duke; and that he could not sacrifice "his Life in a nobler Cause, than by delivering his "Country from so great an Enemy. Yet others believ'd it was rather from a private and personal Revenge; because he had been twice repuls'd upon his application for a Captain's Commission, and had long waited for his Arrears of Pay.

A third Fleet preparing for Rochel.

To be commanded by the Duke.

Who is stabb'd by Felton.

An Impudent Villain.

His Motive.

The King within four Miles of Portsmouth was on his Knees in Devotion when the News was brought him, and did not rise up, nor betray the least interruption, till his Prayers were over: And then with great evenness of Mind, he only commanded that the Murderer should be secur'd; and immediately gave order that the Fleet should hasten out. But to shew his Affection to the Duke's Memory, he gave command for a magnificent Funeral, till the thrifty Treasurer diverted the Project by telling his Majesty, Such Pomp would but prove but an Hour's show; and it would be more for his Glory to erect him a stately Monument that might be done for half the cost. Upon which his Body was privately interr'd on September 25.

King bears it with great presence of Mind.

1628. ber 25. And when the King afterwards talk'd of a coſtly Monument, the Treaſurer is ſaid to have uſed this other Evaſion: Sir, I am loth to tell your Majeſty what the World will ſay both here and abroad, if you ſhould raiſe a Monument for the Duke before you erect one for your Father.

Character of the Duke. Thus fell the Duke in the Age of perfection, thirty ſix; a Gentleman born and built for a Courtier; of an Air and Port great and ſweet, with all the Nature and all the Art of Addreſs: Of Parts ſufficient to cover the want of Learning; and of a Seriouſneſs that ſerv'd much to diſguiſe his neglect of Religion.

The Fleet failed. The Fleet, under the Command of the Earl of Lindſey, ſail'd from Portſmouth Sept. 8. but very defective in their Stores of Victuals and Tackle, as Information was after given to the King and Council. When they came before Rochel, they found no French Navy to oppoſe them, only the immenſe Barricado croſs the Entry of the Port was now compleatly finiſh'd: Many brave Attempts were made to break through, but all in vain. So that the Rochellers in diſtreſs and deſpair implor'd the King's Mercy, and ſurrender'd October 18. And the Engliſh Fleet looking on, were now at liberty to return.

Rochel ſurrender'd.

After the Loſs of this Town, the French Proteſtants in all other Parts were ſo ſeverely treated, that they could not but reſolve upon ſome laſt Efforts of Self-preſervation; and ſent again to the King of England to implore Aſſiſtance, with this pathetical Expreſſion, that what they now wrote was with their Tears and with their Blood. But there was a Peace depending, and ſoon after concluded between the two Crowns; and the French Proteſtants were glad to ſubmit to any Terms that gave them their freedom in Religion.

Laſt effort of the Fr. Proteſtants.

Parliament further prorogued. The Parliament by laſt Prorogation appointed to meet on October 20. was by Proclamation iſſued October 1. further prorogu'd to the 20th of January following.

Diſputes upon Tonnage and Poundage. The Merchants and Traders were in great diſturbances about the payment of Tonnage and Poundage: Upon the late Declaration of the Commons, and a concurrent Opinion of the Lawyers, many had declined, and even refuſed to pay the Impoſitions. For this contempt they were ſummon'd before the Council Table, and committed to the Fleet and Marſhalſea, and not ſet at Liberty without entring into Bond for Payment. Mr. Chambers, committed on this account, brought his Habeas Corpus October 23. and was bail'd by Order of the Court. The Lords of the Council were much diſſatisfied at it, and ſent for the Judges to the Lord-Keeper's Houſe, where they juſtified their Proceeding, and prov'd the Bailing of the Priſoner to be according to Law and Juſtice. Mr. Vaſſal, for a like refuſal, had an Information preferr'd againſt him in the Exchequer in Michaelmas Term; to which he pleaded Magna Charta, and the Statute De Tallagio non concedendo, and that the Impoſition was illegal, becauſe without aſſent of Parliament. The Attorney-General demurr'd, and Mr. Vaſſal join'd in the Demur; the Barons in Exchequer denied to hear Vaſſal's Council, and ſaid it was a Caſe already adjudg'd, and a Right of which the King was in Poſſeſſion; and Impriſon'd Vaſſal as ſtanding in contempt of the Court. About the ſame time Mr. Chambers had other Goods and Merchandiſe ſeiz'd for not paying Cuſtom; and upon the detaining of them, he ſued out a Writ of Replevin: But the Barons of the Exchequer order'd an Injunction to the Sheriffs, not to execute the Writ; and ſent a Precept to the Officers of the Cuſtom, to detain double Value of the Sums by them demanded for Duties to his Majeſty, and to reſtore the reſidue. The like Proceedings were taken againſt Mr. John Rolls, a Parliament Man, and ſome other Merchants, to the unhappy Diſcouragement of Trade, and the general Grievance of the City of London.

And yet, to ſoften the Minds of the Subject before the Meeting of Parliament, ſome Popular things were wiſely done. As to the Horſe levied in Germany, which People ſuſpected was for a ſtanding Force in England, the Privy Council wrote to Dalbeer to diſpoſe them into the Service of the King of Sweden and the Duke of Savoy, his Majeſty's Allies. Archbiſhop Abbot, the more Popular for being in Diſgrace at Court, was ſent for to White-hall, and from his Barge received by the Archbiſhop of York and Earl of Dorſet, and by them ſolemnly introduced to the King, who gave him his Hand with a particular Countenance of Favour, and bid him not fail the Council-Table twice a Week. Mountague's Appello Cæſarem was call'd in by Proclamation; and other pleaſing Orders given againſt Popery and Armianiſm, the two Terrors of the Common People. 1628.

The King did ſome Popular things.

Tueſday Jan. 20. the Parliament met; and the firſt Debate of the Commons was on the Petition of Right which had been Printed with ſome Additions and Comments, and the Copies firſt Printed without ſuch Additions had been by Order of the King ſuppreſt. They ſent for Norton the King's Printer, who own'd the thing done by ſpecial Warrant.

Parliament meets.

Fall upon Grievances.

The Commons fell next upon Violation of the Subjects Liberty and Property ſince the End of laſt Seſſion, by the Levies of Tonnage and Poundage. This Matter was referred to a Committee; but while the Debate was warm upon it, the King ſent a Meſſage to the Houſe, and willed them to deſiſt from farther Debate of thoſe matters concerning Tonnage and Poundage till the next day in the Afternoon, at which time he would ſpeak with them in the Banquetting Houſe at White-hall.

The King ſends a Meſſage.

Here the King ſpoke thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. "THE Care I have to remove all Obſtacles that may hinder the good Correſpondency between Me and this Parliament, is the Cauſe I have called you together at this time; the particular Occaſion being a Complaint made in the Lower Houſe. And for you, my Lords, I am glad to take this and all other Occaſions, whereby you may clearly underſtand both my Words and Actions: For as you are neareſt in Degree, ſo you are the fitteſt Witneſſes unto Kings.

"The Complaint I ſpeak of is for ſtaying Mens Goods that deny'd Tonnage and Poundage. This may have an eaſie and ſhort Concluſion, if my Words and Actions be rightly underſtood. For by paſſing the Bill as my Anceſtors have had it, my by-paſt Actions will be included, and my future Proceedings authorized; which certainly would not have been ſtuck at, if Men had not imagin'd that I had taken theſe Duties as appertaining to my Hereditary Prerogative; in which they are much deceiv'd. For it ever was, and ſtill is my meaning, by the Gift of my People to enjoy it: and my Intention in my Speech at the ending of the laſt Seſſion concerning this Point, was not to challenge Tonnage and Poundage as of Right, but de Bene eſſe, ſhewing you the Neceſſity not the Right by which I was to take it, until you had granted it to me; aſſuring my ſelf according to your general Profeſſions, you wanted Time not Will to give it to me.

"Wherefore now, having opportunity, I expect that without loſs of Time you make good your Profeſſions, and ſo by paſſing of a Bill put an end to all the Queſtions ariſing from this Subject; eſpecially ſince I have clear'd the only Scruple that can trouble you in this Buſineſs.

"To Conclude, Let us not be jealous of one anothers Actions: For if I had been eaſily mov'd at every Occaſion, the Order you made on Wedneſday laſt might have made me ſtartle; there being ſome ſhow to ſuſpect, that you had given your ſelves the liberty to be the Inquiſitors after Complaints (the Words of your Order being ſome-1628. " what too largely penn'd) but looking into your " Actions, I find you only here Complainers, not " ſeeking Complaints: For I am certain you neither " pretend nor deſire the Liberty to be Inquiſitors of " Men's Actions, before particular Complaint be " made.

"what

" This I have ſpoken, to ſhew you how ſlow I " am to believe harſhly of your Proceedings; like- " wiſe to aſſure you, the Houſes Reſolutions, not " particular Men's Speeches, ſhall make me judge " well or ill: Not doubting but according to my " Example you will be deaf to ill Reports concern- " ing me, till my Words and Actions ſpeak for " themſelves; that ſo this Seſſion, beginning with " Confidence one towards another, it may end in a " perfect good Underſtanding between us; which " God grant.

The Speech wiſe and tender.

It is certain, this Speech was as Prudent and Tender as faithful Subjects could poſſibly deſire from their lawful King. But it is in Jealouſies between Prince and People, as in thoſe between a married Pair; where if one ſide has given grounds of Suſpicion to the other, it is hard for the ſtricteſt Caution and Conduct, to remove the unhappy Doubts and Fears.

Meſſage from the King.

Monday, January 26. Mr. Secretary Cook brought a Meſſage from the King, That the Bill for Tonnage and Poundage might be ſpeedily taken into Conſideration, and that no time might be loſt. But now a Popular Fancy roſe, that the Bill muſt not be impos'd upon them, but muſt proceed naturally from the Motions of their own Houſe; that for that Reaſon it was moſt proper to ſuſpend the Bill for ſome time, while they proceeded upon other Grievances; and in the firſt place upon thoſe relating to Religion.

Grievance in Religion.

Tueſday January 27. A Report was made to the Houſe, from the Committee for Religion, that a Remonſtrance upon that Subject, drawn up in laſt Seſſion, had been commanded away by the King; and for want of it the Committee could not now proceed. Hereupon Mr. Secretary Cook brought a Meſſage from his Majeſty: That underſtanding the Remonſtrance concerning Religion was called for, he was pleaſed (to take away all Queſtion) to deliver it back to them; hoping, nevertheleſs, that they will proceed with the Bill for Tonnage and Poundage, and give precedency to that Buſineſs But this Meſſage being referr'd to a Committee, they Reſolv'd, " That the Conſiderati- " on of Religion ſhould take place before the Bill for " Tonnage and Poundage.

Another Meſſage from the King.

Wedneſday January 28. Secretary Cook brought another Meſſage from the King, That if the Houſe would firſt diſpatch the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage, they ſhould not be thereby interrupted in Matters of Religion, provided they did not intrench upon that which did not belong to them. Sir Thomas Edmonds preſs'd a Compliance with this Meſſage, and urg'd them to conſider how dangerous it was to alienate his Majeſty's Heart from Parliaments. But after a Reply by Mr. Corriton, the Houſe Reſolv'd to ſend an Anſwer to the King, That thoſe Meſſages are inconvenient, and breed Debates and loſs of Time; and did farther Reſolve, That Tonnage and Poundage, ariſing naturally from this Houſe, they would in fit time take ſuch a courſe therein, as they hoped would be to his Majeſty's ſatisfaction and Honour: And for the preſent, they would proceed in matters of Religion.

The Commons Anſwer.

Sir John Elliot's Speech.

Upon this Sir John Elliot ſpoke freely againſt the King's late Declaration prefix'd to the 39 Articles, and againſt that part eſpecially, where it is ſaid, that if there be any difference in Opinion, concerning the ſeaſonable Interpretation of the ſaid Articles, the Biſhops and Clergy in Convocation have Power to ſettle thoſe Diſputes. By which Power, he ſaid, Popery and Arminianiſm might be introduc'd. After ſome Debate upon ſuch a Power of determining the ſenſe of the 39 Articles, the Commons entred into a Proteſtation; which ſhall be given in the following Accounts of Religion.

Friday January 30. Both Houſes preſented an Addreſs to the King, to appoint a Day of Faſting and Prayer, in conſideration of the Miſeries of the Reformed Churches abroad, &c. The King anſwer'd in ſome diſguſt, that Fighting would do them more good than Faſting; that the cuſtom of Faſting every Seſſion was but lately begun, and he was not fully ſatisfied with the neceſſity of it at this time: However, he would now grant their Requeſt, with this note, that it ſhould not be brought into preſident for frequent Faſts, except on great Occaſions. 1628. Commons deſire a Faſt. The King not pleaſed with the Motion grants it.

Declaration on of the Commons.

Soon after the Houſe of Commons preſented a Declaration to the King, in anſwer to his Meſſages, for expediting the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage; to Repreſent that they could not proceed therein without giving a Precedency to Religion, which they apprehended to be in great danger from Popery and Arminianiſm. The King anſwer'd, that the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage was firſt regularly offered, and he muſt be ſtill inſtant with them, that they proceed in it with diligence: and as for the cauſe of delaying Religion, there is none of them ſhould have a greater Care of it than himſelf.

Againſt the King's Declaration.

Wedneſday February 4. The Houſe of Commons debated of the King's Declaration to prohibit Diſputes about Religion; concluding, that the main End thereof was to ſuppreſs the Puritan Party, and give liberty to the contrary Side; and they conceiv'd that Biſhop Land and Biſhop Mountague had adviſed the King to that Declaration.

A Member ſerv'd with a Subpœna.

Tueſday February 10. Amidſt the Debates upon Religion, the Ware-Houſe of Mr. Rolls, Merchant and ſitting Member, was lock'd up by a Purſuivant, and he himſelf called forth and ſerv'd with a Subpœna. This much inflam'd the Houſe, though Sir Humphry May, a Privy-Counſellor declar'd, that it did not proceed from King or Council; and the Attorney-General wrote to Mr. Rolls to excuſe the thing as a Miſtake.

Meſſage of the Commons to the Barons of the Exchequer.

Thurſday February 12. The Houſe was in a Committee upon Tonnage and Poundage, and admitted the Complaints of ſeveral Merchants, that their Goods were ſeiz'd, and Informations in the Star-Chamber preferr'd againſt them. Upon which the Houſe Order'd, that a Meſſage ſhould be ſent to the Barons of the Exchequer, to make void their Injunctions and Orders about the ſtopping of Merchants Goods.

The Barons Anſwer.

Soon after, the Lord Treaſurer and Barons return'd an Anſwer, " that in their ſaid Orders and " Injunctions they did not determine, nor any way " touch upon the Right of Tonnage and Poundage. This Anſwer was ill reſented by the Houſe, as a juſtification of the Proceedings in the Exchequer; into which they reſolve farther to enquire.

The Pardons granted to Mr. Mountague, Dr. Manwaring, Dr. Sibthorp, and Mr. Coſens, gave a new Offence to the Houſe, who referr'd the Matter to a Committee, and they Reported ſome indirect Dealings, as well as dangerous Deſigns in it.

The Bookſellers and Printers in London, by Petition to the Houſe, complain'd of the Reſtraint of Books written againſt Popery and Arminianiſm, and the contrary allowed by the only means of the Biſhop of London.

Sir Will. Acton Sheriff of London committed to the Tower.

An Information in Star-Chamber preferred againſt Mr. Chambers for refuſing to pay Tonnage while his Petition of Relief was lodg'd in Parliament, rais'd another Ferment in the Houſe; who on that occaſion committed to the Tower Sir William Acton Sheriff of London.

Friday Feb. 13. the Houſe debated of the Increaſe of Popery, and made Enquiry concerning the ten Prieſts arraign'd at the King's-Bench; of which one only was condemn'd, and he repriev'd, and the other nine releas'd. Mr. Secretary Cook and the Attorney General being examin'd upon this matter, reſolv'd the Proceeding into Warrants granted by the King's Mercy.

Thurſ-

1628. King's Message ungrateful

Thurſday Feb. 19. ſeveral Officers of the Cuſtom were examin'd, and charg'd with Breach of Privilege in ſeizing the Goods of Mr. Rolls, a Parliament-man. But while the Houſe was debating of Reparation and Puniſhment, the King ſent a Meſſage on Feb. 23. that what the Cuſtomers did was by his own direct Order and Command at the Council-Board. Upon which a Committee reſolv'd, that Mr. Rolls ought to have had Privilege of Perſon and Goods: but the Command of the King is ſo great, that they leave it to the Houſe. Upon this followed many warm Speeches, and long Debates, and at laſt the Queſtion ordered to be put, Whether the ſeizing of Mr. Rolls's Goods was not a Breach of Privilege? The Speaker refuſed to put the Queſtion, and ſaid, He was otherwiſe commanded by the King. Upon which the Houſe, in ſome heat, Adjourn'd to Wedneſday next: At which time, both Houſes were Adjourn'd by his Majeſty's Command to Monday March 2.

Speaker held in the Chair.

On that Day the Commons being met, urged the Speaker to put the former Queſtion, who ſaid, I have a Command from the King to Adjourn till Mar. 10. and put no Queſtion: And ſo offering to leave the Chair, he was held down in it by ſome Members till the enſuing Proteſtations were publiſh'd.

Proteſtations of the Houſe.

I. " Whoſoever ſhall bring in Innovation of Religion, or by Favour or Countenance ſeek to extend or introduce Popery or Arminianiſm, or other Opinion diſagreeing from the Truth, and Orthodox Church, ſhall be reputed a capital Enemy to this Kingdom and Commonwealth.

II. " Whoſoever ſhall counſel or adviſe the taking and levying of the Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage, not being granted by Parliament, or ſhall be an Actor or Inſtrument therein, ſhall be likewiſe reputed an Innovator in the Government, and a capital Enemy to the Kingdom and Commonwealth.

III. " If any Merchant or Perſon whatſoever ſhall voluntarily yield or pay the ſaid Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage, not being granted by Parliament, he ſhall likewiſe be reputed a Betrayer of the Liberties of England, and an Enemy to the ſame.

The King much incens'd.

The King being inform'd of this Diſorder, ſent for the Serjeant of the Houſe; but the Door was lock'd upon him, and he could not attend his Majeſty. Then the King ſent the Gentleman Uſher from the Lord's Houſe; but he was refuſed Admittance till the ſaid Votes were read: and then, in great confuſion, the Houſe was Adjourn'd to the 10th of March.

Commits ſeveral of the Members.

March 3. ſeveral leading Members were by Warrant ſummon'd to appear before the Council on the next Day: when Mr. Holles, Sir John Elliot, Mr. Corriton, and Mr. Valentine appearing, and refuſing to anſwer out of Parliament for what was ſaid and done in Parliament, were committed cloſe Priſoners to the Tower; and a Proclamation for apprehending Mr. Long and Mr. Stroud.

Tueſday March 10. His Majeſty in the Throne with Crown and Robes, the Lords in their Robes, the Commons not ſent for, tho' ſeveral appearing below the Bar; the King ſpoke thus:

My Lords,

Diſſolving Speech.

" I Never came here upon ſo unpleaſant an Occaſion, it being the Diſſolution of a Parliament. " Therefore Men may have ſome cauſe to wonder " why I ſhould not rather chuſe to do this by Commiſſion, it being a general Maxim of Kings, to " leave harſh Commands to their Miniſters, Themſelves only executing pleaſing things. Yet conſidering that Juſtice as well conſiſts in Reward and " Praiſe of Virtue, as Puniſhing of Vice; I thought " it neceſſary to come here to day, and to declare " to you and all the World, that it was meerly the " undutiful and ſeditious Carriage in the Lower " Houſe, that hath made the Diſſolution of this " Parliament. And you, my Lords, are ſo far from " being any Cauſers of it, that I take as much " comfort in your dutiful Demeanour, as I am juſtly diſtaſted with their Proceedings. Yet to avoid " their Miſtakings, let me tell you, that it is ſo far " from me to adjudge all the Houſe alike guilty, " that I know there are many there as dutiful Subjects as any in the World; it being but ſome few " Vipers among them that did caſt this Miſt of Undutifulneſs over moſt of their Eyes: Yet to ſay " Truth, there was a good Number there that could " not be infected with this Contagion; inſomuch " that ſome did expreſs their Duties in ſpeaking, " which was the general Fault of the Houſe the laſt " Day. 1628.

" To conclude, As thoſe Vipers muſt look for " their Reward of Puniſhment, ſo You, my Lords, " may juſtly expect from me that Favour and Protection that a good King oweth to his loving and " faithful Nobility.

" And now, my Lord Keeper, do what I have " commanded you.

Then the Lord Keeper pronounc'd the Parliament Diſſolv'd: and there had been a Proclamation for the Diſſolution of it, dated March 2.

Diſcontents and Libels.

The Diſcontents of the People were rais'd and artificially improv'd upon this Occaſion; and many Libels were thrown about the City, and eſpecially one againſt Biſhop Laud, to this effect. " Laud " look to thy ſelf; be aſſured thy Life is ſought. " As thou art the Fountain of Wickedneſs, Repent " of thy monſtrous Sins before thou be taken out of " the World: and aſſure thy ſelf, neither God nor " the World can endure ſuch a vile Counſellor or " Whiſperer to live.

King's Declaration of the Cauſes of Diſſolving this Parliament.

Upon the many Murmurs and Tendencies to Sedition, the King thought it proper to quiet the Minds of his loving Subjects by a Declaration of the Cauſes which moved him to diſſolve the laſt Parliament; beginning thus: " Howſoever Princes are not bound to " give Account of their Actions but to God alone, " yet for the Satisfaction of the Minds and Affections of our loving Subjects, we have thought " good to ſet down thus much by way of Declaration, that we may appear to the World in the " Truth and Sincerity of our Actions, and not in " thoſe Colours in which we know ſome turbulent " and ill-affected Spirits (to mask and diſguiſe " their wicked Intentions, dangerous to the State) " would repreſent us to the publick View.

And ſo giving an Account of their whole Proceedings, with full Reflections on them, it ended thus:

" And now having laid down the Truth and " Clearneſs of our Proceedings, all wiſe and diſcreet " Men may eaſily judge of thoſe Rumours and jealous Fears that are maliciouſly and wickedly " bruited abroad; and may diſcern, by Examination of their own Hearts, whether, in reſpect of " the free Paſſage of the Goſpel, indifferent and equal Adminiſtration of Juſtice, Freedom from " Oppreſſion, and the great Peace and Quietneſs " which every Man enjoyeth under his own Vine " and Fig-tree, the Happineſs of this Nation can " be parallell'd by any of our Neighbour Countries; " and if not, then to acknowledge their own Bleſſedneſs, and for the ſame be thankful to God the " Author of all Goodneſs.

The King now reſolv'd to proceed in the Star-Chamber againſt the Members committed to the Tower. For this purpoſe the Judges, by Command, met at Serjeants-Inn, where the Attorney-General propoſed ſome Queſtions, to which their Lordſhips gave in theſe Opinions.

Anſwer of the Judges to the Queſtions of Privilege of Parliament.

I. " All Parliament Men, by Privilege of Houſe, " ought to have freedom of Speech, concerning mat- " ters debated in Parliament, by a Parliamentary " Courſe.

II. " That a Subject receiving probable Informa- " tion of any Treaſon, ought to make it known to " the King, or his Commiſſioners, when thereunto " required;

1629. "required: Or elſe it is an Offence puniſhable in the "Star-Chamber, unleſs the Diſcovery concern the "Party himſelf.

III. "That a Parliament Man committing an "Offence againſt the King or Council, not in a Par- "liamentary way, may be puniſh'd for it after the "Parliament is ended; though regularly, he cannot "be compell'd out of Parliament to anſwer things "done in Parliament in a Parliamentary Courſe.

IV. "That if Parliament Men raiſe falſe Ru- "mours and Slanders againſt the Lords of the Coun- "cil and Judges, it is puniſhable out of Parliament, "as an Offence exorbitant committed in Parliament, "beyond the Office and beſides the Duty of a Par- "liament Man.

Upon the ſtrength of theſe Opinions, the King confirm'd his Reſolution of bringing the impriſon'd Members to Submiſſion or Penalties, for their late Behaviour in the Houſe.

Proceedings againſt the late Members of Parliament.

This Eaſter Term Mr. Stroud and Mr. Long, two of the confin'd Members brought a Habeas Corpus, directed to the Marſhal of the Houſhould to be return'd to the King's-Bench. A ſpecial Return was made, that they were committed by Warrant of Council, and detained by another Warrant under his Majeſty's Hand. The Sufficiency of this Return was argu'd largely, and Judgment given againſt the Priſoners.

May 7. An Information had been exhibited in the Star-Chamber, againſt the ſeveral Members then in Cuſtody, Sir John Elliot, Denzil Holles, Benjamin Valentine, Walter Long, William Corriton, William Strode, John Selden, Sir Miles Hobert, and Sir Peter Hayman, for their undutiful Speeches and Actions in the late Parliament. In Trinity Term they ſeverally brought a Habeas Corpus, and after Pleading a Return was made, that their cauſe of Commitment was Special, and they ought not to be Bail'd. Nor were the Priſoners brought to the Bar, as by Rule and Cuſtom of the Court; but thoſe of them who had been committed to other Priſons, were now by expreſs command remov'd to the Tower. In Michaelmas Term the Judges came to a Reſolution, that the Priſoners ſhould be Bail'd, giving Sureties for their good Behaviour. And this Motion of Diſcharge proceeded from the King himſelf, who had conferr'd with the Judges, and had declared his Content the Priſoners ſhould be Bail'd, notwithſtanding their obſtinacy, that they would not ſo much as preſent a Petition to him to expreſs, That they were ſorry he was offended with them. But the Priſoners began now to value themſelves upon their Suffering, and had ſo much Countenance from ſeveral of their late fellow Members, that they would not now accept of a Deliverance, but unanimouſly refuſed to find Sureties for their Behaviour; nay, Mr. Holles was ſo induſtrious to be continu'd in cuſtody, that when one offerr'd his own Bail, he would not yield to the courſe of the Court, to be himſelf Bound with him. And even Mr. Long, who had actually found Sureties in the Chief Juſtices Chamber, declar'd in Court that his Sureties ſhould no longer continue. Such a Merit did they now place in Confinement as to labour againſt their own Liberty; and by ſuch glorying in Perſecution to raiſe a Popularity to themſelves, and caſt an Odium on the King.

Who glory in their Sufferings.

Upon this intractable Humour the King purſued another Method, and letting fall the Proceſs in the Star-Chamber, he reſolv'd to proceed againſt them by Common Law in the King's-Bench; where in this Michaelmas Term an Information was exhibited by the Attorney-General, to which the Defendants put in a Plea to the Juriſdiction of the Court, and the Court did not over-rule the Plea, but gave a Day to join in Demurr that Term; when after learned Arguments on both ſides, the Judges agreed, That the Court, as this Caſe is, ſhall have Juriſdiction, although theſe Offences were committed in Parliament, and that the impriſoned Members ought to Anſwer. But the Defendants refuſed to put in any other Plea; upon which, on the laſt Day of the Term, Judgment was given againſt them upon a Nihil dicit, in this manner: 1629.

Judgment of the Court.

I. "That every of the Defendants ſhall be im- "priſon'd during the King's Pleaſure; Sir John El- "liot to be impriſoned in the Tower of London, and "the other Defendants in other Priſons.

II. "That none of them ſhall be deliver'd out of "Priſon, until he give Security in this Court for his "good Behaviour, and have made Submiſſion and "Acknowledgment of his Offence.

III. "Sir John Elliot, as the greateſt Offender "and Ringleader, ſhall pay a Fine to the King of "2000 l. Mr. Holles 1000 Marks, and Mr. Valentine "500 l.

They refuſed to ſubmit to any thing but the neceſſity of a long Impriſonment, where ſome of them died in Cuſtody, and others treaſur'd up a Reputation of Confeſſors for the Privilege of Parliament, and in 1640. had an ample Reward of Thanks and Money.

Peace between England and France.

Rochel being Surrender'd by the Proteſtants, and the French King being immediately after engag'd to proſecute a War in Italy againſt the Spaniards: This was a proper Juncture to mediate a Peace between England and France, of which the Articles were agreed upon at Suſa in Italy, within the Month of April, and publiſhed in both Kingdoms on the 10th of May. A Peace very acceptable to the King and Court upon the juſt Principles of Policy; and more ſo to the Queen, upon the accounts of Nature and Religion. But though Wiſe and Honourable enough in the Terms and Articles, it was ſuſpected and traduc'd by many Popular Heads, as if it did not provide for the Proteſtants abroad, and would much encourage the Papiſts here at home.

Affairs of Ireland.

Ireland had been long without a Parliament, and many Grievances began to diſcontent the People; the Lord Deputy, Viſcount Falkland, conſented to the Deſires of the Nobility and Gentry, that Commiſſioners ſhould be choſe out of each Province, to go over into England, and preſent their Grievances to the King himſelf, and pray a Redreſs of them. Theſe Commiſſioners came to the Court in September, and gave in Writing their humble Petition; offering to remit to his Highneſs one hundred and fifty thouſand Pounds, borrowed of the Country for pay of the Army, and to grant three Subſidies to be paid in the next three Years, humbly requeſting Eaſe and Relief to ſome Burthens and Grievances. To every one of theſe Complaints of Grievance (being fifty five in number) the King return'd a particular Anſwer, either giving preſent Satisfaction, or promiſing a Method of ſudden Remedy: And to the laſt Requeſt for a new Parliament in that Kingdom, the King declar'd his Pleaſure for a ſpeedy Summons; upon which the Deputy and Privy-Council iſſued Writs for a Parliament to meet in November: A courſe too haſty and irregular. For by Poyning's Act 20 Hen. 7. a Certificate muſt be firſt ſent over into England, from the Deputy and Council, under the Great Seal of Ireland, and then his Majeſty's Licenſe muſt be ſent back under the Great Seal of England. This Defect and Omiſſion was cenſur'd by an Order of the Council-Board, and by them referred to the Judges; who gave their Opinion, that the Summons was illegal and void.

Delivery of the Queen.

May 13. The Queen before her Time was deliver'd of a Son, and the Romiſh Prieſts were ſuch Frogs in the Bed-Chamber, that they would have immediately baptiz'd the Child in their way, if the King had not ſtep'd in and expreſly aſſign'd that Office to his Chaplain Dr. Webb, who baptiz'd him by the Name of Charles: He died about an Hour after, and was interr'd at Weſtminſter by the Biſhop of London.

Inſolence of the Popiſh Prieſts

A Peace in agitation with Spain.

The King of Spain by his Loſſes in Italy, was brought low enough to ſue for a Peace with England. To ſollicite this Affair, Peter Reuben the famous 1629. Painter of Antwerp, Secretary and Gentleman of the Chamber to the Archdutcheſs, was ſent hither as an Agent, and ſeem'd to offer the reſtitution of the Palatinate, which was but a Bait to bring on other Terms. Upon the Jealouſie of the Spaniards, and the Honour of the Engliſh Court, this Negotiation went ſlowly on, till Reuben was recalled, and Don Carlos de Colomos was ſent hither as Ambaſſador in January following, who brought it to a concluſion in in the following Year.

The King ſoftens ſome of the late Members.

To ſoften the Murmurs of the late Members now impriſoned, the King tried another way of gaining over ſome other of the moſt Popular Commons, by Royal Favours and Preferments. Sir Thomas Wentworth and Sir John Savile were made Privy-Counſellors, Sir Dudley Diggs Maſter of the Rolls, Mr. Noy the King's Attorney-General, and Mr. Littleton Solicitor. This Policy, however Generous and Wiſe, was called the buying off Men, and among the Improvers of Sedition, it help'd to aggravate the craft of the Court, and the mercenary Spirit of theſe Perſons, who yet were moſt of them Men of the greateſt Induſtry, Fidelity and Ability in the King's Service.

Having thus related all Civil Affairs of Importance to the end of 1629, by a Method before preſcribed, we ſhall now look back upon the State of Religion where we left it at the end of 1626.

State of Religion. 1627.

The Leniety of Abp. Abbot.

And here it muſt be acknowledg'd to have been the Senſe of many Church-men, that the Lenity and Coldneſs of Archbiſhop Abbot had a very unhappy Influence upon the Peace and Honour of the Church of England. His immediate Predeceſſor, Dr. Bancroft, had Experience to underſtand the Conſtitution of the Church, and had Courage to aſſert the Diſcipline of it: and had he been ſucceeded by Biſhop Andrews, or Biſhop Overal, or ſome other active Inſtrument of Decency and Order; this Church had perhaps ſtood the Glory of the Reformation and the Envy of Rome. But by the bold Importunity of the Earl of Dunbar, the prime Scotch Favourite, Dr. Abbot was preferr'd firſt to the See of Coventry and Litchfield, then ſoon to London, and ſo to Canterbury. A private Maſter of a College in Oxford, heavy and moroſe, and little elſe to make him ſeem wiſe and grave. His Character is thus drawn by a great Maſter of that Art. " He had been Head or Maſter of " one of the pooreſt Colleges in Oxford, and had " Learning ſufficient for that Province. He was a " Man of very moroſe Manners, and a very ſour " Aſpect, which in that time was called Gravity: " Made Biſhop before he had been Parſon, Vicar, " or Curate of any Pariſh Church in England, or " Dean or Prebend of any Cathedral Church: and " was in truth totally ignorant of the true Conſtitu- " tion of the Church of England and the ſtate and " intereſt of the Clergy; as ſufficiently appeared " through the whole courſe of his Life. He conſi- " dered Chriſtian Religion no otherwiſe than as it " abhorred and reviled Popery, and valued thoſe " Men moſt who did that the moſt furiouſly. For " the ſtrict Obſervation of the Diſcipline of the " Church, or the Conformity to the Articles or Ca- " nons eſtabliſh'd, he made little Enquiry, and took " leſs Care; and having himſelf made a very little " progreſs in ancient and ſolid Study of Divinity, " he adhered only to the Doctrine of Calvin, and " for his ſake did not think ſo ill of the Diſcipline " as he ought to have done.

Character of Abp. Abbot by the Lord Clarendon, Hiſt. Reb. B. 1. p. 68.

For theſe Infirmities, this Prelate never made a juſt Figure in the Church, and had but very little Intereſt in the Court. But theſe very Diſadvantages turn'd to his greater Credit in the Country, and in the late Parliaments: And one thing now happen'd, that ſerv'd much to raiſe his Reputation.

Caſe of Dr. Sibthorp.

Dr. Sibthorp Vicar of Brackley, Son-in-law to Sir John Lamb, a Man of ordinary Parts and ſordid Ambition, had preach'd a Sermon at the Lent-Aſſizes in Northampton 1626, on Rom. 13. 7. wherein his profeſt Deſign was, to prove the King's Right of impoſing Loans and Contributions on the Subject. This gave ſuch Offence to many of the Auditors, 1627. that the Noiſe of it reach'd the Court, and the Preacher was to be countenanc'd upon the meer Fame of Loyalty. Upon this Conceit, he tranſcribes his Sermon, and preſents it to the Duke of Buckingham, who carried the Copy to the King, and recommended the Publiſhing of it. The Biſhop of London wiſely declined the Licenſing, or purpoſely threw the Temptation upon the Archbiſhop, to whom the Copy was brought by Mr. Murrey Gentleman of the Bed-chamber, requiring his Approbation and Licence in the King's Name. The Archbiſhop made Exceptions to ſeveral Paſſages in the Sermon, and deſir'd the Meſſenger to acquaint his Majeſty with the Reaſons why he muſt decline to give his Imprimatur. After ſome days, Mr. Murrey return'd, and told the Archbiſhop, the King would inſiſt upon it. But the Archbiſhop ſtill wav'd the matter, till another Meſſage was brought him by the ſame hand, that if he did not diſpatch it, the King would take ſome other courſe with him. Upon this the Archbiſhop put his Objections into Writing, and ſent them to the King, by whom they were communicated to the Duke, and by him to Laud Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter, and Oxford; in whoſe Names an Anſwer to the Archbiſhop's Exceptions was drawn up, and ſent by Mr. Murrey to Lambeth: but no Argument or Authority could prevail with his Grace to licenſe the Sermon; which was ſoon after licens'd by the Biſhop of London. The Duke of Buckingham reſented this Denial as a Contempt of himſelf and the King, and reſolved upon ſome Mark of Diſpleaſure. On Tueſday July 5. the Lord Conway was ſent to Croyden, to inform the Archbiſhop, that it was his Majeſty's Pleaſure he ſhould withdraw himſelf to Canterbury, and ſhould not from henceforth meddle with the High Commiſſion. The Archbiſhop offer'd Reaſons why Canterbury would be an inconvenient Place of Reſidence for him, and deſired he might rather retire to his Houſe of Foard five Miles beyond; to which the King readily aſſented, and allow'd convenient time to prepare for his Removal. The Report of this Hardſhip upon the Archbiſhop, brought him more Viſitors to take their Leave of him; to thoſe degrees of Popularity, that this more provok'd the Court againſt him. When in ſubmiſſion he was got to Foard, he wrote there a large Narrative of his own Caſe; which indeed makes his Judgment and Actions in this Particular to be very laudable.

Abp. Abbot honeſtly refuſes to Licenſe the Sermon.

See this Narrative of Abp. Abbot, in Ruſhwor. Collect. Vol. 1. p. 438.

Severe Proceedings againſt the Abp.

The Archbiſhop, in Diſgrace and a ſort of Baniſhment, made no Submiſſion to the King, but gave new Occaſions to the Court to be more and more offended with him. Upon which he was ſequeſtred from his Juriſdiction, and a Commiſſion was ſign'd Octob. 9. to the Biſhops of London, Durham, Rocheſter, Oxford, Bath and Wells, to do, execute, and perform all Acts, Matters and Things, any way touching or concerning the Power, Juriſdiction, or Authority of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in Cauſes or Matters Eccleſiaſtical.

Dangers of Popery.

After the Reſolution to call the Parliament (which met March 17. 162⅝) the Dangers of Popery made a very popular Noiſe; and there were ſome unhappy Reaſons to promote it: eſpecially, that a Society of Recuſants was taken in Clerkenwell, moſt of them Jeſuits, and the Houſe where they were taken was deſigned to be a College of that Order. Among their Papers was found the Copy of a Letter written to their Rector at Bruſſels, upon the Subject of the enſuing Parliament; wherein they thus expreſs themſelves —— " We hope as much in this Parlia- " ment, as ever we feared any in Qu. Elizabeth's " days. —— We have made great uſe of this Anar- " chical Election, and have prejudicated and anti- " cipated the great one, that none but the King's " Enemies and His are choſen of this Parliament. —— " Now we have planted that ſoveraign Drug Armi- " nianiſm, which we hope will purge the Proteſtants " from their Hereſie. —— I cannot chuſe but laugh 1627. " to ſee how ſome of our own Coat have accoutred " themſelves: You would ſcarce know them if you " ſaw them: And 'tis admirable how in Speech and " Geſture they act the Puritans. —— I am at this " time tranſported with Joy, to ſee how happily all " Inſtruments and Means, as well great as leſs, co- " operate unto our Purpoſes.

" to

Policy of the Papiſts to divide the Proteſtants.

The Senſe of this Letter was only to ſhew, that the Hopes of the Papiſts was in the Diviſion of the Proteſtants, and their Intereſt was to promote that Diviſion. And the Diſcovery of the Letter did but unhappily ſerve to promote the Argument of it: for it encreas'd the Fears and Jealouſies between Church-man and Puritan, and between Court and Country.

Proceedings in Parliament upon Matters of Religion.

One of the firſt things in the Houſe of Commons was to ſettle a Committee for Religion on Thurſday Mar. 20. and to addreſs the King for a ſolemn Faſt. The Commons had ſoon after a Conference with the Lords upon a Petition againſt Recuſants, wherein Mr. Secretary Cook thus expreſt himſelf. —— " And " a little to awake the Zeal and Care of our learn- " ed and grave Fathers, it is fit that they take no- " tice of that Hierarchy which is already eſtabliſh- " ed in competition with their Lordſhips; for they " have a Biſhop conſecrated by the Pope: This Bi- " ſhop hath his ſubalternate Officers of all kinds, " as Vicars-General, Arch-Deacons, Rural Deans, " Apparitors, and ſuch like: Neither are theſe No- " minal or Titular Officers alone; but they all exe- " cute their Juriſdictions, and make their ordinary " Viſitations through the Kingdom, keep Courts, " and determine Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes: And which " is an Argument of more conſequence, they keep " ordinary Intelligence by their Agents in Rome, and " hold correſpondence with the Nuncio's and Car- " dinals both at Bruxels and in France. Neither are " the Seculars alone grown to this height, but the " Regulars are more active and dangerous —— Even " at this time they intend to hold a concurrent As- " ſembly with this Parliament.

Petition of the Parliament,

Upon this View of Popiſh Inſolence a Petition was agreed upon by both Houſes, and preſented to his Majeſty on Monday March 31.

To give a Specimen of the firſt Article, and his Majeſty's Anſwer to it

Art. 1. " We moſt humbly and ardently beg at " the hands of your moſt Sacred Majeſty, that your " Majeſty will be pleaſed to give continual Life " and Motion to all thoſe Laws that ſtand in force " againſt Jeſuits, Seminary Prieſts, and all that have " taken Orders by Authority of the See of Rome, by " exacting a more due and ſerious Execution of the " ſame. Amongſt which Number, thoſe that have " highly abuſed your Majeſty's Clemency by retur- " ning into the Kingdom after their Baniſhment, " contrary to your Highneſs expreſs Proclamation, " we humbly deſire may be left to the Severity of " your Laws, without admitting of any Mediation " or Interceſſion for them. And that ſuch of your " Majeſty's unſound and ill-affected Subjects as do " receive, harbour, or conceal any of their viperous " Generation, may without delay ſuffer ſuch Penal- " ties and Puniſhments as the Laws moſt juſtly im- " poſe upon them.

Againſt Popery.

King's Anſwer.

Anſw. " To the firſt Point his Majeſty anſwer- " eth, That he will, according to your Deſire, give " both Life and Motion to the Laws that ſtand in " force againſt the Jeſuits, Seminary Prieſts, and all " that have taken Orders by Authority of the See " of Rome: And to that end, his Majeſty will give " ſtrict Order to all his Miniſters for the diſcover- " ing and apprehending of them; and ſo leave " them, being apprehended, to the Tryal of the " Law. And in caſe after Tryal there ſhall be cauſe " to reſpit Execution of any of them; yet they ſhall " be committed (according to the Example of the " beſt Times) to the Caſtle of Wisbich; and there " be ſafely kept from exerciſing their Functions, or " ſpreading their ſuperſtitious and dangerous Do- " ctrine: And the Receivers and Abetters they ſhall " be left to the Law. 1627.

The ſecond Article was for watching Ports and Harbours, and ſearching Ships for Diſcovery of Jeſuits and young Students: The third for prohibiting all Popiſh Recuſants to come to Court, or within ten Miles of London: The fourth for taking away Compoſitions by which Papiſts purchaſe to themſelves a ſort of concealed Toleration: The fifth for reſtraining the Reſort of Engliſh Papiſts to the Chapels of Foreign Ambaſſadors: The ſixth that no Papiſt be put into any Place of Authority or Command: The ſeventh that all Judges and Juſtices be commanded to execute the Laws, and to give to the Lord Keeper a ſtrict Account of their Proceedings: The eighth and laſt, for making a proviſional Law for training and educating of the Children of Popiſh Recuſants in the Grounds and Principles of our holy Religion. To all which Articles his Majeſty return'd ſuch diſtinct and full Anſwers, as might have convinc'd all rational People, that ſome late Connivences were really owing to the Hopes of a like Tenderneſs to foreign Proteſtants, and to an indulging Affection to the Queen, not at all to the King's own Judgment or Inclination, nor to any worſe Deſign in the prime Miniſters of State.

Complaint againſt the Encouragement of Arbitrary Power.

There was another Jealouſie in the Houſe of Commons, that ſome of the interiour Clergy were advancing new Doctrines, to flatter the Court, and to give the King a Divine Right to Abſolute Power: They thought this to be pragmatical, and of pernicious Effect. And therefore about the latter end of May, Mr. Rous brought in a Charge againſt Dr. Edward Manwaring, for his Plot and Practice to alter and ſubvert the Frame and Fabrick of this Eſtate and Commonwealth. To which end (ſays he)

Speech of Mr. Rous againſt Dr. Manwaring.

1. " He labours to infuſe into the Conſcience of " his Majeſty, the Perſuaſion of a Power not bound- " ing it ſelf with Laws, which King James, of fa- " mous Memory, calls in his Speech to the Parlia- " ment Tyranny, yea Tyranny accompanied with Per- " jury.

2. " He endeavours to perſuade the Conſcience " of the Subjects, that they are bound to obey " Commands illegal; yea, he damns them for not " obeying them.

3. " He robs the Subjects of the Propriety of their " Goods.

Declaration of the Commons againſt Dr. Manwaring.

The Matter of this Charge was put into a formal Declaration of the Commons againſt Dr. Manwaring Clerk and Doctor in Divinity, which was preſented on June 3. to the Lords at a Conference betwixt the Committees of both Houſes, Mr. Pimm managing that Conference for the Commons, who in a very long Speech did inveigh and aggravate as much as Zeal and Talk could do. Soon after the Commons, by their Speaker, demanded Judgment of the Lords againſt the ſaid Doctor; and they gave this Sentence.

Judgment of the Lds againſt him.

1. " That Roger Manwaring, Doctor in Divinity, " ſhall be impriſon'd during the Pleaſure of the " Houſe.

2. " That he be Fined one thouſand Pounds to " the King.

3. " That he ſhall make ſuch Submiſſion and Ac- " knowledgment of his Offences, as ſhall be ſet " down by a Committee in Writing, both at the " Bar, and in the Houſe of Commons.

4. " That he ſhall be ſuſpended for the time of " three Years from the Exerciſe of the Miniſtry, " and in the mean time a ſufficient Preaching Mi-

1627. " niſter ſhall be provided out of his Livings to ſerve " the Cure: This Suſpenſion and Proviſion to be " done by the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction.

5. " That he ſhall be hereafter diſabled to have " any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity or Secular Office.

6. " That he ſhall be for ever diſabled to preach " at the Court hereafter.

7. " That his ſaid Book is worthy to be burnt, " and that for the better effecting this, his Maje- " ſty may be moved to grant a Proclamation to call " in the ſaid Books, that they may be all burnt ac- " cordingly in London and both the Univerſities; " and for the Inhibiting the printing thereof upon a " great Penalty.

In purſuance of the third Article of Penance, the Doctor made this Submiſſion in Tears upon his Knees.

May it pleaſe this honourable Houſe,

The Doctor's Submiſſion. " I Do here in all ſorrow of Heart, and true Re- " pentance, acknowledge the many Errors and " Indiſcretions which I have committed, in preach- " ing and publiſhing thoſe two Sermons of mine, " which I called Religion and Allegiance, and my great " Fault in falling upon this Theme again, and hand- " ling the ſame raſhly and unadviſedly in my own " Pariſh Church of St. Giles in the Fields, the 4th " of May laſt paſt. I do humbly acknowledge thoſe " three Sermons to have been full of many dange- " rous Paſſages, Inferences, and ſcandalous Aſperſi- " ons in moſt part of the ſame. And I do humbly " acknowledge the Juſtice of this Honourable Houſe " in that Judgment and Sentence paſs'd upon me for " my great Offence. And I do from the bottom of " my Heart, crave Pardon of God, the King, and " this Honourable Houſe, and the Church, and this " Common-wealth in general, and thoſe worthy " Perſons adjudged to be reflected upon by me in " particular, for theſe great Errors and Offences.

Roger Manwaring.

If all the other Particulars in the Sentence had been as duly executed, it had been more for the Intereſt of the King, and even for the Credit of the Preacher. Preferr'd by the Court. But when, after this Solemnity of Cenſure and Submiſſion, the Party was made a Favourite of the Court, and had Preferments heap'd upon him, this threw the Odium of the Doctrine upon the King and his Miniſters, which might otherwiſe have reſted upon the Indiſcretion of the Preacher. And this marked out the Doctor for a more propenſe Deſign of Flattery, and for diſſembling a Submiſſion, when he might have been otherwiſe pitied for inconſiderate Raſhneſs, and even belov'd for the Ingenuity of Confeſſing and Retracting.

Fears of Arminianiſm. Next to Popery and Arbitrary Power, the Commons were under terrible Apprehenſions of what they called Arminianiſm. And tho' few underſtood the thing, or ſo much as the Name; yet it was enough that they thought it a Hereſy, and even a Court Hereſy. And therefore June 13. the Commons voted, that Dr. Neal, Biſhop of Winchester, and Dr. Laud, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, be named to be thoſe near about the King, who are ſuſpected to be Arminians; and that they are juſtly ſuſpected to be unſound in their Opinions that way. And accordingly in the Commons Remonſtrance againſt the Duke of Buckingham, they declare, " The Hearts of your " good Subjects are perplex'd, when with ſorrow " they behold a daily growth and ſpreading of the " Faction of the Arminians, that being, as your " Majeſty well knows, but a cunning way to bring " in Popery; and the Profeſſors of thoſe Opinions, " the common Diſturbers of the Proteſtant Churches, " and Incendiaries in thoſe States wherein they have " gotten any head; being Proteſtants in Show, but " Jeſuits in Opinion: which cauſed your Royal Fa- " ther, with ſo much pious Wiſdom and ardent " Zeal, to endeavour the ſuppreſſing of them, as " well at home as in the Neighbour Countries. And " your gracious Majeſty imitating his moſt worthy " Example, hath openly, and by your Proclamati- " on, declared your miſlike of thoſe Perſons and of " their Opinions; who notwithſtanding, are much " favoured and advanced, not wanting Friends e- " ven of the Clergy near to your Majeſty, namely " Dr. Neal, Biſhop of Winchester, and Dr. Laud, Bi- " ſhop of Bath and Wells, who are juſtly ſuſpected " to be unſound in their Opinions that way. And " it being now generally held the way to Preferment " and Promotion in the Church, many Scholars do " bend the courſe of their Studies to maintain thoſe " Errors. 1627. Bp. Neal and Biſhop Laud expreſly nam'd.

It is certain theſe Suggeſtions were founded much upon Prejudice and Inadvertence: For moſt of the Engliſh Divines called Arminians, had never read the Works of Arminius, but had drawn their diſtinguiſhing Opinions from the Primitive Fathers, and from the ſevere Abſurdities of ſome of the Calviniſtical Writers. The Arminians in Holland had been chiefly odious for being a State Faction, and it was under that Civil Character that King James was ſo incenſed againſt them. His preſent Majeſty, and the Duke, favoured theſe Engliſh Divines, not ſo much for their Sentiments in Point of Faith, as for their eminent Zeal in matters of Diſcipline, and their extraordinary Spirit of Loyalty: But however, the Popular Rumour obtained, that all who departed from the Rigours of Calvin were Arminians, and all Arminians were the Inſtruments of Popery and Arbitrary Power.

A Convocation was called in concurrence with this Parliament to meet. A Convocation called with the Parliament.

But nothing of Eccleſiaſtical concern was ſo much as moved in it, tho' Opportunity, and even Provocation offer'd, by the unhappy Controverſies in Religon then depending; and by the Examination and Cenſure of Books and Perſons in the Civil Aſſembly, which might have been thought as proper to fall under the Cogniſance of this Eccleſiaſtical Body. To do nothing but give their Money. But the Principle and Practice were then fix'd, that a Convocation began no Debates in Religion, without Inſtruction from the Biſhops and Licenſe from the King. And therefore not receiving ſuch Commiſſion to act in Spirituals, they kept only to their immemorial Right in Temporals, and granted five entire Subſidies to the King confirmed by Act of Parliament.

In the Intervals of Parliament and Convocation, the King purſued thoſe Methods that were Wiſe and Honourable. He ſet forth a Proclamation to ſuppreſs the offenſive Sermons of Dr. Manwaring, and therein declared, " That tho' the grounds were right- " ly laid to perſwade Obedience from Subjects to " their Soveraign, and that for Conſcience ſake: " yet in divers Paſſages, Inferences and Applicati- " ons thereof, trenching upon the Laws of this " Land and Proceedings of Parliaments, whereof " he was ignorant, he ſo far err'd, that he had drawn " upon himſelf the juſt Cenſure and Sentence of the " High Court of Parliament, by whoſe Judgment " alſo that Book ſtands condemn'd. Wherefore be- " ing deſirous to remove occaſions of Scandal, he " thought fit that thoſe Sermons, in regard of " their Influences and Applications, be totally " ſuppreſs'd. Proclamation againſt the Sermons of Dr. Manwaring.

It was an Error and Misfortune, that the Advancement of Dr. Manwaring was ſoon after contriv'd, that ſeem'd to make the Proclamation a Court Jeſt, and the Counſels of the Miniſtry to be little Myſteries of deceiving the People.

Another Proclamation was iſſued to declare the King's Pleaſure for a vigorous Proceeding againſt Popiſh Recuſants, and for Directions to the King's Commiſſioners to ſuffer Recuſants convict to compound for no leſs than two parts of three of their Eſtates, which by Law were forfeited to the Crown. Proclamation againſt Papiſts.

A third Proclamation for diligent Search to be made for all Prieſts and Jeſuits, particularly for the Bishop of Chalcedon, to Apprehend them and Commit them, &c. The Jesuits taken at Clerkenwel, were from several Prisons removed to Newgate, in order to be convicted and condemned. The Privy-Council wrote to the Bishop of Ely to prepare the Castle of Wisbich for the safe Custody of Popish Prisoners; and sent to require the Lord Mayor of London, to search out all Recusants within the City and Liberties thereof. So as the King appeared to act in perfect compliance with the Sense of the Parliament last sitting.

Promotions not Popular.

But some Steps were taken, at which the discontented Party would be sure to murmur: For Dr. Land, Bishop of Bath and Wells, who was thought a Creature of the Duke of Buckingham's, and stood censur'd for an Arminian in the Commons Remonstrance, was on July 15. translated to the Bishoprick of London, and thereby brought to a nearer access to Court, and to a greater Influence upon the Church Mr. Mountague was promoted to the See of Chichester, and Dr. Manwaring to the good Rectory of Stanford Rivers in Essex, and to each of them was granted a Royal Pardon of all Errors heretofore commited by them, either in Speaking, Writing or Printing, for which they could be any way liable to be hereafter question'd. And as Manwaring had a Royal Favour to reverse and sweeten the late Sentence of his Majesty's Proclamation against him: So Mountague had just contrary, a Proclamation to censure him immediately after the Letters Patent to promote him. For the King thought fit to call in that Authors Work, entitled Appello Cæsarem, and to declare "That out "of his Princely Care to maintain the Church, in "the unity of the true Religion and the bond of "Peace, to prevent unnecessary Disputes, he had "lately caused the Articles of Religion to be Re-"printed, as a Rule for avoiding diversities of Opi-"nions; and considering that a Book written by "Richard Mountague, now Bishop of Chichester, en-"titled Appello Cæsarem, was the first cause of those "Disputes and Differences, which since have much "troubled the quiet of the Church; he would take "away this occasion, by commanding all Persons "that had any of those Books in their hands, to de-"liver them to the Bishop of the Dioceß, or if it "be in either of the Universities, to the Chancellor "and Vice-Chancellor thereof, who were command-"ed to suppress them.

Mountague made Bishop of Chichester.

And yet his Book called in.

But this too was thought a false appearance of Policy, to prefer a Writer, and then to suppress the very Book for which the World thought him preferr'd. Others imputed it to a farther reach of making a shew of Impartiality; when about the same time the several Answers made to the Apello Cæsarem by Dr. Featly, Dr. Goad, Mr. Ward, Mr. Burton, Mr. Yates, Mr. Wotton, and Francis Rous, Esq; were all in like manner suppress'd, and some of the Printers questioned in the High Commission.

Character of Arminians and Calvinists, from the Ld. Clarendon's Hist. of Rebel. B. 1. p. 71.

These warm Contentions are thus judiciously stated by a Witness of those Times. "Some Doctrinal Points in Controversie had been agitated "in the Pulpits with more warmth and reflections "than had used to be, and thence the Heat and Animosity encreased in Books Pro and Con upon the "same Arguments. Most of the Popular Preachers, "who had not look'd into the ancient Learning took "Calvin's Word for it, and did all they could to "propagate his Opinions in those Points: They "who had studied more, and were better versed in "the Antiquities of the Church, the Fathers, the "Councils, and the Ecclesiastical Histories, with "the same heat and passion in Preaching and Wri-"ting defended the contrary. The latter were cal-"led Arminians, tho many of them had never read "a Word written by Arminus. Either side defen-"ded and maintained the different Opinions as the "Doctrine of the Church of England; as the two "great Orders in the Church of Rome, the Domini-"cans and the Franciscans, did at the same time, and "had many hundred Years before, with more vehe-"mence and uncharitableness, maintained the same 1627. "Opinions one against the other; either Party pro-"fessing to adhere to the Doctrine of the Catholick "Church, which had been ever wiser than to deter-"mine the Controversie. And yet that Party here, "which could least support themselves with Reason, "were very sollicitous, according to the Ingenuity "they alway practise to advance any of their Pre-"tences, to have the People believe, that they who "held with Arminius did intend to introduce Popery. "And truly the other side was no less willing to have "it thought, that all who adhered to Calvin in those "Controversies, did in their Hearts likewise adhere "to him with reference to the Discipline, and desir'd "to change the Government of the Church, and to "set up the Discipline that he had established at "Geneva; and so both Sides found such reception "generally with the People, as they were inclin'd "to the Persons. Whereas in truth, none of the "one side were at all inclin'd to Popery; and very "many of the other were most Affectionate to the "Peace and Prosperity of the Church, and very "Pious and Learned Men.

Commons postpone all matters to Religion.

When the Parliament reassembled on Tuesday, January 20. the Fears and Jealousies about Religion were so much in the Heads of the leading Men in the House of Commons, that when the King sent a Message to them to consider speedily of a Bill for Tonnage and Poundage, they rejected the King's Desire, and resolv'd to proceed in the first place with Matters of Religion, and particularly against Arminianism: Upon which occasion Mr. Rous spoke with most indecent Bitterness. —— I desire we may consider the encrease of Arminianism*: an Error that makes the Grace of God lackey it after the Will of Man, that makes the Sheep to keep the Shepherd, and makes a Mortal Seed of an Immortal God: Yea, I desire that we may look into the very Belly and Bowels of this* Trojan Horse, to see if there be not Men in it ready to open the Gates to Romish Tyranny and Spanish Monarchy: For an Arminian is the Spawn of a Papist, &c.

Mr. Pym against Popery and Arminianism.

On Tuesday January 27. The draught of a Remonstrance concerning Religion in the last Session, since delivered by the Clerk to the King, was now brought back to the House by Mr. Secretary Cook, with a repeated desire from his Majesty, that they would give the precedency to the Business of Tonnage and Poundage. But the House again thought fit to prefer Religion; and upon this Debate Mr. Pym made a very eager Speech: Two Diseases there be (said he) the one old the other new; the old Popery, the new Arminianism, &c. And because it had been objected in the House, that they ought not to handle Questions touching Matters of Religion, which were proper for his Majesty and a Convocation to determine, Mr. Pym made this Argument against the said Objection. —— It belongs to the Duty of Parliaments to establish true Religion and to punish false; we must know what Parliaments have done formerly in Religion. Our Parliaments have confirmed General Councils: In the time of King Henry VIII. the Earl of Essex was condemned for countenancing Books of Heresie. For the Convocation, it is but a Provincial Synod of Canterbury, and cannot bind the whole Kingdom. As for York, that is distant, and cannot do any thing to bind us or the Laws. For the High Commission, it was derived from Parliament.

Sir John Elliot very free on the same subject.

On Wednesday Jan. 28. Upon another Message from the King for dispatch of Tonnage and Poundage, the House again agreed to persist in the Matters of Religion. And Sir John Elliot deliver'd himself in most provoking Language. —— As to Popery and Arminianism our Faith and Religion is in danger by it; for like an Inundation it doth break in at once upon us. It is said, if there be any difference in Opinion concerning the Interpretation of the 39 Articles, the Bishops and the Clergy in Convocation have Power to dispute it, and to order which way they please: and then for ought I know Popery and Arminianism may be introduc'd by them. —— We see there are some among our Bishops who are not Orthodox 1627. thodox nor found in Religion as they ſhould be; witneſs the two Biſhops complained of the laſt meeting of the Parliament, &c. He put the Houſe into ſuch a ferment, that they made this ſolemn Proteſtation.

Proteſtation of the Commons upon the Senſe of the 39 Articles.

"WE the Commons in Parliament aſſembled, "do claim, proteſt, and avow for Truth "the Senſe of the Articles of Religion, which were "eſtabliſhed by Parliament in the 13th Year of our "late Queen Elizabeth; which by the publick Acts "of the Church of England, and by the general and "current Expoſitions of the Writers of our Church "have been deliver'd unto Us. And we reject the "Senſe of the Jeſuits and Arminians and all others, "wherein they differ from us.

This Declaration upon the Senſe of the Articles, was of greater Latitude than any Interpreter had uſed in expounding of them: But it being drawn up thus large and dubious, it was the fitter for a Charm and Spell to affright and drive away ignorant People.

Commons inſiſt upon Redreſs of Grievances in Religion.

Soon after the Commons preſented a Declaration to the King, to juſtifie their Reſolutions of giving Precedency to Religion: Wherein they tell him, "That finding the extreme Dangers wherewith "their Religion is threatned, they think they cannot, without Impiety to God, Diſloyalty to his "Majeſty, and Unthankfulneſs to thoſe from whom "they are put in Truſt, proceed to other Buſineſs, "till ſomething be done to ſecure them in this main "Point, which they prefer above their Lives, and "all earthly things whatever." The King anſwered, "As for the Cauſe of Delay in my Buſineſs being Religion, there is none of you ſhall "have a greater Care for the true Preſervation of "it than my ſelf; which ſince it is confeſſed by "your Anſwer, you muſt either think I want Power (which cannot be) or that I am very ill counſelled, if it be in ſo much Danger as you affirm. "I muſt think it ſtrange, that this Buſineſs of Religion ſhould only be a Hinderer of my Affairs, "whereas I am certainly informed all other things "go according to their ordinary courſe.

The Kings Declaration about Preaching cenſur'd by the Commons

But the Spirit was now rais'd, and it was the Art of cunning Men to keep it up. And therefore on Wedneſday Feb. 4. the Houſe fell into Debate upon the King's Declaration publiſh'd in Print to prohibit Diſputing or Preaching one way or other in the Controverſies lately rais'd; and did conclude, that the main End of the Declaration was to ſuppreſs the Puritan Party, and give Liberty to the oppoſite ſide. They conceiv'd that Biſhop Laud and Biſhop Montague had adviſed the King to that Declaration. They complain'd of the King's Pardon granted to the latter; and obſerved, that the Warrant to draw a Pardon was for him only: and yet the Attorney General had put in three others, Dr. Coſens, Dr. Sibthorp, and Dr. Manwaring.

Thurſday Feb. 12. a Report was made from the Committee of Religion about ſolliciting and obtaining the Pardons lately mentioned. And 'tis obſervable, that the Hand of Oliver Cromwel was in this Religious Feud: He was one of this warm Committee, and informed the Houſe, that the Biſhop of Wincheſter gave countenance to ſome Divines that preach'd flat Popery; and it was by his Means that Manwaring (who by Cenſure the laſt Parliament was diſabled from farther Preferment) was now advanc'd to a rich Living. If theſe be the ſteps (ſaid he) to Church Preferment, what are we ſhortly to expect?

Bookſellers Petition.

It was the Artifice, or at leaſt the Countenance of this Committee, that brought in the Bookſellers and Printers of London with a Perition, complaining of the Reſtrainr of Books written againſt Popery and Arminianiſm, and the contrary Books allow'd by the only means of the Biſhop of London; and that Licenſing was now reſtrain'd to him and his Chaplains.

Friday Feb. 13. the Heats were more inflam'd, by an Order of the Houſe to examine the releaſing of the Jeſuits committed to Newgate, and the ſtay of Proceedings againſt ſeveral Recuſants. And tho' fair Accounts were given of the King's Juſtice and Mercy in Execution of the Penal Laws; yet the Out-cry held on, and the firſt Proteſtation made in the Houſe juſt before Diſſolving, (while the Speaker was held in the Chair) was this. 1627.

Final Proteſtation of the Commons.

"Whoſoever ſhall bring in Innovation of Religi- "on, or by Favour or Countenance ſeek to extend "or introduce Popery or Arminianiſm, or other Opi- "nion, diſagreeing from the Truth and Orthodox "Church, ſhall be reputed a Capital Enemy to this "Kingdom and Commonwealth.

Though there ſeems to have been more Reaſon for Diſſolving this Parliament than any other in this Reign before the Long One, (which unhappily could not be Diſſolv'd by the King) yet the leading Members, who were interrupted in their Schemes of Policy and Power, were enrag'd at being no longer capable to ſhew themſelves. They caſt the Odium of this Counſel upon the Biſhop of London, who was thereupon baited with Reflections and Libels. And it is indeed probable, that this Prelate join'd heartily in the Advice for Diſſolving this Parliament: for in his own Diary he obſerved, that this Parliament ſought his Ruin: and it was no doubt his Judgment, that they fought the Ruin of the Church.

His Majeſty, in his Declaration of the Cauſes which moved him to Diſſolve this Parliament, made this ſolemn Profeſſion, "We call God to Record, before "whom we ſtand, that it is and always hath been "our Hearts Deſire, to be found worthy of that "Title which we account the moſt glorious in all "our Crown, Defender of the Faith. Neither ſhall "we ever give way to the Authorizing of any thing "whereby any Innovation may ſteal or creep into "the Church; but to preſerve that Unity of Doctrine and Diſcipline, eſtabliſhed in the time of "Queen Elizabeth, whereby the Church of England "hath ſtood and flouriſhed ever ſince. King's ſolemn Proteſtation.

"And as we are careful to make up all Breaches "and Rents in Religion at home, ſo did we, by "our Proclamation and Commandment for the Execution of Laws againſt Prieſts and Popiſh Recuſants, fortifie all Ways and Approaches againſt "that foreign Enemy; which if it have not ſucceeded according to our Intention, we muſt lay "the Fault where it is, in the ſubordinate Officers, "and Miniſters in the Country, by whoſe Remiſneſs Jeſuits and Prieſts eſcape without Apprehenſion; and Recuſants from thoſe Convictions and "Penalties which the Law and our Commandment "would have inflicted on them. For we do profeſs, that as it is our Duty, ſo it ſhall be our "Care, to command and direct well: but it is the "Part of others to perform the Miniſterial Office. "And when we have done our Office, we ſhall account Our-ſelf, and all charitable Men will account Us, innocent both to God and Men. And "thoſe that are negligent, we will eſteem as culpable both to God and Us; and therefore will expect that hereafter they give us a better Account. "—We do here profeſs to maintain the true Religion and Doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Church of "England, without admitting or conniving at any "backſliding either to Popery or Schiſm.

The People taught to be jealous of Popery.

But the diſcontented Members, upon their unwilling Return into the Country, made an Impreſſion of Unbelief to all that the King declared; and cauſed the popular Prejudices to ſwell ſo high, that for the future there ſhould be no Decency in Worſhip without the Imputation of Popery; and no Reaſoning in Doctrine without the Reproach of Arminianiſm. And this created an Obſtruction and an Odium to all that the King and Biſhops ſhould hereafter do, when very much was fit to be done. The prime Mover and Agent was Biſhop Laud, of whom it may be more proper to take a Character than to give it. "The Remiſneſs of Abp. Abbot created the greater Difficulties to Bp. Laud.

By the Remiſneſs of Archbiſhop Abbot there had crept in a Contempt of Eccleſiaſtical Authority even among the Clergy themſelves. One Huntley, beneficed in Kent, had been required by the Archdeacon of Canterbury to preach at a Viſitation, which he wilfully declined to do: Afterwards the Archbiſhop by his Letters enjoin'd him to preach another Turn, which he again ſtubbornly omitted. For theſe Contempts he was conven'd before the High Commiſſion Court, and fined and committed to Priſon; and being upon a Habeas Corpus brought to the King's-bench Bar, the Cauſe of his Commitment was return'd, Default in his Canonical Obedience. He was firſt Bailed, and afterwards diſcharg'd upon this Opinion of the Court, That breach of Canonical Obedience is an Offence puniſhable by the Ordinary by Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures; and not by the Commiſſioners Eccleſiaſtical by Fine and Impriſonment.

To reſtore the decayed Diſcipline of the Church, Biſhop Laud preſented to the King theſe good Conſiderations for the better ſettling of the Church Government.

Theſe were indeed very excellent Heads of Intimation, and the putting many of them in Practice had a mighty Influence upon the Beauty and Honour of the Church; and muſt needs have had a much better effect, if the inveterate Prejudice of People had not infected theſe Times with an Iniquity ſoon eſtabliſhed by Cuſtom.

The King in his Heart againſt Popery.

The King did what he could to make his Subjects ſenſible that Popery ſhould have no more favour out of Parliament than in it. And therefore he made a ſtrict Order in Council, that all Engliſh Papiſts going to the Houſes of Ambaſſadors to hear Maſs, ſhould be Apprehended and Proſecuted according to Law.

Therefore proceeds againſt Prieſts and Jeſuits.

And to ſhew the Sincerity of his Intentions, he declares, that he has begun already at his own Houſe, not permitting any to go to the Queen's Chapel but thoſe of the Queen's own Houſe, who are bound to attend upon her. Another Order of Council to the Attorney General, that the Statute 3 Jacobi be put in Execution againſt Recuſants dwelling within ten Miles of London; and the Statute of Confinement, to be executed upon all Popiſh Lodgers within the City; and a Bill of Indictment to be exhibited againſt the Keeper of New-Priſon, for ſuffering Prieſts committed to his Cuſtody to walk abroad at their Pleaſure; and a Letter from the Council to the High Sheriff and Juſtices of Peace in Northumberland, to reprove them for their Remiſneſs, and to require them to execute the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants without Partiality or Connivance; and a Proclamation dated March 24. 1628. for the Apprehenſion of Richard Smith a Popiſh Prieſt, calling himſelf the Biſhop of Calcedon; and an Order of the Lord Mayor of London for a ſtrict Care in the better Obſervation of the Lord's day, dated Apr. 20. 1629. And becauſe one of the moſt viſible Scandals of the Nation was the lamentable Decay of Churches, and the frequent Prohibitions that ſtayed the Proceſs in Eccleſiaſtical Courts for Repair of them; therefore his Majeſty, at Hampton-Court, Octob. 11. Regn. 5. ſet forth a Proclamation for preventing the Decays of Churches and Chapels for the time to come: wherein he declares,

" That

1629. Proclamation for preventing the decay of Churches and Chapels.

" THat having of late taken ſpecial notice of the general decay and ruin of Pariſh Churches in many Parts of this Kingdom; and that by Law the ſame ought to be repaired and maintained at the proper Charge of the Inhabitants, and others having Land in thoſe Chapelries and Pariſhes reſpectively; who had wilfully neglected to Repair the ſame, being conſecrated Places of God's Worſhip and Divine Service. His Majeſty doth therefore charge and command all Archbiſhops and Biſhops, that they take ſpecial care of the Repairing and Upholding the ſame from time to time, and by themſelves and their Officers to take a View and Survey of them, and to uſe the Power of the Eccleſiaſtical Court for putting the ſame in due Execution; and that the Judges be requir'd not to interrupt this good Work by their too eaſy granting of Prohibitions.

By the vigilant Zeal of Biſhop Laud, the Conſiderations which he had lately preſented to the King, were now formed into Regal Inſtructions, ſent to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, by them to be tranſmitted to all the Biſhops within their reſpective Provinces. Thoſe for Canterbury were thus entitiled, Inſtructions for the moſt Reverend Father in God our right-Truſty and right-entirely-beloved Counſellor George Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, concerning certain Orders to be obſerved and put in execution by the ſeveral Biſhops in his Province.

King's Inſtructions to the two Archbiſhops.

They differ in nothing from the Conſiderations before recited, excepting theſe Additional Particulars.

" That the Biſhops take ſpecial Care that Divine " Service be diligently frequented, as well for Prayers and Catechiſms as Sermons; and take a particular Note of all ſuch as abſent themſelves, as Recuſants or otherwiſe.

" That every Biſhop, who by our Grace and Favour, and good Opinion of his Service, ſhall be " nominated by us to another Biſhoprick, ſhall " from that Day of Nomination not preſume to make " any Leaſe for three Lives, or twenty one Years " or concurrent Leaſe, or any ways to renew any " Eſtate, or cut any Wood or Timber, but merely " to receive the Rents due, and quit the Place. For " we think it a hateful thing that any Man's leaving the Biſhoprick ſhould almoſt undo the Succeſſor. And if any Man ſhall preſume to break " this Order, we will refuſe our Royal Aſſent, and " keep him at the Place he hath ſo abuſed.

" And laſtly, We command you to give us an " Account every Year, the ſecond of January, of " the Performance of theſe our Commands.

Nothing was more ſeaſonable and honourable than the laſt but one of theſe Inſtructions. For Tranſlations began now to be more frequent than in former Reigns; and ſome Biſhops upon the proſpect of Removal had been Sordid and Scandalous in leaving Places bare behind them. This muſt, however, be an Argument of the Innocence and Integrity of Biſhop Laud, who ſuggeſted this Advice, when he had been already removed from two Sees, and had a full view of being Tranſlated to another.

Ep. Laud zealous for executing of them.

He was vigorous in providing for the ſtrict execution of thoſe Royal Injunctions: And therefore he firſt cited all the Miniſters and Lecturers within the City and Suburbs of London, and made an affectionate Speech to them, exhorting them to obey his Majeſty's late Inſtructions, as founded on Religion and Juſtice, and adapted to the Honour and Intereſt of Church and Common-wealth, and diſlik'd by few but thoſe who had not weigh'd them, nor ſo much as ſeen them. After which he wrote an earneſt Letter (including a Letter to him from his Grace in Obedience to the King) to his ſeveral Archdeacons to preſs the Duty on them in their reſpective Viſitations.

But there was now a warm Spirit of Diſaffection to the Court in many of the Inferiour Clergy; Mr. Bernard, Lecturer at St. Sepulchre's Church in London, had on January 28. 1629. uſed this Expreſſion in his Prayer before Sermon: Lord open the Eyes of the Queens Majeſty, that ſhe may ſee Jeſus Chriſt, whom ſhe hath pierced with her Infidelity, Superſtition and Idolatry. For which being queſtion'd in the High Commiſſion, the Court declared, that the Saying was unadviſed and ſcandalous: but Mr. Bernard making an open and humble Submiſſion, the Court deſired the Biſhop of London to inform his Majeſty, and upon his Report the Offender was with great Mercy diſmiſt. Mr. Charles Chancy Miniſter of Ware, had likewiſe in a Sermon been bold to ſay, That Idolatry was admitted into the Church; that the preaching of the Goſpel would be ſuppreſt; that there is much Atheiſm, Popery, Arminianiſm and Hereſie crept into the Church: For which intolerable Liberty he was brought into the High Commiſſion, and by Order of that Court the Cauſe was referred to the Biſhop of London, who enjoin'd him no other Penalty than a Latin Form of Submiſſion. And Mr. Palmer a Lecturer at St. Alphage in Canterbury, was by the Archdeacon's Certificate found to Preach without Licenſe, to read Prayers againſt the Miniſter's Will; to Catechiſe not according to Canon; to take upon him to declare the King's Mind in his Royal Inſtructions; never to uſe the Surplice; to have preached a factious Sermon in the Cathedral Church; and therein to have detracted from Divine Service; and ſo to have gained all factious Parties to be his Auditors. For which the Commiſſioners had only enjoin'd him Silence, till being informed that the Archbiſhop had authoris'd him to Preach again, they then found a way to drive him from that City. This Seditious ferment among ſome few of the Lower Clergy was too eaſie to be improv'd, when ſo many of the leading Gentry were pleaſed with it; and when the Archbiſhop himſelf in Jealouſie and Diſcontent conniv'd at it.

1629. Many of the inferiour Clergy diſaffected to the Court.

In Ireland the Apprehenſions of Popery were more dreadful and more juſt. The Popiſh Biſhops and Prieſts had held their publick Aſſemblies in all parts of that Kingdom, and exerciſed an open Juriſdiction: Convents were profeſſedly erected; and even in Dublin the Friers were enough to make a Riot. Upon a due Information of theſe Diſorders, a Letter was ſent from our Privy-Council, January 31. 1629. to the Lords Juſtices and Council of Ireland, with Thanks for ſuppreſſing the Seditious Riot moved by the Friers and their Adherents at Dublin; with Advice to reſtrain them by a due and ſeaſonable Execution of the Laws: ſpeedily to demoliſh the Houſe in Dublin, where the Archbiſhop and Mayor received the firſt Affront; and that other Houſes erected to the uſe of ſuperſtitious Societies be converted into Houſes of Correction, &c. Popery in Ireland.

There can be no doubt but the King was in Conſcience averſe to Popery; and whatever Favours were obtained for ſome of that inſolent Party, were all extorted from his Majeſty's good Nature, in compliance with an importunate Queen. When Judgment and Inclination could exert themſelves, the King always fell upon the proper Meaſures of eſtabliſhing the Church of England at home, and of ſupporting the Proteſtant Intereſt abroad. To this laſter effect, he granted his Letters Patents given at Weſtminſter March 16. Regn. 5. " for a Collection to " be made throughout England and Wales for the poor " exiled Miniſters of the Palatinate, and their Wives " and Children, being ſpoiled of all their Temporal " Eſtates, and expoſed to unexpreſſible Miſeries; " whoſe Caſe is the more to be deplored, becauſe " theſe Extremities fell upon them for their Sincerity and Conſtancy in the true Religion. But here again ſome People catcht at an Offence, becauſe in the firſt Patent after the Words Sincerity and Conſtancy in the true Religion, it follow'd thus, which we together with them do Profeſs, and which we are all bound in conſcience to maintain to the utmoſt of our Powers. The Biſhop of London was diſſatisfied at the laſt Expreſſion, and prevailed with his Majeſty to have that The King was for eſtabliſhing the Church and ſupporting the Proteſtant Intereſt.

that firſt Patent cancell'd, and a new one drawn with omiſſion of that Clauſe. And though this Alteration was but cautious and ſtrictly proper, yet when diſcovered, there were not wanting thoſe Wits who could make a ſort of Popiſh Plot of it.

To return to the courſe of Civil Affairs from the beginning of the ſixth Year of this Reign 1630.

Death of Will. Earl of Pembroke.

On April 10. died a great Miniſter of State, William Earl of Pembroke, Lord Warden of the Stannaries, Governour of Portſmouth, Knight of the Garter, Lord High Steward of the King's Houſhold, and Chancellour of the Univerſity of Oxford. He ſupp'd that Night with the Counteſs of Bedford at Biſhopſgate, and was more than ordinarily cheerful, it being his Birth-Day: After Supper he went home to Bernard's-Caſtle, and being that Day Seventy Years of Age, he was boaſting of his Health and Strength, and ſaid he would never truſt a Woman Propheteſs for the Lady Davis's ſake, who had told him he ſhould die upon that Day of his Birth. He went to Bed very well, and died of an Apoplexy before Morning.

Character of the Earl of Pembroke, by the Lord Clarendon in his Hiſt. of Rebel. b. 1. p. 45

His Character is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. One the moſt univerſally Beloved and Eſteemed of any Man of that Age; and having a great Office in the Court, he made the Court it ſelf better eſteem'd and more reverenc'd in the Country: Well-bred, and of excellent Parts, and a graceful Speaker upon any Subject, having a good portion of Learning, and a ready Wit to apply it, and enlarge upon it: Of a pleaſant and facetious Humour, and a Diſpoſition Affable, Generous and Magnificent. He was Maſter of a great Fortune from his Anceſtors, and had a great addition by his Wife; but all ſerv'd not his Expence, which was only limited by his great Mind and Occaſions to uſe it nobly. He lived many Years about the Court, before in it; and never by it: being rather regarded and eſteemed by King James than loved and favoured.— He ſtood upon his own Feet without any other Support than of his proper Virtue and Merit. —— Exceedingly beloved in the Court, becauſe he never deſired to get that for himſelf which others laboured for, but was ſtill ready to promote the Pretences of worthy Men. And he was equally celebrated in the Country, for having received no Obligations from the Court, which might corrupt or ſway his Affections and Judgment. —— He was a great lover of his Country, and of the Religion and Juſtice, which he believed could only ſupport it; and his Friendſhips were only with Men of thoſe Principles. —— Yet he was not without ſome allay of Vice, and without being clouded with great Infirmities, which he had in too exorbitant a proportion. —— He died exceedingly lamented, &c.

Project of raiſing Money.

By occaſion of the late Wars, and a want of Parliament Supply, the greateſt care of the Court muſt be how to advance the publick Revenue: To which effect the Lords of the Council adviſed the King to put forth a Proclamation; declaring his Pleaſure to confirm to his Subjects their defective Titles in Eſtates and Poſſeſſions (as well by colour of former Grants, as without any Grant from the Crown) and a Proclamation was accordingly iſſued May 27. to inform the People, that his Majeſty had renewed a Commiſſion to ſome Lords, Judges and Counſel learned, to ſell, grant and confirm to them all Poſſeſſions to which their Titles were any way defective, by making of ſuch Compoſition as the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhould approve and accept. Though this Method might have very well tended to the Quiet and Relief of the Subject in many dubious Tenures, which might be now made unqueſtionable Settlements: yet either the proceeding of the Commiſſioners in this Matter, or the natural Prejudice againſt raiſing Money out of Parliament, turned it into the popular Notion of a new Grievance and Oppreſſion.

Birth of Prince Charles.

On May 29. a little before One after Noon, the Queen was delivered of a Son, baptized Charles by the Lord Biſhop of London, who had the Honour to ſee him before he was an Hour old. The King rode publickly to St. Paul's Church to give Thanks to God for the Queen's ſafe delivery of a Son: at which time a Star appeared in a clear Sky; ſeen and atteſted by very many Spectators. 1630.

Libel in the Star-Chamber.

On the ſame Day a great Cauſe was brought to Hearing in the Star-Chamber, concerning a Diſcourſe entitled, A Propoſition for his Majeſty's Service to bridle the Impertinency of Parliaments; which had given ſo much Offence and Jealouſie about the time of the laſt Diſſolution, that the King order'd his Attorney-General to prefer an Information againſt the Earls of Bedford, Clare and Somerſet, Sir Robert Cotton, Mr. Selden, Mr. Saint John and others, for ſpreading the ſaid Libel. The Earl of Somerſet by his Council pleaded, " That this Diſcourſe was either the ſame " that was ſhewed him in the time of his attendance " upon his late Majeſty King James, or had the " ſame things in it. And finding no cauſe of con- " cealing ſuch a former Project, and imagining it " to be of no ſcandal to the preſent Government, " he had caſually imparted it to the Earls of Bedford " and Clare; who after peruſal thereof delivered this " Opinion of it at their next meeting, that it was " a phantaſtick Project of ſome Brain-ſick Traveller, who " had made Collections of ſome Princes in Italy, and o- " ther Foreign States, no way ſuitable to the Govern- " ment of this Kingdom. And upon the Depoſitions of Sir David Fowlis it appear'd, that the very Original Manuſcript was pen'd by Sir Robert Dudley at Florence, and ſent over hither in the time of King James by one Mr. Yates, who ſent it in a Letter to the Deponent, and he deliver'd it to the Earl of Somerſet, and the Earl communicated it to the King. While this Cauſe was hearing in a great preſence of Nobibility and Gentry, the King ſent Word to the Lord Keeper, " That in reſpect of the great Joy, upon " the Birth of his Son, he ſhould immediately order " the Proceedings to be ſtopp'd, and the Defendents " to be diſcharg'd. Accordingly the Keeper acquainted the Court with his Majeſty's ſpecial Command: Upon which, the ſaid Writing was ordered to be burnt as Seditious and Scandalous; and the Proceedings were taken off the File. And here, though the Project was prov'd to have been a private Eſſay in a former Reign, and in a Foreign Country: and tho' the ſtopping of Proceſs hereupon was a generous Act of Favour upon a proper ſeaſon of publick Joy; yet thoſe Perſons who had the Art and the ill nature to turn every thing, as a Diſgrace and a Diſadvantage upon the Court, knew how to inſinuate, as if the King and the Miniſtry had really form'd that Scheme againſt the uſe of future Parliaments; and therefore would not ſuffer it to be examin'd to the bottom.

Another Project for Money.

The urgent neceſſity of Supplies, to be in ſome meaſure ſuitable to the King's Honour, and the very Nations Suppott, muſt exerciſe the King's Council in finding out all poſſible Ways and Means to bring in Money. In order to this urgent end, the King ſent his Letters, dated May 13. to the Judges and Attorney-General, to frame and publiſh certain Orders for execution of the Office of Receiver and Collector of Fines and Forfeitures, erected by his late Father of bleſſed Memory, and by his preſent Majeſty confirm'd to John Chamberlayn his Majeſty's Phyſician, and Edward Brown, Eſq;. The Judges met and concluded, that the ſaid Letters Patents were both againſt Law and his Majeſty's Profit, and ſent an account of the Exceſſes and Irregularites in the ſaid Patent, in a Letter from all the Juſtices and Barons, directed ſeverally to the Lord-Keeper and Lord-Treaſurer. And though this did well demonſtrate the Integrity of the Judges, that they would never proſtitute an Opinion to the meer Intereſt of the King; and did as much vindicate his Majeſty's Honour, that he would inſiſt upon no Method (tho' begun by his Father) which the Judges of his Realm ſhould not pronounce to be ſtrictly Lawful; yet, however, this too was applied to the prejudice of the Court, as if they were purſuing Methods which the very Judges condemn'd for Arbitrary and Illegal.

1630. 6 Car. I. Project of Knighthood.

Another Project was reaſſum'd about impoſing the Order of Knighthood, or requiring a Fine for Neglect of it, as founded upon an old Statute and cuſtomary Writs. The King ſet forth his Proclamation July 6. that "Whereas he had formerly ſent "Writs to ſeveral Sheriffs for Summoning all that "had forty Pound Land or Rent yearly, to appear "at the day of his Coronation, and prepare them-"ſelves to receive the Order of Knighthood; he "had now eſtabliſh'd a Commiſſion to certain Lords "and others of his Privy Council, to treat and com-"pound with all thoſe who had made Default by "not taking the ſaid Order on them. Upon this the Nobility were ordered to compound before the Lords of the Council; and the Gentry before other Commiſſioners appointed in the ſeveral Counties. The Rate for Compoſition was commonly requir'd to be one third and a half of as much as the Perſons compounding were found rated in the Subſidy. But this too was grievouſly reſented as an Impoſition out of Parliament; ſo that many in all Parts neglected to appear, or refuſed to compound. This gave occaſion to new Summons, and to farther Proceſs; and the Iſſue in all Courts being in Favour and Confirmation of the King's Prerogative; this left upon ſome Spirits the deeper Impreſſion of Regret, that they were oppreſt againſt Law, and yet had no Law to relieve them.

London riotous.

Diſaffection and Sedition were ſo induſtriouſly fomented in the City of London, that upon Friday July 10, upon occaſion of an Arreſt made by the Sheriff's Officers in Fleetſtreet, a very tumultuous Riot was made upon it; and the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and Train'd Bands, coming down to diſperſe the Mob, did for a while meet with open and violent Oppoſition. Upon which, Proclamation was made to apprehend the Ringleaders, and in particular one Captain Vaughan, Ward an Enſign, and Henry Stamford: Several of them were ſoon after indicted and convicted of Murders; and among the principal, Stamford was executed.

Prohibitions to Eccleſ. Courts

Weſtminſter-hall was exercis'd with many ſingular Caſes, that ſerve much to expreſs the Diſpoſition of the Times. In Eaſter-Term Sir Henry Martyn, Dr. of Laws, and Judge of the Admiralty, made a great Complaint to the King againſt the Judges of the King's-bench, for granting Prohibitions againſt his Court: And upon this Occaſion the Judges were called before the King, where they ſtoutly juſtified their Proceedings in thoſe caſes to be according to Law, and from whence they could not depart by vertue of their Oaths. About the next Term, the Feoffees in Truſt for the buying in of Impropriations to be beſtow'd upon preaching Miniſters, were brought into the Exchequer for breach of their Truſt in not augmenting poorer Vicarages, but giving arbitrary Penſions to Lecturers and diſaffected Preachers: Their Corporation was diſſolved, and their Fund and Stock adjudg'd to the King; of which we muſt take ſome farther notice in our view of Church Affairs. Nigh the ſame time, Huntley, a Miniſter in Kent before mentioned, having been cenſur'd and impriſon'd by the High Commiſſion Court, brought now his Action of falſe Impriſonment againſt the Keeper Mr. Barker, and ſome of the Commiſſioners by Name. The Attorney General moved, that the Action might lay againſt the Goaler only, and by no means againſt any of the Perſons in the High Commiſſion: but after long Debate, the Court ordered that two of the Commiſſioners ſhould Anſwer. The Biſhop of London made the King ſenſible, that the Authority of his High Commiſſion Court would fall to nothing, if the Judges of it muſt be now expos'd to perſonal Actions. Upon which the King ſent his Advocate Dr. Ryves to the Lord Chief Juſtice, requiring him to proceed no farther in that Cauſe till he had ſpoken with his Majeſty. The Chief Juſtice anſwer'd, We receive the Meſſage; and then conſulted with the Judges, and they came to this Reſolution, that they conceived ſuch a Meſſage not to ſtand with their Oaths, which commanded an indefinite ſtay of a Cauſe between Party and Party, that might ſtop the Courſe of Juſtice ſo long as the King would. And they farther declared the Doctor to be no fit Meſſenger, all Meſſages from the King to them being uſually by the Lord Keeper, or the Attorney General, in Cauſes relating to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice. By the Court's Deſire, the Chief Juſtice acquainted the Lord Keeper and the Biſhop of London, who both agreed that the Meſſage was miſtaken, and that the King's Mind was not to command a Stop, but to deſire as much Slowneſs as might ſtand with Juſtice. After this, upon the Importunity of the Commiſſioners, who would no longer act if thus expoſed to Suits at Common Law; the King aſſumed the matter to himſelf, and ſending for the Judges, charg'd them with expreſs Command, that they ſhould not put the Commiſſioners to anſwer. The Judges ſtoutly replied, that they could not, without breach of their Oaths, perform that Command. Afterwards the matter was handled at the Council-Table in Preſence of the Judges; where, after long hearing, it was determin'd, that the Judges had done their duty, and that the Commiſſioners ought to anſwer. Toward the End of Trinity Term the Sickneſs encreaſing in Southwark, Hobart, Stroud, and Valentine, three of the late Members, impriſon'd in the Marſhalſea, ſued to the Judges of the King's-bench to be removed to the Gate-Houſe, and were by Writ from the Court ſo removed. But Mr. Selden, being at the ſame time in the Marſhalſea, had forgot or omitted to make the like Application to the King's-Bench till the Term was over, and the Judges in the Circuit: After which he ſued to the Lord-Treaſurer for the like favour of Removal, and by Warrant from his Lordſhip was accordingly ſo removed. But in Michaelmas Term the Judges called the Marſhal for his Priſoner Selden; and he producing the Treaſurer's Warrant by the King's direction, they declared ſuch Warrant to be Illegal, and ſent their Writ to remand the Priſoner back again to the Marſhalſea. In the Hilary Term following, the Attorney-General exhibited two ſeveral Informations againſt Sir Miles Hobart, Kt. and William Stroud, Eſq; (who by Writ from the King's-Bench had been remov'd from the Marſhalſea to the Gate-Houſe) for Eſcapes out of Priſon, proving that Stroud had reſided with a Keeper in his own Chambers at Gray's-Inn; and Hobart had continued with a Keeper at his Lodgings in Fleet-ſtreet. The Jury return'd their Verdicts ſeverally not Guilty: And the Judges reſolved, that The Priſon of the King's-Bench is not any local Priſon confined to one Place; but that every Place where any Perſon is by Authority of that Court reſtrained of his Liberty, is a Priſon. Theſe ſeveral Caſes, and the Deciſion of them, do abundantly prove, that the preſent Sett of Judges were no ſervile Creatures of the Court; and that the King did not inſiſt upon their obſequious Compliance with him: but they gave their Judgments with Freedom and Courage, and the King acquieſced in their Opinion, tho' contrary to his own.

We muſt now look over upon the Foreign Affairs of this Year. The King was in Honour and Good-nature earneſt to relieve his Siſter, and reſtore if poſſible the Palatinate to her Husband. In order to this the Marqueſs of Hamilton was to carry over an Army of ſix thouſand Men, for aſſiſtance of the King of Sweden, to be employ'd againſt the Imperialiſts or any other Enemies, for reſtoring our oppreſſed Friends in Germany. And Articles of Agreement between Guſtavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, and James Marqueſs of Hamilton, were ſigned May 31. 1620. Soon after, the King of Sweden croſſes the Baltick Sea with a Fleet; and declaring the Cauſes of his Expedition into Germany, he landed upon the Coaſt of Pomeren about the middle of June. To enable the Marqueſs Hamilton to raiſe and tranſport his Men, the King granted him a Leaſe of the Cuſtom of Wines in Scotland for ſixteen Years. Upon this Fund the Marqueſs levied his Men in Scotland; and toward Win-

1630. 6 Car. I. ter came back to the Court in England to receive the King's Order for their Embarkment. But here one Mackay, Lord Ochiltry, charg'd the Marquess with a treasonable Design of Raising this new Army with an Intention when he was at the Head of them to set himself up as King of Scotland. The Lord Treasurer Weston encourag'd this Suggestion, and press'd it home to the King; who told Hamilton, the next time he came into his Presence, what an Accusation was brought against him: but, says the King, I don't believe it; and that the World may know I have a Confidence in your Loyalty, you shall lie in my Bed-chamber this Night. And the Marquis did accordingly continue in the most intimate Accesses to the King, who hitherto had this Principle, Never to suspect his Friends, and never to desert them.

At this time a Dyet was held at Ratisbone in Germany, to which an Ambassadour was sent from the King of Great Britain, and another from the Palsgrave, to accommodate, if possible, the Restitution of the Palatinate. Sir Robert Anstruther, the English Ambassadour, presented his Master's ardent Request to his Imperial Majesty, "That having regard to "the many Intercessions of his late Father, and o- "ther Kings and Princes, he would remit the Dis- "pleasure conceived against his Brother the Prince "Elector, and recall the Proscription issued out a- "gainst him. It was only answered, "That the "present Affairs of Germany, which occasioned the "Dyet, were so important, as not to admit of any "foreign Debate; and yet, upon Opportunity and "Leisure, the King of Great Britain should receive "such Satisfaction as would be agreeable. This Answer was soon found to be a Complement: for the Emperour proposed to the Dyet to pass an Act, that the Palsgrave should continue a banish'd Man, and that no Offers of Return should be made to him. And many other of the Protestant Princes had their Lands confiscated, and had other great Hardships impos'd upon them. Upon which the Dyet broke up on Nov. 3. leaving the Palatinate and the whole Protestant Interest in a more desperate Condition. This made the Reformed Princes enter into Consultation for their own Safety, and by a Letter from the Duke of Saxony to his Imperial Majesty, they obtained Leave to hold a Dyet by themselves at Lipsick on Feb. 8. following: where they laid open their Grievances to the Emperour; and upon Denial of their Requests, they entred into a League to redress themselves. The Emperour put forth his Imperial Ban against them, but they supported their Cause and Courage by the Advances of the King of Sweden.

Endeavours for Restitution of the Palatinate.

In the mean time, the King of Spain promising that he would improve his utmost Interest in the Emperour towards the Restoration of the Prince Elector, Articles of Peace were publish'd Dec. 5. between the Crowns of England and Spain. So that now the King was delivered from two very expensive and very ineffectual Wars, that had unhappily betrayed him to be somewhat too poor and weak both Abroad and at Home.

1631. 7 Car. I. We pass on to the 7 Car. 1631. when Mervin Lord Audley, Earl of Castlehaven in Ireland, having had 3 Indictments found against him at Salisbury Assizes for a Rape upon his own Wife, and for Sodomy, was tried by his Peers in Westminster-hall on Apr. 25. and being found guilty of those abominable Sins, in the most aggravating ways of Commission, he was sentenc'd to Death, and soon after executed.

E. of Castlehaven Tried and Executed.

The Ways and Means of raising Money in the Intervals of Parliament, were thought as necessary to the King, as they were odious to the People: and the Necessity descended to little Arts, that were not for that reason less offensive. An Office was now erected for the Sealing of Playing Cards; and the Duties hence arising were Farm'd out to one Henry Cogan. The Master and Wardens of the Company of Cardmakers made some Opposition to it, but submitted to a Contract with the King that made the Profit answerable to the Project. A like Contract was made between his Majesty and the Dicemakers of the City of London, to pay an allotted Proportion for every Bale of Dice. On July 27. by Order of the Privy Council, there came out Printed Instructions for Musters and Arms and the Use thereof, upon occasion of the Trained-Bands of several Counties being order'd to march to the Sea-coasts for Defence of the Kingdom: The Rates to be paid to the Muster-master of each County were thought a Grievance, tho' grounded upon Precedent in the Reigns of K. James and Q. Elizabeth. Several Persons refusing to pay the Assessment, were sent for up by Messengers to the Council-Table, where they most of them submitted. But the Misfortune was, that under a Jealousie of new Impositions, People were alarm'd and affrighted at the calling for any old Custom or Tribute.

1631. 7 Car. I.

Further to increase the Revenues of the Crown, Letters Patent were granted to erect a new Society or Body corporate, by the Name of The Governour, Assistants, and Society of Soap-makers. And all who did not come into this Corporation, were prohibited the Trade of Soap-boiling. This brought into the Exchequer ten thousand Pounds by way of Advance, and eight Pound a Tun for all Soap hereafter boiled. This was look'd on as a Monopoly, and all other Trades began to be jealous of the like practising upon them.

On Monday Aug. 22. the Lord-Keeper and Judges consulted how to examine into the Truth of the late Charge against the Marquis of Hamilton. The Lord Rea, a Scotch Baron, impeached Ramsey and Melarum for moving him beyond the Seas to join in this Conspiracy: Ramsey denied the Fact, and offer'd to clear himself by Combat; and Rea accepting of the Challenge, the Judges now declared, 1. That it was an high and horrible Treason, if the matter in the Examinations were found true. 2. That the Trial might be by an Appeal of Treason, after the manner of the Civil Law, the Judges not to intermeddle. Upon which Opinion, a Court of Chivalry was erected by Commission under the Great Seal, dated Novemb. 24. And after very long and formal Proceedings, when the Parties were just ready for Combat, the King interpos'd; and to prevent the Duel, sent them both Prisoners to the Tower.

Combat agreed between Ramsey and Rea.

On Friday Aug. 26. Sir Nicholas Hide, Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, died at his House in Hampshire, a Man of great Integrity, Wisdom, and Temper. He had this Character given him by Judge Whitlock; Being made Chief Justice 2 Car. he lived in the Place with great Integrity and Uprightness, and with great Wisdom and Temper, considering the Ticklishness of the Times. He would never undertake to the King, nor adventure to give him a resolute Answer in any weighty business, when the Question was of the Law; but he would pray that he might confer with his Brethren: and the King ever gave way to it. This latter Acknowledgment from a Writer who was not partial to the King, is a great Argument that some following Opinions of the Judges in this Reign were not extorted by any Menace from their Royal Master.

Death of Sir Nich. Hide, Ch. Justice.

His Character.

As to our foreign Affairs this Year, the Marquis of Hamilton was early provided to transport his six thousand Men to be employed in the Service of the King of Sweden; yet he could not set Sail with them before the 19th of July. He landed in Pomeren Aug. 2. where he stayed for the coming of six thousand Swedes to march with them through the Enemies Quarters to the King. But that Convoy failing, he lost the Honour of being engaged in the Battle of Lipsick, which happen'd about a Month after, to the great Regret of himself and his Army.

Foreign Affairs.

The King of Sweden in a Letter under his own hand, gave our King an account of his Victory obtained against Tilly the Imperial General, in the Battle before Lipsick. After this signal Defeat, he march'd on with little opposition. In this Month of September, Sir Henry Vane, Kt. Comptroller of his Majesty's Household, and one of the Privy Council, was sent Ambassador Extraordinary to the Kings of Victory of the King of Sweden.

1631. 7 Car. I. Sweden and Denmark, and other Princes and States of Germany, with command to impart his publick and private Inſtructions to the Marquis of Hamilton, whom he met at Wirtzburgh in October; and was admitted to Audience of the King of Sweden on January 29. at Frankfort, where he earneſtly preſs'd that his Majeſty would undertake the Reſtitution of the Elector Palatine, King of Bohemia, to his Eſtates and Dignity. The King anſwer'd, "That he could not "do this without having War with France and Ba-"varia; nor could he undertake any ſuch War un-"leſs the King of England would enter into an Al-"liance with him againſt the Spaniards. However it was concerted, that upon the King of Bohemia's arrival at the Swediſh Camp, where he was ſpeedily expected, the Chancellor of the Sweeds and the Engliſh Ambaſſadour, ſhould enter into Treaty of this difficult Affair.

State of Religion. 1630.

To reſume the Thread of Church Hiſtory for theſe two laſt Years. Decency and Order in Religion were continually Suggeſted by the Biſhop of London, and as heartily approv'd by the King; who on April 6. 1630. publiſhed a Proclamation for the better ordering of thoſe who repair to the Court for the Cure of the Diſeaſe called the King's Evil. At which time a Form of Divine Service was uſed, the Goſpel from the 16th of St. Mark, Jeſus appeared unto the Eleven, &c. and from the firſt of St. John, In the Beginning was the Word, &c. when the King put the Angel about the Neck of the Party touch'd, theſe Words were repeated: That Light was the true Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. After this the Lord's Prayer; then a Collect on behalf of the Diſeaſed, that they receiving Health may give Thanks to God, &c. Tho' there was nothing in this Matter but what was grave and regular; yet, thoſe who ſought for Offences, knew how to murmur about Superſtition and Will-Worſhip.

Form of Healing.

Petition of the Clergy of York for a better Maintenance.

The Miniſters of the City of York, on May 24. made an Addreſs to the Archbiſhop of that Province, and to the Preſident of the North, for a more ample Allowance; they approv'd the Cauſe, and referr'd it to the Lords of the Privy-Council, who made an Order, directed to the Archbiſhop, the Preſident, the Mayor and Aldermen of York, to enter into ſerious Conſideration, how the Wants of thoſe Miniſters might be ſupplied, by levying an indifferent and competent Sum out of every Man's Houſe-Rent as might not be burthenſom; that ſo the poor City Clergy, having their Maintenance augmented, might be enabled and encouraged to diſcharge their Duty. But tho' the thing was highly reaſonable, and there were Precedents for it in the Cities of London and Norwich; yet this too made a noiſe of Arbitrary Power and illegal Impoſition.

Caſe of Dr. Leighton.

On June 4. the Cauſe of Alexander Leighton, D. D. a Scot, was heard in the Star-Chamber. An Information had been exhibited againſt him, for framing and publiſhing a ſcandalous and ſeditious Book, entitled, An Appeal to the Parliament, or a Plea againſt Prelacy: wherein he aſſerted, that God's People were perſecuted in this Iſland; that the Prelates were Men of Blood; that their Prelacy was Antichriſtian and Satanical; that kneeling at the Sacrament was a ſpawn of the Beaſt; that the Queen was a Daughter of Heſh; and many other inſolent and libellous Expreſſions. The Defendent confeſs'd the writing of the Book, and pleaded nothing but his good Intention of remonſtrating certain Grievances in Church and State, for the Parliament to redreſs them. The two Lord Chief Juſtices being preſent, delivered their Opinions, that they would have proceeded againſt him for Treaſon, if the Cauſe had come before them. And other Lords affirmed it to be his Majeſty's great Mercy and Goodneſs, that he was brought to receive the Cenſure of this Court, and not arraigned for a Traitor at another Bar.

Sentence againſt him.

Upon this Conviction and Confeſſion and Declaration of the Judges and Lords of the Council, he was ſentenc'd to a perpetual Impriſonment in the Fleet, and to a Fine of ten thouſand Pounds; to be degraded in the Eccleſiaſtical Court; to be then Pil-loried and Whipp'd, to have his Ears cut off, his Noſe ſlit, and his Face branded. But waiting for the Penitence of the Offender, no part of this Sentence was put in execution, till the beginning of November; when being degraded on the 4th. he was to have had his corporal Puniſhment on the 10th of that Month: But he eſcaped out of Priſon the Evening before, and being ſoon after apprehended in Bedfordſhire, and brought back to the Fleet, he had the former Sentence fully executed on him. And tho' the nature of the Crime, and the obſtinacy of the Offender, and indeed the neceſſity of ſuppreſſing the Spirit of Zealots, did ſufficiently require this Severity, yet it had the natural effect of moving pity in the People, and of raiſing harder Thoughts againſt the Government.

His Eſcape

Taken and Suffers

Upon the Death of the Earl of Pembroke the Chancellorſhip of the Univerſity of Oxford was by great majority of Votes conferr'd upon Dr. Laud Biſhop of London, who was abſolutely the greateſt Patron of Learning and Religion, the greateſt Promoter of Diſcipline and Government, and the greateſt Benefactor to all publick Deſigns of Piety and Charity, and therefore the moſt fit for this Honour. The greatneſs of his Soul may be meaſured by theſe Projects, which he ſet down in November 1630, and he finiſh'd moſt of them, and at leaſt began all the reſt.

Great deſigns of Bp. Laud.

1. "To build at St. John's in Oxford, where I was "bred up, for the good and ſafety of that College.

2. "To overthrow the Feoffments, dangerous both "to Church and State, going under the ſpecious pre-"tence of buying in Impropriations.

3. "To procure King Charles to give all Impropri-"ations, yet remaining in the Crown within the "Realm of Ireland, to that poor Church.

4. "To ſet upon the Repair of St. Paul's Church "in London.

5. "To collect and perfect the broken Statutes of "the Univerſity of Oxford, which have lain in a "confuſed heap ſome hundred Years.

6. "To ſettle the Statutes of all the Cathedral "Churches of the new Foundations, whoſe Statutes "are imperfect and not confirmed.

7. "To annex for ever ſome ſettled Commendams, "and thoſe if it may be ſine curâ, on all the ſmall "Biſhopricks, for Briſtol, Peterborough, St. Aſaph, "Cheſter and Oxford.

8. "To find a way to encreaſe the Stipends of "poor Vicars.

9. "To ſee the Tythes of London ſettled between "the Clergy and the City.

10. "To ſet up a Greek Preſs in London and Ox-"ford, for printing the Library Manuſcripts, and "to get both Letters and Matrices.

11. "To ſettle 80 l. a Year for ever out of Dr. Fry-"er's Land (after the Death of Dr. John Fryer the Son) "upon the Fabrick of St. Paul toward the Repair till "that be finiſh'd, and to keep it in good ſtate after.

12. "To procure a large Charter for Oxford, to con-"firm their ancient Privileges, and obtain new for "them, as large as thoſe of Cambridge, which they "have got ſince Henry VIII. and Oxford have not.

13. "To open the great Square at Oxford between "St. Maries and the Schools, Brazen-Noſe and All-"Souls.

14. "To ſettle an Hoſpital and Land in Reading "of 100 l. a Year.

15. "To erect an Arabick Lecture in Oxford, at "leaſt for my time. [The Lecture began to be read "Aug. 10. 1636. and ſetled for ever.]

16. "To ſettle the Impropriation of the Vicarage "of Cudſden on the Biſhop of Oxford. [This done "Apr. 19. 1637. and the Houſe built by the new Bi-"ſhop of Oxford, Dr. John Bancroft, ſettled for ever "on that See.]

17. "To get a Book in Vellom fairly written, "containing the Records which are in the Tower, "concerning the Clergy. [This Book done at his

" own Charge, and left in his Study at Lambeth for " Poſterity, June 10. 1637. ab Anno 20 Ed. I. ad " Anno 14 Ed. IV.

18. " To procure a new Charter for the College " near Dublin, and a Body of new Statutes to re- " ctify that Government. [Done by him when " Chancellour of that Univerſity.]

19. " To obtain a Charter for the Town of Read- " ing, and a Mortmain. [Done.]

20 " If I live to ſee the Repair of St. Paul's near " an end, to move his Majeſty for a like Grant to- " ward the buying in of Impropriations, that he " made for St. Paul's; and then I hope to buy in two " a Year at leaſt.

Character of Bp. Laud.

Theſe excellent Deſigns ſhewed the Projector of them to have a greatneſs of Soul above the ordinary extent of Mankind: And his proſecuting moſt of them to their full effect did prove that by a conſtancy of Mind his Reſolutions (as far as poſſible) came up to his generous Attempts. A Prelate of his excellent Spirit might have had ſome Infirmities allowed and forgiven to him: And eſpecially becauſe without theſe Infirmities, he could have never had thoſe Virtues. For without a warmth of Temper, and ſome vehemence and impetus of Mind, he could never have ſupported himſelf in ſuch glorious Intentions, that drew infinite Difficulties and Dangers on him. A Man whom the World ſhould have called Wiſe, would never have engaged in ſuch vaſt Undertakings, or would at leaſt have timely receded from them.

Conſecration of Creed Church in London.

By this active zeal of doing Good out of the ordinary courſe of other Men, he raiſed Envy and Oppoſition in all he did. On the 16th of Jan. 1630. he conſecrated St. Catharine Creed Church in London; where obſerving all the Ceremonies of Reverence and Devotion, that could make ſuch an Office more Solemn and Sacred; he had on this occaſion the charge of Innovation and Superſtition renewed upon him: and it was remember'd and objected at his Tryal; where he learnedly defended his Form of Conſecration, and proved it the ſame which Bp. Andrews had drawn up.

He had ſet his Heart upon the Strength and Beauty of his own Cathedral: and to that pious end he obtained a Commiſſion under the Broad-Seal, dated Apr. 10. 1631. to authorize the Abps. of Canterbury and York, the Bp. of London and Winchester, all the Lds. of the Council, the Lords Ch. Juſtices, the Mayor and Aldermen, the Dean and Reſidentiaries, to purſue this Work. And for the more effectual promoting of it, a Regiſter was appointed for the Subſcription of Benefactors; Briefs were iſſued forth to ſtir up Contributions; Letters Monitory were ſent from the Council Table to ſeveral Juſtices in the Country; and theſe Reſolutions taken by a Committe to carry on the Buſineſs.

He promotes the Repair of St. Paul's Church.

1. " That once a Year Certificates be made of the " Monies given, and the Donors Names.

2. " That a Clerk of the Work be choſen, and a " Pay-Maſter and a Purveyor.

3. " The Work not to begin till there be 10000 l. " in Bank.

4. " When the Scaffolds are up, and the Work be- " gan; 2 or 3 Cheſts to be ſet within the Church, " for receiving the Benevolences of well diſpoſed " Perſons to the ſaid Work.

And decent uſe of it.

And the Council Board by ſpecial Direction and Commiſſion from his Majeſty, took into conſideration a care as well for the Religious and Decent uſe of the Inſide as for repairing of the Outſide; and how to remove that Offence taken as well by Foreigners as thoſe of our own Nation, that in time of Divine Service, while the upper part of the Church is uſed for Praying and Preaching, the nether part of the Church is uſed as an Exchange for Men to meet in, to walk, talk, and diſcourſe of all things: Upon their Deliberation and Advice, his Majeſty publiſh'd his ſpecial Commands and Orders for the Reformation of Abuſes in Cathedral Churches, particularly that of St. Paul in London, lately begun.

1. " That no Man of what Quality ſoever, ſhall " preſume to walk in the Iſles of the Quire, or in the " Body or Iſles of the Church, during the time of di- " vine Service, or the celebration of the bleſſed Sacra- " ment, or Sermons, or any part of them; neither do " any thing that may diſturb the Service of the Church " or diminiſh the Honour due to ſo holy a Place. 1631. 7 Car. I.

Orders for the reforming abuſes in Cathedral Churches.

2. " That no Man preſume to profane the Church, " by the carriage of Burthens or Baskets, or any " Portage whatſoever.

3. " That all Parents and Maſters of Families do " ſtrictly forbid their Children and Servants to play at " any time in the Church, or any way miſdemean them- " ſelves in that place, in time of divine Service or o- " therwiſe. And if any Children or Servants be found " ſo doing, beſides the puniſhment of the Delin- " quents, their Parents and Maſters ſhall be ſubject " to ſuch Cenſures and Puniſhments as is thought " fit to be inflicted.

" Theſe Orders by command of his Majeſty now " publiſhed, to the intent that no Man may hereaf- " ter pretend ignorance for his Excuſe in any of them.

Offences taken in the Repair of S. Pauls

No one could imagine that this new Structure of the principal Church in the chief City of the Kingdom could have met with any Exceptions to it, but from the profeſs'd Enemies of Piety and Charity and commonGood. And yet it ſo happen'd, that by ſome Neceſſities or Overſights in the management of this Work, ſome Offences were taken, and grievous Complaints were made of them: For ſome Houſes and Shops adjoining to St. Paul's were thought fit to be demoliſhed, for the greater ſafety or beauty of the Fabrick: and tho' reaſonable compenſation was made to theOwners, yet this was thought obtruding and extorting. Again, the Limits of the Church-yard were to be ſomewhat enlarged, and to be cleared from the obſtruction and encroachment of ſome Walls and Buildings; which (tho' with due Satisfaction to all Parties concerned) had a ſhow of waſt and depopulation. A Vault for Burial, belonging to the Pariſh of St. Gregory's, running too near the Sides of the Cathedral, and threatning the Foundations of it, was order'd to be fill'd up with Earth. Firſt a Wall of St. Gregory's, and then the whole Church it ſelf was found neceſſary to be pull'd down by Order of Council; and the Pariſhioners aſſigned to the Weſt-end of Chriſt-Church, even againſt the conſent of that Pariſh. After all voluntary Contributions greater Supplies were ſtill wanting to carry on the vaſt Expence; and therefore to raiſe more Money, the Fines and Commutations in the High-Commiſſion and Spiritual Courts, were commonly aſſigned to this uſe; and this made Offenders murmur, as if their Penalties were impos'd only for a Tax to Pauls. In ſhort, this glorious Enterprize of Bp. Laud, tho' it might have wipp'd out all other prejudice againſt him, yet it unhappily ſerv'd to foment the Paſſions of thoſe little angry People, who turned all the Marks of Generoſity and Magnificence into the Tokens of Pride and Ambition.

Factions in Oxford.

In June and July there were ſome diſorders in Oxford occaſioned by Mr. Tho. Ford of Magdalen-Hall, Mr. Giles Thorn of Baliol College, and Mr. Giles Hodges of Exeter College, who in their Sermons at St. Mary's had bitterly inveigh'd againſt the Arminians as Pelagians and Hereticks. This was thought a breach of the K's Inſtructions, that had been publiſh'd to quiet theſe Controverſies; and therefore at the motion of the Chancellor Bp. Laud, they were cited as Offenders before the Vice-chancellor Dr. Smith, and charg'd with perturbation of the Peace, and violation of the King's Injunctions. They appeal'd from the Vice-chancellor to the two Proctors, Mr. Bruch and Mr. Doughly, who received their Appeals, and thereby obſtructed Juſtice in a Cauſe that did not ſtatutably come before them. The Vice-chancellor by Advice appeal'd to the King, who heard the Matter in Council at Woodſtock on Tueſday Aug. 23. where Sentence was, that the 3 Preachers ſhould be expelled the Univerſity; the two Proctors ſhould come into the Convocation Houſe and there reſign their Office. And becauſe Dr. Prideaux Rector of Exeter, and Dr. Wilkinſon Principal of Magdalen-Hall, did ſeem to countenance the Men and their Cauſe, they receiv'd a ſharp Admonition from the Council Board.

Appeal to the King.

The Sentence on Offenders.

Mr.

1631. 7 Car. I.

Mr. Hodges ſubmitting, was ordered,

1. "To make a publick Recantation Sermon in "St. Mary's Church, before the Univerſity, confeſ- "ſing his great Offence in Preaching contrary to his "Majeſty's Declaration.

2. "To make a Submiſſion and Recantation in a "Form preſcrib'd, in the Convocation-Houſe, be- "fore the whole Aſſembly of the Doctors, Proctors, "Regent and Non-Regent Maſters, on his bended "Knees.

3. "In the ſaid Recantation to acknowledge, that "he fell upon the Delivery of thoſe Points, which by "his Majeſty's Royal Injunction were forbidden "him to meddle with; and particularly to confeſs, "that he let fall ſome Paſſages which might be ta- "ken to the Diſparagement of the Government of "the Church, in making Erroneous and Heretical "Opinions the way to Preferment; for which he "was to crave the Pardon of the Univerſity in ge- "neral, and more eſpecially of the moſt honourable "Chancellour.

But however juſt and ſeaſonable this Diſcipline was to reſtrain the Intemperance of forward Preachers, and to ſilence, if poſſible, thoſe dark and dangerous Diſputes; yet this too did not fail to be charg'd as a Partiality upon the Biſhop, and as an Argument of his too potent Influence upon the King and Council.

Queſtions about the Liberties and Exemptions of the Clergy.

In Michaelmas-Term certain Queſtions were propoſed to the Judges concerning the Liberties and Exemptions of the Clergy.

1. Whether Clergy-men were bound to find Watch or Ward day or night? To this the Anſwer was deferred till the Judges had informed themſelves of the Practice in the Counties where they went their Circuit.

2. Whether Clergy Men might be compelled to take Apprentices by the Statute of the Poor in 43 Eliz.? They agreed that no Man was expreſly out of the Statute: but there was a diſcretion to be uſed in the Juſtices of Peace, to conſider where it was fit to put the Child to be kept; and where it was fitter to take Money toward the putting of it out.

Diſputes about obſerving the Lord's-Day.

The obſervation of the Lord's-Day was now made a moſt unhappy ſubject of Diſpute: Some Doctrines were advanc'd ſo Sabbatarian and Jewiſh, that the Rigours of this one Party gave occaſion to extreme looſeneſs in another. The Liberties taken at Wakes, or annual Feaſts of Dedication of Churches, were grown to that exceſs in ſame Parts, that Judge Richardſon in a Circuit, made an Order to ſuppreſs them. This was thought intruding upon the Eccleſiaſtical Power; Bp. Laud complain'd to the King, and the Judge was reprov'd. Nothing made this Controverſy more unhappy, than that it gave occaſion for the Book of Sports to be hereafter mention'd.

Wakes, or Sunday Revels.

We are now to proſecute Civil Affairs from the beginning of 1632. 8 Car. The too great Reſort of the Nobility, Gentry, and dignified Clergy to the Court and City, and thereby leaving the Country deſtitute of Hoſpitality, and the other Benefits of Reſidence; was a good Reaſon for his Majeſty, by Proclamation, dated June 20. "To charge and com- "mand, that before the end of forty days, all Lords, "Knights, Gentlemen, and Clerks, ſhould reſort to "the ſeveral Counties where they uſually reſided, "and there keep their Habitations and Hoſpitality, "except ſuch as were of his Majeſty's Council, or "bound to Attendance on the King or Queen, or "their Children. But the immediate cauſe of this Diſmiſſion, was a Fear, that the Acceſs of People from infected Places in the Country, might again endanger the Town lately delivered from the Plague. And therefore another Proclamation was dated the ſame Day at Greenwich, "To inhibit the "Reſort of his Majeſties People to the Court, for "Cure of the King's Evil, and to reſtrain the Ac- "ceſs of others from Infected Places.

Proclamation for Nobility and Gentry to reſort to the Country.

Mr. Attorney General Noy, in the Eaſter Term, brought in Information in the King's-Bench againſt the Mayor and Commonalty of London, for that in June 1628. Dr. John Lamb was ſlain in a Tumult and Riot, and none of the Offenders taken, nor any Perſon known or indicted for that Felony. The Mayor and Commonalty appearing, confeſſed the Offence, and ſubmitted themſelves to the Favour of the Court, and were Fined in 1500 Marks, as for a Tranſgreſſion in Common Law. But tho the Proſecution was juſt, and Submiſſion made the Amercement as it were voluntary; yet the Diſgrace and the Loſs together left a ſore place upon the Hearts of many of the Citizens, who began to hate the Court for bearing hard upon them.

Information againſt the City of London for the Murder of D. Lamb.

Mr. William Prynne now publiſhed his Hiſtrio-Maſtix, or Book againſt Stage Plays, Licenſed by the Chaplain of Archbiſhop Abbot; wherein, with very profuſe Collections, he expos'd the Liberties of the Stage, and condemn'd the very Lawfulneſs of Acting. In his way of Writing he could not refrain from over-doing any Subject and from many Appearances of Railing. And becauſe the Court became now more addicted to theſe ludicrous Entertainments, and the Queen her ſelf was ſo fond of the Amuſement that ſhe had bore the Part of a Paſtoral in her own Royal Perſon; therefore this Treatiſe againſt Plays was ſuſpected to be levell'd againſt the Practice of the Court, and the Example of the Queen: and it was ſuppos'd an Innuendo, that in the Table of the Book this Reference was put, Women Actors notorious Whores. The Attorney-General proſecuted Prynne for this Libel in the Star-Chamber, where he was ſentenc'd to Impriſonment and other Penalties. The Misfortune was, that Biſhop Laud was the Inſtrument and Abetter of this Proceſs againſt the Book and the Author, by ſhewing the Book to the King, and pointing at the offenſive parts of it; and then by employing Dr. Heylyn to pick out all the virulent Paſſages, and give the ſevereſt Turn to them; and laſtly, by carrying thoſe Notes to the Attorney-General for matter of Information, and urging him earneſtly to proceed againſt the Author: Which tho' a Prelate might do with ſincere Intention to ſuppreſs Libelling, and to aſſert a Reſpect to crowned Heads; yet it was look'd upon, by ſome ſerious Men, as a giving countenance to the Licentiouſneſs and Profaneneſs of the Stage, which ought rather to have been Reproved and Reſtrained by a Chriſtian Biſhop.

Prynne publiſhes his Hiſtrio-Maſtix.

Zeal of Bp. Laud.

Mr. Francis Windebank (ſoon after Knighted) was made Secretary of State by the Intereſt of Biſhop Laud, who has thus enter'd it in his Diary, 1632. June 15. Mr. Francis Windebank, my old Friend, was ſworn Secretary of State; which Place I obtained for him of my gracious Maſter King Charles. He proved ſo much a Creature of the Queens, and ſuch an Advocate and Patron of all ſuffering Prieſts and Jeſuits, that he got the Character of a Papiſt, and brought the greater Odium upon Biſhop Laud, who preferr'd him, and who for that Reaſon was to anſwer to the People for his good Behaviour. That which created the more Envy, was the turning out an old Secretary, Sir John Coke, whoſe Age and Infirmities had indeed made him unfit for Buſineſs.

Windebank made Secretary of State.

Take his Character from a Writer excelling in that way. "Sir John Coke, upon the Death of Sir "Albert Moreton, was, from being Maſter of Re- "queſts, preferr'd to be Secretary of State. A Man "of a very narrow Education, and a narrower Na- "ture; having continued long in the Univerſity of "Cambridge, where he had gotten Latin Learning "enough; and afterwards in the Country in the "condition of a private Gentleman, till after he "was fifty Years of Age; when upon ſome Repu- "tation he had for Induſtry and Diligence, he was "called to ſome painful Employment in the Office "of the Navy, which he diſcharg'd well, and after- "wards to be Maſter of Requeſts, and then to be "Secretary of State, which he enjoy'd to a great "Age: And was a Man rather unadorn'd with any "Parts of Vigour and Quickneſs, and unindow'd "with any notable Virtues, than notorious for any "weakneſs or defect of Underſtanding, or tranſport- "ed with any vitious Inclinations, Appetite to Money 1632. 8 Car. I. " ney only excepted. His Cardinal Perfection was " Induſtry, and his moſt eminent Infirmity Cove- " touſneſs. His long Experience had informed him " well of the State and Affairs of England; but of " Foreign Tranſactions, or the common Intereſt of " Chriſtian Princes, he was entirely Undiſcerning " and Ignorant.

King had the Small Pox.

Toward the end of November, the King was much indiſpoſed, and had the Small-Pox appearing on him, on Sunday Decem. 2. but the Diſeaſe was very gentle and ſafe, tho' ſo fatal to many of his Royal Poſterity.

State of Ireland.

Ireland, under the Government of Lords Juſtices, was under great Ferments and Diſtempers, owing chiefly to the potent Faction of the Papiſts; who had been too much conniv'd at and encouraged, and according to the Nature of thoſe Men, and that Religion, had turned all Favour into intoletable Inſolence. To reduce the Affairs of that Kingdom into better Peace and Order, the King ſent the Lord Wentworth, under the Title of Lord Deputy, upon good Experience of his Spirit of Diſcipline and Conduct, as Preſident of the North; where he had indeed carried ſome things with extremity of Rigour, tho' perhaps no farther than the Neceſſity and Iniquity of Times requir'd.

Foreign Affairs.

As to Foreign Affairs, we left Sir Henry Vane in an Embaſſy to the King of Sweden, at the head of a marching Army, ſolliciting for the reſtauration of the Palſgrave to his Dominions in the Palatinate. He had his laſt Audience about the middle of July, when that ſucceſsful Prince offer'd theſe hard Propoſals.

Offers of the King of Sweden.

I. " That the Palſgrave ſhould hold his Country as " a Donative of the King of Sweden.

II. " That he ſhould make no Martial Levies " without the Swedes conſent.

III. " That during this War he ſhould furniſh " the Swedes with ſo many thouſand Men upon his " own Pay.

IV. " That two of his chiefeſt Towns ſhould " ſtand Cautionaries for the performing of Cove- " nants.

V. " That he ſhould make no League nor Arti- " cle with any other Prince without the Swedes con- " ſent.

The Ambaſſador knew, that his Maſter and the Palſgrave, and all Mankind, would think theſe Terms diſhonourable; and therefore he expoſtulated with the King of Sweden, upon the hardſhip of them, in ſo much freedom of Speech, that they both parted in a Paſſion, and the Treaty broke off. The King of England perceiving his Forces not likely to be employ'd, as he deſigned them, for the Service of the Palatinate, wrote to the Marquiſs of Hamilton to make an Excuſe and return home: and ſent Letters to the King of Sweden, charging him with obſtructing a League between them, and ſo recalling his Ambaſſadour, who came away in the beginning of November, leaving Inſtructions with his Secretary Mr. Curtius, who ſtaid behind as his Majeſty's Agent with the King of Sweden. After this, the Swediſh Army paſs'd on with rapid Succeſs. Tilly had been often defeated, and at laſt wounded to Death; and Count Wallanſtein in great diſguſt for having been caſhier'd at the Diet of Ratisbone, had been now forc'd to be courted to re-accept the Office of Generaliſſimo of the Imperial Army. The deciding Battle was fought at Lutzen on Novem. 6. 1632. wherein the King of Sweden was unfortunately Slain; and yet his Death was ſo far from being a damp to his Army, that it incens'd them to Revenge, and they came off with Victory. The Palſgrave, or Prince Elector, much encourag'd by the King of Sweden to hope for Right and Reſtitution, tho' no Conditions could be expreſly made, died of an Infection taken at Mentz, on the 29th of the ſame Month. And Wallenſtein ſoon after being diſcover'd in a Conſpiracy, to make himſelf King of Bohemia, was murther'd in his Bed-Chamber.

Battel of Lutzen.

King of Sweden killed.

The Emperor of Muſcovy deſigning to regain the Town of Smolensko from the King of Poland, applied himſelf to the King of England for leave to raiſe two thouſand Men; who by conſent were accordingly raiſed, and Commanded by Colonel Thomas Sanderſon, who landed them at Archangel on the 6th. of Auguſt, and march'd them to the Siege of Smolensko, where, upon a pet of Honour, Colonel Sanderſon was baſely murder'd by Colonel Leſley; and this drew the Scotch and Engliſh into Parties of Revenge and Defence. The Poles took advantage of this Mutiny and Diſtraction, and at that Juncture fell upon the Muſcovite with that fury and ſucceſs, that they made them quit the Siege and comply with diſhonourable Terms of Peace. 1632. 8 Car. I. Muſcovites and Poles.

The Earl of Leiceſter was ſent Ambaſſadour to Denmark, to condole the deceaſe of the Queen Dowager, and to demand the Dividend of a ſixth part of her Eſtate, as due to our King and his Siſter the Lady Elizabeth, in Right of their Mother Queen Anne. But the King of Denmark pretended to a Debt from the Crown of England, and ſo one Demand was to ſatisfie the other. And in December the Earl of Arundel was by the King ſent over to his Siſter at the Hague, to condole the Loſs of her unfortunate Husband, and to invite her and her Children into England: But ſhe ſent an Excuſe for the preſent, as being too much immers'd in Sorrow, and not yet able to undertake the Journey. Earl of Leiceſter Ambaſſador to Denmark.

The Year 1633. began with the King's Preparation for a Progreſs into Scotland, where he had been expected for the ſolemnity of a Coronation ever ſince his Fathers Death. His long delay had been unkindly reſented in that Kingdom; and ſome Murmurs were given out, that if the King did not think the Crown of Scotland worth his Journey thither, there might be ſome other way of diſpoſing of it. 1633. 9 Car. I.

To make this ſeaſonable Progreſs with more Pomp and Order, the King iſſued his Proclamation on the 4th of May, that competent Proviſions ſhould be made for his Royal Perſon and Attendants, in the ſeveral parts of this Realm through which he was to paſs; and that the Prizes of them ſhould be Aſſeſſed and Rated by the Clerk of the Market of the King's Houſhold. And the next Day, May 5. another Proclamation was publiſhed for the better ordering his Majeſty's Court and Train in his Journey to Scotland, and his return from thence. And then his Gueſts or Stays upon the Road being appointed as to Time and Place, on May 13. his Majeſty ſet out from London with a noble Retinue of the Earls of Northumberland, Arundel, Pembroke, Southampton, Holland, Marquess Hamilton, Biſhop of London, and many other Perſons of Quality. He accepted of many noble Entertainments by the way; at Welbeck from the Earl of Newcaſtle, at Raby Caſtle from Sir Henry Vane, at Durham ſeveral Days by Biſhop Morton, and at Newcaſtle from the Magiſtrates and Town. The King enter'd Scotland on the 12th of June, when immediately all his Engliſh Servants and Officers yielded up their places of Attendance to the Scots, who were admitted to the ſame Titles and Duties. June 15. the King enter'd Edinborough in great State and Magnificence; and indeed the Pomp and Grandeur of the Scotch Nobility, had ſo much Emulation and Profuſeneſs in it, that the Debts which they now contracted, did help to breed and foment the Seditions that ſoon after broke out. June 18. was the Coronation Day, which paſs'd with as much Solemnity and publick Joy as could poſſibly fill the Hearts of Prince and People: The Sermon was preach'd by Dr. David Lindſey Biſhop of Brechin, upon 1 Kings 1. 39. and the chief Ceremonies performed by Dr. Spotſwood Archbiſhop of St. Andrews. K. goes to Scotland to be Crown'd; His Retinue and Journey. Enters Edinborough. His Coronation.

The Parliament began June 20. the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews preach'd, and the King made a very gracious Speech. Then the Lords and Members of the Articles being choſe, they prepared and preſented ſeveral Bills, which were paſs'd, agreeable to the King's

He returns. Effect of this Progreſs.

In this Progreſs the King carried himſelf with great Prudence and Moderation, and yet many things concurr'd to open a way for thoſe Commotions which afterward diſtracted both Kingdoms. For firſt, it did now appear, that the Scotch Noblemen, who had been greateſt Favourites in the Engliſh Court, had the leaſt Intereſt in their own Country: and that the Bounties thrown upon them by the King and his Father were not look'd upon as any Favour to the Nation, but as Obligations caſt away upon thoſe particular Men, who in being the more gracious with the King, were but the more ſuſpected to the People. Secondly, Some of the Scotch Nobility endeavour'd to make themſelves Popular by ſpeaking in Parliament againſt thoſe things which were moſt grateful to his Majeſty; and in entring their Diſſent to ſome Acts; for which the King did openly diſcountenance ſeveral of them, and made them not forgive the King, becauſe they imagin'd the King would never forgive them. Thirdly, Two or three Acts were paſſed, which did much leſſen the Authority of the great Men, and the Subjection and Dependence of their Tenents; which ſerv'd to incenſe the one, and to make the other more licentious. But fourthly, the worſt of all was, the Fears and Jealouſies taken up by the Kirk Party: They were taught to be upon their Guard by the Biſhop of London's waiting on the King; and they look'd with a worſe Eye upon him, when they heard him preach in the Royal Chapel at Edenborough, chiefly on the Benefit of Conformity, and the Reverence due to the Ceremonies of the Church. They grew more and more angry, when the King during his Stay had erected and endowed an Epiſcopal See at Edinborough, and had promoted ſome of the Biſhops to principal Offices of State, and had committed the framing and compoſing of a Liturgy for the Church of Scotland to a ſelect Number of their Biſhops. Theſe ſofteſt Steps were with great Indignation exclaim'd upon, as a Project to make Scotland ſubject to all the Forms and Eſtabliſhments of England, which they pretended would make their Kingdom appear like a depending Province, and leave their Kirk deprived of all the Remainder of its own way of Reformation.

The King having come Poſt from Berwick in four days, reach'd on Saturday July 20. to Greenwich, where the Queen kept her Court. Aug. 4. Archbiſhop Abbot, having been long dead to the Church, died at Lambeth. An honourable Author obſerves, that

" He had ſate too many Years in that See, and had " too great a Juriſdiction over the Church. —— He " had been promoted to Canterbury upon the never " enough lamented Death of Dr. Bancroft, that Metropolitan who underſtood the Church excellently, " and had almoſt reſcued it out of the hands of the " Calvinian Party, and very much ſubdued the unruly Spirit of the Nonconformiſts; countenanced " Men of the greateſt Parts in Learning, and diſpoſed the Clergy to a more ſolid courſe of Study " than they had been accuſtomed to; and if he had " lived would quickly have extinguiſhed all that " Fire in England which had been kindled at Geneva; " or if he had been ſucceeded by Biſhop Andrews, " Biſhop Overal, or any Man who underſtood and " loved the Church; that Infection would eaſily " have been kept out, which could not afterwards " be ſo eaſily expelled. But Abbot brought none " of this Antidote with him, &c. —— And tho " many other Biſhops plainly diſcern'd the Miſchiefs which daily broke in to the prejudice of " Religion, and prevented it in their Dioceſſes as " much as they could —— yet that temper in the " Archbiſhop, whoſe Houſe was a Sanctuary to the " moſt Eminent of that factious Party, and who " Licenſed their moſt pernicious Writings, left his " Succeſſor a very difficult work to do, to reform " and reduce a Church into Orders that had been ſo " long neglected, and that was ſo ill filled with " many weak and more willful Church-Men.

Ep. Laud ſucceeds to the See of Cant.

This Honour and this Difficulty were ſure to fall upon Biſhop Laud, who had in effect of late years been Adminiſtrator of the Province, and therefore the firſt time he waited on the King, Aug. 6. His Majeſty received him with this Compellation, My Lord's Grace of Canterbury, you are very wellcome; and gave Order the ſame day for the diſpatch of all neceſſary forms for his Tranſlation, which was expedited and compleated by Sept. 19. the day before, when he went firſt to Lambeth, the Ferry-boat that carried his Coach and Horſes and Servants ſunk to the bottom of the River, tho' without damage to the Men or Goods. He entred this Accident in his Diary as an obſervation of Omens, to which he was ſomewhat ſuperſtitiouſly addicted; yet rather from a ſenſe of Religion and an awe of Providence, than from any conceits of Fate or Chance. Upon his merited Acceſſion to this higheſt Seat in the Church, it may be proper to take the continuation of his Character. " He was a Man of great Parts and ve- Archbiſh. Laud's
" ry exemplary Virtues, allayed and diſcredited by Character,
" ſome unpopular natural Infirmities, the greateſt as continued by
" of which was (beſides a haſty ſharp way of ex- the Lord
" preſſing himſelf) that he believ'd Innocence of Clar.
" Heart and Integrity of Manners was a Guard
" ſtrong enough to ſecure any Man in his Voyage
" through this World, in what Company ſoever he
" travell'd, and through what Ways ſoever he was
" to paſs; and ſure never any Man was better ſup-
" plied with that Proviſion. —— He was alway ma-
" ligned and perſecuted by thoſe who were of the " Calvinian Faction, which was then very powerful,
" and who, according to their uſual Maxim and
" Practice, call every Man they do not love, Papiſt:
" and under this ſenſleſs Appellation they created
" him many Troubles and Vexations. —— When
" he came into great Authority, it may be he re-
" tain'd too keen a Memory of thoſe who had ſo
" unjuſtly and uncharitably perſecuted him before;
" and I doubt was ſo far tranſported with the ſame
" Paſſions he had reaſon to complain of in his Ad-
" verſaries, that as they accuſed him of Popery be-
" cauſe he had ſome doctrinal Opinions which they " liked not, though they were nothing allied to Po-
" pery; ſo he entertained too much Prejudice to
" ſome Perſons, as if they were Enemies to the Diſ-
" cipline of the Church, becauſe they concurr'd with
" Calvin in ſome doctrinal Points; when they ab-
" horr'd his Diſcipline, and reverenc'd the Govern" ment of the Church, and pray'd for the Peace of
" it with as much Zeal and Fervency as any in the " Kingdom, as they made manifeſt in their Lives,
" and in their Sufferings with it and for it.

Reformation of ſome Abuſes in Trading.

The King iſſued his Proclamations for preventing the Abuſes that did ariſe by the unorder'd retailing of Tobacco, and reduced the Vending of it to thoſe only who ſhould receive Licenſe ſo to do; and for the Uſe of the Bow and Pike together in Military Diſcipline, authorizing William Neal to inſtruct the Train Bands in the Uſe of a Warlike Invention to that purpoſe. And in Michaelmas-Term, upon Conſultation with the Judges, and Certificate of their Opinions, a Decree was made to confirm the Orders given by his Majeſty againſt Ingroſſing of Grain by Chandlers, and againſt many Exactions and Abuſes of Taverners, Victuallers, Bakers, Inn-keepers, and other Retailers of Proviſion: The Reformation whereof was as much a Relief to the Subject, as it was made a Benefit to the King: tho' the Offenders aggriev'd by it would have had it thought an Art only of advancing the King's Revenue. In Hilary-Term, Sir David Foulis, one of the Council of York, Deputy-Lieutenant and Juſtice of Peace, upon an Information in the Star-Chamber, for oppoſing his Majeſty's Service, and deterring his Subjects from making Fines for Knighthood, and traducing and affronting the Commiſſioners, was cenſur'd to be committed 9 Car. I. ſand Pounds, and to acknowledge his Offences in ſeveral open Courts, and to be incapable of any Office, and to pay three thouſand Pounds to the Lord Wentworth.

Mr. Will. Prynn. In the ſame Term, Mr. William Prynn was proſecuted in the ſame Court, for compiling and printing a Libellous Volume entitled Hiſtrio-maſtix, againſt Plays, Maſques, Dancings, &c. And being ſufficiently convicted of many foul and ſlanderous Reflections in it, he was ſentenced to have his Book burnt in the moſt publick manner, to be himſelf put from the Bar, and made for ever uncapable of his Profeſſion; to be excluded from the Society of Lincolns-Inn, and degraded in Oxford, and ſtand in the Pillory in Weſtminſter and Cheapſide, and loſe both his Ears, one in each place, with a Paper on his Head, declaring his Offence to be an Infamous Libel againſt both their Majeſties, the State, and the Government; and to pay a Fine of five thouſand Pounds, and to ſuffer perpetual Impriſonment. Theſe Proſecutions and Penalties in the Star-chamber, were thought to exceed the Proportion of the Crimes, by thoſe eſpecially who favoured the Committers of them: And this Terror ſerv'd but to increaſe the Averſion againſt that Court and the principal Aſſeſſors of it.

Maſque by the Inns of Court. It was a ſofter Anſwer to Mr. Prynn's Book againſt Plays and Actings, that about the beginning of November, to congratulate the King's Return, and divert his Royal Conſort, the four Inns of Court, by ſome of their principal Members, offer'd a ſplendid Maſque to be perform'd by their Societies jointly, as an Expreſſion of their Love and Duty to their Majeſties. The Offer was very graciouſly accepted; and upon Conſult and Order of the Benchers, was very nobly perform'd at Whitehall on Shrove-Tueſday February the 18th, and again at Merchant-Tayler's-Hall, where the King, Queen, and Court, were magnificently entertain'd by the City.

State of Ireland. In Ireland great Confuſions began to be compos'd by the vigilant and active Lord Deputy Thomas Viſcount Wentworth, who wrote a Letter to his Majeſty dated January 22. 1633. wherein he adviſes the calling of a Parliament, and ſuggeſts the Ways and Means of a Parliamentary Supply to make up the Revenue, which within a Year would fall ſhort twenty thouſand Pounds Sterling, and to diſcharge a Debt upon the Crown of fourſcore thouſand Pounds, and to ſupport the Army; with Propoſitions for the Peace and Intereſt of his Majeſty's Affairs, and Conſiderations for the better Government of the Church and Clergy in that Kingdom: Wherein he preſcribed, and afterward purſued ſuch Meaſures as ſhewed him to be an expert Soldier, an able Stateſman, and a good Chriſtian.

There was nothing remarkable in foreign Affairs, becauſe the King was at Peace with all States and Princes: and the Thoughts of reſtoring the Palatinate ſeemed at preſent to die with the Prince Elector. But to countenance his Son and Heir, the young Prince, his Majeſty beſtow'd on him the Honour of a Garter, and he was by Proxy inſtall'd Novemb. 6.

State of Religion. 1632. 8 Car. I. To review the ſtate of Religion for theſe two laſt Years. Arminianiſm was thrown for an odious Name upon thoſe Divines who had the greateſt Reputation for Learning, and were moſt conſidered in the Church Preferments. This Reſpect of the Court paid to them, created them more Envy and Hatred than the bare Opinions charg'd upon them could poſſibly have done. And for theſe Political Reaſons, more than for any Merit of the Cauſe, the Popularity went moſt on the Calvinian ſide; and many Preachers who inclin'd to pleaſe the People, took a zealous freedom to reflect upon the Tenets called Arminian, and upon the Profeſſors of them. This Liberty was Penal, as a Tranſgreſſion of his Majeſty's Injunctions; and Biſhop Laud never failed the Opportunities of making an Example of every ſuch bold Preacher.

Mr. Nathaniel Barnard, Lecturer of St. Sepulchre's in London, had preach'd at St. Mary's in Cambridge, upon 1 Samuel 4. 21. The Glory is departed from Iſrael, &c. in which he tragically complain'd of Pelagian Errors brought into the Doctrine of our Church, with ſuperſtitious Inventions of Men; to the Authors whereof he prayed for Converſion or Deſtruction, &c. For which he was queſtion'd in the High Commiſſion, and was enjoin'd a Form of Recantation; which he refuſing to ſubmit to, he was ſuſpended from his Office, fined a thouſand Pounds, condemned in Coſts, and committed to Priſon. 1632. 8 Car. I. Sermon of Mr. Barnard.

Church Preferments. The great care of Biſhop Laud was to recommend ſuch Perſons to the Dignities of the Church as he thought to be Men of the greateſt Probity and Publick Spirit. Under this View, he got Dr. Curl to be Tranſlated from the See of Bath and Wells to that of Wincheſter, and Dr Pierce to be promoted to Bath and Wells; Dr. Auguſtine Lindſey to the See of Peterborough, Dr. Robert Wright to be Tranſlated from Briſtol to Coventry and Lichfield; and with a more particular Affection, as his Diary expreſſes, July 10. 1632. Dr. Juxon, the Dean of Worceſter, at my Suit ſworn Clerk of his Majeſty's Cloſet, that I might have One that I might truſt near his Majeſty, if I grew weak or infirm, as I muſt have a time.

Cauſe againſt the Feoffees for Impropriations. The Cauſe againſt the Feoffees for buying in of Impropriations, as Inſtruments of the Puritan Faction to divide and deſtroy the Church, was now brought by Information into the Exchequer; where the Attorney-General ſet forth, that the ſaid Feoffees had purchaſed divers Rectories, Tithes, &c. under a Pretence of augmenting poor Vicarages, but had not employ'd them according to ſuch pious Uſes, according to the true Intention of the Donors. The Defendents made Anſwer, that they believed Impropriations in the Poſſeſſion of Lay-men, not employ'd for the Maintenance of Preachers, to be a great Damage to the Church of England; and therefore, that the Purchaſing thereof for the Maintenance of Divine Service and Preaching, was a pious Work: and that the Donors and Benefactors had not ſpecially aſſign'd the Endowment of perpetual Vicars, but intended the Maintenance of Preachers, and ſuch other good Uſes, as the Defendents ſhould think meet; and that they had converted the Money to ſuch Uſes, according to the beſt of their Diſcretion. The Court gave Judgment, That the Defendents had uſurped upon the King's Regality, and of their own Authority had made themſelves a Body or Society; that they had purchaſed divers Impropriations, but never reſtored one of them to the Church; that by diſpoſing the Profits to Lecturers and Miniſters, they had drawn a Dependency of the Clergy upon them, and introduced many Novelties of dangerous conſequences. The Court did forbear to proceed to Puniſhment, becauſe his Majeſty had determin'd a criminal Proceſs againſt them in the Star-Chamber.

Proſecution of Mr. Sherfield. In February this Year, Henry Sherfield Eſq; Bencher of Lincolns-Inn, and Recorder of Sarum, was inform'd againſt in the Star-Chamber, for taking down the painted Glaſs from a Window in St. Edmund's Church in Salisbury; for which he was ſentenc'd to a Fine of five hundred Pounds, to be remov'd from the Recorderſhip of that City, to make a publick Acknowledgment of his Fault, and to be bound to his good Behaviour. This ſhew'd the Puritanical Humour of being now offended with thoſe Ornaments which had ſtood unblamable ever ſince the Reformation. And yet theſe Cenſures upon the Heat and Indiſcretion of forward Menders, did but encreaſe the Rumour of favouring Superſtition and Idolatry.

Upon Complaints made concerning Ales and Revels upon the Wakes or Dedication-Sundays in Somerſetſhire, the Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon and Baron Denham, in their Circuit in that County, had made this Order.

1633. 9 Car. I.

Order of Aſſizes againſt Wakes and Revels

"WHereas divers Orders have been made heretofore, by Judges of the Aſſize, for the ſuppreſſing of all Ales and Revels, the ſame Order is now confirmed at the Aſſizes, and again order'd by the Court, in regard of the infinite number of Inconveniencies daily ariſing by means of Revels, that ſuch Revels, Church-Ales, Clerk-Ales, and all other Publick-Ales, be henceforth utterly ſuppreſſed; and to the end this may be obſerv'd, it is farther Order'd, that the Clerk of the Aſſizes ſhall leave Copies hereof with the Miniſter of every Pariſh within his ſeveral Hundred, and ſhall give a Note under his Hand, that he ſhall publiſh it Yearly, within the Pariſh, the firſt Sunday in February, and likewiſe the two Sundays before Eaſter yearly.

The Abp. offended.

The Archbiſhop did well apprehend, that this Proceeding of the Judges in an Eccleſiaſtical Affair, and impoſing an Order upon the Miniſters to publiſh, without conſent or knowledge of the Biſhop, might grow into greater Encroachments upon the Authority of the Church, and make the Diſcipline of it depend upon the Pleaſure of the Lay Magiſtrate. Under this concern, he complains to the King of this Irregularity of the Judges; and writes to the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, for a full Account how the Feaſts of the Dedication of Churches, commonly called Wakes, were obſerved in thoſe Parts; and to know whether the Diſorders of them might not be prevented by the care of the Juſtices of Peace, without abrogating the Feaſts themſelves; which if decently kept up might encourage neighbourly Meeting, and a ſeaſonable Recreation of the People. The Biſhop return'd Anſwer, That the ancient Cuſtom of thoſe Feaſts was laudable and Innocent; that the late Suppreſſion was very unacceptable; and the Reſtitution of them would be grateful to the Clergy, Gentry and common People. Upon this Report and farther Enquiries, the Lord Chief Juſtice was Reprov'd at the Council Table, and commanded to revoke his Order; which he did at the next Aſſizes, but with ſo much Reſerve and Regret, that it look'd like a Penance impoſed, and like declaring the Will and Pleaſure of the King, againſt his own Conſcience. This Revocation however well intended, was thought the giving Countenance to Miſpending and Profaning of the Lord's-Day. And many devout People were ſo much offended at it, that from being Serious they grew Preciſe, and condemned all the cuſtomary Sports and Diverſions upon Sundays (which after Divine Service had been long practis'd without ſcruple) as now abſolutely unlawful. This one Extreme of the Puritans put the Government upon another more unhappy.

Makes the Order be revers'd.

Unhappy allowance of Sports on the Lds Day.

It was remember'd, that when the like rigorous Notions of a Sabbath began to obtain, in the Reign of King James, he in his Princely Wiſdom publiſh'd a Declaration, To all his loving Subjects, concerning lawful Sports to be uſed upon Sundays after Evening Prayers ended, and upon Holidays. Wherein he declares, "that in his late Progreſs through Lancaſhire he did rebuke ſome Puritans and preciſe People, and took Order that the like unlawful Carriage ſhould not be uſed by any of them hereafter, in the prohibiting and unlawful puniſhing of his good People, for uſing their lawful Recreations and honeſt Exerciſes upon Sundays, and other Holidays, after the Afternoon Sermon or Service—— which cannot but produce two Evils, the one the hindring the converſion of many Papiſts, whom their Prieſt will take occaſion hereby to vex, perſwading them that no honeſt Mirth or Recreation is lawful or tolerable in Religion; —— the other, that this Prohibition barreth the common and meaner ſort of People from uſing ſuch Exerciſes, as may make their Bodies more able for War, when his Majeſty or his Succeſſors ſhall have occaſion to uſe them. —— The King's expreſs Pleaſure therefore is, that the Laws of this Kingdom, and Canons of the Church, be well obſerved; and that no lawful Recreation ſhall be barred to his good People, which ſhall not tend to the breach of the aforeſaid Laws and Canons of the Church. —— That after the end of Divine Service, his good People be not diſturbed, letted or diſcouraged, from any lawful Recreation; ſuch as Dancing, either Men or Women, Archery for Men, Leaping, Vaulting, or any ſuch harmleſs Recreation. ——— But withal, his Majeſty doth here account ſtill as prohibited, all unlawful Games to be uſed upon Sundays, as Bear and Bull-Baitings, Interludes and Bowling. And likewiſe bars from this Benefit and Liberty all ſuch known Recuſants, either Men or Women, as will abſtain from coming to Church, or Divine Service, and to all, that tho' conform in Religion are not preſent in the Church at the Service of God, before their going to the ſaid Recreations. —— He doth likewiſe ſtrictly command, that every Perſon ſhall reſort to his own Pariſh Church to hear Divine Service, and each Pariſh by it ſelf to uſe the ſaid Recreation after Divine Service. —— And his Pleaſure is, that this his Declaration ſhall be Publiſhed, by Order from the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, through all the Pariſh Churches, and that both the Judges of the Circuits, and the Juſtices of the Peace, be informed thereof. Given at the Mannor of Greenwich the 24th Day of May, in the 16th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, of England, &c. and of Scotland the 51ſt. 1618.

Declaration of King Charles.

The King and Council thought fit to renew and confirm this Declaration, and therefore a like Declaration was now drawn, which gives an account of the occaſion taken by King James, and then recites his ſaid Declaration at large, and concludes thus:

"Now, out of a like pious Care for the Service of God, and for ſuppreſſion of any Humours that oppoſe Truth, and for the Eaſe, Comfort and Recreation of his well-deſerving People, his Majeſty doth ratifie and publiſh this his bleſſed Father's Declaration, the rather becauſe of late in ſome Counties of this Kingdom, his Majeſty finds that under pretence of taking away Abuſes, there hath been a general Forbidding, not only of ordinary meetings, but of the Feaſts of the Dedication of the Churches, commonly called Wakes. Now his Majeſty's expreſs Will and Pleaſure is, that theſe Feaſts with others ſhall be obſerved, and that his Juſtices of the Peace, in their ſeveral Diviſions ſhall look to it, both that all Diſorders there may be prevented or puniſhed; and that all neighbourhood and freedom with Manlike and lawful Exerciſes be uſed. And his Majeſty farther commands all Juſtices of Aſſize in their ſeveral Circuits to ſee, that no Man do trouble or moleſt any of his Loyal or Dutiful People, in or for their lawful Recreations, having firſt done their Duty to God, and continuing in Obedience to his Majeſty's Laws. And for this his Majeſty commands all his Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, as well within Liberties as without, Mayors, Bailiffs, Conſtables and other Officers, to take notice of, and to ſee obſerved, as they tender his Diſpleaſure. And doth farther Will, that publication of this his Command be made, by Order from the Biſhops, through all the Pariſh Churches of their ſeveral Dioceſſes reſpectively. Given at our Palace of Weſtminſter the Eighteenth Day of October, in the ninth Year of our Reign.

Declaration of King James for lawful Sports.

Ill Effects of this Declaration.

Nothing more proves the diverſity of Times than the different Operation that the ſame Act ſhall have upon the one and the other. This Declaration in the Reign of King James was generally thought more than Innocent, even ſeaſonable and popular. But now under King Charles it was reſented sented by many ſober People as worſe than needleſs, as even Irreligious and Profane. Great numbers of People could not endure to hear it, and ſeveral Miniſters refuſed to read it: And this one thing, tho' founded upon ſo late a Precedent, drew on more prejudice againſt the King and the Archbiſhop, than any other part of the publick Adminiſtration. It had been more happy to have timely conſidered the Pulſe and Temper of the People: For it ſeems the Political Phyſick in one Age may be Poiſon in another.

State of Religion in Scotland

The State of Religion in Scotland, had ſo great an influence on Publick Affairs, that it will be proper here to repreſent it, in the Words of a profound Judge in Matters of Church and State. "The King

Ld. Clarendon's Hiſt. Rebel B. 1. p. 63.

" was always the moſt punctual obſerver of all Decency in his Devotion, and the ſtricteſt promoter " of the Ceremonies of the Church; and believing " in his Soul the Church of England to be inſtituted " the neareſt to the practice of the Apoſtles, and the " beſt for the propagation and advancement of Chriſtian Religion of any Church in the World, he had " the higheſt diſlike and prejudice to that part of his " own Subjects, who were againſt the Government " eſtabliſh'd, and did always look upon them as a " very dangerous and ſeditious People. This Temper and Diſpoſition in England lurk'd with wonderful Secrecy: In Scotland, indeed, it cover'd the " whole Nation, ſo that though there were Biſhops " in Name, the whole Juriſdiction, and they themſelves, were upon the Matter ſubject to an Aſſembly, which was purely Presbyterian; no Form of " Religion in practice; no Liturgy, nor the leaſt " Appearance of any Beauty of Holineſs. —— " Yet the King's own Chapel at Holy-Rood-Houſe, " had ſtill been maintained with the Comelineſs of " the Cathedral Service, and all other Decencies: " And the whole Nation ſeem'd in the time of King " James well inclin'd to receive the Liturgy of the " Church of England, which that King exceedingly " deſired, and was confident of bringing the work to " paſs; however, upon ſome extraordinary Junctures he thought it neceſſary to ſuſpend the Proſecution. The King his Son propoſed nothing " more to himſelf, than to unite his three Kingdoms in one Form of God's Worſhip and publick " Devotions; and there is great Reaſon to believe " that in his Journey into Scotland to be crowned, " he carried this Reſolution with him. —— And " many wiſe Men were then, and are ſtill of Opinion, that if the King had then propoſed the Liturgy of the Church of Engl. to have been received and " practis'd by that Nation, it would have been ſubmitted to without oppoſition. —— But there were " Obſtructions that diverted the King; yet the party that was averſe from the thing, and abhorred " any thought of Conformity, could not have been " powerful enough to have ſtop'd the progreſs of it. " The miſchief was, that they who moſt deſir'd it, " and were moſt concern'd to promote it, were the " Men who uſed all their Credit to divert the preſent attempting it; and the Biſhops themſelves " applied all their Counſels ſecretly to have the " Matter more maturely conſidered. —— The " great Objection was, that the Engliſh Liturgy " without Alterations would be dangerous to impoſe upon a jealous People, who, had been long " afraid of Scotland being reduc'd as a Province to " England, and made ſubject to their Laws and Government. —— This made a deep Impreſſion on " his Majeſty, and ſo he committed the framing and " compoſing ſuch a Liturgy as would moſt probably be acceptable to that People, to a ſelect number of the Biſhops there, who were very able and " willing to undertake it.

Abp. Laud concern'd for uniformity in Scotland.

While this was in agitation, Archbiſhop Laud moſt truly zealous in this work of Uniformity, kept a conſtant Correſpondence with the Scotch Biſhops, and directed and encouraged them to proceed, with ſuch an Air of Authority, and in ſuch Terms of Preſcribing; that even this was a pretence to carry on the Prejudice, that a Scotch Liturgy ſhould be ſtill dictated and impoſed from England. And it was made another Advantage of the like Suſpicions; that while a Liturgy and Canons were under a due deliberation in Scotland, the King was thought to interpoſe with too much haſt, by ſending Articles of Conformity for the better ordering of Divine Service in his Chapel Royal in Scotland, certified to the Lords of the Privy Council to be executed with Diligence and Care, dated the 8th of October 1633. with a ſufficient Intimation, that this was a Patern of the intended Reformation to all Cathedrals, Pariſh Churches and Chapels in Scotland. This more and more fill'd the Heads of a People that mightily affected to be free and independent.

1633. 9 Car. I.

A like Jealouſie againſt any Alterations prevail'd too much in England. " The remiſſneſs of Abbot, " and of other Biſhops by his Example, had introduced, or at leaſt connived at a Negligence that " gave great ſcandal to the Church, and no doubt " offended very many pious Men. The People " took ſo little care of the Churches, and the Parſons as little of the Chancels, ſuffering them to " be kept ſo indecently and ſlovenly, as they would " not have endured in the ordinary Offices of their " own Houſes; the Rain and the Wind to infeſt " them, and the Sacraments themſelves to be adminiſtred where the People had moſt Mind to receive " them. This profane Liberty and Uncleanlineſs, " Archbiſhop Laud reſolved to reform with all expedition, requiring the other Biſhops to concur with " him in ſo pious a Work; and the Work ſure was " very grateful to all Men of Devotion: yet I know " not how, the Proſecution of it with too much affection of expence it may be, or with too much " Paſſion between the Miniſters and Pariſhioners, " raiſed an evil Spirit towards the Church, which " the Enemies of it took much advantage of, as ſoon " as they had an opportunity to make the worſt " of it.

Ld. Clarendon's Hiſt. Rebel.

People in Engl. jealous of Alterations tho' to the better.

Placing of the Communion Table.

The Archbiſhop had obſerved, that placing the Communion Table in the body of the Church, or at the entrance only of the Chancel, was not only an impediment of the Church, in obſtructing the Paſſage of the People; nor only a proſtitution of the Table to other ordinary and ſordid Uſes; but that it made the Chancel look like a uſeleſs Building, fit only for Schooling and Pariſh Meeting, tho' originally deſign'd for the moſt ſolemn Office of Religion. To redeem theſe Places from Profaneſs, and reſtore them to the primitive uſe of the holy Sacrament; the Archbiſhop uſed his utmoſt diligence to remove the Communion Table from the body of the Church, and fix it at the upper end of the Chancel, and ſecure it from the approach of Dogs, and all ſervile Uſes, by Railing it in, and obliging the People to come up to thoſe Rails, to receive the Sacrament in more Decency and Order. This now, however regular and agreeable to devout Perſons, was thought a Grievance in many Pariſhes, more on the account of Trouble and Expence, than upon any other Scruple. Theſe Murmurs were artificially improv'd into the cries of Innovation, Superſtition and Popery it ſelf. The Archbiſhop guided purely by his Zeal and Reverence for the place of God's Service, and by the Canons and Injunctions of the Church, with the Cuſtom obſerv'd in the King's Chapel, and in moſt Cathedral Churches, without conſidering the long intermiſſion and diſcontinuance in many other Places, proſecuted this Affair more paſſionately than was fit for the Seaſon, and had Prejudice againſt thoſe, who out of fear or foreſight, or not underſtanding the thing, had not the ſame warmth to promote it.

Great oppoſition given to the Abp.

The firſt oppoſition and diſturbance in this Matter, was in the Pariſh of St. Gregory's, Lond. where the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, as Ordinaries, had appointed the Communion Table to be remov'd from the middle of the Chancel to the upper end, in ſuch manner as it ſtandeth in the ſaid Cathedral and 1633. 9 Car. I. Mother-Church. Some few of the Pariſhioners did complain of this Act by Appeal to the Dean of Arches, where they had Advocates to plead, that the Book of Common-Prayer, and the eighty ſecond Canon did give Liberty to place the Communion Table where it may ſtand with moſt fitneſs and convenience, which a general Cuſtom had determined to be in the body of the Church, or toward the bottom of the Chancel. This Queſtion was brought before his Majeſty in Council, Novem. 3. 1633. where an Order was made, " That his Majeſty having heard " particular Relation made by the Council of both " Parties, of all the Carriage and Proceeding in this " Cauſe, was pleaſed to declare his diſlike of all In- " novation and receding from antient Conſtitutions, " granted upon juſt and warrantable Reaſons, eſpe- " cially in Matters concerning Eccleſiaſtical Order " and Government, knowing how eaſily Men are " drawn to affect Novelties, and how ſoon weak " Judgments in ſuch Caſes may be overtaken and " abuſed. That the Cathedral Mother Church, was " a fit Example by which all other Churches depen- " ding thereon ought to be guided; and if a few " Pariſhioners might have their Wills in affecting a " difference from it, this might give too much ſub- " ject of Diſcourſe and Diſputes. As to what con- " cerns the Liberty given by the Common-Prayer " Book or Canon, for placing the Table with moſt " convenience: ſuch Liberty is not to be ſo under- " ſtood, as if it were left to the diſcretion of the " Pariſh, much leſs to the particular fancy of any " humourous Perſon, but to the Judgment of the " Ordinary, to whoſe Place and Function it doth " properly belong to give direction in that point, " both for the thing it ſelf, and for the time when, " and how long, as he may find cauſe. Upon " which conſideration, his Majeſty declares, that " he well approved and confirmed the Act of the " ſaid Ordinary, and did require it to be confirm- " ed by the Dean of the Arches, if the Pariſhioners " ſhould proceed in their Appeal.

Case of St. Gregory's.

Whether it was Policy to intereſt the King and Council in ſo ſmall an Affair of Church Diſcipline, that might have been ſufficiently determined in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, without ſeeming to interrupt the Proceſs, or to preſcribe the Sentence of them, is not hard to judge. But this Application is very obvious, that the Governours of the Church ought to keep up their Juriſdiction to the utmoſt bounds of Law, and to maintain an even and regular practiſe of all decent Ceremonies, and orderly Reverence in Divine Service: Or otherwiſe, if they recede into Neglect and Indifference, this may breed firſt a contempt and then a diſuſage in the People, and that by degrees may ſettle into ſuch a cuſtom of Rudeneſs and Diſreſpect to ſacred things; that thoſe of their Succeſſors, who ſhall labour to reſtore the good old ways, ſhall bear the odium of Change and Innovation. This was the Caſe of Archbiſhop Laud, and of thoſe Prelates who aſſiſted in the reforming many Corruptions crept in of later times.

Cure of Ordination.

One other great Abuſe was the eaſy Ordination of young Divines, who often came into the Church with no affection to it, only to be domeſtick Chaplains in Malecontent Families, or to be forward Preachers in Popular Lectures, with no inclination to a regular Cure of Souls. To prevent this growing Miſchief, the Archbiſhop procured a wiſe Injunction from the King, given at Weſtminſter September 19. 1633. for the ſtrict obſervation of ſuch Canons of the Church as concern thoſe that are to take Orders in their ſeveral times; more eſpecially of keeping that particular Canon which enjoins, that no Man be made a Prieſt or a Miniſter without a Title; and that nothing ſhall be reputed a Title to enable a Man for Orders, but that which is ſo by the ancient courſe of the Church and the Canon Law, ſo far forth as that Law is received in this Church of England. The Archbiſhop communicated this Royal Injunction to his Comprovincial Biſhops, and declared to them what ſhould be a Canonical Title.

Canonical Titles.

1. " A Preſentation to ſome Eccleſiaſtical Pre- " ferment. 1633. 9 Car. I.

2. " A Certificate undoubted, that he is provi- " ded of ſome vacant Church.

3. " A Grant of a petty Canon's Place, or the " like Office, in a Cathedral or Collegiate Church.

4. " A Fellowſhip, or right of a Fellowſhip, in " ſome College in Oxford or Cambridge.

5. " The being Conduct or Chaplain in ſome " College in Oxford or Cambridge.

6. " The being Maſter of Arts of five Years ſtand- " ing, living at his own charge in either of the " Univerſities.

7. " The Intention of the Biſhop that Ordains, " ſhortly to admit him to ſome Benefice or Curate's " Place then void.

Theſe Rules were a very ſeaſonable Reſtraint from the promiſcuous and bold intruding into Orders, and for that very Reaſon were an Offence to many young Students, to ſome of the Nobility, and to ſeveral Corporations, becauſe no Lecture in a populous Place, and no Chaplainſhip to a great Family were any longer allowed to be a ſufficient Title.

Dominion of the Seas aſſerted.

The Narrow Seas were at this time infeſted with Pirates of all the neighbour Nations, and the Dutch began to challenge ſuch a Right of Fiſhery, as would have robb'd the King of that Dominion, which had been alway claim'd and exerciſed by his Royal Anceſtors. To carry on this new Pretenſion, they encouraged their Learned Grotius to aſſert their free uſe of Shipping, in a Treatiſe ſtiled Mare Liberum; anſwer'd, and ſufficiently refuted, by our excellent Antiquary Mr. Selden, in his Mare Clauſum, of which the Materials had been formerly thrown together at the motion of King James, and were now put in Order, and within a Twelve Month publiſh'd at the command of King Charles. But this Controverſie was not likely to be determin'd in Paper: Therefore to ſhew a juſt concern for the Honour and Safety of the Nation, the King on May 5. publiſhed two ſeveral Proclamations. In the firſt declaring his Royal Will and Pleaſure, " That no Mariner or Sea-

Proclamations in Marine Affairs.

" faring Men, Shipwright or Ship-Carpenter, what- " ſoever, being his Majeſty's Subjects, ſhould with- " out the King's Licenſe, or the Licenſe of the Ad- " miral of England, enter, or attempt, or go about " to enter into the Service of any foreign Prince or " State, or be employed out of this Realm in any " Sea Service whatſoever, unleſs it were in the " King's own Service, or of ſome of his Subjects. " And if any at this time be in the Service of any " Foreign Prince, that they forthwith return under " a great Penalty. In the other of the ſame date, he declares his farther Pleaſure concerning the Flags " to be employ'd for his Royal Navy, as well as for " the Ships of his Subjects of South and North Bri- " tain; and conceiving it meet for the Honour of " the King's own Ships in his Navy Royal, and of " ſuch other Ships as are, or ſhall be employ'd, in the " King's immediate Service, that the ſame be by their " Flags diſtinguiſh'd from the Ships of any other of " his Subjects; doth therefore prohibit and forbid, " that none of the Subjects of any of his Nations " and Kingdoms, ſhall from henceforth preſume to " carry the Union Flag in the Main-top, or other " part of any of his Ships, that is St. George's Croſs " and St. Andrew's Croſs joined together; but that " the ſame Union Flag be ſtill reſerved as a Orna- " ment proper to the King's own Ships, and Ships " in his immediate Service and Pay, and none o- ", thers. And his Majeſty's farther Will and Plea- " ſure is, that all other Ships of his Subjects of Eng- " land or South Britain, bearing Flags ſhall from " henceforth carry the Red Croſs, commonly cal- " led St. George's Croſs; and alſo that all the other " Ships of the King's Subjects of Scotland, ſhould " from henceforth carry the White Croſs, common- " ly called St. Andrew's Croſs.

But

1634. 10 Car. I. Ship Money projected by Mr. Noy.

But the great difficulty was how to raiſe Money for fitting out a Navy ſufficient to guard the Seas; as Neceſſity ſeemed now to require not only againſt the encroachments of the Dutch, but againſt the growing Inſolence of the Turkiſh and Algerene Pirates. By degrees a Project was fram'd out of ancient Records by Mr. Attorney General Noy, to impoſe upon every Sea-Port and place of Merchandiſe the finding ſuch a number of Ships and Men, in proportion to their Wealth and Trade, or to compound with Commiſſioners at ſuch a rate. The firſt Writ for this Tax called Ship Money was dated the 20th of October, beginning with the City of London in this Form:

First Writ for Ship-Money.

Carolus Rex, &c. To the Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of our City of London, and to the Sheriffs of the ſame City, and good Men in the ſaid City and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, Greeting;

"BEcauſe we are given to underſtand that certain Thieves, Pirates and Robbers of the Sea, as well Turks, Enemies of the Chriſtian Name, as others, being gathered together wickedly taking by Force, and ſpoiling the Ships and Goods and Merchandizes, not only of our Subjects but alſo of the Subjects of our Friends in the Sea, which hath been accuſtomed antiently to be defended by the Engliſh Nation; and the ſame at their pleaſure have carried away, delivering the Men in the ſame to miſerable Captivity. And foraſmuch as we ſee them daily preparing all manner of ſhipping further to moleſt our Merchants, and to grieve the Kingdom, unleſs Remedy be not ſooner apply'd, and their Endeavours be not more manly met withal; alſo the Dangers conſider'd, which on every ſide in theſe times of War do hang over our Heads, that it behoveth us and our Subjects, to haſten the defence of the Sea and Kingdom with all expedition or ſpeed that we can: We willing, by the help of God, chiefly to provide for the defence of the Kingdom, ſafeguard of the Sea, ſecurity of our Subjects, ſafe Conduct of Ships and Merchadizes to our Kingdom of England coming, and from the ſame Kingdom to Foreign Parts paſſing: Foraſmuch as we and our Progenitors Kings of England, have been always heretofore Maſters of the aforeſaid Sea, and it would be very irkſome unto us, if that Princely Honour in our times ſhould be loſt, or in any thing diminiſhed. And although that charge of Defence, which concerneth all Men ought to be ſupported by all, as by the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom of England hath been accuſtomed to be done: Notwithſtanding, we conſidering, that you conſtituted in the Sea Coaſts, to whom by Sea as well great Dangers are imminent, and who by the ſame do get more plentiful Gains, for the defence of the Sea, and conſervation of our Princely Honour in that behalf, according to the Duty of your Allegiance againſt ſuch Attempts, are chiefly bound to ſet to your helping Hand: We command, firmly enjoining you the aforeſaid Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens, and Sheriffs of the ſaid City, and the good Men in the ſame City and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, in the Faith and Allegiance wherein ye are bound unto us, and as ye do love us and our Honour, and under the Forfeiture of all which ye can forfeit to us, that ye cauſe to be prepared and brought to the Port of Portſmouth, before the firſt Day of March now next enſuing, one Ship of War of the Burthen of Nine hundred Tons, with Three hundred and fifty Men at the leaſt, as well Maſters as very able and expert ſkilful Mariners; one other Ship of War of the Burthen of Eight hundred Tons, with Two hundred and ſixty Men at the leaſt, as well ſkilful Maſters as very able and expert Mariners; Four other Ships of War, every of them of the Burthen of Five hundred Tons, and every of them with two hundred Men at the leaſt, as well expert Maſters as very able and ſkilful Mariners; and one other Ship of War of the Burthen of Three hundred Tons, with a hundred and fifty Men, as well expert Maſters as very able and ſkilful Mariners. And alſo every of the ſaid Ships with Ordnance, as well greater as leſſer, Gun-powder and Spears and Weapons, and other neceſſary Arms ſufficient for War, and with double Tackling and with Victuals, until the ſaid firſt of March competent for ſo many Men, and from that time for twenty ſix Weeks at your charges, as well in Victuals as Men's Wages, and other things neceſſary for War, during that Time, upon defence of the Sea in our Service in command of the Admiral of the Sea, to whom we ſhall commit the cuſtody of the Sea, before the aforeſaid firſt Day of March, and as he on our behalf, ſhall command them to continue, ſo that they may be there the ſame Day at the fartheſt, to go from thence with our Ships, and the Ships of other faithful Subjects, for the ſafeguard of the Sea, and defence of you and yours, and repulſe and vanquiſhing of whomſoever buſying themſelves to moleſt or trouble upon the Sea our Merchants, and other Subjects and faithful People coming into our Dominions for cauſe of Merchandize, or from thence returning to their own Countries. Alſo we have aſſigned you the aforeſaid Mayor and Aldermen, of the City aforeſaid, or any thirteen or more of you, within thirty Days after the Receipt of this Writ, to Aſſeſs all Men in the ſaid City, and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, and the Landholders in the ſame, not having a Ship, or any part of the aforeſaid Ships, nor ſerving in the ſame, to contribute to the Expences, about the neceſſary Proviſion of the Premiſes, and to Aſſeſs and lay upon the aforeſaid City, with the Liberties and Members thereof, viz. upon every of them according to their Eſtate and Subſtances, and the Portion aſſeſſed upon them, and to nominate and appoint Collectors in this behalf. Alſo we have aſſigned you the aforeſaid Mayor, and alſo the Sheriffs of the City aforeſaid, to levy the Portions ſo as aforeſaid aſſeſſed upon the aforeſaid Men and Landholders, and every of them in the aforeſaid City, with the Liberties and Members of the ſame, by Diſtreſs and other due Means, and to commit to Priſon all thoſe whom you ſhall find Rebellious, and contrary in the Premiſes, there to remain until we ſhall give further Order for their delivery. And moreover we command you, that about the Premiſes ye diligently attend, and do and execute thoſe things with effect, upon peril that ſhall fall thereon; but we will not that under colour of our aforeſaid Command, more ſhould be levied of the ſaid Men, than ſhall ſuffice for the neceſſary Expences of the Premiſes; or that any who have levied Money for Contribution, to raiſe the aforeſaid Charges, ſhould by him detain the ſame, or any part thereof, or ſhould preſume by any manner of colour to appropriate the ſame to other uſes. Willing, that if more than may be ſufficient ſhall be collected, the ſame may be paid out among the Contributors, for the rate of the part to them belonging. Witneſs, my ſelf, at Weſtminſter the twentieth Day of October, in the tenth Year of our Reign.

The Writ read in Common Council.

This Writ was read in a Common Council held at Guild-hall Dec. 2. where the Matter gave a general Diſguſt, and brought out this Reſolution upon it. This Court, after due and ſerious conſideration taken of the Premiſes, conceiving that by their ancient Liberties, Charters, and Acts of Parliament, they ought to be freed and diſcharged of thoſe things which by the ſaid Writ are required by them to be done, doth order and agree, That the Draught of a Petition touching the ſaid Buſineſs, this day read to this Court, ſhall be engroſſed, and with all dutiful reſpect for and on this City's behalf, humbly

1624. 10 Car. I. humbly presented to the King's most excellent Majesty. Which Petition was drawn up, and presented in this Form:

Petition of the City of London against Ship Money.

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Petition of your faithful Subjects, the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of your City of London, most humbly shewing;

"THat where your Majesty by Writ bearing "teste 20. Octob. last, commanded your Petitioners, at their Charge to provide seven Ships of "War furnished with Men, Victual, and all War-like Provisions, to be at Portsmouth by the first of "March next, and to continue from thence by the "space of twenty six Weeks in your Majesty's Service, upon the Defence of the Seas, and other "Causes in the said Writ contained:

"Your Petitioners do in all submissive Humbleness, and with Acknowledgment of your sacred "Majesty's many Favours unto your said City, inform your Majesty that they conceive, that by "ancient Privileges, Grants, and Acts of Parliament (which they are ready humbly to shew "forth) they are exempt and are to be freed from "that Charge. And do most humbly pray,

"That your Majesty will be graciously pleased, "That the Petitioners, with your Princely Grace "and Favour, may enjoy the said Privileges and "Exemptions, and be freed from providing of the "said Ships and Provisions.

And they shall pray, &c.

General Offence taken at Ship Money.

This Petition seem'd to have no other effect, but only to express a Dissent, when there must follow a Compliance. And the Example of Submission, however extorted from the City of London, would have its sure and certain influence upon all inferiour Places The legal Right of this Aid was not yet disputed in any Court of Justice, but it created a general Offence and Odium. The Nobility and Gentry had reason to be jealous of any Methods of raising Money out of Parliament: The Merchants and Traders had the Grievance of thinking the whole Burden cast upon them: The Clergy could not at first obtain an Exemption from their considerable share in it; and the Country Farmers thought it little less than seizing their Corn and Cattel to be sent on Shipboard. The Murmurs were indeed so universal, and so artificially improv'd by the Enemies of the Court, that they look'd upon the Death of the Projector to be a Judgment sent upon his Head. Mr. Attorney-General Noy departed this Life August 9. His Character is thus drawn by one that understood him well:

Character of Mr. At. Gen. Noy. Lord Clarendon Hist. of the Rebellion B. 1. p. 57.

"Mr. Noy upon the great Fame of his Ability and "Learning (and he was very Able and Learned) "was by great Industry and Importunity from Court, "perswaded to accept that Place, for which all o-"ther Men labour'd (being the best for Profit, that "Profession is capable of) and so he suffered him-"self to be made the King's Attorney General. "The Court made no impression upon his Manners, "upon his Mind it did: and though he wore about "him an affected Morosity, which made him un-"apt to flatter other Men; yet even that morosity "and pride rendred him the most liable to be grosly "flatter'd himself that can be imagined. And by this "means the great Persons, who steer'd the publick "Affairs, by admiring his Parts and extolling his "Judgment as behind his back, wrought upon him "by degrees for the eminency of the Service, to be "an Instrument in all their Designs; thinking that "he could not give a clearer testimony, that his "knowledge in the Law was greater than all other "Mens, then by making that Law which all other "Men believed not to be so. So he moulded, "framed and pursued the odious and crying Pro-"ject of Soap; and with his own Hand drew and "prepared the Writ for Ship-Money, both which "will be the lasting Monuments of his Fame. In "a Word, he was an unanswerable Instance how "necessary a good Education and Knowledge of "Men is to make a wise Man, at least a Man "fit for Business, 1631. 10 Car. I.

On the Death of Mr. Noy. Sir John Banks was constituted Attorney-General by Patent dated September 27. 10 Car. And Sir Robert Heath being without reason given removed from the honour of Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, Sir John Finch was advanced to that honour. Great were the Discourses what the occasion should be of that sudden Advancement. But four days after the Writ for Ship-Money coming forth, it was conceived by common Discourse, that he was to be Instrumental to advance that Business. Sir John Banks made Attor. Gen. Sir John Finch Ch. Justice of Common Pleas.

His concern in this invidious Matter is thus represented by the Lord Clarendon. "Sir John Finch "had much that the other (Mr. Noy) wanted, but "nothing that the other had. Having led a free "Life in a restrained Fortune, and having set up "upon the stock of a good Wit, and natural Parts, "without the Superstructure of much knowledge in "the Profession by which he was to grow; he was "willing to use those Weapons in which he had "most skill, and so (being not unseen in the Af-"fections of the Court, but not having reputation "enough to guide or reform them) he took up Ship-"Money where Mr. Noy left it; and being a Judge "carried it up to that Pinnacle, from whence he "almost broke his own Neck; having in his Jour-"ney thither, had too much influence on his Bre-"thren, to induce them to concur in a Judgment "they had all cause to repent. His Character.

The King importun'd by the Queen to favour the Papists.

By the Interest of the Queen, the King was too often prevailed upon to grant Letters of Grace and Favour in behalf of the Papists and to direct his Precepts to the Courts of Justice to stay all Proceedings against them, upon Indictment, Presentment or Information for Recusancy. And even after their conviction, Letters of Protection were sent by the Secretary of State to the Judges of the Court, that their Penalties and Fines should not be estreated into the Exchequer. Many of the Privy Council were indeed suspected to be inclining to Popery, and some of them died of the Romish Religion: as the Lord Cottington, and the Lord Treasurer Weston, which latter died at the end of this Year, March 13th, and left the Character to be bestow'd on him.

Character of the Lord Treasurer Weston.

"Sir Richard Weston had been advanced to the "white staff, into the Office of Lord High Treasurer "of England, some Months before the Death of the "Duke of Buckingham; and had in that short time "so much disobliged him, at least disappointed his "expectation, that many who were privy to the "Duke's most secret purposes, did believe, that if "he had out-liv'd that Voyage in which he was "engaged, he would have remov'd him and made "another Treasurer. —— He was a Gentleman of "very ancient Extraction by Father and Mother; "his Education had been very good amongst Books "and Men. After some Years study of the Law in "the Middle-Temple, he Travelled into Foreign "Parts, and at an Age fit to make Observations and "Reflections; out of which, that which is com-"monly call'd Experience, is constituted. After "this he betook himself to the Court, and liv'd "there some Years at that distance, and with that "awe, as was agreeable to the modesty of the Age, "when Men were some time before they were known; "and well known before they were preferr'd, or "durst pretend to it. —— When made Lord Trea-"surer, he did indeed appear on the suddain won-"derfully elated, and so far threw off his old Affe-"ctation too to please some very much, and to dis-"please none, in which Art he had excell'd; that "in few Months after the Duke's death, he found "himself to succeed him in the publick Displeasure, "and in the Malice of his Enemies, without suc-"ceeding him in his Credit at Court, or in the af-"fection of any considerable Dependents. And 1634. 10 Car. I. "yet though he was not ſuperiour to all other "Men in the Affection, or rather Reſignation of the "King, ſo that he might diſpenſe Favours and Diſ"favours according to his own Election. He had a "full ſhare in his Maſter's Eſteem, who look'd up"on him as a wiſe and able Servant, and worthy "of the Truſt he repoſed in him.—— The King's "Revenue had been very looſely managed during "the late Years, and might by induſtry and order "have been eaſily improved; and no Man better "underſtood what method was neceſſary towards "that good Husbandry, than he.—No Man had "greater Ambition to make his Family great, or "ſtronger deſigns to leave a great Fortune to it. "Yet his Expences were ſo prodigious, eſpecially "in his Houſe, that all the ways he uſed for ſup"ply, which were all that occurr'd, could not ſerve "his turn; inſomuch that he contracted ſo great "Debts (the anxiety whereof he pretended broke "his mind, and reſtrained that attention and in"duſtry, which was neceſſary for the due execu"tion of his Office) that the King was pleaſed "twice to pay his Debts; at leaſt towards it, to "disburſe Forty thouſand Pounds in ready Money "out of his Exchequer.—— He was of an impe"rious Nature, and nothing wary in diſobliging and "provoking other Men, and had too much Courage "in offending and incenſing them: But after having "offended and incenſed them, he was of ſo unhappy "a Feminine Temper, that he was always in a ter"rible Fright and Apprehenſion of them.—— "He quickly loſt the Character of a bold, ſtout and "magnanimous Man, which he had been long re"puted to be in worſe times: And in his moſt pro"ſperous Seaſon, fell under the Reproach of being a "Man of big Looks, and of a mean and abject Spi"rit.—— To conclude, all the Honours the "King conferr'd upon him (as he made him a Ba"ron, then an Earl and Knight of the Garter, and "above this, gave a young beautiful Lady nearly "Allied to his Majeſty, and to the Crown of Scot"land, in Marriage to his Eldeſt Son) could not "make him think himſelf great enough: Nor could "all the King's Bounties, nor his own large Acceſ"ſions raiſe a Fortune to his Heir; but after ſix or "eight Years ſpent in outward Opulency and in"ward Murmur and Trouble that it was not greater; "after vaſt ſums of Money and great Wealth got"ten, and rather conſum'd than enjoy'd; without "any Senſe or Delight in ſo great Proſperity, with "the agony that it was no greater, he died unla"mented by any; bitterly mention'd by moſt who "never pretended to love him; and ſeverely cen"ſur'd and complain'd of by thoſe, who expected "moſt from him, and deſerved beſt of him; and "left a numerous Family, which was in a ſhort "time worn out, and yet out-lived the Fortune he "left behind him.

"yet

Death of Sir Edw. Cook. In September, this ſame Year, died the eminent and long Abdicated Judge Sir Edward Cook, who having made himſelf obnoxious to the Court, was the more Popular in the Country, and the more an Oracle in the Houſe of Commons. There is an account given of one of his Poſterity: "That upon "his Death-Bed Sir Francis Windebank, Laud's old "Friend, by an Order of Council, came to Search "for ſeditious and dangerous Papers; by Virtue Detection of four Reigns by Reg. Cook. ſub Ann. 1634. "whereof he took Sir Edward Cook's Comment up"on Littleton, and the Hiſtory of his Life before it, "written with his own Hand; his Comment upon "Magna Carta, &c. the Pleas of the Crown, and Ju"riſdiction of Courts, and his 11th and 12th Re"ports in Manuſcript, and (as this Writer thinks) "51 other Manuſcripts, with the Laſt-Will of Sir "Edward; wherein he had for ſeveral Years been "making Proviſions for his younger Grand-Chil"dren. The Books and Papers were kept till ſeven "Years after, when one of Sir Edward's Sons in "1641. mov'd the Houſe of Commons, that the "Books and Papers taken by Sir Francis Windebank, "might be delivered to Sir Robert Cook, Heir of Sir 1634. "Edward; which the King was pleaſed to grant, 10 Car. I. "and ſuch as could be found were delivered: but "Sir Edward's Will was never heard of more to this "Day.

There was a Spirit of Diſcontent in Scotland, that could yet ſhew it ſelf in no other way but in Mur-murs and ſeditious Reports. By the impulſe of this Seditions in Scotland Spirit there was now publiſhed a Pamphlet properly called The Libel, which reflected on the King's Pro-ceedings in the laſt Parliament of 1633. charging his Majeſty with gaining of Votes by undue means, for obtaining an Act to paſs for wearing of Whites, &c. The Lords of the Council found out the Author to be one Hagg, who eſcaped and went beyond Seas; but on farther Enquiry, the Lord Balmerino was found to have the principal Hand in it, who was Apprehended, Try'd and Condemn'd, for Leſe-Majeſty; but the King was graciouſly pleaſed to reſtore him to his Life, Honour and Eſtate. His Father, Secretary to King James had fell under the like Sen-tence, and received the like Pardon: So that Grati-tude ſhould have been as Hereditary to this Family, as were their Crimes and the Remiſſion of them.

State of Ireland. Ireland under the active Government of the Lord Deputy Wentworth, had a Parliament called to con-ſider of Ways and Means to maintain the Army, and to diſcharge a Debt of eighty thouſand Pounds, which the Crown had there contracted. By the Courage and Prudence of the Lord Deputy; theſe ends were obtained, and three Subſidies were granted. And in a concurrent Convocation, there was a Ca-non paſs'd, Of the Agreement of the Church of Eng-land and Ireland in the Profeſſion of the ſame Chriſti-an Faith, by receiving and approving the Book of Articles of Religion agreed upon by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the whole Cletgy in Convocation holden at London, Anno Dom. 1562. Which was charg'd as an Arminian Project upon the Deputy and his Chaplain Dr. Bramhall, when the Primate Uſher and other Calviniſts perceived, that the thus admit-ting the 39 Articles of the Church of England had repealed and excluded the Articles of the Church of Ireland, eſtabliſhed Anno 1615. wherein the nine Ar-ticles of Lambeth determining the Predeſtinarian Do-ctrines, and many other Calvinian Rigours were aſ-ſerted and received.

Foreign Affairs. Abroad there was nothing ſo remarkable as the ſignal Victory obtained by the Imperialiſts againſt the Swedes, who had got Poſſeſſion of almoſt half Ger-many; and under the Command of Guſtavus Horn and Duke Bernard, attack'd the Imperial Army near Nord-lingen on Sept. 6. Commanded by the Duke of Lor-rain and John de Wert, ſupported by the Cardinal Infanto, who had marched from Milan thro' Switzer-land with the old Spaniſh and Italian Troops. The Victory was abſolute on the Imperial ſide; the Swedes loſt all their Canon and Bagage, and above ten thouſand Men; and of their two Generals Duke Bernard was Wounded, and the brave Guſtavus Horn was taken Priſoner. Our Engliſh Court had no great concern for this Action, having an Alliance with both Parties, tho' no very right Underſtanding with either of them. The great Miniſter of Sweden, Chan-cellor Oxenſtiern, had this Year ſent his eldeſt Son as Ambaſſadour into England; but either wanting proper Credentials from the Queen of Sweden, Re-gent in her Son's Minority, or making hard Propo-ſals for aſſiſting the Prince Elector againſt the Em-peror, he was ſo much ſlighted and diſobliged, that he left England in diſcontent, and made ſuch a Re-port of his uſage to his Father, that he and his Family ſo reſented this Affront as never to forgive the King.

State of Religion. 1634. As to the Affairs of Religion in this Year 1634. Abp. Laud, who had ſet his Heart, where his Con-ſcience did direct him, upon a Uniformity of Wor-ſhip through his whole Province, was offended at the Practice of the French and Dutch Churches here allow'd, and thought their ſeparate Service was an Example

1634. 10 Car. I. Abp. Laud labours to bring the French and Dutch Proteſtants to Uniformity.

Example and Encouragement to our own Diſſenting Brethren. He was reſolv'd therefore, if poſſible, to bring them to a Conformity with the Church of England. And having for this Purpoſe the Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Privy Council, in a Viſitation at the beginning of this Year, he tender'd theſe three Articles to the French Congregation in Canterbury, and to the two Dutch Congregations in Sandwich and Maidſtone, Apr. 14. 1634. 1. What Liturgy do you uſe? or whether you have not the Dutch or French Liturgy in uſe? 2. Of how many Deſcents, for the moſt part, they were born Subjects? 3. Whether ſuch as were born Subjects would conform to the Church of England? They look'd upon themſelves as tolerated and exempted from ordinary Juriſdiction, and accordingly put in their Pleas of Right, and with a Salvo to it, by conſent of their ſeveral Churches, they prepared theſe Anſwers to be deliver'd on the 5th of May: 1. "That they had that Liturgy "which all the Churches of the French Tongue "(both in France, and in the United Provinces of "the States) have had ſince the bleſſed Reformati- "on, and which their Churches refuged here have "had this ſixty or ſeventy Years, or more: That "the Engliſh Liturgy was Tranſlated into French, "but that they uſed it not; and, that they know "not whether it be Tranſlated into Dutch or not. "2. That the greateſt part of the Heads of the Fa- "milies were not born here, but about a third part, "becauſe that the greateſt part of the old ones were "Strangers born, and many others are newly come "over within a few Years. 3. They deſire to be "excuſed from giving any Anſwer to the third Ar- "ticle, becauſe of the Maintenance of their Mini- "ſtry and Relief of their Poor, which would be "obſtructed by any Diviſion of their Members.

They put in a Declinator.

But before theſe Anſwers were put in, they conſulted the Cœtus of the French and Dutch Churches in London; where, by the influence no doubt of ſome of our own Nonconformiſts, they adviſ'd their Brethren to ſuppreſs thoſe Anſwers, and to preſent their Declinator, or a Plea of Privileges and Challenge of Exemption granted them by King Edw. 6. and confirm'd by ſeveral Acts of Council in the following Reigns.

Abp. ſends Injunctions.

This incenſed the Abp. and confirm'd him in the Reſolution of taking away their Liberty of Separation. And therefore he ſent down theſe Injunctions to Canterbury, deliver'd Dec. 19. with time of Conformity allow'd to March 1.

Firſt. "That all the Natives of the Dutch and "Walloon Congregations in his Grace's Dioceſe "ſhould repair to their ſeveral Pariſh Churches of "thoſe ſeveral Pariſhes where they inhabited, to "hear Divine Service and Sermons, and perform all "Duties and Payments required in that behalf.

Second. "That the Miniſters and all other of the "Dutch and Walloon Congregations, which were not "Natives and born Subjects to the King's Majeſty, "that ſhould come over to them, might have and "uſe their own Diſcipline, as formerly they have "done; yet it was thought fit that the Engliſh Li- "turgy ſhould be Tranſlated into French and Dutch "for the better fitting their Children to the Engliſh "Government.

They would not obey.

Theſe Injunctions might have been thought the more reaſonable, becauſe the laſt (which was indeed qualified by the King in Council) did not intrench upon their Liberty as Foreigners, but claim'd their Obedience only as native Subjects; and rather provided for a Conformity of the Children, than of the preſent Parents. But the innate Ambition of keeping themſelves up as a diſtinct Tribe of Strangers, and the Honour of not letting their Families recede from the Example of their Heads and Governours; and above all, the Countenance and Inſtigation given to them by the Puritan Faction, and even by many ſober Church-men who were jealous of the Zeal of Archbiſhop Laud, made them reject and oppoſe theſe Injunctions, in ſeveral Remonſtrances and Petitions. To all which the Archbiſhop anſwer'd to this effect: That his Majeſty was reſolved the Injunctions ſhould be obey'd by all the Natives after the firſt Deſcent, who might continue in their former ways; but all of the ſecond Deſcent, born here in England, ſhould reſort to their ſeveral Pariſh Churches. He doubted not but they themſelves, or their Poſterity, would have cauſe to thank both the State and the Church for chis care taken of them. But if they refuſed, he muſt then proceed againſt the Natives according to the Laws and Canons Eccleſiaſtical. 1634. 10 Car. I. Abp.'s Reſolution.

This good Endeavour of the Archbiſhop was afterward, in the beginning of his Troubles, ſeverely charg'd upon him: and at his Trial it made up a twelfth original Article againſt him, in theſe words: He hath traiterouſly endeavoured to cauſe Diviſion and Diſcord between the Church of England and other Reformed Churches; and to that end hath ſuppreſſed and abrogated the Privileges and Immunities which have been by his Majeſty and his Royal Anceſtors granted to the French and Dutch Churches in this Kingdom: and divers other ways hath expreſſed his Malice and Diſaffection to thoſe Churches. This made an Article againſt him.

His own Vindication.

And yet in the Pleadings againſt him upon that 12th Article, "What is the Reaſon (ſays the Abp.) "why here's nothing urg'd againſt me about abro- "gating the Immunities and Privileges of the French "and Dutch Churches, which fill the Body of this "Article? Why, I conceive, there may be two "Reaſons of it: One, becauſe there was taken by "Mr. Prynn, among other Papers for my Defence, "a Letter under Queen Elizabeth's own hand, to "the Lord Pawlet Marquis of Winchester, then Lord "Treaſurer, in which ſhe expreſſes her Willingneſs "that thoſe Strangers diſtreſſed in and for point of "Conſcience, ſhould have Succour and free Enter- "tainment, but ſhould conform themſelves to the "Engliſh Liturgy, and have that tranſlated into their "own Language: And they knew I would call to "have this Letter produced, proved, and read: "And had this Letter been ſtood unto, they had "never been able to do the Church of England half "the Harm they have ſince done. The Other was, "becauſe they found by their own Search againſt "me, that all which I did concerning thoſe Church- "es was with this Moderation, that All thoſe of "their ſeveral Congregations in London, Canterbury, "Sandwich, Norwich, or elſewhere, which were of "the ſecond Deſcent, and born in England, ſhould "repair to their ſeveral Pariſh Churches, and con- "form themſelves to the Doctrine, Diſcipline, and "Liturgy of the Church of England, and not live "continually in an open Separation, as if they were "an Iſrael in Egypt, to the great Diſtraction of the "Natives of this Kingdom, and the aſſiſting of that "Schiſm which is now broke forth. And as this "was with great Moderation, ſo was it with the "joint Approbation of his Majeſty and the Lords "of his Council, upon the Reaſons openly given "and debated. And all this before I proceeded to "do any thing: as appears apud Acta.

The Abp. reforming Engliſh Factories.

The Archbiſhop was farther concern'd in ſettling the regular Worſhip of the Church of England in our Factories beyond the Seas; for which he had obtained an Order from the Council Table, dated Octob. 1. 1633. enjoining a ſtrict Obſervation of the Engliſh Liturgy and Rites and Ceremonies. Which not being much regarded by the Merchants, the Archbiſhop now preſented to the Council ſome Propoſitions concerning Engliſh Preachers employ'd in Foreign Parts. And wrote a Letter to the Factory at Delf, dated June 17. 1634. letting them know, "That it was "his Majeſty's expreſs Command, that both they "and all Merchants reſiding in thoſe Parts beyond "the Seas, ſhould conform themſelves to the Do- "ctrine, Diſcipline and Worſhip ſettled in the "Church of England.

The Defalcations of the legal Proviſion made for the Parochial Clergy of London, was found to be a cauſe of unable and unworthy Miniſters in that City, and 1634. 10 Car. I. and the greater Encouragement to Lecturers and Preachers depending on the People. Wherefore, in May 1634. the Parſons and Vicars in the City of London preſented a Petition to his Majeſty, humbly ſhewing, "That the Benefices in London were a hundred Years ſince very great: That a Decree now "in force provided 2 s. 9 d. to be paid upon every "Pound Rent without fraud: That notwithſtanding "they were now very poor and mean, many of "them not worth 40 l. per Ann. That the Petitioners have not independent Maintenance, and for "want thereof are daily thruſt upon dangerous and "great Inconveniences: That they are not able to "diſcover the true Value of the Rents, becauſe the "Landlords make double Leaſes or Proviſo's of "Colluſion. And the Lord Mayor being their ordinary Judge, they have no Ability or Leiſure "to proſecute and appeal to the Lord Keeper: And "therefore beg, that it may pleaſe the great Patron of the Church, his Royal Majeſty, to take "into his Princely Conſideration theſe Preſſures "and Grievances of his poor Clergy of London for "Redreſs thereof.

Petition of the London Clergy for better Maintenance.

Referr'd to Commiſſioners

This Petition was by the King referr'd to the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Keeper, the Earl Marſhal, the Biſhop of London, the Lord Cottington, Secretary Windebank, and the Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon, or any five or three of them, whereof the Archbiſhop to be one. While they were endeavouring to ſettle the diſputed Tithes, ſeveral Citizens petition'd the King and Council againſt their manner of Proceeding, which came to ſeveral Hearings, November the 5th, 16th, and 23d: and being again taken into Conſideration December the 15th and January the 18th, it was agreed between the Clergy and City mutually to ſubmit the ſaid Differences to be arbitrated and ſettled by his Majeſty. But even the King was afraid to make any abſolute Deciſion againſt the Inclinations of the People.

This objected to Archbiſh. Laud.

On the 4th day of the Archbiſhop's Trial, The buſineſs of the Tithe in London (ſays he) was raiſed up in Judgment againſt me — I had been much to blame, having been Biſhop of London, ſhould I have had other Thoughts: For their caſe is very hard, all their Offerings being ſhrunk away into nothing but a poor Eaſter-Book. The Miniſters of London had often petitioned about ſome Relief long before my time; and I did then, and do ſtill think it moſt juſt they ſhould have it: for they are now under the Task-Maſters of Egypt; the Tale of Brick muſt be made, they muſt Preach twice a Sunday, get Straw where they can: And yet I never thought of any thing contrary to Law, had all been done which I deſired; for that was no more, than that the Citizens would voluntarily yield to ſome reaſonable Addition, where Right and Need appeared: And this I am ſure nor did nor could croſs with the Act of Parliament concerning the Tithes of London.

Metropolit. Viſitation.

The Archbiſhop held a Metropolitical Viſitation through his whole Province by his Vicar-General Sir Nathaniel Brent: And upon Articles of Enquiry, a great many Defects and Abuſes were reform'd, as to the Fabrick of Churches and the Ornaments of them, and the decent Habit of the Clergy, who in the Country parts had almoſt loſt that apparent diſtinction of their Order. Whence we find Sir Nathaniel Brent giving this Admonition to the Clergy of the Dioceſe of Lincoln on Aug. 11. 1634. that All who wanted Canonical Cloaks, commonly called Prieſts Cloaks, ſhould provide themſelves before All-hallowtide next, on pain of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures.

But the Zeal and publick Spirit of Archbiſhop Laud will beſt appear from the annual Accounts of his Province ſent to the King. In that of 1633. he certifies his Majeſty, "That, according to his Royal "Commands, he does here, upon the ſecond of "Jan. 1633. Comput. Anglic. preſent his Account of "both the Dioceſe and Province of Canterbury concerning all thoſe Church Affairs which were contained within his Majeſty's moſt gracious Declaration and Inſtructions. And firſt, for his own Dioceſe of Canterbury, he heard of many things amiſs; but as yet his time had been ſo ſhort, that he had no certain Knowledge of any thing fit to certifie. 1634. 10 Car. I. Canterbury.

Annual Account of his Province for 1633.

"For the Biſhoprick of London, the now Biſhop had not received Complaint againſt any of his Clergy ſince his coming to that See, which was ſince Michaelmas laſt. For the former part of the Year he was himſelf Biſhop, and had then left Mr. Nathaniel Ward under the Cenſure of Excommunication for refuſing to ſubſcribe to the Articles; had convented Mr. John Beadle Rector of Bunſton in Eſſex, for omitting ſome parts of Divine Service, and had diſmiſs'd him with Canonical Admonition only; and that he found Mr. John Davenport Vicar of St. Stephen Coleman-ſtreet (whom he had uſed with all Moderation) had now reſigned his Vicarage, and declared his Judgment againſt Conformity. London.

"For Bath and Wells, he found the Biſhop had in his late Viſitation taken a great deal of pains to ſee all his Majeſty's Inſtructions obſerv'd: and particularly had put down divers Lecturers in Market Towns which were beneficed Men in other Biſhops Dioceſes; and had ſent up a Liſt of Romiſh Recuſants. Bath and Wells.

"In the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, the Town of Mawling, and that whole Deanry, were very much out of order; but the Archdeacon, by my Lord the Biſhop's Command, had ſettled them; that the Biſhop complain'd that the Cathedral Church ſuffer'd much for want of Glaſs in the Windows, and the Church-yard lay very undecently, and the Gates down; and that he had no power to remedy theſe things, becauſe the Dean and Chapter refuſed to be viſited by him, upon pretence that the Statutes were not confirmed under the Broad Seal. [To which the King wrote this Poſtill in the Margin] This muſt be remedied one way or other, concerning which I expect a particular Account of you. Rocheſter.

"Concerning Peterborough Dioceſe, whereas his Majeſty's Inſtructions required that Lecturers ſhould turn their Afternoon Sermons into Catechiſing; ſome Parſons and Vicars made a queſtion, whether they were bound to that Order, becauſe Lecturers only are named. Peterborough.

"As to Coventry and Lichfield, the Biſhop complain'd that the Peculiars of his Dioceſe (wherein he had no power) were much out of Order: that he had ſuppreſſed a ſeditious Lecture at Repon, and divers monthly Lectures, with a Faſt and a Moderator; as alſo the Running Lecture, ſo called becauſe the Lecturer went from Village to Village; ordained, as they ſaid, to illuminate the dark Corners of that Dioceſe. [To which the King noted in the Margin] If there be dark Corners in this Dioceſe, it were fit a true Light ſhould illuminate it, and not this that is falſe and uncertain. Coventry and Lichfield.

"My Lord of St. Davids was now reſident in his Dioceſe, and would take care to whom he gave holy Orders; had ſuſpended a Lecturer for his Inconformity, and found but few Romiſh Recuſants. S. Davids.

In St. Aſaph all was exceeding well, ſave only that the Number and Boldneſs of ſome Romiſh Recuſants increaſed much in many places; and was encouraged by the ſuperſtitious and frequent concourſe of that Party to Holy Well, long complained of without remedy. S. Aſaph.

"The Biſhop of Landaff had certified, that he had not one refractory Nonconformiſt, or Schiſmatical Miniſter, within his Dioceſe; but two Lecturers, and they both licenſed Preachers. Landaff.

"The Biſhop of Lincoln had ſignified, that the Company of Mercers in London, truſted with the Gift of one Mr. Fiſhburn, had ſet up a Lecturer in Huntingdon, to be retained or removed, with- Lincoln.

His " moſt humble Suit to his Majeſty is, that no " Lay-man whatſoever, and leaſt of all Companies " or Corporations, ſhould have power to put in or " put out any Lecturer, or other Miniſter. [To " which his Majeſty remark'd in the Margin] Certainly I cannot hold fit, that any Lay Perſon or Corporation whatſoever ſhould have the Power theſe Men take to themſelves: for I will have no Prieſt have any neceſſity of a Lay Dependency. Wherefore I command you to ſhew me the way to overthrow this, and to hinder the performance in time to all ſuch Intentions.

Annual Account of the Prov. of Canterb. 1634.

The ſecond yearly Account of his Province was for 1634. wherein he firſt repreſents to his Majeſty,

" That he had this Year, partly by his Vicar-Ge- " neral, and partly by the Dean of the Arches, vi- " ſited ſeven Dioceſes, beginning at his own Metro- " political Church of Canterbury. That he found in " his own Dioceſe, (eſpecially about Aſhford ſide) " divers profeſſed Separatiſts, with whom he ſhould " take Order. That he conceived the Dutch Church- " es in Canterbury and Sandwich were great Nurſe- " ries of Inconformity, of which he had already " complained to his Majeſty and the Council-board, " and had humbly deſired, that they, both of the " French, Italian, and Dutch Congregations, which " were born Subjects, might not be ſuffer'd any " longer to live in ſuch a Separation both from " Church and State. [The King remark'd in the " Margin] Put me in mind of this at ſome convenient time, when I am at Council, and I ſhall redreſs it.

" For Rocheſter, he found no eminent thing amiſs, " but the Biſhop himſelf fell into a Palſie.

" For Salisbury, he found the Biſhop had taken a " great deal of care about his Majeſty's Inſtructi- " ons, and had cauſed Copies of them to be ſent to " moſt of the Miniſters. The greateſt part of Wilt- " ſhire was overgrown with the Humours of thoſe " Men who do not conform: That the Cathedral " of Salisbury was much peſter'd with Seats, which " he had given Order to remove, and hoped his " Majeſty would approve, as well as he did at York " and Durham, and add the Royal Power, if his " own be not ſufficient.

" For Briſtol, he found in his Viſitation that the " Biſhop had taken very good Pains and Care. And " ſome Clergy-men in Dorſetſhire, who gave great " cauſe of Suſpicion, had quitted themſelves in a " better manner than was expected: tho' all was " not right in thoſe Parts.

" Concerning Bath and Wells, all his Majeſty's " Inſtructions were punctually obſerved, and the " Lectures read, not by any particular factious Per- " ſons, but by a company of learned neighbouring " Miniſters, every way conformable to the Church.

" For Exeter, he muſt do my Lord Biſhop this " Right, that for his Majeſty's Inſtructions, they " had been carefully obſerved: but a great Diviſion " was between the Dean and Chapter; and another " great Difference between the Dean and Chapter " and the City, about burial within the Church- " yard of the Cathedral.

" As for Lincoln, that greateſt Dioceſe in the " Kingdom, had been viſited this Year. And his " Viſitors found Bedfordſhire, for the bigneſs, moſt " tainted of any part of the Dioceſe. Many Ana- " baptiſts were in Lincoln it ſelf, their Leader one " Johnſon a Baker. In divers parts the Clergy and " Laity exceſſively given to Drunkenneſs. The " Town of Boſton, a great Nurſery of Inconformity, " was, ſince the calling ſome of the Magiſtrates in- " to the High Commiſſion, become very orderly; " but the Town of Louth ſomewhat to blame. At " Kenſworth in Hertfordſhire, and ſome other places, " many gadded from their own Churches by Troops " after other Miniſters. The Cathedral of the Dio- " ceſe was not well ordered either for Reparation " or Ornaments. For Eaton College, the Provoſt " Sir Hen. Wotton, had carried himſelf very worthily.

1638. 10 Car. I.

" Thus far concerning the Dioceſes which he had " viſited this Year; in all which he found one great " Complaint, and very fit to be redreſſed. The " general Grievance of the poor Vicars, that their " Stipends are ſcarce able to feed and cloath them; " and which was worſe, the Vicars in great Market- " Towns, where the People are very many, were " for the moſt part worſt provided for. He hum- " bly thanks his Majeſty ſome Good had of late been " done for them; and he ſhould purſue all juſt " and fair ways to give them relief, humbly beſeech- " ing his Majeſty's gracious Aſſiſtance.

" For Winchester, he found his Majeſty's Inſtructi- " ons well obſerved, ſave only that in two Pariſhes " the Biſhop found ſome Defect about Catechizing " in the Afternoon, which ſhould be remedied. There " were divers obſtinate Recuſants in thoſe Parts.

" The Biſhop of London had viſited his Dioceſe " this Year; the City and Middleſex in Perſon, the " reſt by his Chancellour. Divers Complaints about " Inconformity to the Church Diſcipline; but the " Proofs came home only againſt four, three Cu- " rates and a Vicar: The Vicar and two Curates " had ſubmitted, the third was ſuſpended.

" For Norwich, the Biſhop had certified that he " had put down ſome Lecturers, where factious Men " performed them; had heard complaint of Mr. " Ward of Ipſwich, for ſome Words utter'd in Ser- " mons, for which he was now called into the " High-Commiſſion; that he had ſuſpended one " Enoch Grey for unſound Doctrine; and that he had " made two wandring Preachers run out of his Dio- " ceſe.

" The Biſhop of Ely had certified, that all the " Royal Injunctions for the good of the Church had " been carefully obſerved, and that he would have " a watchful Eye concerning all Lecturers.

" For St. David's, the Biſhop was now gone and " ſettled in his Dioceſs, whence he had not been ab- " ſent two Months theſe two Years; that his Lord- " ſhip complained grievouſly (and not without " cauſe) that divers Impropriators in thoſe Parts " have either pulled down the Chancels, or ſuffered " them to fall, or left them ſo open and cold, that " the People in thoſe Mountainous parts muſt en- " dure a great deal of hardſhip.

" The Biſhop of St. Aſaph profeſſed he had little " to return, they were not troubled with Inconfor- " mity; but heartily wiſhes, they might be as well " acquitted from Superſtition and Profaneneſs.

" The Biſhop of Landaff had certified, that this " laſt Year he viſited in Perſon, and found William " Erbury, Vicar of St. Mary's in Cardiff, and Walter " Cradock his Curate, very Schiſmatical Preachers: " that he hath given the Vicar a Judicial Admoni- " tion, and had ſuſpended the Curate, and taken " away his Licenſe to ſerve the Cure.

" The Biſhop of Gloceſter certified, that he is for- " ced to Ordain ſome very mean Miniſters in his " Dioceſs to ſupply Cures as mean. He hath put " down ſome Lecturers, and ſet up other ſome, which " he concieves he did without offence, being done " upon different occaſions. [The King noted in the Margin,] I muſt be ſatisfied that the Occaſions were very neceſſary, otherwiſe he ſhall anſwer it.

Hereford, the Biſhoprick was void.

" Oxford, the Biſhop was very careful, had ac- " cording to his promiſe made unto his Majeſty, built " a Houſe at Cuddeſden, held in Commendam; which " Houſe he deſired might be annexed to the See of " Oxford.

" My Lord of Chicheſter had certified All very " well in his Dioceſe; ſave only in the Eaſt Part, 1635. 11 Car. I. "some Puritan Justices of the Peace had awed some "of the Clergy into like Opinions with them- "selves.

" ſome

"The Bishop of Peterborough had visited his Dio- "cese this last Year; and begun so well to look to "all good Orders, that he hoped things would go "very well there.

"That he had received no Account from the Bi- "shops of Worcester, Coventry and Lichfield, and "Bangor.

So I humbly submit my Certificate.

W. CANT.

By the Fund of Ship-money (which was not mingled with the other Treasure or Accounts in the Exchequer, but was kept as a separate Bank for the Navy) the King was enabled to set out a Fleet of forty Men of War under the Command of the Earl of Lindsey Admiral, and twenty Sail more under the Earl of Essex Vice-Admiral, for securing of the Narrow Seas, and asserting the Dominion of them. And indeed the considerable Increase of the French Navy, and their late building several greater Ships, and threatning the Sea-Ports in Flanders, together with the Progress which the Hollanders had now made in their Attempts of Fishing upon our Coasts, and the great Improvements of Piracy made by the Algerines and other Rovers, who now infested the very Chanel; were a great Argument for the Necessity of setting out a Fleet, which under present Circumstances could not be done wirhout an extraordinary Aid. To make this Aid more ample and more continual, it was found expedient to enlarge the Extent of it; and whereas in the former Year the Writs were directed to Maritime Places only, it was now resolv'd to bring in all Counties of the Kingdom to some proportionable share. And accordingly Instructions and Directions were prepared by the Lords of the Council, to be sent with the Writs to the respective Sheriffs, to inform them, "That his Majesty, for "his own Honour, and the ancient Renown of the "Nation, and the common Safety of his People, "had issued the like Writs to all Counties, Cities, "and Towns through the whole Kingdom; that "for due Execution hereof, they should first settle "the general Assessment on the whole County, and "then subdivide the particular Charge on each Hun- "dred and Parish: Not to assess poor Cottages; "nor Rent of Houses, but with regard to the Abi- "lity of the Inhabitants; to take Distresses upon "such as refuse to pay; to collect with speed, and "pay the Money to the Treasurer of the Navy.

To promote the Execution of these Writs, Thomas Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper, deliver'd a Charge in his Majesty's Name to all the Judges of England, in the Star-Chamber, June 17. concluding with this Affair of the Navy; "That his Majesty, out of his "great Wisdom, had found it expedient to set a "Fleet to Sea, and resolv'd to add a greater Strength, "and must therefore send out new Writs for the "Preparation of a greater Fleet next Year, not on- "ly to the Maritime Towns, but to all the Kingdom "besides. That therefore his Majesty did require "and command them, that in their Charges at the "Assizes, and in all other places, they should take "an occasion to let the People know how careful "and zealous his Majesty was to preserve his own "Honour, this Kingdom, and the Dominion of the "Sea, and to secure both Sea and Land by a pow- "erful Fleet, that foreign Nations might see, that "England is both able and ready to keep it self and "all its Rights; and to let them know farther, how "just it was, that his Majesty should require this "for their Defence, and with what Chearfulness "they ought and were bound in Duty to contri- "bute unto it.

These Charges at the County Assizes (however proper and just to promulge Orders before the Execution of them) did but alarm the Country, and and make 'em feel the Burden before it touch'd 'em. What was before thought a particular Provision to be made by particular Ports for their own immediate Safety, was now found to be intended for a National Tax, and therefore the more odious for want of an Authority of Parliament. And though the Load it self was not heavy, for the yearly Income was at height computed to be not above 2,360oo l. which was not fully 20,000 l. a Month through the whole Kingdom; yet the making it a universal Aid, and the assessing and collecting it in the Parliamentary Methods, gave it much the greater Air of Grievance and Oppression. This is certain, that if Ship-Money had been rais'd with Appearance of voluntary Contribution (as the Royal Loan was) and not by rated Imposition, it had made less Noise, and might have produced as high Effects: Or if while turn'd into a necessary Aid, it had been in good time communicated to a Parliament, while the King and his Friends might have had Interest to justifie the past Necessity, and to authorize the Continuance or Intermission by the Legislative Power; then the People of England would have been easie and quiet, who will never, by any means, endure the extorting of Taxes from them without their own Consent in Parliament.

1635. 11 Car. I.

The good Application of Ship Money.

The Demand of Ship Money enlarg'd.

Lord Keeper's Charge for Ship Money.

Ship-Money grows more odious.

But besides this extraordinary Aid of Ship-Money, which was not sufficient for the meer Occasions of the Navy; the King's Necessities urg'd him to many other Projects of supporting and improving his Revenues: as, By erecting an Office for giving Licence by the King, or by six of the Privy Council, to any Subject departing out of the King's Dominions, by Proclamation July 21. And by granting to Robert Lesley Esq; the Profits of the Office erected for receiving the Forfeitures incurred by profane Swearers and Cursers, by Proclamation July 26. And by fixing a Letter-Office for England and Scotland, and appointing Thomas Witherings Esq; to be Post-Master, and commanding that no Letters should be otherwise carried, except by common known Carriers, or by a particular Messenger, as by Proclamation July 31. And by renewing a Commission to some Lords and others, to Sell, Grant, and Confirm to the People their defective Estates, Possessions and Titles, as by Proclamation Aug. 24. And by inflicting Penalties on excessive Carriages that were to the Destruction of the Highways, and on Hackney-Coaches disturbing the Streets of the City, and by other Ways and Means, which however lawful, and how much soever for the Benefit of the Subject as well as of the Prince, yet all these, at this juncture, were look'd on with a jealous Eye, as Inventions how to maintain the King without a Parliament.

More Projects for Money.

Yet our Dangers from abroad were very imminent, and might well justifie some extraordinary Provisions. For, the Hollanders had made a League with the French against the Spaniards, by which a French Army was to invade Flanders by Land, and to attempt Dunkirk, while a Dutch Fleet were to attend, and assist at Sea. And possibly the Design had been effected, if the Terror of our English Navy had not quickly perswaded the Dutch to draw off their Ships, and return home.

In November, Charles Prince Elector came over to sollicit his Royal Uncle to promote his Restoration; and in the Month after came his younger Brother Prince Rupert, who were received with great Civilities; and their Cause seem'd to look somewhat better by the Conclusion of a Peace at Prague, whereby at least the Protestants were restor'd to their Liberties and Profession, as settled in the Year 1627.

Prince Elector comes into England.

In Decem. the Queen was brought to Bed of a 2d Daughter, named Elizabeth, to congratulate this new Accession of Happiness to the Court, the States of Holland sent hither a solemn Ambassy, with a noble Present of Amber-grease, China-Basons, a Clock, the Workmanship of Rudolphus the Emperor, and some exquisite Pieces of Painting.

1635. 11 Car. I. State of Religion.

As to Church Affairs; A Liturgy and Book of Canons for the Church of Scotland, by the Advice of Bishop Laud, had been committed to some Bishops of Scotland, who sent a Letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, dated April 2. 1635. brought hither by the Bishop of Ross, wherein they acquainted his Grace, that they all wish a full Conformity in the Churches, but his Grace knew that this must be the Work of Time. They had made a farther Progress than could have been expected, and hoped still to go farther, if it should please God to continue his Grace in Health and Life. The Liturgy was not yet finish'd, but this Book of Canons was by the King referred to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop of London, and after their Approbation, it was confirmed by Royal Authority, under the Great Seal 23d of May, and sent back to be enforced in the nature of Royal Injunctions. But the Scotch quarrel'd with them, and raised so many Objections against them, that they could never grow into a settled Use and Practice. Farther Advice was sent in a Letter of Archbishop Laud to the Abp. of St. Andrew's, dated November 10. 1635. That for all the Business of that Church in future, they were immutably to hold this Rule, that they were privately to acquaint the Earl of Traquair with every Matter, before it was proposed in Publick; and that the Earl had assured the King in his Presence, that he will strictly observe a good Correspondence with them, and faithfully do all good Offices for the Church, according to the Commands he should receive from the King; which mutual Relation between the Earl of Traquair and them was to be kept very secret. And in another Letter he advises the said Archbishop of St. Andrew's, that the King was much displeased with the Bishop of Aberdeen, for allowing a publick Fast thro' his Dioceſs to be kept upon the Lord's-Day; expressing his Majesty's Will, that no Bishops should there presume to command or suffer any Fast to be kept on that Day, or on any other without the special Leave and Command of the King; and that if the Canons were not already printed, they should make a Canon purposely against this unworthy Custom. Which Advices and Orders, however just and seasonable, raised some uneasie Jealousies, even among the Scotch Bishops themselves, as if they interfer'd with the Liberty of their national Church; and were more especially offensive to the People, who hated to receive Ecclesiastical Discipline from England, and especially from the Archbishop of Canterbury, who seemed to them by this means to affect a British Primacy.

Scotch Liturgy.

Injunctions to the Church of Wincheſter.

The Archbishop might have expected less Envy within his own Province, where he carried on his Metropolitical Visitation with great Zeal for Uniformity: In which, by his Vicar General, Sir Nathaniel Brent, he gave these Injunctions June 19. to the Cathedral Church of Wincheſter, "That the Dean "and Chapter should provide four Copes; should "bow at their coming in and going out of the "Quire; should read the Epistles and Gospels at "the Altar; and in greater Festivals should read "the Divine Service by turns in their own Persons. And the like Orders were prescribed to other Cathedrals, which however fit and decent in themselves, and now more especially seasonable, because of the Disorders and various Abuses crept in by the connivence of late Governours: Yet by a great part of the Laity and Clergy not used to any standing Rules, they were look'd on as Innovations and perfect Impositions.

Preaching against Innovations.

And unless the Regulation could be evenly carried on, and perfectly establish'd, it would be sure to give advantage to the Puritans, who waited for Complaints of Innovation: And many of the Calvinistical Divines shewed a high Spirit of Impatience. In November Mr. Samuel Ward, a Minister in Ipswich, preach'd against Bowing at the Name of Jesus, and against the King's Book of Sports; and said, The Church of England was ready to ring Changes in Religion, and the Gospel stood on Tiptoe, as ready to be gone. For this he was censured in the High-Commission, Suspended, and enjoyn'd a publick Recantation; which he refusing was committed to Prison. And Mr. Chancey, Minister of Ware in Hertfordshire, for opposing the making of a Rail about the Communion Table in that Church, and calling it an Innovation and Snare to Men's Consciences, was brought into the High Commission, and censur'd for contempt of Ecclesiastical Government, and made a solemn Recantation; after which the Archbishop dismiss'd him with a severe Admonition.

1635. 11 Car. I.

That which created Archbishop Laud the greater Envy was, his Interest in disposing of most of the Preferments in Church and State. Of which the two great Instances this Year, were the promoting of Dr. Roger Manwaring, so obnoxious to former Parliaments, to the See of St. David's, Feb. 28. and procuring the great Office of Lord-Treasurer for Juxon Bishop of London; who though he had Abilities for it, and an Integrity that his Enemies could never question, yet his Education and Order made it a most invidious Honour to him: The Nobility thought themselves injur'd; and most of the Courtiers had their peculiar Indignation. Archbishop Laud enters it thus in his Diary; 1635. March 6. William Juxon, Lord Bishop of London, made Lord High-Treasurer of England; no Church-Man had it since Henry VII. time. I pray God bless him to carry it so, that the Church may have Honour, and the King and the State Service and Contentment by it. And now if the Church will not hold up themselves, under God, I can do no more

Disposal of Church Preferments.

The whole State of other Church Affairs is best represented in this Account of his Province, sent by the Archbishop to the King.

Abp's Account of his Province.

"ACcording to your Royal Commands, I do "here upon the second of January 1635. Comput. Anglic. present my Account, both for the Dioceſs and Province of Canterbury, concerning all "those Church Affairs, which are contained in your "Majesty's most gracious Instructions, published "out of your most princely and religious Care to "preserve Unity in Orthodox Doctrine, and Conformity to Government within this your Church "of England.

"And, first, for my own Dioceſs, I humbly represent to your Majesty, that there are yet very "many refractory Persons to the Government of "the Church of England, about Maidstone and Ashford, and some other Parts; the Infection being "spread by one Brewer, and continued and increased "by one Turner. They have been both censur'd in "the High-Commission Court some Years since; but "the hurt which they have done is so deeply rooted, "as that it is not possible to be plucked up on the "suddain. But I must crave time to work it off "by little and little.

"I have, according to your Majesty's Commands, "required Obedience to my Injunctions, sent to the "French and Dutch Churches at Canterbury, Maidstone and Sandwich; and albeit they made some "shew of Conformity, yet I do not find they have "yielded such Obedience as is required, and was "order'd with your Majesty's Consent and Approbation: So that I fear I shall be driven to a quicker "Proceeding with them.

The Cathedral Church begins to be in very good "Order: And I have almost finished their Statutes; "which being once perfected will (mutatis mutandis) "be a sufficient Direction for the making of the "Statutes for the other Cathedrals of the new Erection, which in King Henry VIIIth's. time had "either none left or none confirmed; and those "which are, in many things not Canonical. All "which Statutes your Majesty hath given Power "to Me, with others, under the Broad-Seal of England, to alter or make new as we shall find cause. "And so soon as these Statutes for the Church of "Canterbury are made ready, I shall humbly submit them to your Majesty for confirmation.

"There

1635. 11 Car. I.

" There is one Mr. Walker of St. John's the Evangelist, who hath all his time been but a disorderly and peevish Man; and now of late hath very frowardly preached against the Lord Bishop of Ely's Book concerning the Lord's-Day, set out by Authority. But upon a Canonical Admonition given him to desist, he hath hitherto recollected himself, and I hope will be advised.

London. For the Dioceſs of London, I find my Lord the Bishop hath been very careful for all that concerns his own Person. But three of his Archdeacons have made no return at all to him; so that he can certifie nothing but what hath come to his Knowledge without their help. There have been convented in this Dioceſs Dr. Stoughton of Aldermanbury, Mr. Simpson, Curate and Lecturer of St. Margaret's New-Fishstreet, Mr. Andrew Moline, Curate Lecturer of St. Swithin, Mr. John Goodwin, Vicar of St. Stephen Coleman-street, and Mr. Viner, Lecturer of St. Lawrence in the Old-Jury, for breach of the Canons of the Church in Sermons, or Practice, or both. But because all them promised Amendment for the future, and Submission to the Church in all things, my Lord very moderately forbore farther Proceeding against them.

" There were likewise convented Mr. Sparrowhawke Curate and Lecturer at St. Mary Woolchurch, for preaching against the Canon for bowing at the Name of Jesus; who because he wilfully persisted is suspended from Preaching in that Dioceſs. As also one Mr. John Wood a wild turbulent Preacher, and formerly censured in the High-Commission Court. But his Lordship forbore Mr. White of Knightsbridge, for that his cause is at this present depending in the Court aforesaid.

Lincoln. " Concerning the Dioceſs of Lincoln, my Lord the Bishop returns this Information, that he hath visited the same this Year all over in Person, which he conceives no Predecessor of his hath done these hundred Years: And that he finds so much good done thereby, beyond that which his Chancellors use to do when they go the Visitation; that he is sorry he hath not done it heretofore, in so many Years as he hath been Bishop.

" He farther certifies, that he hath prevailed beyond Expectation for the augmenting of four or five small Vicarages; and conceives (as your Majesty may be pleased to remember I have often told you upon my own Experience) that it is a Work very necessary and fit to be done, and most worthy of your Majesty's Royal Care and Consideration.

" For Conformity his Lordship professeth, that in that large Dioceſs he knoweth but one unconformable Man, and that is one Lindhall, who is in the High-Commission Court and ready for Sentence.

Bath and Wells. " My Lord the Bishop of Bath and Wells certifies, that his Dioceſs is in very good Order and Obedience: That there is not a single Lectur in any Town Corporate, but grave Divines preach by course; and that he hath changed the Afternoon Sermons into Catechizing by Question and Answer in all Parishes.

" His Lordship farther certifies, that no Man hath been presented unto him since his last Certificate, for any breach of the Canons of the Church, or your Majesty's instructions; and that he hath received no notice of any increase of Men Popishly affected, beyond the number mention'd in his last Certificate.

Norwich. " The Bishop of this See died almost half a Year since, and had sent in no Certificate. But I find by my Visitation there this present Year, that the whole Dioceſs is much out of Order, and more at Ipswich and Yarmouth than at Norwich it self. But I hope my Lord that now is will take care of it, and he shall want no Assistance that I can give him.

" Mr. Samuel Ward Preacher at Ipswich was censured this last Term in the High-Commission Court, for preaching in disgrace of the Common Prayer Book, and other like gross Misde meanours. 1635. 11 Car. I.

" These six Bishops respectively make their Answer, that in their own Persons they have obser- Oxon. Sarum, Ely, Chichester, St. Asaph, Bristol. ved all your Majesty's Instructions; and that they find all their Clergy very conformable, no one of them instancing in any Particular to the contrary.

Landaff. " In this Dioceſs the Bishop found in his Triennial Visitation the former Year two noted Schismaticks, Wroth and Erbury, that led away many simple People after them. And finding that they wilfully persisted in their Schismatical course, he hath carefully preferred Articles against them in the High-Commission Court; where, when the Cause is ready for Hearing, they shall receive according to the Merits of it.

Hereford. " Concerning this Dioceſs your Majesty knows, that the late Bishop's Residence upon the Place was necessarily hindred by his Attendence upon your Majesty's Person, as Clerk of the Closet. But he hath been very careful for the observance of all your Instructions, and particularly for catechizing the Youth; as also for not letting of any thing into Lives, to the prejudice of his Successor, in which he hath done exceeding well: And I have by your Majesty's Command laid a strict charge upon his Successor, to look to those particular Leases which he hath made stay of, that they may be reduc'd into Years, for the good of that See which abundantly needs it.

Winton. " My Lord Bishop of Winchester certifies, that there is all Peace and Order in his Dioceſs; and that himself and his Clergy have duly obey'd your Majesty's Instructions: But he informs, that in the Parish of Avington in Hampshire, one Unguyon an Esquire, is presented for a new Recusant, as also three others, whereof two are in Southwark.

Peterborough, Rochester, Exeter. " These three Bishops for their several Dioceſses respectively make return, that all Obedience is yielded to every of your Majesty's Instructions.

S. David's. " The late Bishop of St. David's (now of Hereford) hath in his time of Residence taken a great deal of pains in that See, and hath caused two to be question'd in the High-Commission, and Suspended one Roberts a Lecturer, for Inconformity. Three or four others which were Suspended he hath released upon hope given of their Obedience to the Church, and hath absolutely deprived two for their exceeding scandalous Life. He complains much, and surely with cause enough, that there are few Ministers in those poor and remote Places, that are able to Preach and Instruct the People.

" My Lord the Bishop informs, that that County is very full of Impropriations, which makes the Ministers Poor; and their Poverty makes them fall upon Popular and Factious Courses. I doubt this too true, but it is a Mischief hard to cure in this Kingdom; yet I have taken all the care I can, and shall continue so to do.

" From the rest of the Bishops of my Province, I have received no Certificate this Year, viz. Coventry and Lichfield, Worcester, Bangor.

So I humbly submit this my Certificate.

1636. 12 Car. I.

To proceed to the Year 1636. It began with a Plague, that broke forth in the usual Seat of Infection among the Butchers in the Row leading from Aldgate to White Chapel. Upon which his Majesty by Proclamation dated April 22. provided, That whereas in the time of the last Plague there were divers good Orders published with Rules preservative and Directions against the Infection; the said Orders, Rules, and Medi-

1636. 12 Car. I. Medicines, ſhould be again now publiſhed and renewed. And by another Proclamation, dated May 27. The King's Majeſty finding that the Infection of the Plague is at this preſent ſcattered and diſperſed in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, hath thought fit to Adjourn ſome part of Trinity-Term next from the ſecond Return thereof to the laſt Return of the ſame. This publick Calamity reign'd the whole Summer and Autumn, till his Majeſty by Proclamation dated October 18. commanded a general Faſt to be weekly obſerved throughout the Realm of England, by reaſon of the heavy Judgment of God in his preſent Viſitation in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and divers other parts of the Kingdom at this time with the Peſtilence. In the Book of Prayers preſcrib'd for this Faſt, a Paſſage in a former Collect reflecting on the Abuſe of Faſting by thinking it meritorious, was now left out. This Omiſſion was made an Article againſt the Archbiſhop at his Trial; to which he pleaded, "That the Alteration was made not by himſelf, "but by him that had the ordering of that Book "for the Preſs: yet he approv'd the Reaſon given "for it, and that without any the leaſt Approbati- "on of Merit. For in this Age and Kingdom, when "and where ſet Faſtings of the Church are cried "down, there can be little fear of that erroneous "Opinion of placing any Merit in Faſting.

The Abp. charged with an Omiſſion in a Form of Prayer.

King's Care of the Fleet

The King's great Care was to have a good Fleet at Sea, to raiſe his Honour abroad, and preſerve the Peace at home, by letting his Subjects ſee a juſt and wiſe Diſpoſal of the Ship-Money. To give countenance to theſe Naval Deſigns, his Majeſty in Council March 26. taking into conſideration a Book lately publiſh'd by John Selden Eſq; intitled Mare Clauſum, written by the King's Command, which he had done with great Induſtry, Learning, and Judgment, and hath aſſerted the Right of the Crown of England to the Dominion of the Britiſh Seas; the King requires one of the ſaid Books to be kept in the Council Cheſt, another in the Court of Exchequer, and a third in the Court of Admiralty, as faithful and ſtrong Evidence to the Dominion of the Britiſh Sea. And on April 15. the King farther expreſs'd his Pleaſure, that whereas the ſaid Book had been Printed beyond Sea, and to the ſaid Impreſſion more was added than what was therein Printed at firſt, and the Name of the City of London was falſly put for the Place of the Impreſſion; no Perſon ſhould import, publiſh, or ſet to ſale, any of the ſaid Books of the ſaid foreign Edition, either in Latin or Engliſh. This was an Encouragement not only to Learning, but to the Naval Expedition of this Year, when the King prepar'd for it by a Proclamation dated May 10. which renew'd an Order of K. James, whereby "All Perſons, of what Nation or Quality "ſoever, being not his natural born Subjects, were "reſtrain'd from Fiſhing upon any of the Coaſts "and Seas of Great Britain, Ireland, and the reſt of "the Iſles adjacent, without Licence firſt obtained "from the King or his Commiſſioners. And his "Majeſty now further declares, that his Reſolution "is, to keep ſuch a competent Strength of Shipping "upon his Seas, as may (by God's Bleſſing) be "ſufficient both to hinder ſuch farther Encroach- "ments upon his Regalities, and aſſiſt and protect "thoſe his good Friends and Allies, who ſhall hence- "forth, by vertue of his Licences firſt obtained, "endeavour to take the benefit of Fiſhing upon his "Coaſts and Seas in the Places accuſtomed.

Reſpect paid to Mr. Selden's Mare Clauſum.

A good Fleet.

Accordingly the King appeared this Year with a formidable Armado in the Narrow Seas, Algernon Earl of Northumberland being Admiral, who with ſixty Sail under his Command ſet out from the Downs toward the North, where the Dutch Buſſes were Fiſhing upon our Coaſts: The Admiral requiring them to forbear, they ſeemed indiſpos'd to it; upon which, he fired at them: Some of 'em were taken, others ſunk, and the reſt fled. The Dutch immediately hereupon prevailed with the Admiral to mediate with the King that they might by his Permiſſion go on this Summer to fiſh upon the Coaſts, and agreed to give the King for this Year thirty thouſand Pounds, which was paid accordingly: And the States expreſſed their Willingneſs to obtain a Grant from the King, for his Permiſſion of their Veſſels to Fiſh for the time to come, paying a yearly Tribute.

Diſperſes the Dutch Fiſhers.

Yet all this honourable Diſpoſal of the Ship-Money, and good Effects of it, could not reconcile the People of England to a new Tax levied without an Act of Parliament. Murmurs and a general Senſe of Oppreſſion went through the Kingdom. In London, one Richard Chambers, Merchant, had peremptorily refuſed to pay, for which he had been committed to Priſon by Sir Edward Bromfield Lord Mayor, againſt whom he commenc'd a Suit for Treſpaſs and falſe Impriſonment; which Caſe was to be argued in this Trinity-Term: But Sir Robert Berkley, one of the Juſtices of the Court of King's-Bench, would not ſuffer the Point of Legality of Ship-Money to be argued by Chambers's Council; declaring openly in Court, "That there was a Rule of Law "and a Rule of Government, and that many things "which might not be done by the Rule of Law, "might be done by the Rule of Government. But this Diſtinction was thought new and dangerous; and this ſilencing a Cauſe, made People the more to ſuſpect the Merits of it.

Continual Murmurs againſt Ship-Money.

Arbitrary Judgment

The City of London would not yield.

The City of London, who had moſt Ability, and indeed moſt Reaſon to bear the Burden, betray'd ſo much Averſion to it, that the Lords of the Privy-Council wrote to them to adviſe their Submiſſion: but they met with ſuch a ſtout Return, that their Lordſhips were forced to write again on Auguſt 8. to inform the Lord-Mayor and Court, that "They "had received by ſome of the Aldermen a Denial in "the Name of the City, to their late Letter for the "ſetting forth of Shipping, and Excuſes had been "ſince made upon the like occaſion; which they "could not impute to any thing but want of Duty; "and therefore in his Majeſty's Name, and by his "Commandment, their Lordſhips require them to "ſee the Directions of their Letter performed upon "their Allegiance, and as they will anſwer the con- "trary at their Perils. When the City perceived they could not ſhake off the Burden, they deſired however a Mitigation of it; and therefore on Auguſt 11. they preſented a Petition, deſiring an Abatement of the twenty Ships rated upon the City unto ten Ships, and two Pinnaces. But this too was denied in a manner that made the Denial more grievous; for Mr. Secretary Cook, by Order of the Privy Council, told them, "That the former Command- "ment was neceſſary, and the Charge upon them "was not immoderate; that Petitions and Pleadings "againſt ſuch Commandment were not to be recei- "ved: And whereas they mention'd Precedents, "they ſhould know, that the Precedents of former "Times were Obedience and not Direction; that "there were alſo Precedents of the Puniſhment of "thoſe that diſobey'd his Majeſty's Commandments "ſignified by the Board in the caſe of the Preſer- "vation of the State. This Anſwer might extort a Submiſſion, but it could not give a Satisfaction.

And therefore the King took a more plauſible Method to ſuffer the Legality of this Tax to be decided by the Judges, putting this Caſe to them in Letters dated Febr. 2. Regn. 12.

Caſe put to the Judges.

Carolus Rex.

When the Good and Safety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger, whether may not the King by Writ, under the Great Seal of England, command all the Subjects of our Kingdom, at their Charge, to provide and furniſh ſuch a Number of Ships, with Men, Victuals, and Munition, and for ſuch time as we ſhall think fit, for the Defence and Safeguard of the Kingdom from ſuch Danger and Peril, and by Law compel the doing thereof in caſe of Refuſal or Refractorineſs? And whether, in ſuch a caſe, is

1636. 12 Car. I.

is not the King the sole Judge both of the Danger, and when and how the same is to be prevented and avoided?

To which the Judges returned this Opinion.

May it please your most excellent Majesty,

Judges Answer.

WE have according to your Majesty's Command, every Man by himself, and all of us together, taken into serious consideration the Case and Question signed by your Majesty, and inclosed in your Royal Letter; and we are of Opinion, that when the Good and Safety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the Kingdom in Danger, your Majesty may by Writ, under the Great Seal of England, command all your Subjects of this your Kingdom, at their charge to provide and furnish such a number of Ships with Men, Victuals and Munition; and for such time as your Majesty shall think fit for the defence and safeguard of this Kingdom from such Danger and Peril; and that by Law your Majesty may compel the doing thereof in case of Refusal or Refractorinesse. And we are also of Opinion, that in such Case your Majesty is the sole Judge, both of the Danger, and when, and how the same is to be prevented and avoided.

Judges censur'd for their Opinion.

Tho' this Judgment solemnly delivered might justifie the King, yet it could not acquit the Judges themselves, who were by many suspected in this case, rather to make Law than to pronounce it; and to have been tempted or aw'd into this extrajudicial Opinion. A Suspition that encreased the more, because some of them betray'd a surprize to hear their Resolution openly read by the Lord Keeper in the Court of Star-Chamber, Feb. 14. as if they had meant to deliver it for the private Satisfaction of the King and Council, not for the knowledge of the whole Nation; and because two of them, Hutton and Crook, did afterward, in the Case of Hampden, recede in effect from their own Subscription.

Lord Clarendon's Opinion of Ship-Money.

The Influence and Effect of this stated Opinion may be delivered in these Words of the Lord Clarendon.

" It is notoriously known, that Pressure was born " with much more cheerfulness before the Judgment " for the King, than ever it was afterward; Men " before pleasing themselves with doing somewhat " for the King's Service, as a Testimony of their Affection, which they were not bound to do. —— " But when they heard this demanded in a Court of " Law as a Right, and found it by sworn Judges " of the Law adjudged so, upon such Grounds and " Reasons as every stander by was able to swear was " not Law, and so had lost the Pleasure and Delight " of being kind and dutiful to the King; and instead " of giving were required to pay, and by a Logick " that left no Man any thing which he might call " his own: They no more look'd upon it as the " Case of one Man, but the Case of the Kingdom; " nor as an Imposition laid upon them by the King, " but by the Judges, which they thought themselves " bound in Conscience to the publick Justice not " to submit to. —— The Damage and Mischief " cannot be expressed, that the Crown and State sustained by the deserved Reproach and Infamy " that attended the Judges by being made use of in " this and like Arts of Power, there being no possibility to preserve the Dignity, Reverence and " Estimation of the Laws themselves, but by the " Integrity and Innocency of the Judges, &c.

It was a less invidious Opinion which the same Judges had delivered in the case of Burton and Bastwicke, who had been so fierce in their Libels against the Government, that it was consider'd by the King's Council how to draw them into an Arraignment of High-Treason. For which purpose there was a meeting of the Judges at Serjeant's-Inn, before whom the King's Council laboured to prove, that divers Passages in the Books of the said Authors did amount to High-Treason. But when the Council withdrew, the Judges in Debate among themselves, came to these Resolutions. 1636. 12 Car. I.

Resolutions of the Judges in case of Burton and Bastwicke.

1. That if there were any thing in the Books that amounted to Treason, no Indictment could be found good for Treason, unless it was grounded upon the Statute of 25 Ed. III. either for compassing the King's Death, or imagining the same, or else for levying of War.

2. That if any Man seditiously, maliciously and of purpose to raise Rebellion, and to incite Rebellion, did take Arms to reduce the course of Government of the State, either Ecclesiastical or Civil, and thereby to compass the King's Destruction, this was Treason.

3. That such Indictment was to be framed upon the said Statute of 25 Ed. III.

This Resolution being delivered by the Lord Chief Justice to the King and Council, had this regular effect, that the said Offenders were not Indicted of High-Treason, but prosecuted in a softer manner, tho' afterward thought severe and arbitrary.

New Projects for Money.

It was another unhappiness to the Government, that for want of Parliamentary Supplies suited to the occasional exigencies of Affairs, they were driven upon new Projects for Money, which however fair and Just in themselves, were thought but Inventions to make Parliaments the less frequent and the less significant. Among these Projects, one was to erect a Court of Enquiry after Depopulations made by the conversion of Arable Lands to Pasture, since the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth, by which Commission there was brought into the Exchequer above 30000 l. Another Project was, the granting Letters for the surveying and sealing of a Reel, and other Standards to be used by all Clothiers and Workers in Cloth and Yarn: with other ways and means by enlarging the Powers of prizing of Wines; by prohibiting the Importation of Gun-powder, and requiring all Subjects to be supplied out of his Majesty's Store-Houses only.

Foreign Affairs.

As to Foreign Affairs, Ferdinando the second, Emperor of Germany, finding in himself a decay of Health, began to think of settling the Succession of the Empire; and so called a Dyet to meet at Ratisbon in the middle of September, where the French managed an Intrigue for promoting the Elector of Bavaria; but the Poland Ambassador prevailed for Ferdinand the Emperor's Son, already King of Hungary, to be elected King of the Romans, on Decem. 22. who succeeded his Father dying Feb. 15. Our King upon the News of this change, sent Thomas Earl of Arundel, Earl Marshal of England, his Ambassador to the new Emperor Ferdinand III. to represent the condition of the Palsgrave now in the English Court, and to sollicite the Restitution of his Patrimony. The Emperor answer'd, that he made no doubt in time it might be considered for enjoying the Lower Palatinate; but for the other, it concerned the Duke of Bavaria with whom consultation must be had on that Affair. Upon such consult, Bavaria answer'd like a Soldier, That what he had won by the Sword he would maintain by the same Power. After which, our Ambassador so far resented the Slights and Indignities put upon him, that he came away without taking leave; and made such a Report to the King, that he shewed his Displeasure with the Imperial Agent: which more and more obstructed the King's Endeavours of restoring his Nephew.

Pope's Nuncio's.

At the latter end of this Year, Seignior Gregorio Panzani, the Pope's Nuncio in England, and Major Bret, our English Agent at Rome from the Queen, being discharged from their Negotiations, Seignior Gregorio Con a Scot, was appointed by the Pope to succeed Panzani as his Nuncio; and Sir William Hamilton a Scot, was sent hence Ledger to Rome, where Cardinal Barberino was made Patron and Protector of 1636. 12 Car. I.

of the Engliſh and Scotch Nations. All which ſerv'd but to foment the Fears and Jealouſies of Popery.

State of Religion.

Which brings us to the State of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs for this preſent Year 1636. As to the Liturgy deſign'd for Scotland, upon the 19th of April the King thus expreſs'd his Pleaſure.

Charles Rex,

King's Order for Scotch Liturgy.

I Gave the Archbiſhop of Canterbury command to make the Alterations expreſſed in this Book, and to fit a Liturgy for the Church of Scotland; and wherejoever they ſhall differ from another Book ſigned by us at Hampton-Court, September 28. 1634. Our pleaſure is to have theſe followed rather than the former, unleſs the Archbiſhop of St. Andrew's, and his Brethren who are upon the Place, ſhall ſee apparent reaſon to the contrary.

Archbiſhop Laud ſent an Account of this to Wedderburne Biſhop of Dunblain, and Dean of the Royal Chapel at Edinburgh. But there were ſtill found ſome Defects and Errors in this new Liturgy, that required Alteration. And therefore on October 18. the King directed his further Inſtructions to the Abps and Biſhops of Scotland, "That they ſhould take "care, 1. That the Proclamation to be made for "authorizing the Service-Book ſhould not derogate "in any thing from his Royal Prerogative. 2. That "in their Kalendar they ſhould keep ſuch Catholick "Saints as were in the Engliſh, with ſuch other "Saints as were moſt peculiar to that Kingdom. "3. That in their Book of Ordination in giving Or-"ders to Presbyters, they ſhould keep the Words "of the Engliſh Book without change: Receive the "Holy-Ghoſt, &c. 4. That they ſhould inſert a-"mong the Leſſons ordinarily to be read in the Ser-"vice, out of the Book of Wiſdom, the firſt, ſecond, "third, fourth, fifth and ſixth Chapters; and out "of the Book of Eccleſiaſticus the firſt, ſecond, fifth, "eighth, thirty fifth, and forty ninth Chapters. "5. That every Biſhop within his Family twice a "Day cauſe the Service to be read; and that all "the Archbiſhops and Biſhops make all Univerſities "and Colleges within their Dioceſſes to uſe daily "twice a Day the Service. 6. That the Preface to "the Book of Common-Prayer, ſigned by his Ma-"jeſty's Hand, and the Proclamation for authori-"zing the ſame, ſhould be printed and inſerted in "the Book of Common-Prayer.

Farther Inſtructions.

According to theſe Inſtructions and the ſeveral Corrections, the Scotiſh Liturgy was at laſt finiſhed, and ratified and confirmed by his Majeſty's Royal Declaration, dated at Edinburgh 20 Decem. Regn. 12. 1636.

Offence taken at the Scotch Liturgy.

The great Offence was, that this Liturgy was impoſed by the Civil Power, without being preſented to the Kirk, or tendred to any approbation of the general Aſſembly, as had been done in the Reſtitution of the Epiſcopal Government, and Introduction of the five Articles of Perth. Yet this omiſſion was not owing to Archbiſhop Laud, but it proceeded from the Scotch Biſhops, who dared not truſt the majority of the Clergy, or venture the reception or refuſal of it to a general Vote of the Aſſembly. And indeed this method of enjoining by Civil Authority, without calling in the Church Repreſentative, had been the practiſe of Reformation in the Church of England, where King Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth, in fitting and enjoyning their ſeveral Liturgies, had acted by their Sovereign Right of Supremacy, not ſubmitting the Books to Convocation, becauſe they could not then depend upon the conſent of the Clergy ſo much Popiſhly affected. Another main Objection among the Scots to the Liturgy was, that it was ſo very near the Engliſh Book, as to look like a diminution of the Liberties of their own Kirk; and yet had ſeveral Alterations from the Engliſh, that were all for the worſe, and tended more to Superſtition. Theſe and other Cenſures paſſed upon the Book were induſtriouſly improved by the Preachers, and fomented ſuch a prejudice among the People, that we muſt expect to hear of the unhappy effects of it. 1636. 12 Car. I.

Abp. of Canterbury claims a Power of viſiting the Univerſities.

There was another load of Envy drawn upon the well-meaning Archbiſhop, by his claiming the Right of viſiting the two Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge, Jure Metropolitico. Both thoſe learned Bodies denied his Claim, and pleaded they were ſubject only to Royal Viſitation. The Cauſe came to a Hearing before the King and Council at Hampton-Court, June 21. where Sir John Banks, Attorney-General, argued for the Archbiſhop's Right againſt the Royal Prerogative; and Mr. Gardiner, Recorder of London, pleaded their Subjection only to Royal Power, in behalf of the Univerſity of Cambridge, as Serjeant Thin did in behalf of Oxford. The King himſelf argued for the Archbiſhop, and at laſt gave Judgment for him, i. e. againſt his own Crown and Dignity, as moſt People underſtood it.

Moſt of the other Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of any moment are contained in the Archbiſhop's account of his Province to the King for this Year 1636.

May it pleaſe your ſacred Majeſty,

Abp's Account of his Province.

"ACcording to your Royal Commands expreſs'd "in your late Inſtructions for the good of the "Church, I do here moſt humbly preſent my year-"ly Account for my Dioceſs and Province of Can-"terbury for this laſt Year, ended at Chriſtmas 1636.

Canterbury

"And firſt for my own Dioceſs, I have every "Year acquainted your Majeſty, and ſo muſt do "now, that there are ſtill about Aſhford and Eger-"ton divers Browniſts, and other Separatiſts: But "they are ſo very mean and poor People, that we "know not what to do with them. They are ſaid "to be Diſciples of one Turner and Fenner, who were "long ſince Apprehended and Impriſoned, by Or-"der of your Majeſty's High-Commiſſion Court. "But how this part came to be ſo infected with ſuch "a humour of Separation, I know not, unleſs it were "by too much connivance at their firſt beginning: "Neither do I ſee any Remedy like to be, unleſs "ſome of their chief Seducers be driven to abjure "the Kingdom, which muſt be done by the Judges "at the Common-Law, but is not in our Power.

"The King wrote thus in the Margin, C. R. In-"form me of the Particulars, and I ſhall command the "Judges to make them Abjure.

"I have received Information from my Officers, "that the Walloons, and other Strangers in my Dio-"ceſs, eſpecially at Canterbury, do come orderly to "their Pariſh Churches, and there receive the Sa-"craments, and Marry, &c. according to my Injun-"ctions, with that Limitation which your Majeſty "allowed.

"There have been heretofore many in Canterbury "that were not conformable to Church Diſcipline, "and would not kneel at the Communion; but they "are all now very conformable, as I hear expreſly "by my Officers; and there is no falling away of "any to Recuſancy.

"There hath been a Cuſtom, that ſome Miniſters "thereabouts have, under divers pretences, lived for "the moſt part at Canterbury, and gone ſeldom to "their Benefices; which hath given a double ſcan-"dal, both by their abſence from their ſeveral Cures, "and by keeping too much Company, and that not "in the beſt manner. I have ſeen this remedied in "all ſave only one Man; and if he do not preſent-"ly conform, I have taken Order for his Suſpen-"ſion.

"In the Dioceſs of London, I find that my Lord "the Biſhop there (now by your Majeſty's Grace "and Favour Lord High-Treaſurer of England) hath "very carefully obſerved thoſe Inſtructions which "belong to his own Perſon. And for the Dioceſs, "his Lordſhip informs me of three great Miſde-"meanours; the one committed by Dr. Cornelius "Burgeſs, who in a Latin Sermon before the Clergy "of London, utter'd divers inſolent Paſſages againſt "the Biſhops and Government of the Church; and "refu-

1636. 12 Car. I.

" refuſed to give his Lordſhip a Copy of the Sermon; ſo there was a neceſſity of calling him into the High-Commiſſion-Court, which is done.

" The ſecond Miſdemeanour is of one Mr. Wharton a Miniſter in Eſſex; who in a Sermon at Chelmesford, uttered many unfit and ſome ſcurrilous things. But for this he hath been convented, and received a Canonical Admonition; and upon his Sorrow and Submiſſion any farther Cenſure is forborn.

" The third Miſdemeanour which my Lord complains of, is the late ſpreading and diſperſing of ſome factious and malitious Pamphlets againſt the Biſhops and Government of the Church of England. And my Lord farther certifies, that he hath reaſonable ground to perſwade him, that thoſe libellous Pamphlets have been contrived or abetted, and diſperſed by ſome of the Clergy of his Dioceſe; and therefore deſires me to uſe the Authority of the High-Commiſſion, for the farther diſcovery of this notorious Practice, to prevent the Miſchiefs which will otherwiſe enſue upon the Government of the Church. This, God willing, I ſhall ſee performed. But if the High-Commiſſion ſhall not have Power enough, becauſe one of thoſe Libels contains ſeditious Matter in it, and that which is very little ſhort of Treaſon, (if any thing at all) then I humbly crave leave to add this to my Lord Treaſurer's Motion, and humbly to deſire, that your Majeſty will call it into a higher Court if you find cauſe: ſince I ſee no likelihood but that theſe Troubles in the Church, if they be permitted, will break out into ſome Sedition in the Common-wealth. [To which the King anſwered in the Margin, C. R. What the High-Commiſſion cannot do in this, I ſhall ſupply, as I ſhall find cauſe, in a more powerful way.]

" My Viſitation is yet depending for this Dioceſe; and by reaſon of the Sickneſs, I could not with ſafety hold it, nor think it fit to gather ſo much People together; but God willing, I ſhall perform that Duty ſo ſoon as conveniently I may, and then certify your Majeſty at the next Return, what ſhall come under mine own view.

Wincheſter. " In this Dioceſe, I find by my Lord's Report from his Officers, that there are divers Recuſants in ſeveral parts of the Country; and that ſome of them have been ſeduced away from the Church of England within theſe two or three Years.

" For all things elſe I receive no complaint thence, ſave only of three or four Miniſters that are negligent in Catechizing, and obſerve it not at all, or but in the Lent only. But I ſhall call upon the Biſhop to ſee this remedied, and to be as vigilant as he can againſt any farther encreaſe of Recuſants.

Bath and Wells. " From Bath and Wells, I have received a very good and happy Certificate, both that all your Majeſty's Inſtructions have been exactly performed throughout that whole Dioceſe; and that by God's bleſſing, and the well-ordering of Church Affairs, there have been fewer Popiſh Recuſants preſented than formerly, and that the number of them is much decreaſed. And this I cannot but highly approve to your Majeſty, if there be not fewer preſented, either by the over-awing of them which ſhould preſent, or ſome cunning in thoſe which would not be preſented.

Norwich. " For this Dioceſe my Lord hath given me in a very careful and punctual Account, very large, and in all Particulars very conſiderable; and I ſhall return it to your Majeſty as brief as I can reduce it. And firſt, he hath for this Summer, but by your Majeſty's leave, lived (from both his Epiſcopal Houſes) in Ipſwich, partly becauſe he was informed, that that ſide of his Dioceſe did moſt need his preſence, and he found it ſo; and partly becauſe his Chapel at his Houſe in Norwich was poſſeſſed by the French Congregation, and ſo the Biſhoprick left deſtitute: But he hath given them warning to provide themſelves elſewhere by Eaſter next. 1636. 12 Car. I.

" His Lordſhip found a general defect of Catechizing quite thro' the Dioceſs, but hath ſettled it. And in Norwich, where there are 34 Churches, there was no Sermon in the Sunday Morning ſave only in four, but all put off to the Afternoon, and ſo no Catechizing: But now he hath ordered that there ſhall be a Sermon every Morning, and Catechizing in the Afternoon in every Church.

" For Lectures they abounded in Suffolk, and many ſet up by private Gentlemen, even without ſo much as the knowledge of the Ordinary, and without any due obſervation of the Canons, or the Diſcipline of the Church. Divers of theſe his Lordſhip hath carefully regulated according to Order, and eſpecially in St. Edmund's-Bury, and with their very good Content, and ſuſpended no Lecturer of whom he might obtain Conformity; and at Ipſwich it was not unknown unto them, that now Mr. Ward ſtands cenſured in the High-Commiſſion and obeys not: Yet the Biſhop was ready to have allowed them another, if they would have ſought him; but they reſolve to have Mr. Ward or none, and that (as is conceived) in deſpite of the Cenſure of the Court.

" At Yarmouth, where there was great diviſion heretofore for many Years, their Lecturer being cenſur'd in the High-Commiſſion, about 2 Years ſince went into New-England, ſince which time there hath been no Lecture, and very much Peace in the Town, and all Eccleſiaſtical Orders well obſerved: But in Norwich one Mr. Bridge, rather than he would conform, hath left his Lecture and two Cures and is gone into Holland. [The King writes in the Margin, Let him go, we are well rid of him.] The Lecturers in the Country generally obſerving no Church Orders at all: And yet the Biſhop hath carried it with that Temper, and upon their promiſe, and his hopes of Conformity, he hath inhibited but three in Norfolk, and as many in Suffolk, of which one is no Graduate, and hath been a common Stage-Player.

" His Lordſhip craves direction what he ſhall do with ſuch Scholars (ſome in Holy Orders and ſome not) as Knights and Private-Gentlemen keep in their Houſes, under pretence to teach their Children; as alſo with ſome Divines that are Beneficed in Towns, or near, but live in Gentlemens Houſes. For my part, I think it very fit the beneficed Men were punctually commanded to reſide upon their Cures; and for the reſt, your Majeſty's Inſtructions allow none to keep Chaplains but ſuch as are qualified by Law. All which, notwithſtanding, I moſt humbly ſubmit (as the Biſhop doth) to your Majeſty's Judgment. [The King wrote thus, I approve your Judgment in this, I only add, that care muſt be taken, that even thoſe qualified by Law keep none but conformable Men.]

" For Recuſants, whereas formerly there were wont to be but two or three preſented, his Lordſhip hath cauſed above 40 to be Indicted in Norwich at the laſt Seſſions; and at the Aſſizes in Suffolk he delivered a Liſt of ſuch as were preſented upon the Oath of the Church-wardens to the Lord Chief Juſtice, and his Lordſhip to the Grand-Jury: But they ſlighted it, pretending the Biſhop's Certificate to be no Evidence. But the true reaſon is conceived to be, becauſe he had alſo inſerted ſuch as had been preſented to him for Recuſant Separatiſts, as well as Recuſant Romaniſts. [The King wrote in the Margin, Biſhops Certificates in this Caſe muſt be moſt unqueſtionable Evidence.]

" His Ldp's care hath been ſuch, as that tho' there are about 1500 Clergy in that Dioceſe, and many Diſorders; yet there are not thirty Excommunicated or Suſpended; whereof ſome are for contumacy, and will not yet ſubmit; ſome for obſtinate denial to publiſh your Majeſty's Declaration; and ſome for contemning all the Orders and Rites of the 1636. 12 Car. I. "Church, and intruding themſelves without Licence from the Ordinary, for many Years together.

"Laſt of all he found, that one half of the Churches "in his Dioceſe, had not a Clerk able to read and "anſwer the Miniſter in Divine Service; by which "means the People were wholly diſuſed from joining with the Prieſt, and in many Places from "ſo much as ſaying Amen. But concerning this "his Lordſhip hath ſtrictly enjoined a Reformation.

"If this Account, given by my Lord of Norwich, "be true, as I believe it is (and ought to believe "it, till it can be diſproved) he hath deſerved "very well of the Church of England, and hath "been very ill rewarded for it. His humble "Suit to your Majeſty is, that you will be graciouſly pleaſed in your own good time to hear "the Complaints that have been made againſt him, "that he may not be overborn by an outcry for "doing Service. [The King anſwers, His Suit is "granted, and aſſuredly his negative Conſequence ſhall "follow.]

Oxford. "In the Dioceſe of Oxon. I find all your Majeſty's Inſtructions carefully obeyed; and there is "but one Lecture in the whole Dioceſe, and that is "read at Henly upon Thames by ſome Miniſters of "the Dioceſe, conformable Men, and allowed by "the Biſhop.

"His Lordſhip hath alſo called upon divers Recuſants; but upon their being queſtioned, they "pleaded an Exemption from his Authority under "your Majeſty's Great-Seal. [The King ſubjoined, If this be not upon compoſition I underſtand it "not.]

Ely. "From my Lord of Ely I have received a very "fair Account, that his Dioceſe is very orderly and "obedient; inſomuch, that he hath not any thing "of note to acquaint me with.

Lincoln. "My Lord in his Certificate mentions two Particulars fit for your Majeſty's knowledge. The "firſt is, that one of his Clergy in Bedfordſhire, a "Learned and Pious Man, as he ſaith, ſet up a "Stone upon Pillars of Brick for his Communion "Table, believing it to have been the Altar-Stone. "And becauſe this appeared to be but a Grave-Stone, and for avoiding of farther Rumours in "that Country among the preciſer ſort, his Lordſhip "cauſed it to be quietly removed, and the antient "Communion Table placed in the room of it: but "did not farther queſtion the Party, becauſe they "found him a harmleſs Man, and otherwiſe a deſerver. But how deſerving ſoever he be, I muſt "judge it a very bold part in him to attempt this "without the Knowledge and Approbation of his "Ordinary. [Over againſt this the King wrote "the following Note, This may prove a bold part in "the Biſhop, and the poor Prieſt in no Fault, as the "other Day his Information proved, concerning the Ship "Buſineſs at the Council Board; therefore examine this "farther.]

"The ſecond is, that there are riſen ſome Differences in the Southern parts of his Dioceſe, about "the Miniſters urging the People to receive at the "Rails, which his Lordſhip, ſaith he, hath procured to be placed about the Holy Table, and the "People in ſome places refuſing ſo to do. Now "becauſe this is not regulated by any Canon of the "Church, his Lordſhip is an humble Suitor, that "he may have direction herein. And truly, I think, "for this Particular, the People will beſt be won "by the Decency of the thing it ſelf; and that I ſuppoſe may be compaſſed in a ſhort time. But if "your Majeſty ſhall think it fit that a quicker way "be held, I ſhall humbly ſubmit. [The King ſubjoin'd, Try your way for ſome time.]

Sarum. "From the Lord Biſhop of this Dioceſe I have "received no Particular; but in General thus; that "all your Majeſty's Inſtructions are now obſerved "there without repugnance, for ought either Chancellour, or any other Officer of his hath informed 1636. "him. 12 Car. I.

"My Lord the Biſhop of this See certifies, that Worceſter. "your Majeſty's Inſtructions are carefully obſerved, "and that there are only two Lecturers in the City "of Worceſter, both very conformable, and that they "ſhall not longer continue than they are ſo; and that "the one of them preaches on Sundays in the After-noons, after Catechizing and Service in the Pariſh "Churches, and ending before Evening-Prayers in "the Cathedral.

"I may not here forbear to acquaint your Majeſty, that this Sunday Lecture was ever wont to be "in the Cathedral; and that it is removed becauſe "the City would ſuffer no Prebendary to have it. "And Evening-Prayers in their Pariſh Churches "muſt needs begin betimes, and their Catechizing "be ſhort, and the Prayers at the Cathedral begin "very late if this Lecture can begin and end in the "Space between. But if it can be ſo fitted, I think "the Dean and Chapter will not complain of the remove of the Lecture to a Pariſh Church.

"For theſe three Dioceſſes, my Lords the Bi- Exon. Chicheſter, Peterborough, "ſhops certifie that all your Majeſty's Inſtructions "are carefully obſerv'd; neither do any of them "mention any thing amiſs in the general, either "for Doctrine or Diſcipline. Only the Biſhop of "Exeter hath ſent me up two Copies of the late Libel, entituled News from Ipſwich, which were ſent "thither to a Stationer with blank Covers.

"Theſe five Dioceſſes following I have viſited Hereford. "this Year, by my Vicar-General and other Commiſſioners: And for Hereford I find not many "things amiſs, tho' the after-change of the Bp. there, "which hath of late happen'd, hath done no good "among them. But ſome pretenſions there are to "certain Cuſtoms, which, I conceive, were better "broke than kept: And I ſhall do my beſt to reform them, as I have opportunity, and humbly "beg your Majeſty's aſſiſtance if I want Power. "[C. R. Which ye ſhall not want if you need.]

"For St. David's, the Biſhop is now there, and S. David's. "will take the beſt care he can to ſee all things in "Order. But there is one Matthews the Vicar of "Penmayn, that preaches againſt the keeping of all "Holidays, with divers others as fond or profane "Opinions. The Biſhop hath inhibited him, and "if that do not ſerve, I ſhall call him into the High-Commiſſion Court.

"Baronet Rudde is in this Dioceſe, the Son of a S. David's. "late Biſhop there, who is a ſober Gentleman: he "hath built him a Chapel, and deſires the Biſhop to "Conſecrate it. But his Lordſhip finding one of your "Majeſty's Inſtructions to be, that none ſhould keep "a Chaplain in his Houſe, but ſuch as are qualified "by Law, which he conceives a Baronet is not, "hath hitherto forborn to Conſecrate this Chapel, "as being to be of ſmall uſe without a Chaplain, "and humbly craves Direction herein what he ſhall "do. I humbly propoſe to your Majeſty, whether "conſidering the Charge this Gentleman hath been "at, and the ill Ways which many of them there "have to Church, it may not be fit to Conſecrate "this Chapel, and then that he may have a Licence "to uſe the Miniſter of the Pariſh, or any other "lawfully in Orders: Always provided, that he uſe "this Chapel but at times of ſome neceſſity, not making himſelf or his Family ſtrangers to the Mother-Church; and that there be a Clauſe expreſſed in "the Licence for recalling thereof upon any Abuſe "there committed; and that this Licence be taken "either from the Biſhop under his Seal, or from the "Archbiſhop of the Province. [C. R. Since he "hath been at the Charge, and hath ſo good Teſtimony, let him have his Deſire with thoſe Reſtrictions "mentioned.]

"For Landaff, there is very little found amiſs; Landaff. "only the Biſhop complains, that whereas Mr. Wroth "and Mr. Erbury are in the High-Commiſſion for "their Schiſmatical Proceedings; the ſlow Proſecu-

"tion

1636. 12 Car. I.

" tion there againſt them, makes both them perſiſt " in their By-ways, and their Followers judge them " faultleſs. But for this I humbly preſent to your " Majeſty this Anſwer, that now the loſs of two " Terms by reaſon of the Sickneſs, hath caſt the " Proceedings of that Court, as well as of others, " behind hand: And there is no Remedy where all " things elſe ſtay as well as it.

St. Aſaph. " In the Dioceſe of St. Aſaph, there is no com- " plaint but the uſual, that there is great reſort of " Recuſants to Holy-Well; and that this Summer the " Lady Falkland and her Company came as Pilgrims " thither; who were the more obſerv'd, becauſe they " travelled on Foot; they diſſembled neither their " Quality nor their Errand: And this Boldneſs of " theirs is of very ill conſtruction among your Ma- " jeſty's People. My humble Suit to your Majeſty " is, that whereas I complained of this in open " Council in your Majeſty's preſence, you would " now be graciouſly pleaſed, that the Order then " reſolved on for her Confinement may be put in " execution. [C. R. It is done.]

Bangor. " For Bangor, I find that catechiſing was quite " out of uſe in thoſe remote Parts (the more the " pity) but the Biſhop is now in hope to do much " good, and ſees ſome Reformation in that Particu- " lar already. And I would ſay for this and the " other Dioceſſes in Wales, that much more good " might be done there in a Church way, if they were " not overborn by the Proceedings of the Court of " the Marches there. And this preſent Year in " this Dioceſe of Bangor, my Commiſſioners for my " Metropolitical Viſitation there complain unto " me, that the Power which belongs to my Place, " hath been in them very much wronged and im- " peach'd by that Court. And I do moſt humbly " beſeech your Majeſty, in your own good time, to " give this my Cauſe a Hearing, if it take not a " fair end without that trouble. [C. R. I doubt not " but by the Grace of God, to agree theſe Differences by " my hearing of them.]

Rocheſter, Glouceſter and Briſtol. " For Rocheſter, the Biſhop (God comfort him) " is very ill of a Palſie, and that I fear hath made " him forget his Account. Neither hath the Biſhop " of Glouceſter ſent me any, but why I know not; " and for Briſtol that See is void.

Coventry and Lichfield. " For this Dioceſe, I have likewiſe received no " Account: But I fear, that whereas the Biſhop was " lately complained of to your Majeſty for making " waſte of the poor Woods there remaining, he is " not over-willing to give an Account of that Par- " ticular, nor of the groſs Abuſe committed in the " Cathedral Church by the Lady Davis, who I moſt " humbly beſeech your Majeſty, may be ſo reſtrain- " ed as that ſhe may have no more power to com- " mit ſuch horrible Profanations.

" And ſo I moſt humbly ſubmit this my yearly " Account of my Province of Canterbury to your " Majeſty's Princely Wiſdom.

W. CANT.

[C. R. For the Biſhop of Glouceſter and Coventry and Lichfield, I muſt know why they have not made other Account. Whitehall the 21ſt of February 1637.]

Many Families tranſport themſelves to the Weſt-Indies. Some of the Schiſmatical and factious Spirits, having been ſeverely proſecuted in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, began to think of taking Refuge in our Foreign Plantations, where their Trade and Humour in Religion might be free to themſelves, till the number of the Families thus Tranſported began to raiſe the Jealouſie of the State, as fearing thoſe Parts of America wherein they propoſed to ſettle, might be ſuch a Receptacle of diſaffected People, as in time to ſet up both for an Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Independence. Hence April 30. A Proclamation was iſſued forth to reſtrain the diſorderly tranſporting his Majeſty's Subjects to the Plantations within the parts of America, without a Licenſe from his Majeſty's Commiſſioners, becauſe of the many idle and refractory Humours, whoſe only or principal end was to live without the reach of Authority. And on May 1. an Order was made in Council, " That the Lord Trea- " ſurer of England ſhould take ſpeedy and effectual " courſe for the ſtay of eight Ships, now in the Ri- " ver of Thames, prepared to go for New-England; " and ſhould likewiſe give Order for the putting on " Land all the Paſſengers and Proviſions therein " intended for that Voyage. And becauſe ſome of the Clergy under Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures were willing to accept of the ſame Protection and Refuge, therefore another Warrant from the Council was directed to the Lord Admiral " To ſtop all Miniſters " unconformable to the Diſcipline and Ceremonies " of the Church, who frequently tranſport them- " ſelves to the Summer-Iſlands, and other his Maje- " ſty's Plantations abroad; and that no Clergy Man " ſhould be ſuffered to go over without Approbati- " on of the Lords Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Bi- " ſhop of London. Now tho' there might ſeem a ſufficient Reaſon of State in theſe Prohibitions, yet they increaſed the Murmurs and Complaints of the People thus reſtrained, and raiſed the Cries of a double Perſecution, to be vexed at home, and not ſuffered to ſeek Peace or Refuge abroad. And there was certainly this unhappy conſequence, that ſome of the principal Refugees holding New-England a Plantation by Patent from the King, drew hither ſuch a Tribe and Colony of their own, that they caſt off all Subjection to the old Engliſh Church, and their Poſterity are not yet reconciled.

1637. 13 Car. I.

This a Grievance

Caſe of Baſtwick, Burton and Prynne. In Trinity Term came on the remarkable Cauſe in Star-Chamber, upon Information of the King's Attorney-General, againſt John Baſtwick, M. D. Henry Burton, B. D. and William Prynne Bariſter at Law; for writing and publiſhing Seditious, Schiſmatical and Libellous Books againſt the Hierarchy of the Church, and to the Scandal of the Government. The Defendants prepared their Anſwers; but their Council refuſing to ſign them, the Court would not receive them, but ordered that each Perſon ſhould be proceeded againſt pro confeſſo. It was the leſs hardſhip that their Council ſhould decline ſigning thoſe Anſwers which the Parties had drawn up with their own Hands, if we reflect on the want of Temper and Diſcretion in all thoſe Men; and that in Doctor Baſtwick's Anſwer there were theſe Paſſages, The Prelates are Invaders of the King's Prerogative Royal, Contemners and Deſpiſers of the Holy Scriptures, Advancers of Popery, Superſtition, Idolatry and Profaneneſs; they abuſe the King's Authority to the Oppreſſion of his Loyal Subjects, and therein expreſs great Cruelty, Tyranny and Injuſtice; and in the execution of this impious Performance, they ſhew neither Wit, Honeſty nor Temperature; nor are they Servants of God or the King, (as they ought to be indeed) but of the Devil, &c.

Intemperate Men.

Sentence of the Court too ſevere. The Sentence of the Court was a Fine of 5000 l. upon each Delinquent to the King, with Pillory and Loſs of Ears, and the very Remainder of Ears: After which Suffering, they were committed cloſe Priſoners, one to the Caſtle of Lanceſton in Cornwal, another to the Caſtle of Lancaſter, and a third to Carnarvan Caſtle in Wales; from whence they were afterward remov'd to remote Iſlands, and no Acceſs of Friends allow'd to them. And here, tho' the Inſolence of theſe Men was very great, their Puniſhment was thought extremely to exceed it. Some moderate Penalties might have left them under the Neglect of being bold and imprudent Writers. But theſe terrible Blows upon them, raiſed them in the eyes of the People into the Reputation of Sufferers and Confeſſors for the beſt of Cauſes, Religion, Liberty, and Property. The Lord Clarendon delivers a wiſe and true Opinion of theſe Men, and their Proſecution. " They were three Perſons moſt noto- " rious for their declared Malice againſt the Govern- " ment of the Church by Biſhops, in their ſeveral " Books and Writings, which they had publiſhed to

1637. 13 Car. I.

" corrupt the People, with Circumſtances very " ſcandalous, and in Language very ſcurrilous and " impudent; which all Men thought deſerved very " exemplary Puniſhment: They were of the three " ſeveral Profeſſions which had the moſt Influence " upon the People, a Divine, a Common Lawyer, " and a Doctor of Phyſick; none of them of Inte- " reſt, or any Eſteem with the worthy part of their " ſeveral Profeſſions, having been formerly all " look'd upon under Characters of Reproach: yet " when they were All ſentenced, and for the execu- " tion of that Sentence brought out to be puniſh'd " as common and ſignal Rogues, expoſed upon " Scaffolds to have their Ears cut off, and their Fa- " ces and Foreheads branded with hot Irons (as " the pooreſt and moſt mechanick Malefactors uſed " to be, when they were not able to redeem them- " ſelves by any Fine for their Treſpaſſes, or to ſa- " tisfie any Damages for the Scandals they had rai- " ſed againſt the good Name and Reputation of o- " thers) Men begun no more to conſider their " Manners, but the Men; and each Profeſſion, with " Anger and Indignation enough, thought their E- " ducation, and Degrees, and Quality, would have " ſecured them from ſuch infamous Judgments, and " treaſured up Wrath for the time to come.

Diſcontents in Scotland more inflam'd.

The popular Diſcontents in Scotland were much greater, and ſeem'd owing to theſe Reaſons. Since the Acceſſion of King James to the Crown of England, they ſeem'd to have the Name of Monarchy without a ſingle Perſon; they thought their Prince a ſort of Priſoner in another Kingdom, and their chief Nobility were run away after him: ſo as they had in effect no Court, no Money, no Trade, and therefore no poſſible Content. This (beſide the original Prejudices from their way of Reformation) made them now the more averſe to Epiſcopacy and Forms of Prayer, becauſe they were the Rites of the Church of England, from which they were to preſerve themſelves diſtinct and independent. Under theſe jealous Inclinations they had been alarm'd with King James's obtaining an Act for a publick Liturgy in a General Aſſembly at Aberdeen 1616, and ſome Concluſions agreeable to the Engliſh Church in another Aſſembly at Perth 1618, and the bringing their Biſhops to be conſecrated by Engliſh Prelates in 1610, and the inſtituting at that time a High Commiſſion in that Kingdom for the ordering of Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; and an Abſolution given in England to the Marquis of Huntley, who ſtood excommunicate in Scotland; and an Article paſs'd in Parliament 1617, that Whatſoever his Majeſty ſhould determine in the external Government of the Church, with the Advice of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and a competent Number of the Miniſtry, ſhould have the Strength of a Law. Theſe Advances toward the Conſtitution of the Church of England in the former Reign, however juſt and reaſonable, had made the People more and more averſe to the Church and Court of England. Under theſe popular Fears and Jealouſies, the King being in Scotland 1633, had committed it to the Care of ſome of the Biſhops there, to provide a Book of Canons and a Liturgy for that Kingdom, to be tranſmitted to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſome other Engliſh Biſhops, and after their Approbation, to be confirmed and enjoined by the King. The Book of Canons, which ſhould have followed the Liturgy (becauſe referring to the Rites and Ceremonies requir'd by it) came prepoſterouſly out before it in 1635, and had many invidious things in it, ſuch as a Declaration of the unlimited Power, and full perſonal Supremacy, of their Kings; that all Biſhops and Clergy-men ſhould bequeath ſomewhat to the Church; that no Presbyter ſhould reveal any thing received in Confeſſion; and other Proviſo's very new and odious to the common People, becauſe they would not underſtand 'em. This Diſpoſition of Things and Perſons made it an ill Seaſon for the Reception of the Liturgy that was to be now ſent among them; after it had been compiled in Scotland, and peruſed and amended by three Biſhops in England, and confirm'd by the King, and now publiſh'd with his Majeſty's Reaſons for enjoining of it, and with Inſtructions to the Biſhops of that Kingdom to proceed with Moderation and Patience in obtaining the good Effects of it. Eaſter-day in this Year had been appointed for the firſt Reading of this Service: but either upon better Conſideration of the Engliſh Court, or rather a ſly Deſign of the Scotch Miniſtry, it was deferred to the 23d of July; on which Day it was begun to be read in the chief Church of St. Giles in Edinburgh: but immediately the People fell into Clamours and Confuſion, crying out, a Pope, a Pope, Antichriſt, Antichriſt, ſtane him, ſtane him, meaning the Dean of Edinburgh, then reading in the Desk, habited in a Surplice.

Book of Canons for Scotland.

First Reading of the Common Prayer in Scotland.

Tumult in the Church.

The Biſhop of Edinburgh, who was to Preach that day, ſtep'd into the Pulpit, and attempted to appeaſe the Tumult; but a Stool was thrown at his Head, diverted by the hand of one preſent. The Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, and other Lords, could have no Influence on the Mob, till the Provoſt, Bailiffs, and City-Magiſtrates, did with ſome difficulty thruſt out of the Church the chief of the Mutineers, and ſhut the Church-doors againſt them. After which the Dean read the Service, tho' grievouſly interrupted by the Rabble, who ſtood knocking at the Doors, and threw in Stones at the Windows, and betrayed all the Fury of an enraged Multitude. The Lords of the Council complain'd to the King of this Diſorder, and ſpared not to lay the blame of it upon the Biſhops, whoſe late Advances in Power and Revenue, with their Zeal to purſue all Directions from the Engliſh Court, had help'd to make them the more odious to the Commonalty, and indeed the more envied and fear'd by the Nobility and Gentry. Theſe Commotions, tho' inhibited by ſeveral Proclamations, and reſtrain'd as far as poſſible by the Civil Power, frequently return'd with greater Noiſe and Numbers, till they ended at laſt in that Conſpiracy of a Solemn League and Covenant, that was the one great Occaſion of the Civil War.

Caſe of Bp. Williams.

The ſame Spirit was working hard in England; where, to fall under the Diſpleaſure of the King and the Archbiſhop, was enough to make a Popular Man. This was the Caſe of Williams Bp. of Lincoln, who having highly offended the King, and continually oppoſed Abp. Laud, was the greater Favourite of the Country, and eſpecially of the Puritan Faction; for which Reaſon, and for his Speaking and Writing with a ſingular Freedom, many Reſolutions had been taken at Court to put ſome publick Rebuke upon him.

Information againſt him.

Information had been given in the Court of Star-Chamber, by Sir John Lamb and Dr. Sibthorp, " That " the ſaid Biſhop did give them great Diſcourage- " ment in their Proceedings in the Eccleſiaſtical " Courts againſt the Puritans; and that the Biſhop " asked Sir John Lamb, What kind of People thoſe " Puritans were of whom he complained? and whe- " ther they did not pay the Loan Money? To which " Sir John anſwered, that they did indeed conform " in that Point, and paid their Money; but never- " theleſs they were Puritans, not conformable to " the Church. To which the Biſhop replied, If " they pay their Monies ſo readily to the King, the " Puritans are the King's beſt Subjects: and I am " ſure (ſaid the Biſhop) the Puritans will carry " all at laſt. But as to this Information, either the Matter was thought too frivolous, or even ſuch a poor Story wanted ſufficient Teſtimony to ſupport it: And therefore the Attorney-General let fall this firſt Bill, and preferred a ſecond againſt him for Tampering with the King's Witneſſes; and upon that Iſſue the Cauſe came to Hearing on July 11. and held nine days Debate, with a great Concourſe of People who pitied the Biſhop, as a Man mark'd out for a ſacrifice to the Court; and had the greater Hearing.

Veneration

1637. 13 Car. I. Sentence.

Veneration for him, when they found the Penalty ſo much exceeding the Offence, as ten thouſand Pounds Fine to the King's Majeſty, and a thouſand Marks to Sir John Mounſon, Suſpenſion from all Office and Benefice, and Impriſonment in the Tower during the King's pleaſure. All which was executed without any Mitigation, till at laſt he was releas'd and reſtor'd to pleaſe the People in the times of Danger. But neither the People, nor he himſelf, could forget, or heartily forgive, the Severities uſed to him.

Caſe of J. Hampden Eſq;

Another Perſon who now gain'd Popularity by his Sufferings, was John Hampden Eſq; of the County of Bucks; who refuſing to pay the Quota of Ship-Money aſſeſs'd upon him, had a Scire Facias brought againſt him Teſt. 22 Maii 13 Car. and the Caſe was argued in the Exchequer Chamber from Novem. 6. to Decem. 18. by Oliver St. John Eſq; of Lincolns-Inn, and Robert Holborn Eſq; of Lincolns-Inn, for the Defendent; and on the King's ſide by Sir Edward Littleton Sollicitor-General, and Sir John Banks Attorney-General. In fine, Judgment was given againſt Mr. Hampden; but it being thought the Prepoſſeſſion of the Judges more than the Reſult of the Arguments, it did Mr. Hampden no Hurt, and the King no Service. The Lord Clarendon paſſes this juſt Reflection on it. " After the continued Receipt of " Ship-Money for about four Years together, it was " at laſt (upon the Refuſal of a private Gentleman " to pay twenty or thirty Shillings as his Share) " with great Solemnity publickly argued before all " the Judges of England in the Exchequer Chamber, " and by much the major part of them the King's " Right to Impoſe aſſerted, and the Tax adjudged " lawful: Which Judgment proved of more Advan- " tage and Credit to the Gentleman condemn'd " (Mr. Hampden) than to the King's Service.

Foreign Affairs.

No foreign Affairs of this Year had any Influence on England, ſave that the Prince Elector, and his Brother Prince Rupert departed from our Court June 26. for Holland; where getting together a ſmall Army, they march'd into Weſtphalia, and beſieged Limgea, but were fought by the Imperial General Halisfield, and received a perfect Defeat, two thouſand ſlain, Prince Rupert and the Lord Craven taken Priſoners, and the Elector himſelf very hardly eſcaping.

State of Religion 1637.

As to the Eccleſiaſtical Matters of this Year: The Proceedings in the Spiritual Courts, not only againſt open Separatiſts and profeſs'd Puritans, but even againſt many true Members of the Church that did not come up to new Meaſures, were ſo ſtrict and ſevere, that it gave occaſion to ſtrike at the Juriſdiction of thoſe Courts, and to plead that they were held illegally, becauſe not kept by Patent under the Broad Seal, and becauſe the Proceſſes were not in the King's Name. Theſe Objections being publickly made in the Star-Chamber, an Order was there made to have the Opinion of the Judges in this Caſe; who return'd the following Certificate into the Star-Chamber, dated primo Julii 1637.

Juriſdiction of Eccleſiaſtical Courts queſtion'd

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

Opinion of the Judges.

ACcording to your Lordſhip's Order made in his Majeſty's Court of Star-Chamber the 12*th of* May laſt, we have taken Conſideration of the Particulars wherein our Opinions are required by the ſaid Order, and we have all agreed;

That Proceſſes may iſſue out of the Eccleſiaſtical Courts in the Name of Biſhops; and that a Patent under the Great Seal is not neceſſary for the keeping of the ſaid Eccleſiaſtical Courts, or for the enabling of Citations, Suſpenſions, Excommunications, or other Cenſures of the Church: and that it is not neceſſary that Summons, Citations, or other Proceſſes Eccleſiaſtical in the ſaid Courts, or Inſtitutions or Inductions to Benefices, or Correction of Eccleſiaſtical Offences by Cenſure in thoſe Courts, be in the King's Name, or with the Stile of the King, or under the King's Seal, or that their Seals of Office have in them the King's Arms: and that the Statute of primo Edwardi ſexti cap. 2. which enacted the contrary, is not now in force. 1637. 13 Car. I.

We are alſo of Opinion, That the Biſhops, Archdeacons, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, may keep their Viſitations, as uſually they have done, without Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England ſo to do.

John Bramſton,	George Crook,
John Finch,	Thomas Trevor,
Humph. Davenport,	George Vernon,
John Denham,	Francis Crawley,
Richard Hutton,	Robert Berkley,
Willam Jones,	Richard Weſton.

This Certificate was enrolled in the Courts of Exchequer, King's-Bench, and Common-Pleas; and regiſtred in the Courts of High-Commiſſion and Star-Chamber. And then the King iſſued a Proclamation dated Auguſt 18. in the 13th Year of his Reign, that " Whereas in ſome of the Libellous Books and Pam- " phlets lately publiſh'd, the moſt Reverend Fathers " in God the Lords Archbiſhops and Biſhops of this " Realm are ſaid to have uſurped upon his Maje- " ſty's Prerogative Royal, and to have proceeded in " the High-Commiſſion and other Eccleſiaſtical Courts " contrary to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm. " Therefore his Royal Majeſty hath thought fit, " with Advice of his Council, that a publick De- " claration of theſe the Opinions and Reſolutions " of his Reverend and Learned Judges, being agree- " able to the Judgment and Reſolutions of former " Times, ſhould be made known to all his Subjects, " as well to vindicate the Legal Proceedings of his " Eccleſiaſtical Courts and Miniſters from the un- " juſt and ſcandalous Imputation of invading or in- " trenching on his Royal Prerogative, as to ſettle " the Minds and ſtop the Mouths of all unquiet " Spirits, that for the future they preſume not to " cenſure his Eccleſiaſtical Courts or Miniſters in " theſe their juſt and warranted Proceedings. And " hereof his Majeſty admoniſheth all his Subjects to " take Warning, as they ſhall anſwer the contrary " at their Perils.

King's Proclamation to aſſert the Legality of holding Eccleſiaſt. Courts.

Another Popular Outcry againſt Archbiſhop Laud and the Biſhops directed by him, was Innovation in Matters of Religion; few People being willing to diſtinguiſh between arbitrary Alterations and the reſtoring an antecedent Decency and Order: which latter was undoubtedly the good Archbiſhop's Meaning. This Charge, and the Vindication from it, will beſt appear from Archbiſhop Laud's Speech at the Cenſure of Baſtwick, Burton, and Pynne; in which the Archbiſhop recites the ſeveral Inſtances of Innovation that his Adverſaries had objected to him, and anſwers them with great Strength and Candour.

Charge of Innovation.

The firſt Innovation was, that the laſt Year's Faſt was enjoined to be without Sermons in London, the Suburbs, and other infected Places, contrary to the Orders for other Faſts in former times. To which the Archbiſhop anſwered, That it was ſo concluded at the Council-Table, by reaſon that Infected Perſons, known in their own Pariſhes, might not take occaſion on thoſe by-days to run to other Churches.

" The ſecond Innovation was, That Wedneſday " was appointed for the Faſt-Day, and that this was done " with this Intention, by the Example of this Faſt with- " out Preaching, to ſuppreſs all the Wedneſday Lecturers " in London. To which it was anſwer'd, that Wed- " neſday was a uſual Day of Faſt, yet the Prelates " named not the Day, but the Lord-Keeper who had " no intention of ſuppreſſing Wedneſday Lectures; " nor was one of them yet ſuppreſt. The Third In- " novation was, That the Prayer for ſeaſonable Weather " was purged out of this laſt Faſt-Book, which was one " cauſe of Ship-wrecks and tempeſtuous Weather. An- " ſwered, when the Book was ſet out, the Weather " was very ſeaſonable. And it was not the Cuſtom " of the Church, nor fit in it ſelf, to pray for ſeaſonable

1637. 13 Car. I.

" ſonable Weather when we have it, but when we " want it.

" The Fourth Innovation was, that there was one " very uſeful Collect left out, and a Clauſe omitted in a- " nother. Anſwer, the Abp. and Biſhops under the " King had Power to put in or leave out whatever " they thought fit for the preſent Occaſion; provi- " ded nothing were done contrary to the Doctrine " or Diſcipline of the Church of England. And " there were ſpecial Reaſons at that time to omit the " ſaid Collect and Clauſe.

" The Fifth Innovation was, that in the ſixth Or- " der for the Faſt, there was a Paſſage left out concerning " the Abuſe of Faſting in relation to Merit. Anſwer, " that in this Age and Kingdom, there was little " Opinion of Meriting by Faſting, rather a con- " tempt and ſcorn upon it.

" The Sixth Innovation was, that the Lady Eliza- " beth, and her Princely Children were daſhed out of the " new Collect, whereas they were in the Collect of the for- " mer Book. Anſwer, they were left out of the Col- " lect in latter Editions of the Common-Prayer " Book, as well as in the Book for the Faſt, and " this by the King's Command.

" The Seventh Innovation was, that theſe Words " [who art the Father of thine Elect and of their " Seed] are changed in the Preface of that Collect, " which is for the Prince and the King's Children. And " that this was done by the Prelates to exclude the King's " Children out of the number of God's Elect, which was " an intolerable Impiety and horrid Treaſon. The Abp. " anſwers, that this Alteration was made in his " Predeceſſor's time, and that by his Majeſty's ſpe- " cial Direction.

" The Eighth Innovation was, That in the Epiſtle " the Sunday before Eaſter, the Prelates have put out " IN and made it AT the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhall " bow; which Alteration is directly againſt the Act of " Parliament. Anſwered, in the new Tranſlation of " King James, and even in the Geneva Bible, prin- " ted 1557. it is at the Name, &c.

" The ninth Innovation was, that two places are " changed in the Prayers ſet forth for the fifth of Novem- " ber, and ordered to be read by Act of Parliament. The " firſt place changed thus [Root out that Babyloniſh and " Antichriſtian Sect which ſay of Jerulalem, &c.] in- " to this form of Words [Root out that Babyloniſh and " Antichriſtian Sect of them which ſay, &c.] The ſe- " cond place went thus in the old [Cut off theſe wor- " kers of Iniquity, whoſe Religion is Rebellion.] But " in the Book printed 1635. 'tis thus altred, [Cut off " thoſe Workers of Iniquity, who turn Religion in- " to Rebellion.] Anſwer, the Book was never ordred " to be read by Act of Parliament; the Act only " commanded Prayers and Thankſgivings, but the " Form was left to the Church. The alteration of " both thoſe Phraſes was by the King's Warrant, " without the Archbiſhops moving for it, and there " were very good Reaſons for ſoftning thoſe Ex- " preſſions.

" The Tenth Innovation was, that the Prayer for " the Navy is left out of the late Book for the Faſt. An- " ſwer, with good Reaſon; becauſe the King had " then no declared Enemy, nor had he any Navy at " Sea.

" The Eleventh Innovation, The reading of the ſe- " cond Service at the Communion Table or the Altar. " Anſwer, it was on the ancient Cuſtom altred of " late by the Emiſſaries of the Faction; and it is " agreeable to the Rubrick of the Common-Prayer.

" A Twelfth Innovation, Bowing or doing Reve- " rence at firſt coming into the Church, or at nearer " approaches to the Holy Table; wherein People muſt wor- " ſhip the Table, or God knows what. Anſwer, it is " a decent Act of bodily Worſhip, intended to God " alone, and of antient practice.

" A Thirteenth Innovation, The placing of the Ho- " ly Table Altar-wiſe at the upper end of the Chancel, " ſetting it North and South, and placing a Rail before " it, which was done to advance and uſher in Popery. An- " ſwer, this is agreeable to the Practice and Com- " mand and Canon of the Church of England: Ha- " ving been ſo in the Royal Chapels, and divers Ca- " thedrals ever ſince the Reformation. 1637. 13 Car. I.

" The Fourteenth and laſt Innovation was ſaid to " be, that the Prelates to juſtifie their Proceedings, have " forged a new Article of Religion brought from Rome " (which gives them full power to alter the Doctrine and " Diſcipline of our Church at a blow) and have foiſted " it into the beginning of the twentieth Article; [The " Church hath Power to decree Rites and Ceremo- " nies, and Authority in matter of Faith.] a Forge- " ry fit to be examined, and deeply cenſured; for it is " not to be found in the Latin or Engliſh Articles of " Ed. VI. or Queen Elizabeth. Anſwer, a heavy " Charge, but utterly falſe: For this affirmative " Clauſe of the Churches Power is expreſly in the " printed and in the original Copy of the Articles " agreed on 1563. left out indeed in the printed " Articles of 1571. Latin and Engliſh, which could " not be done without the malitious Cunning of the " oppoſite Faction; for in the Copy to which the " Lower-Houſe of Convocation ſubſcribed in 1571. " the Clauſe is inſerted, and in moſt Editions ſince " that time. Therefore (ſaid the Archbiſhop) I do " here openly in the Star-Chamber, charge upon that " Pure Sect this foul Corruption of falſifying the " Articles of the Church of England, let them take " it off as they can.

This Account ſumms up all the ſtrength of the Popular Objections againſt the Archbiſhop and Biſhops for their Inclination and Attemps toward Superſtitious Innovations. And when we conſider how poor and frivolous they are, it is a Subject of Wonder how the Leaders of the Faction could improve Feathers and Flies into ſuch dreadful Monſters, and affright People with Shadows as effectually as with the moſt real and ſubſtantial Beings. But ſuch is the Art of Managers in an ill Cauſe, to raiſe Apparitions that terrifie more than living Bodies: And ſuch is the Infirmity of the lower part of Mankind, that they ſooner believe their Imagination than their Eyes; and to apprehend an Evil makes a deeper impreſſion than the very feeling of it. 'Tis certain Archbiſhop Laud and his Brethren meant nothing but Decency and Uniformity; but then indeed they preſſed them with more Zeal than the things deſerved, while not expreſly enjoin'd; and this contending for them with vehemence made People ſuſpect a dangerous deſign in them: ſoft and ſlower Meaſures might have done. We have ſince ſeen moſt of thoſe Externals introduc'd and quietly eſtabliſh'd into Cuſtom; becauſe they have been recommended rather than enforc'd, and Men without impoſition have been allowed to receive them. Force of Prejudice and Faction.

Nay, Archbiſhop Laud was ſo far from the deſigns of Popery, that he was at this time the great Obſtructer of it: The Bigotry of the Queen for her French Religion, and the King's entire Affection for her, had gained the Papiſts ſuch an influence at Court, that they began to be inſolent and very aſſuming; and they would have triumph'd more in their Strength and Numbers, if the good Abp. had not interpos'd; and at the very Council Table took the courage to uſe what he himſelf in his Diary calls five Speech to the King, concerning the encreaſing of the Roman Party, the freedom of Denmark Houſe, the Carriage of Mr. Walter Mountague and Sir Toby Mathew: And ſays he, the Queen was acquainted with all that I ſaid that very Night, and highly diſpleaſed, and ſo continues. Abp. Laud an utter Enemy to Popery.

It is ſaid farther by a Writer of good credit, that " the Archbiſhop preſented a Roll to the King of " all the Queen's Officers and other Courtiers, who " countenanced and promoted Popery; to which the " King profeſſed, that he had it in his Mind to have " referred the conſideration thereof to the Board " from his own obſervation, and commanded them " all to ſee it reformed. This bold Integrity of the Archbiſhop had a good effect, for on December 20. the King iſſued out a Proclamation to ſignify, how Sanderſons Reign of K. Charles P. 220.

" Find-

1637. 13 Car. I. Proclamation against Popery.

" Finding of late that ſome of his natural born Subjects have abuſed his Majeſty's Princely Goodneſs, through the Eaſe which they enjoy under his gracious and mild Government, by withdrawing ſundry of his Subjects to the Roman Superſtition, and to forſake the Church of England; and likewiſe by reſorting to Maſſes and Service celebrated according to the Rites of the Church of Rome, expreſly contrary to the Law of this Realm: for Prevention whereof for the time to come, and for Preſervation of Religion as it is eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England, which his Majeſty is reſolved conſtantly to maintain; the King therefore hath thought fit to ſet forth this Declaration of his Royal Will and Pleaſure, and doth expreſly command all Perſons, Clerks and Laicks, that they from henceforth forbear to attempt to withdraw any the King's Subjects from the Religion that is now profeſſed. And the King doth declare, That if any of the Roman Party ſhall from henceforth give Scandal by celebrating or hearing of any Maſs or Maſſes, that then his Majeſty will cauſe to be put in execution againſt ſuch contumacious Perſons, thoſe Penalties which by the Laws are inflicted.

The King heartily averſe to Popery.

This Proclamation, tho' occaſion'd by the generous Freedom of Abp. Laud, was agreeable to the Opinion and voluntary Inclinations of the King himſelf. Of whom the Lord Clarendon gives this juſt Character: " The King was always the moſt punctual Obſerver of all Decency in his Devotion, and the ſtricteſt Promoter of the Ceremonies of the Church, as believing in his Soul the Church of England to be inſtituted the neareſt to the Practice of the Apoſtles, and the beſt for the Propagation and Advancement of Chriſtian Religion, of any Church in the World. And on the other hand, No Man was more averſe from the Romiſh Church than he was, nor better underſtood the Motives of their Separation from us, and Animoſity againſt us.

Abp.'s Account of his Prov. 1637.

The remaining State of Church Affairs for this Year is beſt ſhewn in this Account of his Province given by the Abp. to the King.

May it pleaſe your moſt gracious Majeſty,

" ACcording to your Commands in your Inſtructions publiſhed for the Good of the Clergy, and my bounden Duty, I here preſent my annual Account for the Province of Canterbury for the Year laſt paſt, 1637.

" And firſt to begin with my own Dioceſe: I muſt give your Majeſty to underſtand, that at and about Aſhford in Kent, the Separatiſts continue to hold their Conventicles, notwithſtanding the Excommunication of ſo many of them as have been diſcovered. They are all of the poorer ſort, and very ſimple, ſo that I am utterly to ſeek what to do with them. Two or three of their principal Ringleaders, Brewer, Fenner, and Turner, have long been in Priſon; and it was once thought fit to proceed againſt them by the Statute for Abjuration: But I do much doubt, they are ſo ignorantly wilfull, that they will return into the Kingdom, and do a great deal more hurt, before they will again be taken. And not long ſince Brewer ſlipt out of Priſon, and went to Rocheſter and other Parts of Kent, and held Conventicles, and put a great many ſimple People, eſpecially Women, into great Diſtempers againſt the Church. He is taken again, and was called before the High Commiſſion, where he ſtood ſilent, but in ſuch a jeering ſcornful manner, as I ſcarce ever ſaw the like: So in Priſon he remains. [To which the King put this Note] Keep thoſe particular Perſons faſt until ye think what to do with the reſt.

" In the Churchyard of the ſame Town a Butcher's Slaughter-houſe opened, to the great Annoyance of that place; which I have commanded ſhould be remedied, and the Door ſhut up.

" At Biddenden I have ſuſpended Richard Warren the School-maſter, for refuſing the Oath of Allegiance and of Canonical Obedience, and to Subſcribe to the Articles. Beſides, this preciſe Man will read nothing but Divinity to his Scholars; no not ſo much as the Grammar Schools, unleſs Mars, Bacchus, Apollo, and Pol, Ædepol, may be blotted out. 1637. 12 Car. I.

" The Strangers in Canterbury do not ſo much reſort to their Pariſh-Churches as formerly they did, at my firſt giving of my Injunctions. But Viſiting this Year, I have given a publick and ſtrict Charge that the Delinquents be preſented and puniſhed if they do not their Duty in that behalf.

" There is one dwelling in Addiſham, a married Man, called by the Name of Thomas Jordan: He was formerly called Thomas Mounton, becauſe he was found in the Church-porch in Swadling-Cloaths; left there, in all likelihood, by his Mother, who was ſome Beggar or Strumpet. It is believ'd he was never Chriſtned: I have therefore given Order that he ſhall be Chriſtned, with that Caution which is preſcribed in the Book of Common Prayer where the Baptiſm is doubtful.

" About Sittinghorn there are more Recuſants than in any other part of my Dioceſe: and the Lady Roper Dowager is thought to be a great means of the increaſe of them. But I have given ſtrict Charge that they be carefully preſented according to Law.

" There is ſtill a Remainder of Schiſmaticks in Egerton, and the Pariſhes adjacent: but they are as mean People as thoſe about Aſhford; and I am as much to ſeek what to do with them.

" My Lord Treaſurer complains, that he hath little Aſſiſtance of his Archdeacons; and I believe it to be true: and ſhall therefore, if your Majeſty think fit, cauſe Letters to be written to them to awake them to their Duties. [C. R. It is moſt fit. London.

" His Lordſhip likewiſe complains of ſome inconformable Men, &c.

1638. Diſtractions in Scotland.

The Year 1638. was taken up with the Diſtractions in Scotland, which toward the end of the former Year were grown ſo formidable, that in January his Majeſty ſent the Earl of Roxborough, Lord Privy Seal, to Scotland, with certain Inſtructions to the Council, who were to meet at Dalkeith, to conſider of the diſorder'd Affairs of that Kingdom. The Council were ſo oppreſs'd with Crowds of People, and daily Inſults of them, that at Sterling, on Febr. 19. they iſſued a Proclamation for diſperſing the dangerous Tumults there aſſembled, and to aſſure the King's Subjects of his Majeſty's Sincerity toward the Religion eſtabliſhed in that Kingdom. But on the Publication of it, ſeveral of the Noblemen, Barons, Miniſters, and Burgers, ſet out a Proteſtation againſt it, and inſiſted that, 1. " They Proteſtation. " might have immediate Recourſe to their ſacred " Sovetaign, to preſent their Grievances. 2. That " the Archbiſhops and Biſhops Parties complained " upon, ſhould not be reputed or eſteemed lawful " Judges to ſit in any Judicatory upon any of the " Supplicants. 3. That no Act or Proclamation " paſs'd in Preſence of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops " ſhould be any ways prejudicial to them. 4. That " neither They nor their Adherents ſhould incur any " Danger in Life or Lands, nor any other Pains, " for not obſerving Acts, Books, Canons, &c. introduced without General Aſſemblies or Acts of " Parliament. 5. That the Inconveniences falling " out upon preſſing the Innovations, ſhould not be " imputed to them, who ſought only for Reformation. 6. That their Requeſts proceeding from " Conſcience, and a due Reſpect to his Majeſty's " Honour, called only for Redreſs of their preſſing Grievances.

After this Proteſtation, they erected a great number of Tables (as they call'd them) in Edinburgh; Tables in Edinburgh.

Four

1638. 14 Car. I. Four Principals, One of the Nobility, Another of the Gentry, a Third of the Boroughs, and a Fourth of the Miniſters; with ſubordinate Tables of the Gentry, according to their ſeveral Shires. Theſe diſtinct Tables or Committees did conſult of what they thought fit to be propounded at the General Table, which conſiſted of ſeveral Commiſſioners choſen from the four principal Tables. And in theſe Cabals they proceeded in Framing and Subſcribing of their Covenant, under this Title; The Confeſſion of Faith of the Kirk of Scotland, Subſcribed at firſt by the King's Majeſty and his Houſhold in the Year of God 1580; thereafter by Perſons of all Ranks in the Year 1581, by Ordinance of the Lords of the Secret Council, and Acts of the General Aſſembly: Subſcribed again by all ſorts of Perſons in the Year 1590, by a new Ordinance of Council, at the Deſire of the General Aſſembly: with a General Band for Maintenance of the true Religion and the King's Perſon; and now Subſcribed in the Year 1638, by us Noblemen, Barons, Gentlemen, Burgeſſes, Miniſters, and Commons, under ſubſcribing: Together with our Reſolution and Promiſes for the Cauſes after ſpecified, to maintain the ſaid true Religion and the King's Majeſty, according to the Confeſſion aforeſaid, and Acts of Parliament, the Tenure whereof here followeth.

Solemn League and Covenant.

WE All and every one of us under-written do proteſt, that after long and due Examination of our own Conſciences in matters of true and falſe Religion, we are now throughly reſolved of the Truth by the Word and Spirit of God, &c.

Miſchiefs of it.

This ſolemn League and Covenant was indeed the Band of Iniquity that confederated all the Male-contents in both Kingdoms into a Civil War. The King's Declaration calls it, The firſt Dung which from theſe Stables was thrown upon the face of Authority and Government, that lewd Covenant and ſeditious Band annexed to it. This Teſt grew ſo very Popular, that it was ſworn to by Multitudes at Edinburgh in February, and ſent away through all the Country to be Subſcribed, according to that Example. The Council, alarm'd at the Heats of the People, appointed a ſolemn Meeting on March 1. at Sterling. But when the Day came, the Lord Chancellour ſent his Excuſe, and the reſt of the Biſhops, except Brechin, declined to come. However, the Lords of the Council agreed upon Inſtructions to Sir John Hamilton, to go to the King and acquaint him with Proceedings, and to declare their Opinion, that the cauſes of the general Combuſtions in that Country, were the Fears apprehended of Innovation by occaſion of the Service-Book, Book of Canons, and High Commiſſion. And therefore his Majeſty may pleaſe to declare, that he will take Trial of his Subjects Grievances, and in the mean time not preſs or urge them therewith. Theſe Inſtructions given by the whole Council, were ſeconded by a private Letter to the King ſigned by Traquair and Roxborough, ſignifying, that the general Combuſtion was come to ſuch a height, and daily like to encreaſe more and more, that they ſaw no probability of Force or Power to repreſs the Fury, except his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed, by ſome Act of his own, to ſecure them from that which they ſeem'd ſo much to apprehend by the In-bringing of the Books of Common Prayer and Canons.

And indeed it ſeems probable, that if the King had firſt broke the Storm by that free Compliance to it, he might have made things quiet enough to have gain'd leiſure for a firmer Peace and Settlement. But the Denial of one Requeſt, made them improve into continual new Wants and Deſires; till the Granting at laſt of what was at firſt Refus'd, was thought to be their own Victory, not the King's Conceſſion; and therefore did but ſtuſh them into more and more Demands of Satisfaction. It ſeems a ſtanding Policy for Princes to gratifie the firſt Petitions for Redreſs of any Grievance, or upon Denial once made to juſtifie that Denial; for, when Subjects find they can extort Favours, they know not when to deſiſt from extorting of them.

1638. 14 Car. I.

Upon Sir John Hamilton's coming to Whitehall, and communicating his buſineſs, his Majeſty conſulted with a ſelect Council, and reſolved to ſend Marquis Hamilton as High Commiſſioner to Scotland, for the Service of quieting the Fury of the People. On May 7. Letters were ſent into Scotland, to give notice of taking theſe Meaſures; and on May 16. the Marquis received his Inſtructions, and his Commiſſion on May 20. and began his Journey May 26. Coming to Berwick June 3. the Earl of Roxborough met him, and told him the People would not be pacified without the Covenant allowed to them, Articles of Perth annulled, Service-book and Canons aboliſhed, and Epiſcopacy limited, all to be done in a General Aſſembly and Parliament to be ſuddenly called. The Marquis could not think it honourable to come ſo ſoon to any Terms; ſo with very ſmall Attendance he came firſt to Dalkeith, and thence, upon Supplication of the Citizens of Edinburgh, to the King's Palace at Holly-Rood-Houſe, where he offer'd to the Covenanters theſe two Propoſitions: 1. What they ſhould expect to hear in the King's Name for accommodating their Grievances? 2. What might be expected from them for returning to their former Obedience, eſpecially in renouncing and delivering up their late Covenant? To which they would give no other Anſwer, but that the only method of Satisfaction muſt be a General Aſſembly and Parliament. And thereupon they put themſelves into ſuch a poſture of Defence, that the High Commiſſioner, to avoid Impriſonment in his Palace, was glad to retire to Dalkeith, and to ſend to the King for new Inſtructions. Upon which Terrors, his Majeſty order'd him to publiſh his Royal Declaration, that He would neither now nor hereafter preſs the Practice of the Service-book, or Canons, or any thing of that nature, but in ſuch a fair and legal way as ſhould ſatisfie all his loving Subjects. And for the High Commiſſion, he would ſo rectifie it, that it ſhould never impugn the Laws, nor be any Grievance. Theſe Promiſes could give no Satisfaction; but on June 28. they anſwered them with a very bold Proteſtation, that they expected a more gracious and ſatisfactory Anſwer, and would in the mean time adhere to their Confeſſion of Faith and ſolemn Covenant. The Marquis finding little hopes of Accommodation, propoſed to go into England, and fetch more immediate Inſtructions from the King. He began his Journey on July 6. and coming directly to Court, he gave a full Account of the Condition of that Kingdom, and of the Strength and Rage of the Covenanters, and of the Fears and Inconſtancy of many of the ſecret Council: And therefore, under theſe Difficulties, he adviſed the King to renew the Confeſſion of Faith ratified in Parliament 1567, and to enlarge his Inſtructions for the indicting a free General Aſſembly, and for diſcharging the Uſe of the Service-book, Book of Canons, and the Practice of the High Commiſſion. With theſe Powers, and with Letters and Declarations of the King, the Marquis comes back to Edinburgh on Aug. 10. where he found things in a much worſe poſture than he had left them: for, the Covenanters had come to publick Reſolutions, "That "they would have a General Aſſembly, that the "Biſhops ſhould have no Vote in it, that Epiſco-"pacy ſhould be aboliſhed, the Articles of Perth "condemned, and all Perſons, under pain of Ex-"communication, ſhould take the Covenant. The Marquis endeavoured to convince them, that the Royal Anſwer which he had brought was full of Grace and Goodneſs; and to aſſure them, that immediately upon their Return to Obedience, he would indict an Aſſembly and Parliament. He found them ſo refractory, and ſo preſſing upon him, that on Auguſt 20. he deſired twenty Days time to go again to Court, and bring a fuller Anſwer from his Majeſty: and on Auguſt 25. went toward London, carrying with him Articles of Advice offer'd to the King

Marquis of Hamilton ſent High Commiſſioner into Scotland.

1638. 14 Car. I. Prevails with the King for greater Conceſſions.

King by three Lords on whoſe Fidelity he moſt depended, Traquair, Roxborough, and Southesk, who propoſed to diſcharge the Service-book, Canons, and High-Commiſſion; to forbear preſſing the five Articles of Perth, to revive the Confeſſion of Faith with a Covenant as ſign'd by King James, and ſo upon the Word of a King to pardon what was paſt. The Marquis at Court urged the King to the like Compliance, and obtained new Inſtructions dated Septemb. 9. to impower him to do all that was ſo adviſed.

The Scots never to be ſatisfied.

On Sept. 17. the Marquis came back to Hally-Rood-Houſe; and being attended by the Heads of the Covenanters on Sept. 21. he told them the King had granted them all that they deſired, and more alſo, a free Aſſembly and Parliament, which ſhould be immediately indicted. Upon this gracious Condeſcenſion, they could not but ſeem to be ſatisfied, and yet reſolved to quarrel on; therefore they preſſed the Marquis to deſiſt from renewing the Confeſſion of Faith, pretending this would diſſatisfie a great many of their Party. But the Marquis calling a Council, found it carried by Vote, that the Confeſſion of Faith ſhould be preſently ſigned, the Proclamation of Grace publiſhed, and a General Aſſembly to meet at Glaſcow 21. Nov. and a Parliament at Edinburgh 15. May following. The Epiſcopal Party foreſaw they ſhould be run down in the General Aſſembly, and therefore preſſed the Marquis to prorogue it, who referred the Matter to his Majeſty: the King ſaid his Reputation was concern'd in keeping the Day, and he would by no means alter it. The Covenanters being thus aſſured of their time, boldly moved the High Commiſſioner for a Warrant to cite the Biſhops to appear before the Aſſembly. The Marquis declining this, they addreſs'd themſelves to the Presbytery of Edinburgh, who gave Warrant for a Summons ſtuff'd with the moſt abominable Scandals, citing the Biſhops as guilty of Hereſie, Simony, Perjury, Inceſt, Adultery, Fornication, Breach of Sabbath, &c.

The King's Advocate would not defend Epiſcopacy.

The Marquis went toward Glaſcow on Nov. 16. and required the King's Advocate to prepare himſelf there to defend Epiſcopacy to be according to the Laws of Scotland: but his Anſwer was, that it went againſt his Conſcience ſo to do; and therefore he was prevail'd with not to go. So potent was the Faction, that the King's neareſt Miniſters and Officers were drawn into it.

General Aſſembly meets.

The General Aſſembly began on the Day appointed Novemb. 21. where the Marquis ſitting as King's Commiſſioner on a raiſed Seat with his Aſſeſſors about him, order'd his Commiſſion to be read dated at Oatland July 29. and the King's Letter to the Aſſembly, dated at Whitehall Oct. 29. and then made a Speech to wipe off the Aſperſions caſt upon the King, and to give Aſſurances of their Religion and Liberties: and then tender'd the Paper containing his Majeſty's gracious Conceſſions to them. Then Mr. Alexander Henderſon was choſen Moderator, and Mr. Archibald Johnſon Clerk Regiſter. The Biſhops cited to the Aſſembly put in their Declinator, which was read Nov. 27. the Marquis in a Speech recommending the Neceſſity of it, and the Strength of the Reaſons contained in it. But the Moderator, in return, deplored the Hardneſs of the Biſhops hearts; and one of the Clerks of the Seſſion thunder'd out a verbal Proteſtation, that they would purſue their Libel againſt the Biſhops as long as they had Lives and Fortunes. The Marquis ſeeing their inſolent Demeanour, declares to the Lords of the Council Nov. 28. his Reſolution to diſſolve the Aſſembly: and accordingly the ſame day he went to the Church where they ſat, and after a long Speech againſt the Illegality and Nullity of their Proceedings, he concluded with diſſolving the Aſſembly in his Majeſty's Name, and diſcharging their farther Proceedings under pain of Treaſon. The Moderator and the Earl of Rothes made Anſwer, that they were ſorry he left them, but their Conſciences bore them witneſs they had hitherto done nothing amiſs, and therefore would not deſert the Work of the Lord. Accordingly they formed A Proteſtation of the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, made in the high Kirk and at the Market Croſs of Glaſcow Nov. 29. 1638. wherein they declared for a freedom of uninterrupted Sitting, and for his Majeſty to contramand, was to prejudge the Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Liberties of the Kirk. So they continued ſitting, and went impetuouſly on, to declare ſix former General Aſſemblies to be null and void; to condemn all Arminian Tenets, without defining what they were; to deprive the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, and the Biſhops of Galloway and Brechin, &c. to aboliſh Epiſcopal Government, as inconſiſtent with the Law and Church of the Kingdom of Scotland; and many other extravagant and vile things. The King publiſhed a Declaration againſt their illegal Proceedings, dated Decemb. 8. to which the Aſſembly made a long Proteſtation Decemb. 18. and ſet up now for a Sovereign Independent Power.

1638. 14 Car. I.

No hopes in reducing the Scots but by Force of Arms.

Hamilton, the King's Commiſſioner, ſeeing no hopes in Clemency and Reaſon, had ſent Advice to his Majeſty, that there could be no way to reduce that Country to Obedience, but by ſending a Fleet of Ships to lie in the Frith, and block up their Trade, and then to follow with a Royal Army. Theſe Meaſures were approv'd in Council, and Reſolutions taken that the King ſhould go in Perſon, and the Nobility attend him at York by the firſt day of April next enſuing.

Cauſes of the Scotch Rebellion.

If we now ſtand to look back on the Cauſes of this Scotch Rebellion, it might be enough to aſcribe it to the implacable Spirit of Presbytery: This alone was the Beginning of Troubles, but the Progreſs and Succeſs of them found a great many other Springs and Wheels: The importunate Zeal of many of the Scotch Biſhops in ſeverely executing all Orders receiv'd from the Engliſh Court, and obſequiouſly ſubmitting to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury as if he had been their own Metropolitan; which raiſed the Jealouſie and Indignation of a great part of the Clergy and Laity of that Kingdom. Then the Civil Grievances of Poverty, and Decay of Trade, and ſome late Advances in the Exerciſe of Regal Power, made the Nobility and Gentry ſomewhat cooler and more indifferent for the King and his Miniſters; chuſing as it were to ſtand by and connive at the Covenant and Aſſembly, hoping it would bring on the opportunities of regaining what they thought their former Liberties. Next, the Popiſh Emiſſaries had certainly a buſie hand in this Work of Rebellion: They found the King and Abp. of Canterbury as much their Adverſaries, as the oppoſite Faction charg'd them to be their Friends; they had no Hopes but in troubled Waters, and ſome new Revolution. And then in England there were many Perſons griev'd and diſcontented, ſome Miniſters depriv'd or otherwiſe cenſur'd; many of the common People ſtrictly proſecuted; a few of the Gentry Fined and Impriſoned: and in ſhort, all manner of Perſons diſoblig'd by the Court or the Church, took Pleaſure in the remote Proſpects of Revenge, and blew up thoſe Coals they ſaw kindling in the North. And finally, One great Advantage to the growing Faction was the Irreſolution and Indifference, not to ſay Treachery, of the King's Council and Miniſtry in Scotland: Traquair the Lord Treaſurer, and for a long time the prime Miniſter, was not a right Friend to the Biſhops; and even Hamilton himſelf was thought by the Covenanters to be the Son of a Gude Mother.

High Commiſſioner diſſolves the Gen. Aſſembly.

But they will not be Diſſolved.

Queen-Mother comes over to England.

But to return to the Engliſh Affairs of this Year, we find little elſe remarkable; in October, Mary de Medices the Queen Mother of France, by Invitation of the Queen her Daughter, came over into England for Pleaſure and Protection. The Archbiſhop enter'd it thus in his Diary: Oct. 19. News was brought to us as we ſat in the Star-Chamber, that the Queen-Mother of France was landed at Harwich: many and great Apprehenſions upon this Buſineſs. For indeed the 1638. 14 Car. I. Engliſh People hated her, or ſuſpected her for her own, for her Churches, for her Country's, for her Daughter's ſake; and having ſhifted her Reſidence in other Courts, upon Calamities and Troubles which ſtill purſued her, they thought it her Fate to carry along Misfortunes with her, and ſo dreaded her as an ill-aboding Meteor, wherever ſhe appeared.

Prince Elector. The Prince Elector, after his defeat in Weſtphalia, was adviſed by the Prince of Orange, to apply himſelf again to his Unkle the the King of England, to put him in a condition of purſuing the means of his Reſtauration: The King told him the difficulty of his own Affairs in Scotland would not at preſent allow him to furniſh him with any Supplies; and therefore all he could now do was to recommend him to the French Ambaſſador, who undertook to make an Intereſt for him with his Maſter and with Cardinal Richlieu. While this was in agitation, the Prince in November paſſed thro' France in diſguiſe, for a nearer Paſſage to the Swediſh Army; but in Lions he was diſcovered and arreſted, and kept long a Priſoner of State, till his hopes for this Year were entirely defeated.

Death of the Lord Keeper Coventry. There was ſome Alteration at Court by the Loſs of the Lord Coventry Lord-Keeper, who died at Durham-Houſe in the Strand, 14 Jan. 163⅝. This Thomas Coventry, bred in the Inner-Temple, gained a Reputation in the Law to be Recorder of London, and in 14 Jac. to be the King's Sollicitor; and being then Knighted, he was in the Year following made Attorney General. And in 1 Car. Novemb. 1. was advanced to the Office of the Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and 4 Car. Apr. 10. was made a Baron of the Realm, by the Title of Lord Coventry of Ailesborough Com. Wigorn. Hear his Character from the Lord Clarendon. His Character. " He enjoyed his Place with a " univerſal Reputation (and ſure Juſtice was never " better adminiſter'd) for the ſpace of about ſixteen " Years. He knew the Temper, Diſpoſition and " Genius of the Kingdom moſt exactly; ſaw their " Spirits grow every Day more Sturdy, Inquiſitive " and Impatient: and therefore naturally abhorred " all Innovations, which he foreſaw would produce " ruinous Effects: Yet many who ſtood at a di- " ſtance, thought that he was not active and ſtout " enough in oppoſing thoſe Innovations. —— Sel- " dom known to ſpeak in matters of State, —— " though in his Nature he had not only a firm Gra- " vity, but a Severity and even ſome Moroſity; yet it " was ſo happily temper'd, and his Courteſie and " Affability towards all Men ſo tranſcendent, and " ſo much without affectation that it marvellouſly " recommended him to all Men of all Degrees; and " he was look'd upon as an excellent Courtier, " without receding from the native Simplicity of his " own Manners. He had, in the plain way of " ſpeaking and delivery, without much ornament " of Elocution, a ſtrange power of making himſelf " believed, the only juſtifiable Deſign of Elo- " quence. —— He held Diſſimulation to be the " worſt of Lying. —— But then this happy Tem- " per, and theſe good Faculties, rather preſerved him " from having many Enemies, and ſupplied him with " ſome Well-wiſhers, than furniſhed him with any " faſt and unſhaken Friends; who are always pro- " cured in Courts by more Ardour and more vehe- " ment Profeſſions and Applications than he would " ſuffer himſelf to be entangled with. —— He re- " tired within himſelf as much as he could, and " ſtood upon his Defence, without making deſpe- " rate Sallies againſt growing Miſchiefs, which he " knew well he had no power to hinder, and which " might probably end in his own Ruins. To con- " clude, his Security conſiſted very much in having " but little Credit with the King; and he died in a " ſeaſon moſt opportune, in which a Wiſe Man " would have pray'd to have finiſh'd his Courſe, and " which, in truth, crowned his other ſignal Proſpe- " rity in the World.

The Church Affairs of this Year were the leſs conſiderable, becauſe the impending Storms in Scotland made the Archbiſhop and Biſhops more tender and reſerved in their Proceedings here at home; wiſely reſolving not to irritate the Faction here while it was there ſo turbulent and ſtrong. The Archbiſhop to open the Eyes of thoſe who look'd on him as a Papiſt, and to juſtifie the King from the like Slanders, did now enlarge and reprint his Conference with Fiſher the Jeſuite, and preſented it to the King, Feb. 10. He interpoſed in the Scotch Tumults as far as poſſible to ſuppreſs them, and kept a conſtant Correſpondence with the Marquis of Hamilton; and when he ſaw things muſt come to a Rupture, he was forward in procuring an Order of Council, directed to the two Archbiſhops Jan. 29. by which they were required to Write their ſeveral Letters to the Lords Biſhops in their reſpective Provinces, forthwith to convene before them all the Clergy of Ability in their Dioceſſes, and to incite them by ſuch Ways and Means as ſhould be thought beſt by their Lordſhips, to aid and aſſiſt his Majeſty with their ſpeedy and liberal Contributions and otherwiſe, for defence of his Royal Perſon and Kingdom. And in purſuance of theſe Directions the Archbiſhop of Canterbury wrote to his ſeveral Suffragans, to preſs them, that in Caſe of ſo great Danger, both to the State and Church of England, they and their Clergy would contribute toward the raiſing of ſuch an Army, as by God's Bleſſing and his Majeſty's Care might ſecure this Church and Kingdom from all intended Violence; and hopes every Man will give at the leaſt after the Proportion of 3 s. 10 d. in the Pound, of the valuation of his Preferment in the King's Book.

1638. 14 Car. I. State of Religion 1638. Wiſdom of Abp. Laud.

The Money raiſed by the Clergy on this occaſion came to a very great Sum. The Dioceſe of Norwich where the Clergy have the meaneſt Proviſion, raiſed above two thouſand Pounds. And yet as every thing gives Offence to angry People, ſo this Method had Objections made to it: Some pretended it an arbitrary Impoſition on the Clergy, tho' it was only by way of free Benevolence; others ſaid it was a Price paid by the Church-Men for Perſecution and the Blood of the Brethren; and ſome graver Folks ſeeing the Zeal of the Clergy to promote the Expedition into Scotland, began to think it a Religious War.

Abp's Account of his Province 1638.

In the Archbiſhop's Account of his Province to the King for the Year 1638. we'll take out this ſtate of his own Dioceſe of Canterbury.

May it pleaſe your moſt ſacred Majeſty,

" TO begin with my ſelf and my own Dioceſe, " I have been careful to obey all your Maje- " ſty's particular Inſtructions, both for the reſiding " upon my Houſes and preſerving of my Woods, &c.

" There was one Bedle a Miniſter of Eſſex came in- " to this Dioceſe, and at Harbledown near Canterbury, " (the Curate there being dead) preached very diſ- " orderly three Hours together at a time, and got " himſelf many ignorant Followers. But ſo ſoon as " ever he was enquired after by my Officers, he fled " the Country; and I purpoſe, God willing, to " ſpeak with the Chancellour of London concerning " him.

" I do not find that there are either any increaſe or " decreaſe of Papiſts or Puritans in the Dioceſe: But " the Separatiſts about Aſhford are very buſie, miſera- " bly poor, and out of that bold againſt all Church- " cenſure; ſo that without ſome temporal Aſſiſtance " from the Judges, we know not what to do; and " this I have often and humbly repreſented: Yet " two notorious Separatiſts being called in queſtion " are fled the Country, and one of them broke Pri- " ſon. —— [C. R. Demand their (i.e. the Judges) " help, and if they refuſe, I ſhall make them aſſiſt " you.]

" At Tenterden ſome Poeple are ſomewhat refra- " ctory; but the Archdeacon aſſures me, he hath " great hope to reduce them; which I ſhall be glad

" of.

1638. 14 Car. I. of. The Strangers at Canterbury do reaſonably well obey my Injunctions for coming to our Churches; and I ſhall give them all Encouragement, holding it fitting to keep a moderate hand with them.

1639. 15 Car. I. To ſuppreſs the Scotch Rebellion, in the beginning of this Spring the King had got together an Army of near ſix thouſand Horſe, and about that Number of Foot, well diſciplin'd, under experienc'd Officers. The Earl of Arundel was made General, the Earl of Eſſex Lieutenant-General, and the Earl of Holland General of the Horſe. On March the 27th, his Coronation-day, the King began his Journey Northward, and in three Days came to York, with a glorious Attendance of Nobility and Gentry, ſummon'd in to ſerve the King. It look'd more like the Pomp and Parade of an Eaſtern Prince, than the Expedition of an Engliſh Monarch. The Lord Clarendon obſerves, "If there had been none in the March but Soldiers, "it is moſt probable that a noble Peace would "have quickly enſued, even without Fighting; but "the Progreſs was more illuſtrious than the March, "and the Soldiers were the leaſt part of the Army. The Earl of Eſſex had been ſent before with a Party of Horſe and Foot to poſſeſs himſelf of Berwick, which he enter'd without Oppoſition: and had he march'd on to Edinburgh, followed and ſupported by the Remainder of the Engliſh Army, the War had been ſoon ended; for the Scots had not three thouſand Men together, and as yet wanted Arms and Unity. "But it was the fatal Misfortune of the "King, which proceeded from the Excellency of "his Nature, and his Tenderneſs of Blood, that "he deferr'd ſo long his Reſolution of uſing his "Arms; and after he had taken that Reſolution, "that it was not proſecuted with more Vigour. And yet ſuch was the Advice of the Lord Deputy of Ireland, who by Letters to the King dated at Dublin April 1. 1639. acquainted his Majeſty, that he had Shipp'd off five hundred Iriſh to be put into Carliſle; and concludes, As to my poor Judgment, your Majeſty hath no more to do this Summer, but to ſecure Berwick and Carliſle by ſtrong Gariſons, to exerciſe your Army in the knowledge of their Arms, prevent their Incurſion into your Kingdom of England, and by all means to avoid fighting this Year.

Royal Army to march into Scotland.

Fury of the Covenanters.

The Covenanters, tho' not daring to approach the Borders, had ſhewn their Power and Will at a ſafer diſtance: They forced the Earl of Traquair to ſurrender Dalkeith to them, and carried thence the Regalia in triumph to Edinborough, and ſoon after ſeized the Caſtle of Dunbarton, a place of great ſtrength, and much greater Importance, becauſe deſigned for the landing of the Iriſh Forces as Occaſions ſhould call for 'em: And then the King's Forces near Aberdeen were beaten and diſperſed by Monroe, and Aberdeen taken, with great ſtore of Arms, Ammunition, and Treaſure, ſent thither for the King's Uſe and Service.

A Proteſtation of not correſponding with them,

While the King was at York there was ſuch a Conflux of People, and ſuch a multitude of Scots among them, that it gave matter of Offence and Jealouſie to the King's Council; who thereupon reſolv'd, That a ſhort Proteſtation ſhould be drawn, in which all Men ſhould profeſs their Loyalty and Obedience to his Majeſty, and diſclaim and renounce the having any Intelligence, or holding any Correſpondence with the Rebels. The Scots who were moſt ſuſpected took the Proteſtation without ſcruple: but when it came to the Engliſh Nobility, the Lords Say and Brook poſitively refus'd it in the King's own Preſence; for which they were at firſt a while reſtrain'd, and then diſmiſs'd and ſent home. This Perverſneſs and open Affront to the King ſo mildly paſs'd by, gave Advantage to the King's Enemies in his own Court; who perhaps did him more miſchief than thoſe in the Field. "Indeed (ſays the Lord Clarendon) if the King himſelf had ſtay'd at London, or which had been the next beſt, kept his Court and reſided at York, and "ſent the Army on their proper Errand, and left "the matter of the War wholly to them, in all humane Reaſon his Enemies had been ſpeedily ſubdued, and that Kingdom reduced to their Obedience.

Refuſed by ſome Engliſh Lords.

1639. 15 Car. I.

While the King reſided here at York, the Scots, in craft, ſent Letters and Petitions to his Majeſty, pretending, "Their Loyal Hearts had ill Fortune, and "that they deſired nothing but to be admitted into "the Preſence of their gracious Soveraign, to lay "their Grievances at his Royal Feet, and leave the "Determination of them entirely to his own Wiſdom and Pleaſure. By which they gain'd their Ends of Time and Popularity, and even Pity from their Enemies. But all the while their Preparations were ſo encreaſing, that the King thought it neceſſary to march toward the Borders of Scotland, by New-Caſtle, to Berwick, where the General had the Army drawn up in Battalia, and the King march'd at the Head of them, till near the Tweed, two Miles Weſt from Berwick, in an open Field called the Berks, the King encamp'd, and lodg'd in his Tent with the Army.

The King marches to the Borders.

May 30. the King had Intelligence that General Leſley, with about 6000 of the Scotch Army, was Quarter'd at Dunce, a Town about ſeven miles diſtant from the Engliſh Camp: Next day the Earl of Holland march'd thither with a Body of 3000 Horſe and 2000 Foot; and coming thither, he found the Scots drawn up on the ſide of a Hill, where the Front could be only in view, with great Herds of Cattel at a diſtance upon the Hills on either ſide; a Stratagem of Leſley, to make the Appearance of a formidable Body, when there were not above 3000 Men, and they very ill arm'd, moſt Country Fellows brought thus together for a Shew. The Earl of Holland, who by ill Accidents had his Foot and Artillery three or four miles behind, was ſo frighted with the Apparition of the Scotch Army, that he ſent Orders to his Foot not to advance, and made his Retreat toward them, and ſo moſt ingloriouſly came back to the King's Camp; with another Misfortune of having quarrel'd in the March with the Earl of New-Caſtle, which afterward produc'd a Challenge.

Policy of Leſley.

This mock Attempt was ſeconded by another of no better Conduct or Succeſs: for on Sunday June 2. Information was brought that the Scots were in their Quarters at Kelſey, about ſix miles diſtance, being not above 1500 Men: whereupon it was reſolved in a Council of War to ſend a Detachment toward 'em. So the next day June 3. the Earl of Holland, with a Body of 2000 Horſe and 2000 Foot marched again over the Tweed toward Kelſey, and came with his Horſe within ſight of the Enemy, while the Foot were ſtill three miles behind. The Scots ſent a Trumpeter, and immediately drew up their Forces to ſo much Advantage and Surprize, that the Engliſh General again retreated to his Foot, and ſo quietly return'd once more to the Camp. Theſe two Sallies of Bravery, as if only to ſhew and then to diſappear, gave a great Diſcouragement to the King's Army, by keeping them from the Glory and the Reward of Action; and made the Scots more daring, when they ſaw it was likely to be no worſe than the Jeſt of a War.

Earl of Holland inglorious

Upon this Apprehenſion of their own Safety, the Covenanters from Edinburgh wrote three diſſembling Letters to the three Generals, the Earl of Arundel, the Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Holland; all to deſire their Interceſſion with the King for Peace and Protection to them; and all ſo adapted to the Humours of thoſe great Men, that at laſt the Earls of Arundel and Holland began to incline and adviſe to Accommodation.

Diſſembling the Scots.

The Expedition at Sea, under the Marqueſs of Hamilton, came to the like no Effect: The Fleet entred the Frith on May 1. and caſt Anchor in Leith-Road, where the Marquis landed ſome Forces only to grow Sick and to ſo be ſhipp'd again. He ſpent his time in a fruitleſs Correſpondence with the Earl of Rothes, one of the chief Malecontents, and in frequent quent Viſits from his Mother, a very zealous Woman for the Covenant and Kirk, and from his Brother-in-Law the Ld Lindſey; who told him they would ſooner lay down their Lives than recede from the demand of their juſt Rights and Liberties, for the defence whereof they had an Army of 25000 Men. This moved the Marquis to poſſeſs the King of the Dangers of farther Hoſtility: So that indeed all things conſpired to loſe the Opportunity of Honour and Succeſs in this Royal Expedition. The Generals and Admiral were indifferent, and rather complaiſant in the Matter; the common Soldiers and Sea-men were ſick and weary of the Mock-ſhow; the Courtiers and Council of the King thought it wiſer not to carry things to extremity, while there could be any hopes of Submiſſion. And in my Ld Clarendon's Opinion, It was ſuſpected and believed, by thoſe who ſtood neareſt, that his Majeſty himſelf had in truth never any purpoſe to make the War in Blood; but believed that by ſhewing an Army to them, which was able to force them to any Conditions, they would have begged Pardon for the Conteſt they had made, and ſo he ſhould have ſettled the Church, and all things elſe according to his Pleaſure: And ſure he might have done ſo if he had but ſtate Skill, and been conſtant to his own Intereſt, and poſitive in denying their inſolent Demands.

Fleet not ſucceſsful.

A Mock War.

Treaty and Pacification.

This diſpoſition in the King and his Miniſters encouraged the Scots to ſome Petitions and Addreſſes; which meeting with civil and ſoft Anſwers, a Treaty was agreed on June 8. and Articles of Pacification ſign'd June 18. with a Declaration of the King for Pardon and Peace, upon disbanding the Scotch Forces, and delivering up his Majeſty's Forts and Ammunition. The King's Army was preſently disbanded, and the Scots returned to Edenburgh with all they deſired; having gotten many more Friends in England than they had before, kept all their Officers and as many of their Men as they thought fit in pay; and proſecuted all thoſe who had not ſhewed the ſame Zeal in their Covenant, and enter'd a publick Proteſtation againſt the Biſhops, &c. So that by the time the King came to London, it appeared plainly that the Army was disbanded without any Peace made, and the Scots in equal Inclination, and in more Reputation, to affront his Majeſty than ever. —— The Miſchief that befel the King from this wonderful Atonement cannot be expreſſed, nor was it ever diſcourſed what prevailed over his Majeſty to bring it ſo wofully to paſs: All Men were aſhamed who had contributed to it.

Earl of Traquair made High Commiſſioner.

An Aſſembly and Parliament were to meet in Scotland before the end of Auguſt, and the Marquis of Hamilton was again deſign'd to be his Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner, but he earneſtly excuſed himſelf; upon which the King was forced to employ the Earl of Traquair, and ſigned his Inſtructions at Berwick on July 27. and taking Poſt the next Day came to London Auguſt 1.

Earl of Eſſex diſgrac'd.

The Factions and Animoſities at Court were now greater than ever. The Earl of Eſſex, who had merited very well throughout the whole Affair, and had never made a falſe ſtep in Action or Council, was diſcharged in the Croud without ordinary Ceremony, and was ſoon after denied the command of the Foreſt of Needwood, which lay at his very Door, and would have been ſo agreeable, that the Denial made the deeper impreſſion. The Earl of Newcaſtle Governour to the Prince, who at his own charge had brought in a brave Troop of Horſe againſt the Scots, had been ſo affronted in the Order of March by the Earl of Holland, that he ſent him now a Challenge; and the King upon notice was forced to interpoſe his Authority, not to the ſatisfaction of either Party. The Marquis of Hamilton was more and more afraid of his Country-men, and enter'd upon dark Deſigns that made him ſuſpected on all ſides. The Lieutenant of Ireland, newly made Earl of Strafford, oppoſed the Queen in ſome of her Court Intrigues, and offended her ſo much, that ſhe declared a moſt unſeaſonable Diſpleaſure againſt him. Sir Henry Vane (of whom the Lord Deputy had a contempt and deteſtation) was grown to be the Queen's creature, and by her ſole Intereſt was now made Secretary of State, in the room of Sir John Cook, who for a Sacrifice to the Murmurs of the Court for the late impolitick Treaty, was put out of his Office on a pretence, that he had omitted the writing of what he ought to have done, and inſerted ſomewhat he ought not to have done. He was now near fourſcore Years of Age, and One for whom no Body cared, rather unadorned with any parts of Vigour and Quickneſs, and undowed with any notable Virtues, than notorious for any weakneſs or defect of Underſtanding, or tranſported with any vitious Inclinations, Appetite to Money only excepted. His Cardinal Perfection was Induſtry, and his moſt eminent Infirmity Covetouſneſs. His long Experience had informed him well of the State and Affairs of England; but of Foreign Tranſactions, or the common Intereſt of Chriſtian Princes, he was entirely undiſcerning and ignorant.

Scotch Aſſembly and Parliament.

In Auguſt the Aſſembly and Parliament met at Edenburgh, and were both ſo aſſuming that the Earl of Traquair not able to keep to his Inſtructions, prorogued the Parliament to November 14. But the Covenanters proteſted againſt the legality of Prorogation without conſent of Parliament, and ſent away the Earl of Dunfermling and the Lord Loudon as their Deputies to the King at Whitehall, who refuſed them Audience, and in diſdain commanded them home, becauſe they came without Warrant from his Commiſſioner. After this, they ſent another Petition to his Majeſty by one Cunningham, deſiring permiſſion to ſend ſome of their Number for their own Vindication; which his Majeſty granting, the Lords Loudon and Dunfermling were again ſent up; who behaved themſelves like the Miniſters of a Foreign State, had their Audience with a ſolemn Speech, put in their Articles of Requeſt, and when referred for an Anſwer to a Committee of Council, they refuſed to go, alledging that they had Order and Inſtruction to treat with none but his Majeſty himſelf. They carried it the more high upon the continual Encouragements they received from their Brethren in Scotland, who upon the Honour of making War and Peace with their King, were grown more conſiderable at Home and Abroad. At Home, where the People were ſo fluſh'd with the hopes of what was to be done for them, that their Lives and Fortunes were now at their Leaders Service; and the Tide ſo ſtrong that moſt of the King's Privy-Council and great Miniſters fell into the Faction, and among others the Earl of Argile, who had the greateſt Obligations imaginable to the King, and yet on the ſuddain became his greateſt Enemy. Abroad where they enter'd correſpondence with Holland, and obtained Credit for Arms and Ammunition; and were raiſing Men in Germany and Sweden, and had eſpecial countenance in France, from whence Cardinal Richlieu ſent an Agent privately to Edinburgh, to foment their Rebellion, as the moſt effectual curb to Engliſh Monarchy: And received another Agent from them, who ſollicited Supplies and communicated Counſels, and eſtabliſhed a Correſpondence with the French King himſelf: For a Letter was intercepted endorſed Au Roy, ſubſcribed by the Lords Rothes, Montroſe, Montgomery, Leſly, Mare, Loudon, Forreſter, wrote in French, to ſignify their addreſſing to his Majeſty as the Refuge and Sanctuary of afflicted Princes and States, moſt humbly beſeeching him to give Faith and Credit to Mr. Colvil, whom they had ſent to repreſent the Candour and Ingenuity of their Proceedings, and to aſſure themſelves of an Aſſiſtance equal to his wonted Clemency. This intercepted Letter was brought to the Council at Whitehall, while one of the Subſcribers, Loudon, was here negotiating the Cauſe of his Brethren; who being examined upon it, refuſed to give any other Anſwer than, That it was writ before the Agreement, and thereupon reſerved and never ſent, that if he had committed any Offence, he ought to be queſtioned for it in Scotland and not in England; and inſiſting upon his ſafe Conduct demanded his Liberty to return. But this Treaſon and inſolent excuſe of it raiſed raiſed ſuch a juſt abhorrence in the King's Council, that the Ld London and Colvil (who was then apprehended in London) were both committed to the Tower; and had they been brought to a ſpeedy Trial, it might have ſtruck Terror into the Scots, and made their Rebellion more abominable to all the World.

Scots inſolent at Home and Abroad.

Engliſh Parliament called.

But the King was mild and delatory, and hoped a ſlow and ſure Expedient would be to call an Engliſh Parliament, which had been now intermitted near twelve Years. So in December the King directed the Lord-Keeper to iſſue out Writs for the meeting of a Parliament on the third of April next enſuing; not doubting but his Parliament would expreſs a very ſharp ſenſe of the Scots Inſolence, and provide Remedies for Peace and Subjection. To prepare them the better, within a Month of the Seſſion, the King publiſhed a large Declaration concerning his Proceedings with his Subjects in Scotland, ſince the Pacification in the Camp near Berwick.

King's Declaration.

Affairs in Ireland.

Such was the Reſult of this Year in relation to Scotland: As to Ireland, there was an unhappy Quarrel between Wentworth Lord-Deputy and Loftus Lord Chancellour, which produc'd a Complaint and a Hearing at the Council-Board Nov. 26. 1639. where his Majeſty and Council juſtified the Conduct of the Ld. Deputy, and cenſur'd the Lord Loftus as unfit to hold the Office of Lord-Chancellour of that Kingdom. The Lord-Deputy was then himſelf in the Engliſh Court, and appeared in greater Favour with the King, who took him into his moſt ſecret Counſels, and gave him extraordinary marks of Favour, creating him Earl of Strafford, Lord-Lieutenant of the Kingdom of Ireland, and Knight of the Garter. He was a Man of extraordinary Abilities, and of moſt faithful Affection to the King: He ſaw now the neceſſity of reducing the Scots by Force of Arms, and did all that was poſſible to promote another Expedition againſt them. In the Subſcription of a Loan at the Council-Board for that Service, he began firſt, and for Example ſubſcribed 20000 l. He returned to Dublin March 18. at the end of this Year, and met the Parliament which he had before ſummon'd; and for the King's Supply obtained from them four entire Subſidies; and in the Preamble of the Act had publick Thanks given to the King for providing and placing over them ſo Juſt, Wiſe, Vigilant and Profitable a Governour, &c.

Spaniſh Fleet.

About the middle of September, there appeared upon the Engliſh Coaſts an unexpected Fleet from Spain, conſiſting of above ſeventy Sail of Ships, commanded by Don Antonio D'oquendo. The Dutch Fleet of not above twenty five Sail ſet upon them, and forced them into the Downs, where the Spaniards expected to be ſafe under the King of England's Protection: For both Parties being our Allies, it was thought a Law of Nations, that our Shores and Harbours ſhould be a Refuge to protect the Weaker; but at laſt Van-Trump the Dutch Admiral, fell upon the Spaniards without the Ceremony of asking leave, and burnt, and ſunk and drove on ſhore a great part of their Navy. This, tho' not juſtified at Court, upon the Rules of Honour, was yet pleaſing enough to the common People, who hated the appearance of a Spaniſh Armado, and had indeed reaſons to ſuſpect their Deſign: For tho' they pretended only to carry Recruits and Money to Dunkirk; yet that alone did not require ſo many Ships or Men. The Expedition did ſeem to be meant for ſome greater purpoſe; and by ſome Evidences ſince recovered, it is plain the Project was much the ſame with that in eighty eight. And in the beginning of the following Parliament a Book was produc'd in the Houſe of Commons, containing, that The Papiſts ſhould fiſh in troubled Waters whilſt the King was at War with the Scots, with Prayers in it for the Holy-Martyrs that ſuffered in the Fleet ſent againſt the Hereticks in England, Anno 1639.

State of Religion 1639.

As to the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of this Year, Abp. Land was wiſely conſidering how, if poſſible, to appeaſe the Religious Feuds in Scotland. To which purpoſe, he took Order for tranſlating the Scottiſh Liturgy into the Latin Tongue, and drew up an Apology to be publiſhed with it, to give Satisfaction to the learned World of the excellency of the Book, and of the Piety and Juſtice of the King in enjoining the uſe of it. This Work was finiſhed, but the Diſtemper of the times hinder'd the publication of it. Next, he conſidered how to aſſert the Rights of Epiſcopacy, which with ſo much violence had been voted down in the Aſſemblies of the Kirk, and even one of the Biſhops frighted into an Abjuration of his Order; he therefore recommended to Biſhop Hall of Exeter, the drawing up a Defence of the Divine Right of Epiſcopacy; who accordingly applied himſelf to that Work, and ſent the Abp. the Model of it in theſe two Propoſitions, 1. That Epiſcopacy is a lawful, moſt antient, holy and divine Inſtitution (as it is joined with imparity and ſuperiority of Juriſdiction) and therefore where it hath through God's Providence obtained, cannot by any humane Power be abdicated, without a manifeſt Violation of God's Ordinance. 2. That the Presbyterian Government, however vindicated under the glorious Names of Chriſt's Kingdom and Ordinance, hath no true Footing either in Scripture or the Practice of the Church in all Ages from Chriſt's time to the preſent; and that howſoever it may be of uſe in ſome Cities, or Territories, wherein Epiſcopal Government through Iniquity of Times cannot be had; yet to obtrude it upon a Church otherwiſe ſettled under an acknowledged Monarchy is utterly incongruous and unjuſtifiable. Theſe Propoſitions were attended with ſeveral Poſtulata, as, 1. That Government which was of Apoſtolical Inſtitution cannot be denied to be of Divine Right. 2. Not only that Government which was directly commanded and enacted, but alſo that which was practiſed and recommended by the Apoſtles to the Church, muſt juſtly paſs for an Apoſtolical Inſtitution, &c. The Archbiſhop read over the projected Scheme, and freely offered his own Thoughts in ſuggeſting ſome Amendments, in theſe Words: "You ſay that "Epiſcopacy is an ancient, holy and divine Inſtitution; "it muſt needs be ancient and holy if divine. Would "it not be more full went it thus? So ancient as that "it is of divine Inſtitution. Next you define Epiſ- "copacy by being joined with Imparity and Superio- "rity of Juriſdiction, but this ſeems ſhort; for every "Archpresb's or Archd's Place is ſo.----- I draw the "Superiority not from the Juriſdiction which is at- "tributed to Biſhops Jure Poſitivo in their Audience "of Eccleſiaſtical Matters, but from that which is "Intrinſical and Original in the Power of Excom- "munication: Again, You ſay, that where Epiſco- "pacy hath obtained, it cannot be abdicated without vi- "olation of God's Ordinance. This Propoſition I con- "ceive is inter minus habentes, for never was there "any Church yet where it hath not obtained. —— "In your ſecond Head you grant, that the Presbyte- "rian Government may be of uſe where Epiſcopacy may "not be had. Pray conſider, Whether this Conceſ- "ſion be not needleſs here, and in it ſelf of a dan- "gerous Conſequence? &c. Concerning your Po- "ſtulata, I ſhall pray you to allow me the like free- "dom; among which the two firſt are true, but as "expreſs'd too reſtrictive: For Epiſcopacy is not "ſo to be aſſerted unto Apoſtolical Inſtitution as to "bar it from looking higher, and from fetching it "materially and originally, in the Ground and In- "tention of it, from Chriſt himſelf, tho' perhaps "the Apoſtles formaliz'd it, &c. The Learned and Pious Biſhop ſubmitted to theſe Cenſures and Advices, and ſoon after publiſhed his Book under the Title of Epiſcopacy by Divine Right, and defended it with incomparable Strength and Temper againſt all the Attacks of a Club of Writers. This peaceable Prelate moved the Archbiſhop by Letter, Sep. 28. 1639. to mediate with the King for calling a General Synod of the whole three Kingdoms, wherein all the Reverend Biſhops and chief of the Learned and Dignified Clergy, and the Profeſſors and ſome other eminent Doctors of all the Univerſities, might be aſſembled to paſs their Judgment 1639. 15 Car. I. ment (after free and full Examination) of those Schismatical Points determined thus proudly, and rashly by our Northern Neighbours, &c. The Archbishop seems to have received this Proposal with good Approbation of it; but the growing Confusion of the Times would not allow any such Practice.

Puritans in England encourag'd by the Scots.

The Puritanical Spirit in England was much animated by the Storms in Scotland, and took this Advantage to exert their unconformable Humour. This gave occasion to the Archbishop to complain to the King in his Account of this Year, that these were broken Times; that many who were brought to good Order, are now of late fallen off, &c. And it was this same Distraction of the Times that gave Encouragement to Mr. Bagshaw of the Middle Temple to begin his Readings Feb. 24. on the Statute 25 Ed. III. cap. 7. and to state these Questions; 1. Whether it be a good Act of Parliament without the Assent of the Lords Spiritual? which he held Affirmatively. 2. Whether any beneficed Clerk were capable of temporal Jurisdiction at the time of making that Law? which he held in the Negative. 3. Whether a Bishop, without calling a Synod, have power, as Diocesan, to convict an Heretick? which he maintained also in the Negative. The Noise of this coming to the Archbishop's Ears, he informed the King; who order'd the Lord Keeper to interdict his farther Reading.

Bagshaw's Readings.

State of the Diocese of Canterbury

" The state of the Diocese of Canterbury is thus represented in the Archbishop's Account of his Province. " The great thing which is amiss there, and " beyond my Power to remedy, is the Stiffness of " divers Anabaptists and Separatists from the Church " of England, especially in and about the Parts near " Ashford. And I do not find, either by my own " Experience, or by any Advice from my Officers, " that this is like to be remedied, unless the Statute " concerning Abjuration of your Kingdom, or some " other way, by the Power of the Temporal Law " or State, be thought upon. But how fit that may " be to be done for the present, especially in these " broken Times, I humbly submit to your Majesty's " Wisdom, having often complained of this before. [C. R. It were not amiss to speak with the Keeper about this.]

" Many that were brought to good Order for re- " ceiving of the Holy Communion where the Rails " stand before the Table, are now of late fall'n off, " and refuse to come up thither to receive: but this, " God willing, I shall take care of, and order as " well as I can, and with as much speed. And the " same is now commonly fall'n out in divers other " Dioceses. There was, about half a Year since, " one that pretended himself a Minister, who got " many Followers in Sandwich, and some neighbour- " ing Parishes; but at last was found to have gone " under three Names, Enoch, Swan, and Grey, and " in as several Habits, of a Minister, an ordinary " Lay-man, and a Royster. And this being disco- " vered, he fled the Country before any of my Of- " ficers could lay hold on him. Upon this occasi- " on I have commanded my Commissary and Arch- " deacon to give Charge, in my Name, to all Par- " sons and Vicars of my Diocese, that they suffer " no Man to preach in their Cures, but such as for " whom they will answer, as well otherwise as for " the point of Conformity; which, I hope, will " prevent the like Abuse hereafter.

1640. 16 Car. I. Call of a new Parliament.

The Resolutions for a Parliament had been taken on the 5th of December last; and it was observable, that the first Movers to it were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Deputy of Ireland, and the Marquis of Hamilton. And at the same time in Council, as the Archbishop words it in his Diary, a Resolution was voted at the Board, to assist the King in extraordinary ways if the Parliament should prove peevish and refuse. Which tho' meant only of Loans and voluntary Contributions, yet was afterward interpreted a Design of the most arbitrary Power. 'Tis certain, as the Resolution was never executed, so it had been happier if never made: Perhaps the Parliament had sate longer to dispatch the ordinary Aid, if the King had not too much depended on these extraordinary Supplies.

Unhappy Resolution for extraordinary Supplies.

1640. 16 Car. I.

Before the Opening of the Parliament, the King had begun his raising an Army to reduce Scotland; of which Army the Earl of Northumberland was made General, the Earl of Strafford Lieutenant-General, and the Lord Conway General of the Horse. So that none of the Generals, and few of the chief Officers, who had been employed before, were now made use of; which gave a Distaste, and an ill blood, very prejudicial to the publick Interest.

An Army against Scotland.

On Monday April 13. the Parliament opened, and the King spoke thus to them.

Parliam. meets.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

THere was never a King that had a more great and weighty Cause to call his People together than my self: I will not trouble you with the Particulars; I have informed my Lord Keeper, and command him to speak, and desire your Attention.

After which Sir John Finch, Lord Keeper, delivered a long Harangue, in an Eloquence peculiar to the Times, or to himself. —— Says he, " His Ma- " jesty's Kingly Resolutions are seated in the Ark " of his sacred Breast, and it were a Presumption of " too high a nature, for any Uzzah, uncall'd, to " touch it: Yet his Majesty is now pleased to lay " by the shining Beams of Majesty, as Phœbus did " to Phaeton, that the distance between Soveraignty " and Subjection should not bar you of that filial " freedom of Access to his Person and Counsels; " only let us beware how, with the Son of Clymene, " we aim not at the guiding of the Chariot; as if " that were the only Testimony of Fatherly Affecti- " on: and let us ever remember, that though the " King sometimes lays by the Beams and Rays of " Majesty, he never lays by Majesty it self.

Lord Keeper's Speech.

The Sense of what he told them in glorious Words was to this effect; That his Majesty was resolv'd to reduce his disaffected Subjects in Scotland; that he would by no means admit their Mediation; but before they entred on any other Debates, he expected their immediate Aid, and afterward would give them time for considering of any just Grievances to be heard and redress'd.

Then the King spoke thus:

My Lords, " You shall see he hath spoken no- " thing hyperbolically, or nothing but what I shall " make good one way or other. And because he did " mention a Letter by my Subjects in Scotland, who " did seek to draw in foreign Power for Aid, here " is the original Letter, which I shall command " him to read unto you. And because it may touch " a Neighbour of mine, whom I will say nothing of " but that which is just, (God forbid I should) " for my part I think it was never accepted by " him: Indeed it was a Letter to the French King, " but I know not that ever he had it: for by chance " I intercepted it, as it was going unto him; and " therefore I hope you will understand me right in " that.

The King resumes his Speech

After the Lord Keeper had read the original Letter, and a Translation of it, and had first made a Remark on the Superscription of it, the King added,

" Of these Gentlemen that have set their Hands " to this Letter, here is one: and I believe you " would think it very strange if I should not lay " him fast: and therefore I have signed a Warrant " to lay him close Prisoner in the Tower.

My Lords, " I think (but that I will not say po- " sitively, because I will not say any thing here but " what I am sure of) I think I have the Gentleman " that should have carried the Letter fast enough; " but I know not, I may be mistaken.

The Commons returning to their House, chose Mr. Serjeant Glanvil for their Speaker; who being presented to the King on Wednesday Apr. 15. made a dutiful and proper Speech, and was approv'd and confirm'd by his Majesty.

Mr. Serjeant Glanvil chosen Speaker.

Apr. 16.

1640. 16 Car. I. Grievances.

April 16. the Commons desired the Lords to move his Majesty to appoint a Fast. Then several Petitions were read complaining of Ship-Money, Projects, Monopolies, Star-Chamber, High-Commission Courts, &c. then Harbottle Grimston, Esq; spoke upon the Subject of Grievances, arguing, That the Dangers at Home were greater than those from Abroad; and the Diseases and Distempers in our Bodies Politick were grown to that height, that they prayed for and importun'd a Cure. Then Sir Benjamin Rudyard spoke against the discontinuance of Parliaments, and that during this vacation of those Meetings, many Disorders had been committed, which must be now set right, to vindicate God in his Religion, the King in his Honour, and the Common-wealth in its gasping Extremities.

Mr. Pym's Speech.

April 17. The Commons fell again upon the Debate of Grievances, and Mr. Pym made an elaborate Speech against them, reducing them to three Heads. " 1. Those Grievances which during these eleven " Years Interval of Parliaments were against the Li- " berties and Privileges of Parliament. 2. Innova- " tions in Matters of Religion. 3. Grievances a- " gainst the Propriety of our Goods. Concluding with this Proposal; " For the Remedy of these Grie- " vances, I advise to present them to the House of " Peers, that they may join with us to go to the " King, and pray that these Grievances, being clear " in Fact, may be voted; if any thing in the Vote " be stuck upon, that it may be debated and drawn " according to the course of the House into a Remon- " strance, with an humble Petition of both Houses " for Redress. And I hope the Wisdom of this House " will prepare such a Remedy, as will make the " King a great King, and the People Happy.

On Saturday and Monday following, the House proceeded in voting the Grievances of the Members imprisoned 3, 4 Car. and of Sir John Finch then Speaker, refusing to obey the Commands of the House, &c. So that on Tuesday Apr. 21. the King not enduring that his main Business should be neglected or deferred, commanded the Lords and Commons to attend him in the Banquetting-House; where he order'd the Ld Keeper to acquaint them, that " The Cause of cal- " ling this Parliament was for the Assistance and " Supply of his Majesty; that if the Supply were " not speedy it would be of no use at all, for the Ar- " my was now marching, and did stand his Majesty " in at least one hundred thousand Pounds a Month; " and if there were not means used to go on with " this as was fitting, his Majesty's Design would " be lost, and the Charge all cast away. That this " Supply being granted, his Majesty would give " them Scope and Liberty to present their just Grie- " vances unto him, and would hear them with a " gracious Ear, and give them such an Answer as " they and all the Kingdom should have reason to " joy therein.

The King Angry.

April 22. On a Report made in the House of Commons of the King's Speech in the Banquetting-House, Edmund Waller, Esq; made a severe Speech, ending with this Motion, " That there may be an Order " presently made, that the first thing this House will " consider of, shall be the restoring of this Nation " in general to the fundamental and vital Liberties, " and then to consider of the Supply desired.

Waller's Motion.

While the Commons were thus resolving on the redress of Grievances, his Majesty came to the Lords House, and expressed so great Concern for a speedy Supply, that the Lords desired a Conference with the Commons upon this Subject, and there urged them to trust his Majesty, and to begin with a present Supply. But this Advice of the Lords, in matter of Aid, was thought to be so irregular, that on April 27. it brought on this Resolution in the House of Commons, that " The Lords voting the propoun- " ding and declaring Matter of Supply, before it " was moved from the House of Commons was a " breach of the Privilege of the said House; and " therefore the Commons desire their Lordships in " their Wisdom to find out some way for the repa- " ration of their Privileges broken by that Matter, " and to prevent the like Infringement for the fu- " ture.

Lds press for a speedy Supply.

Commons more averse to it.

1640. 16 Car. I.

May 2. When his Majesty saw the Intercession of the Lords did but irritate the Commons, he took another Method of sending a Message to them by Sir Henry Vane, " That his Majesty had several ways " acquainted the House with the urgent Danger of " losing Time, and had yet received no Answer, " though he had before told them, that a Delay " would be as destructive as a Denial; therefore a- " gain desires them to give him a present Answer " concerning his Supply; his Majesty being still re- " solved on his part, to make good his Promise made " by himself and the Lord-Keeper. The House turning themselves into a Grand Committee debated upon this Message, and would come to no Resolution upon it.

Kings Message for Supply.

Monday May 4. Sir Henry Vane brought a second Message to the House of Commons, That upon their granting twelve Subsidies, his Majesty would give way to the utter abolishing of Ship-Money; and for their Grievances would give them as much time as might be now, and another Session at Michaelmas. The House again debated upon this Message in a Grand Committee, but deferred their Resolution.

A second Message.

May 5. The King so ill resented the Delays of the Commons, and was so impatient of advancing toward Scotland, that he unhappily determin'd to dissolve the Parliament, and so parted with the two Houses in this following Speech.

My Lords,

" THere can no occasion of my coming to this " House be so unpleasing unto me as this at this " time. The fear of doing that which I am to do " this Day, made me not long since come into this " House, where I express as well my Fears as the " Remedy which I thought necessary for the eschew- " ing of what is to follow.

King dissolves the Parliament.

" I must confess and acknowledge, that you, my " Lords, of the Higher House, did give me so wil- " ling an Ear, and with such an Affection did shew " your selves, that certainly I may say, that if there " had been any means to have given an happy End " to this Parliament, you took it; so that it was " neither your Ldship's Fault nor mine that it is not " so. Therefore, in the first place, I must thank " you, my Lords, for your good endeavours.

" My Lords, I hope you remember what the first " Day of the Parliament my Lord-Keeper said to " you in my Name, and what likewise he said in " the Banquetting-House in White-hall, and what " lately I said unto you in this Place my self. I name " all this unto you, not doubting that you do not " well remember it, but to shew you that I never " said any thing in way of Favour to my People, " but (by the Grace of God) I will punctually and " really perform it.

" I know that they have insisted very much on " Grievances; I will not say but there may be " some, tho' I will confidently affirm, that there " are not by many degrees so many as the publick " Voice doth make them. Wherefore I desire you " to take notice, now especially at this time, that " out of Parliament I shall be as ready (if not " more willing) to hear and redress any just Grie- " vances as in Parliament.

" There is one thing much spoken of, I mean as " to matters of Religion; concerning which, albeit " I expressed my self fully the last Day in this place, " yet I think it fit again on this occasion to tell you, " that as I am concerned, so I shall be most care- " ful to preserve that purity of Religion, which I " thank God is so well established in the Church of " England, and that as well out of as in Parlia- " ment.

My Lords,

" I shall not trouble you long with Words, it be- " ing not my fashion; wherefore to conclude, what

" I

1640. 16 Car. I.

" I offered the laſt Day to the Houſe of Commons, " I think it is very well known to you all; as likewiſe how they accepted it, which I deſire not to " remember, but with they had remember'd, how " at firſt they were told by my Lord-Keeper, that " Delay was the worſt kind of Denial; yet I will " not lay this Fault on the whole Houſe of Commons: I will not judge ſo uncharitably of thoſe " whom for the moſt part I take to be Loyal and " well Affected Subjects, but it hath been the malicious Cunning of ſome few ſeditiouſly affected " Men, that hath been the cauſe of this Miſunderſtanding.

" I ſhall now end as I have begun, in giving you " thanks for your Affections ſhewn to me at this " time, deſiring you to go on and aſſiſt me in the " maintaining of that Regal Power that is truly " mine. As for the Liberty of the People, that they " now ſo much ſtartle at; know, my Lords, that " no King in the World ſhall be more careful in the " Propriety of their Goods, Liberty of their Perſons and true Religion, than I ſhall.

" And now, my Lord-Keeper, do as I have commanded you.

Declaration of cauſes for diſſolving the Parliament.

Upon which the Lord-Keeper pronounc'd the Parliament diſſolved: And his Majeſty ſoon after publiſhed a Declaration to all his loving Subjects of the Cauſes which moved him to diſſolve the laſt Parliament; which however plauſible, did not ſatisfie the Engliſh Subject: And indeed when Princes are forc'd upon Apologies to their People, it rather implies a Miſgovernment, and renews the Suſpicions of it. This abrupt parting with a Parliament, in a Speech that made no application to the Commons, and yet hard Reflections on them, was undoubtedly a falſe and fatal ſtep. The more unhappy, becauſe it was only a formal diſpute of Precedency, which ſhould go firſt, Redreſs of Grievances or Grant of Taxes. The King was willing to Redreſs and the Commons to Grant; the Queſtion was, in whom the Truſt ſhould be repoſed? The King thought it his Honour to be firſt ſerv'd; the Commons thought it their Right to be firſt ſatisfied: However, the King and his Friends were ſoon ſenſible of the Error of diſſolving; for the great States-man and Hiſtorian tells us, The King when he had better reflected upon what was like to fall out, and was better informed of the Temper and Duty of the Houſe of Commons, and that they had voted a Supply, if Sir Henry Vane had not hinder'd it, by ſo poſitive a declaration that his Majeſty would refuſe it, was heartily ſorry for what he had done, declared with great anger, that he had never given him ſuch Authority. —— He conſulted the ſame Day or the next, whether he might by his Proclamation recal them to meet together again; but he found that impoſſible.

Unhappy ſteps.

Lord Clarendon's Opinion.

King offended with the leading Members.

And yet the King ſhewed too much Anger againſt the leading Members, if ever he deſigned to meet them again. The Lord Brooks his Study, Cabinets and Pockets were ſearched for Papers; Henry Bellaſis, Eſq; Sir John Hotham, Knight and Baronet, and John Crew, Eſq; were impriſoned, and ſome occaſional Rebukes were given to many others. The King's greateſt difficulty was to raiſe himſelf that Aſſiſtance that he loſt in Parliament: And many of the Lords and Gentlemen were ſo ſenſible of his publick Neceſſities, that by voluntary Loan in leſs than three Weeks, there was three hundred thouſand Pounds paid into the Exchequer.

Purſues the War with Scotland.

Upon this Fund and the hopes of other Projects, the King was reſolved to carry on the Reduction of Scotland. Orders had been ſent March 26. to the Lords Lieutenants of the ſeveral Counties to provide Horſes and Carters for the Train of Artillery and Ammunition, to be ready at Newcaſtle on June 15. where the general Rendezvous was, now by freſh Orders deferred to Aug. 5. The Lord Conway was there before with a conſiderable Body of Men, and in the beginning of July received an Alarm from Carliſle, that the Scots were within a few Days of Dumfriſe, meaning to fall into Cumberland. This haſten'd the March of the King's Army, who were now advanc'd into the County of York; where being quarter'd in private Houſes, it produc'd a Petition of the Gentry to the King againſt this Grievance in the Aſſizes at York July 28. The Lord Conway ſent Intelligence Aug. 15. that the Scotch Army was juſt ready to break in; upon which, Aug. 20. the King began his Journey from London towards the North in ſome haſte, publiſhing the ſame Day a Proclamation, Declaring all Scots entering into England in an hoſtile manner, and their Adherents, to be Traitors; but promiſing a Pardon if they ſhould return to Obedience. On that very Day the Scotch Army came over the Tweed, the Vantguard commanded by the Earl of Montroſs; publiſhing Six Conſiderations of the lawfulneſs of their Expedition into England manifeſted; and by ſlow Marches encamped Aug. 27. at Newbourn upon Tine, four Miles Weſt from Newcaſtle. Upon which the King's Forces in Newcaſtle, 3000 Horſe and 1500 Foot were drawn into a Medow called Newbourn-Haugh, to hinder the Scots from paſſing the River; next Day a Skirmiſh began, which brought on a fierce Engagement, in which the Engliſh had ſo much diſadvantage, that they retreated in confuſion, and the Lord Conway in a Council of War at Midnight, reſolved to retire with his Forces to Durham, and ſo quitted Newcaſtle, which immediately fell into the Scots hands. The King was come from York as far as North-Allerton, hoping to have reacht his Army at Newcaſtle before any Engagement; but meeting the ill-News, he haſtened back Aug. 29. to York, and iſſued his Writs dated Sept. 7. to all the Peers to meet at a great Council at York on Sept. 24. which occaſioned many Petitions for a Parliament, that was ſummon'd to meet Nov. 3.

Calls a great Council.

King's Speech.

In the mean time, at the opening of the great Council in the Dean's Houſe at York Sept. 24. the King in a Speech declared to the Peers, " That upon ſudden Invaſions it had been the practice of his " Predeceſſors to aſſemble a like Council for Advice " and Aſſiſtance; that he deſired nothing more than " to be rightly underſtood of his People; to which " end he had of himſelf reſolved to call a Parliament, but in the mean time muſt deſire their Ad- " vice in two Points; 1. What Anſwer to give to " the Petition of the Rebels, and in what manner " to treat with them. 2. How his Army ſhould " be kept on foot and maintained until the Supplies " of a Parliament might be had. Then the Petition and Letters, and other Proceedings were laid before the Lords; who as to the firſt Point reſolv'd, That ſixteen Engliſh Lords, with ſome Aſſiſtants, ſhould be ſent to treat with Commiſſioners of the Scots. And as to the ſecond Point, Reſolv'd, That a Letter ſhould be written to the City of London, ſubſcribed by all the Peers preſent for lending the Sum of two hundred thouſand Pounds to keep the Army together for three Months.

Engl. and Scotch Commiſſioners.

The meeting of the Commiſſioners was appointed to be at Rippon on Thurſday Oct. 1. where after much Alteration it was agreed Oct. 26. that there ſhould be a Ceſſation of Arms; both Parties to retain during the Treaty what they poſſeſſed at time of Ceſſation. The County of Northumberland and Biſhoprick of Durham to be the Limits of the Scotch Army, who ſhould have a Contribution of 850 l. a Day. Theſe Articles were confirmed by the King, with Advice of his great Council Oct. 27. and the continuation of the Treaty depending was adjourned to London, to which place the King and Lords immediately returned. There ſeem to have been two falſe ſteps in this Expedition; firſt, that the whole Royal Army was not time enough at Newcaſtle to have repulſed the Scots, before they were flush'd with the defeat of too ſmall a Party of the Engliſh. And ſecondly, that a Treaty was allowed, and a Ceſſation granted to declared Rebels, who ſhould rather have been gratified in their Demands by the King's free Mercy, or ſhould have been purſued to their own Submiſſion. And ſays a late States-man, The laſt and Parliament meets. On Novemb. 3. the Parliament met, the King not riding to Weſtminſter in the accuſtomed State, but going privately in his Barge, as if under melancholy Apprehenſions; and made this Speech with leſs Spirit than uſual.

My Lords,

King's Speech: " THE knowledge I had of the Deſires of my " Scotiſh Subjects, was the cauſe of my calling " the laſt Aſſembly of Parliament; wherein had I " been believed, I ſincerely think, that things had " not fallen out as now we ſee. But it is no wonder that Men are ſo ſlow to believe that ſo great a " Sedition ſhould be raiſed on ſo little Ground. But " now, my Lords and Gentlemen, the Honour and " Safety of this Kingdom lying ſo near at the Stake, " I am reſolved to put my ſelf freely and clearly on " the Love and Affection of my Engliſh Subjects, as " theſe of my Lords as did wait on me at York very " well remember I there declared.

" Therefore, my Lords, I ſhall not mention mine " own Intereſt, or that Support I might juſtly expect from you, till the common Safety be ſecured; " though I muſt tell you, I am not aſhamed to ſay, " thoſe Charges I have been at, have been meerly " for the ſecuring and good of this Kingdom; tho' " the Succeſs hath not been anſwerable to my Deſires: Therefore I ſhall only deſire you to conſider the beſt way, both for the Safety and Security of this Kingdom, wherein there are two parts " chiefly conſiderable; firſt, the chaſtizing out of " the Rebels, and ſecondly, that other in ſatisfying " your juſt Grievances, wherein I ſhall promiſe you " to concur ſo heartily and clearly with you, that " all the World may ſee my Intentions have ever " been, and ſhall be, to make this a glorious and " flouriſhing Kingdom.

" There are only two things that I ſhall mention " to you; firſt, the one is to tell you, that the Loan " of Money which I lately had from the City of " London, wherein the Lords that waited on me at " York aſſiſted me, will only maintain my Army for " two Months, from the beginning of that time it " was granted. Now, my Lords and Gentlemen, " I leave it to your Conſiderations, what Diſhonour " and Miſchief it might be, in caſe for want of Money my Army be disbanded before the Rebels be " put out of this Kingdom. Secondly, the ſecuring the " Calamities the Northern People endure at this time " and ſo long as the Treaty is on foot. And in " this, I may ſay, not only they but all this Kingdom will ſuffer the harm: Therefore I leave this " alſo to your Conſideration, for the ordering of " theſe great Affairs, whereof you are to treat at this " time. I am ſo confident of your Love to me, and " that your care is for the Honour and Safety of the " Kingdom, that I ſhall freely and willingly leave " to you where to begin; only this, that you may " the better know the ſtate of all the Affairs, I have " commanded my Lord-Keeper to give you a ſhort " and free Account of theſe things that have happen'd " in this interim, with this Proteſtation, that if " this Account be not ſatisfactory as it ought to be, " I ſhall, whenſoever you deſire, give you a full " and perfect Account of every Particular.

" One thing more I deſire of you, as one of the " greateſt Means to make this a happy Parliament, " that you on your parts, as I on mine, lay aſide " all Suſpicion of one another, as I promiſed my " Lords at York, it ſhall not be my Fault if this be " not a happy and good Parliament.

The King had deſigned Sir Thomas Gardiner, Recorder of London, to have been Speaker in this Houſe of Commons; and for that very reaſon the Enemies of the Court had prevented his Election for the City, and for all other Places: So that Mr. Lenthal, a Bencher of Lincoln's-Inn (a Lawyer of competent Practice, and no ill Reputation for his Affection to the Government both of Church and State) was pitch'd upon by the King, and with very great difficulty rather prevailed with than perſwaded to accept the Charge; and no doubt a worſe could not have been deputed of all that Profeſſion who were then return'd; for he was a Man of a very narrow, timerous Nature, and of no Experience or Converſation in the Affairs of the Kingdom, beyond what the very drudgery in his Profeſſion (in which all his Deſign was to make himſelf Rich) engaged him in. In a word, he was in all reſpects very unequal to the Work, and not knowing how to preſerve his own Dignity, or to reſtrain the Licence and Exorbitance of others, his Weakneſs contributed as much to the growing Miſchiefs as the Malice of the principal Contrivers. 1640. 16 Car. I. Lenthal choſen Speeker.

On Novemb. 5. the King declared his Approbation of the Speaker; and becauſe great Offence had been taken by the Scots and their Well-wiſhers, that the King in his Speech the Day before, had twice called them Rebels, while he was under Treaty with them, his Majeſty choſe now to explain himſelf, I told you that the Rebels muſt be put out of this Kingdom; it is true, I muſt needs call them ſo, ſo long as they have an Army that do invade us: And although I am under Treaty with them, and I under my Great-Seal do call them my Subjects, and ſo they are too. King explains his calling the Scots Rebels.

On Saturday Novemb. 7. the Scene of Complaints opened; Tragical Petitions were preferr'd to the Houſe of Commons in behalf of the chief Sufferers for Sedition, Mr. Prynne, Dr. Baſtwick, Mr. Burton, John Lilburn, Alexander Leighton, &c. Then the particular Grievances of the ſeveral Counties were repreſented; of Hertfordſhire by Arthur Capel, Eſq; of York by Mr. Bellaſis and the Lord Fairfax, of Lincolnſhire by Sir John Wray, of Weſtmorland by Sir Philip Muſgrave, of Wilts by Sir Francis Seymour, of Worceſterſhire by Sir John Packington, of Rutland by Sir Guy Palmes, of Norfolk by Sir Edmund Montford, of Eſſex by Sir Thomas Barrington, of Kent by Sir John Culpeper, and of other Counties and Towns by other Knights and Burgeſſes. After which Mr. Pym made an Harangue upon the general Grievances of the Nation, under three Heads. 1. Againſt the Privilege of Parliament. 2. To the Prejudice of Religion. 3. Againſt the Liberty of the Subject. Then Sir Benjamin Rudyard delivered a Speech againſt the Innovations in Religion, and let fall this ſeaſonable Expreſſion; The King is reduced to great ſtraits, wherein it were Undutifulneſs beyond Inhumanity to take Advantage of him; let us rather make it an Advantage for him to do him beſt Service when he hath moſt need. Mr. Bagſhaw ſpoke ſeverely, concluding thus; Let the woful Violation of the Statute of Monopolies, and the Petition of Right, be made Felony or Premunire at the leaſt; but yet, in the interim, let them be made Examples of Puniſhment who have been the Authors of all theſe Miſeries, according to the Counſel of Solomon: Take away the Wicked from before the King, and his Throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed in Righteouſneſs. Sir John Holland ſpoke next with more Modeſty and Temper; he touch'd upon the Grievances, and recommended a Redreſs of them, and then, ſays he, Touching ſupplying his Majeſty's Wants, I do humbly deſire we may proceed therein within its due time, and that with as much Loyal Duty and Liberality as ever any People expreſſed towards their Prince. —— Let us remove the Scotiſh Army with a ſoft and gentle hand of Mediation, Pacification and Reconciliation, if poſſible it may be wrought with his Majeſty's Honour and the Kingdom's Safety; if not, then to repel and repulſe them with ſtout and reſolute Spirits, with valiant and united Hearts and Hands, &c. Grievances. Speeches.

Novemb. 9. the Lord Digby made a Speech againſt the great and intolerable burden of Ship-Money; the Abuſes in preſſing Soldiers, and raiſing Monies for the Maintenance of them; the multitude of Mo- Lord Digby againſt Ship-Money.

1640. 16 Car. I. nopolies, the new Canons and Oath, the Oath to Church Officers for preſenting upon new and unuſual Articles; the Impoſition of the new Oath upon Miniſters, and the Benevolence rais'd by Convocation; and concluded with a Motion, "That a "ſelect Committee might be appointed to draw "up ſuch a Remonſtrance as ſhould be a faithful and lively Repreſentation to his Majeſty of "the deplorable State of the Kingdom; for which "a Committee of twenty four was accordingly appointed.

Sir Edw. Dering againſt the Abp. of Canterbury

Novemb. 10. Sir Edward Dering made a zealous Invective againſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, concluding, "That he hop'd before the Year run round, "his Grace would either have more Grace or no "Grace at all: For our manifold Griefs do fill a "mighty and vaſt Circumference; yet ſo that from "every part our Lines of Sorrow do lead unto Him, "and point at him the Centre, from whence our Miſeries in this Church, and many of them in the "Common-wealth do flow.

Mr. Pym againſt the Earl of Strafford.

Novemb. 11. Mr. Pym inform'd the Houſe, that there were ſeveral Perſons who had given Information, that there was a good ground for Accuſing Thomas Earl of Strafford of High-Treaſon; for which a ſelect Committee was appointed, who brought in this Report, That they did find juſt cauſe to accuſe the Earl of Strafford of High-Treaſon; and that the Houſe would deſire the Lords that he may be Sequeſtred from Parliament and Committed; and that within ſome convenient time this Houſe will reſort to their Lordſhips with particular Accuſations and Articles againſt him. Mr. Pym carried the Meſſage to the Lords, who returned Anſwer by the two chief Juſtices, that they had taken into ſerious Conſideration the Accuſation ſent from this Houſe againſt the Earl of Strafford, that they had Sequeſtred him from the Houſe, and committed him into ſafe Cuſtody to the Gentleman-Uſher of their Houſe, &c.

Ill Conduct of the Earl.

It was afterward reflected on as a Raſhneſs fatal to this great Miniſter, that when he was at the Head of the King's Army in the North, he ſhould leave his ſafe Poſt, and come to a Parliament which he knew to be incens'd againſt him; when if he had paſs'd over into his own Government of Ireland, or ſent over for the Forces which there waited his Orders, he might have ſerv'd the King and ſav'd himſelf.

Innovations in Religion.

Novemb. 21. Sir Edward Dering at the Grand Committee for Religion, made a very provoking Speech, ſaying, that God's true Religion was violently invaded by two ſeeming Enemies, but indeed (like Herod and Pilate*) faſt Friends for the deſtruction of Truth, the Papiſts for one Party, and the Prelating Faction for the other*; declaring, He had rather ſerve one as far off as Tiber, than to have him come ſo near as the Thames; a Pope at Rome would do him leſs hurt than a Patriarch might do at Lambeth; concluding with a Motion "To ſelect a Committee of a few, and to impower "them for the diſcovery of the numbers of oppreſſed Miniſters under the Biſhops Tyranny for theſe "ten Years laſt paſt.

Reſolution againſt Ship-Money.

Decemb 7. upon the Debate concerning Ship-Money, the Lord Falkland made a vehement Speech againſt it; and it was reſolv'd upon the Queſtion, Nemine contradicente, "That the Charge impoſed upon "the Subjects for the providing and furniſhing Ships, "and the Aſſeſſments for raiſing of Money for that "purpoſe, commonly called Ship-Money, are "againſt the Laws of the Realm, the Subjects "Right of Property, and contrary to the former "Reſolutions in Parliament, and to the Petition of "Right.

Secretary Windebank flies beyond Sea.

Decemb. 10. Mr. Secretary Windebank, who had been declared the greateſt Promoter of Popery, upon a peremptory Summons to appear before the Houſe of Commons, fled beyond Sea; which muſt needs make an Impreſſion upon the King, that he muſt be aſſaulted on the one hand and deſerted on the other; becauſe not able to Protect his Miniſters, nor they able to Vindicate themſelves. The late Hiſtorian makes this Remark on the flight of Windebank: "I could never yet learn the true Rea- "ſon why they ſuffered Secretary Windebank to e- "ſcape their Juſtice (for the Lord Finch, it was "viſible he was in their Favour, and they would "gladly have preſerved him in the Place) againſt "whom they had more pregnant Teſtimony of Of- "fences within the verge of the Law, than againſt "any Perſon they have accuſed ſince this Parliament, and of ſome that it may be might have pro- "ved Capital, and ſo their Appetite of Blood might "have been ſatisfied. 1640. 16 Car. I.

Proceedings againſt the Abp. of Canterbury

December 16. After voting the late Canons made in Convocation to be illegal, &c. a Committee was appointed to conſider how far in particular the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury had been an Actor in the great Deſign of the Subverſion of the Laws of the Realm, and of the Religion, and to draw up a Charge againſt him. The ſame Day the Scots Commiſſioners accuſed the Archbiſhop, and the next Morning exhibited to the Houſe of Lords a long Charge of his being the Author of all their Troubles. December 18. Mr. Harbottle Grimſtone made a bitter Invective againſt the Archbiſhop, calling him The Sty of all Peſtilential Filth; —— The great and common Enemy of all Goodneſs and Good Men; —— A Viper near his Majeſty's Perſon to diſtil Poyſon into his ſacred Ears, &c. At the end of this wrathful Speech, the Archbiſhop was voted to be a Traitor, and Mr. Hollis was ſent to the Lords to accuſe him of High-Treaſon; upon which he was committed to the Cuſtody of the Gentleman Uſher, and Sequeſtred from ſitting in Parliament, till he cleared himſelf of this Accuſation.

Againſt the Lord-Keeper Finch.

December 21. the Lord Keeper Finch was the next obnoxious Man; who being threaten'd with an Impeachment, deſir'd leave to ſpeak for himſelf in the Houſe of Commons, and did ſo in a very Eloquent Speech, delivered with an excellent Grace and Geſture; but was voted a Traitor, 1. For refuſing to read the Remonſtrance againſt the Lord Treaſurer Weſton, 4 Car. when the Parliament deſired it. 2. For ſolliciting, perſwading and threatning the Judges to deliver their Opinion for the Levying of Ship-Money. 3. For ſeveral illegal Actions in Foreſt matters. 4. For ill Offices done in making the King to diſſolve the laſt Parliament, and cauſing his Declaration thereupon to be put forth. Upon which he got up early the next Morning and eſcaped into Holland. Sir Edward Littleton, Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, being made Lord Keeper in his Place; the late Writer of the Hiſtory of Rebellion, makes it viſible, that the Lord Finch was in the Favour of the Houſe of Commons, and that they would have gladly preſerved him in the place, and that they uſed Artifices to give him all Advantages, tho' (ſays he) if their Rule were true, that an endeavour to alter the Government by Law, and to introduce an arbitrary Power were Treaſon, He was the moſt notoriouſly and unexcuſably guilty of that Crime of any Man that can be named. This Cenſure ſeems a little too ſevere, but Mr. Hide was an Aſſiſtant for reading the Articles of Impeachment carried up to the Lords againſt him, on January 14. following, and had the Thanks of the Houſe for his Service.

Frequent Parliaments.

January 19. the Lord Digby made a Speech for the frequency of Parliaments, whereupon the Bill for the preventing of Inconveniences happening by the long intermiſſion of Parliaments was paſſed, and carried up to the Lords by the ſaid Lord Digby. And the Majority of the Commons purged their Houſe of ſeveral Members diſaffected to their Proceeding, Mr. William Sandys Burgeſs for Eveſham, Sir John Jacob, Mr. Thomas Web and Mr. Edmund Windham.

It muſt be charged upon the Houſe of Commons, that inſtead of driving out the Scots, they depended 1640. 16 Car. I. depended upon the countenance of their Army, as a terror to bring the King to comply with every thing they ſhould propoſe to him; and therefore they renewed the Treaty, and held a very kind correſpondence with their Commiſſioners, and even deſcended to this diſhonourable Vote, Jan. 22. That a friendly Aſſiſtance and Relief ſhould be given towards ſupply of the Loſſes and Neceſſities of the Scots, and that in due time the Houſe would take into conſideration the Meaſure and Manner of it. It is certain the King had carried it with great Patience and Temper, and to all their occaſional Applications to him, had given very calm and kind Anſwers. His diſpoſition to Peace and Settlement was farther ſhewn in this Speech to both Houſes, Jan. 25.

Commons correſpond with the Scots.

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes,

K's heal. ingSpeech

"THE principal cauſe of my coming here at this time, is by reaſon of the ſlow proceedings in Parliament, touching which is a great deal of Inconvenience: Therefore I think it very neceſſary to lay before you the State of my Affairs, as now they ſtand, thereby to haſten not to interrupt your Proceedings.

"Firſt, I muſt remember you, that there are two Armies in the Kingdom in a manner maintained by you, the very naming of which doth more clearly ſhew the Inconvenience thereof, than a better Tongue than mine can expreſs. Therefore, in the firſt place, I ſhall recommend unto you the quick diſpatch of that Buſineſs.

"In the next place, I muſt recommend unto you the ſtate of my Navy and Forts, the Condition of both which is ſo well known unto you that I need not tell you the Particulars; only thus much, they are the Walls and Defence of this Kingdom, which if out of Order, all Men may eaſily judge what encouragement it will be to our Enemies, and what diſheartening to our Friends.

"Laſt of all (and not the leaſt to be conſidered) I muſt lay before you the diſtractions that are at this preſent occaſioned thro' the connivence of Parliament; for there are ſome Men that more maliciouſly than ignorantly, will put no difference between Reformation and Alteration of Government. Hence it cometh, that Divine Service is irreverently interrupted, and Petitions in an ill way given in, neither diſputed nor denied. But I will enter into no more Particulars, but ſhew you a way of Remedy, by ſhewing you my clear Intentions, and ſome Rocks that may hinder this good Work.

"I ſhall willingly and chearfully concur with you, for the Reformation of all Innovations both in Church and Common-wealth; and conſequently that all Courts of Juſtice may be reformed according to Law, for my Intention is clear y to reduce all things to the beſt and pureſt Time, as they were in the time of Queen Elizabeth. Moreover, whatſoever part of my Revenue ſhall be found illegal, or heavy to my Subjects, I ſhall be willing to lay it down, truſting in their Affections.

"Having thus clearly and ſhortly ſet down my Intentions, I will ſhew you ſome Rubbs, and muſt needs take notice of ſome very ſtrange (I know not what Term to give them) Petitions given in in the Names of divers Counties, againſt the preſent eſtabliſh'd Government, and of the great Threatnings againſt the Biſhops, that they will make them to be but Cyphers, or at leaſt their Voices to be taken away.

"Now I muſt tell you, that I make a great difference between Reformation and Alteration of Government; tho' I am for the firſt, I cannot give way to the latter. If ſome of them have over-ſtretch'd their Power, and encroached too much upon the Temporality, if it be ſo, I ſhall not be unwilling theſe things ſhould be redreſſed and reformed, as all other Abuſes, according to the Wiſdom of former Times, ſo far I ſhall go with you; nay, farther, if upon ſerious Debate you ſhall ſhew me that Biſhops have ſome Temporal Authority inconvenient to the State, and not ſo neceſſary for the Government of the Church, and upholding Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, I ſhall not be unwilling to deſire them to lay it down. But this muſt not be underſtood, that I ſhall any way conſent that their Voices in Parliament ſhould be taken away; for in all the times of my Predeceſſors, ſince the Conqueſt and before, they have enjoy'd it, and I am bound to maintain them in it, as one of the fundamental Conſtitutions of this Kingdom. 1640. 16 Car. I.

"There is another Rock you are on, not in Subſtance but in Form; yet the Form is ſo eſſential, that unleſs it be Reformed it will mar the Subſtance. There is a Bill lately put in concerning Parliaments; the thing I like well to have frequent Parliaments: but to give Power to Sheriffs and Conſtables, and I know not whom, to uſe my Authority, that I cannot yield unto. But to ſhew you that I am deſirous to give you content in Forms which deſtroy not the Subſtance, you ſhall have a Bill for this purpoſe, ſo that it trench not againſt my Honour, nor againſt the ancient Prerogative of the Crown concerning Parliaments; to which purpoſe I have commanded my Learned Council to wait upon you, my Lords, with ſuch Propoſitions as I hope will give you content. For I ingeniouſly confeſs, that frequent Parliaments are the beſt Means to keep a right underſtanding betwixt me and my People, which I ſo much deſire.

"To conclude, I have now ſhown you the State of my Affairs, my own clear Intentions, and the Rocks I wiſh you to eſchew. In all which you may perceive the Deſire I have to give you Content, as you ſhall find alſo by thoſe Miniſters I have, or ſhall have about me, for the effecting of theſe my good Intentions; which I doubt not will bring Peace and Happineſs to my Subjects, and Contentment to you All. Concerning the Conference you ſhall have a direct Anſwer, which ſhall give you Satisfaction.

This excellent Speech came too late.

This Speech if it had been deliver'd in the preceding Parliament, had hardly failed of the Bleſſings of Unity and Peace: For the Conceſſions of it were indeed ſufficient to have reconciled all things. But the proſpect of the Scotch Army in the North, and the influence of the Scotch Commiſſioners in Town, made the leading Members too proud of their Advantage over the King's Neceſſities: So that inſtead of Thanks for this Speech, and Conſideration of it, a Remonſtrance of the two Houſes was delivered to his Majeſty Jan. 29. againſt the Impunity of Papiſts and the Pardon of Goodman, humbly deſiring, "That "a ſpeedy courſe may be taken for the due execu- "tion of the Laws againſt the Prieſts and Jeſuits: To which his Majeſty anſwered the two Houſes in a gracious Speech Feb. 3. That he took in good part their care of the true Religion eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom, from which he would never depart; That it was againſt his Mind that Popery or Superſtition ſhould any way increaſe; and he would reſtrain the ſame, by cauſing the Laws to be put in execution; for which he would ſpeedily publiſh a Proclamation. And that the Reaſon why he Repriev'd Goodman the Prieſt, was, that neither Queen Elizabeth, nor his Father, did ever avow, that any Prieſt in their times was Executed merely for Religion: However, he would remit the Cauſe to the two Houſes, and deſire them to conſider the Inconveniencies that might fall on his Subjects and other Proteſtants Abroad by ſo great Severity. Remonſtrance.

Commons influence'd by the Scots Rebellion.

But neither could this yielding to the Stream put any ſtop to it: The leading Majority depended on the Scots; and for a tacit condition of Help encouraged all their inſolent Demands, and expelled a worthy Member from their Houſe, Mr. Jarvis Hollis, becauſe he ſpoke thus; Our younger Brother of Scotland, like Jacob, seemeth to supplant us, and take away our Birthright. No Man had a more charitable construction of Intentions than I had, while they made their Addresses in humble distance as befitted Subjects to their Sovereign; — but now, Sir, when I see them swell in their Demands, beyond all proportion; when I hear them enlarge upon their first Propositions, and require things unfit for a King to grant, and dishonourable for this Nation to suffer, I cannot but fix a mark of danger upon them: I fear we have nourished in our Bosom those that will sting us to Death: And then proceeded to this Resolution, "This House doth conceive the "Sum of three hundred thousand Pounds a fit proportion for the friendly Assistance and Relief, "thought fit to be made towards the Losses and Necessities of our Brethren of Scotland; and in fine, accepted the Thanks of the Scots Commissioners, for the said Assistance and for the Style of Brethren given them in the Vote of the House. And indeed this dear Correspondence between the Scots in Arms, and the Commons of England in Parliament, was the Combination that destroy'd the King. The Commons look'd upon the Scots as their Protectors, and the Scots look'd back upon the Commons as their Pay-Masters, and would no longer value the King's calling them Rebels when the Parliament called them Friends and Brethren.

1640. 16 Car. I.

Give them friendly Assistance.

Feb. 15. An Act for Relief of his Majesty's Army and the Northern Parts, being a Grant of four Subsidies: and the Act for Triennal Parliaments were passed by the King with this following Speech.

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of the House of Commons,

"YOU may remember when both Houses were "with me at the Banquetting-House at Whitehall, I did declare unto you two Rocks I wish'd "you to eschew; this is one of them, and of that consequence that I think never Bill passed here in this "House of more favour to the Subjects than this is. "And if the other Rock be as happily passed over as "this shall be at this time, I do not know what "you can ask, for ought I can see at this time, that "I can make any question to yield unto. Therefore I "mention this to shew unto you the Sense that I have "of this Bill, and the Obligation, as I may say, "that you have to me for it: For hitherto, to speak "freely, I have had no great Encouragement to "do it. If I should look to the outward Face of "your Actions or Proceedings, and not look to the "inward Intentions of your Hearts, I might make "question of doing it.

King's Speech.

"Hitherto you have gone on in that which concerns your selves to amend, and not in those "things that nearly concern the Strength of this "Kingdom, neither for the State nor for my own "Particular.

"This I mention not to Reproach you, but to "shew you the State of things as they are. You "have taken the Government all in pieces, and I "may say it is almost off the Hinges. A skilful "Watch-maker to make clean his Watch will take "it asunder, and when it is put together it will "go the better, so that he leave not out one Pin of "it. Now, as I have done all this on my part, "you know what to do on yours; and I hope "you shall see clearly, that I have performed really "what I expressed to you at the beginning of this "Parliament, of the great Trust I have in your Affections to me: For this is the greatest Expression "of Trust, that before you do any thing for me, I "do put such a Confidence in you.

There was a great Joy and Satisfaction in the two Houses at the passing of these Bills. They agreed to wait on the King and return their Thanks by the Mouth of the Lord-Keeper, for having now sufficiently provided for the Security of the Common-wealth; and that there remained nothing to be done but such a Return of Duty and Gratitude to his Majesty, as might testify their Devotions to him, and that their only End was to make him a glorious King.

Satisfaction of both Houses.

Had his Majesty now dissolved the Parliament when he had took off the Fears of long Intermission, and applied the Money to the Uses of the Bill for settling the North, and conferred the great Offices upon the leading Men design'd for them; as the Treasury on the Earl of Bedford, the Chancellorship of the Exchequer on Mr. Pym, the Mastership of the Wards on the Lord Say, a Secretary's place on Denzil Hollis, &c. the King in one or two Years might have prepared a way for an amicable meeting. But as the hasty dissolution of the last Parliament was one great Error, so the longer continuance of this does seem a greater.

Continuance of this Parliament a great Error.

For the next Day after their Address of Thanks, the Commons received the Bundles of Petitions that had been industriously prepared against Innovations in the Church, and against Episcopacy it self; and Feb. 17. they fell to adjusting their Method of Proceedings in the Impeachment of the Earl of Strafford; and had soon after the Articles read and carried up to the Lords against the Archbishop of Canterbury, and had the Pacification with the Scots renewed from time to time, without concluding upon the Articles of Peace; whereby, in effect, they retain'd them in Pay against the King.

Warm Proceedings of the Commons.

The Affairs of the Church, as distinct from those of the State, begin with the Convocation opened April 14. with a Sermon preacht by Dr. Thomas Turner, Residentiary of St. Paul's, on Matt. 10. 16. after which Dr. Richard Steward Dean of Chichester, was chosen Prolocutor, who being presented to the Abp. by Dr. Gilbert Sheldon at the next Session April 17. his Grace in a Latin Speech most affectionately bemoan'd the Dangers threatned to the Church, owing to the decay of Discipline and the growth of Errors; and then commended the special Favour of his Majesty in granting them a Commission (which he produced and order'd to be read) authorizing them to propose, confer, treat, debate, consider, consult and agree upon the Exposition or Alteration of any Canon or Canons now in force, and of and upon any such other new Canons, Orders, Ordinances and Constitutions, as they the said Lord Archbishop, President of the said Convocation, and the rest of the said Bishops, and other the Clergy of the same Province, or the greater number of them (whereof the said Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, President of the said Convocation to be one) shall think necessary, fit and convenient, for the Honour and Service of Almighty God, the Good and Quiet of the Church, and the better Government thereof.

State of Religion. 1. Convocation. Royal Commission.

In the third Session, April 22. his Grace sending for the Prolocutor and Lower House, informed them "of the extraordinary Expences which lay upon his "Majesty, and the imminent Dangers which at this "time threatned the whole Kingdom: for which "reason he and his Brethren had treated and agreed "upon six Subsidies (or more, if it appear'd upon "the Registers that More had been ever at once "granted by the Prelates and Clergy of this Province) at the rate of four Shillings in the Pound; "desiring them that, for a Testimony of their singular Obedience and Duty to the King, they "would give their Assent, debating it among themselves, and then giving in their Answer. After which the Prolocutor and Clergy returned to their House, and after a little time came back, and the Prolocutor reported to his Grace, that they had unanimously agreed to the said Grant. Then the Archbishop had some Discourse with them concerning the making of Canons, and said, that he and his Brethren had already agreed upon two several Constitutions for suppressing of Popery.

The Abp. proposes a Supply.

April 25. a Form of Prayer, composed by the Archbishop's Chaplains, for God's Blessing upon the Parliament then assembled, was presented by the Prolocutor to his Grace and the Bishops, who approv'd it with the addition of one Word; and order'd it to be read daily in Convocation, immediately

ately before the Benediction. It was farther order'd that no Bishop, or any other of the Clergy, should presume to copy out, or talk abroad of any Canon, till it was finally agreed to and approv'd by the King. The Archbishop by Schedule, as usually, prorogued to Wednesday April 29. On which day the Bishop of Bath and Wells, by Commission from the President, prorogued to Saturday May 2. And on that day the Bishop of St. Asaph, by a like Commission, prorogued to Tuesday May 5. On which day the Parliament was dissolved.

Convocation usually dissolv'd with the Parliament.

It having been the usual Practice for the Convocation to be dissolved the day after the Parliament, (tho' no such necessary Concurrence in the Constitution of those two Bodies) they met the next day, May 6. in expectation to be dismiss'd. And the Archbishop himself, not knowing of the King's Thoughts to continue their Sitting, "had sent (he "says) to dissolve the Convocation; Haste and "Trouble of these Businesses making him forget "that he was to have the King's Writ for the dis-"missing as well as the convening of it. Word was Now continued. "brought me of this from the Convocation-House, "while I was sitting in Council, and his Majesty "present. Hereupon, when the Council rose, I "moved his Majesty for a Writ: His Majesty gave "me an unlook'd-for Reply; namely, that he was "willing to have the Subsidies which we had gran-"ted him, and that we should go on with the fi-"nishing of those Canons which he had given us "power, under the Broad Seal of England, to make. "And when I replied, it would be excepted against "in all likelihood by divers, and desired his Maje-"sty to advise well about it; the King answered me "presently, That he had spoken with the Lord Keeper, "the Lord Finch, about it, and that he assured him "it was legal. I confess I was a little troubled both "at the Difficulties of the Time, and at the An-"swer it self; that after so many Years faithful "Service, in a business concerning the Church so "nearly, his Majesty would speak with the Lord "Keeper, both without me, and before he would "move it to me: and somewhat I said thereupon "which pleased not, but the Particulars I do not "well remember. Upon this I was commanded to "sit and go on with the Convocation.

Under these Reasons best delivered in the Archbishop's own Words: while the Lower House were on the said 6th of April expecting a Writ of Dissolution, Dr. Heylin, then a Member, tells us, that there came an Order from the Archbishop to the Prolocutor to adjourn till Saturday, which was the next Synodical Meeting of the Upper House. So that indeed there was no room for those intermediate Sessions of the Lower House which have been lately urged from mistaken Minutes.

Heylin's Animad. on Fuller's Church Hist. p. 129

Saturday May 9th. Nothing done in the Upper House; the Archbishop not appearing, but by Commission prorogued to Wednesday May 13. In the Lower House, the Archbishop observes, that at first some little Exception was taken there by two or three Members, whether we might sit or no. Dr. Fuller takes the liberty to say, that Dr. Browning, Dr. Hacket, Dr. Holdsworth, &c. to the number of thirty six, earnestly protested against the Continuance of the Convocation. But Dr. Heylyn, an equal Witness, assures us, there was no oral Protestation heard, and none reduced into Writing. However, there was some Demur and Dissatisfaction in it, as there might well be among those who had not heard the Opinion in Law upon which the King proceeded: And therefore to take away all scruple, before the next Session, the Archbishop says, He acquainted his Majesty with this Doubt, and humbly besought him, that his learned Council, and other Persons of Honour, well acquainted with the Laws of the Realm, might deliver their Judgment upon it.

Accordingly Wednesday May 13. the Archbishop communicated to both Houses this solemn Opinion thus subscribed.

"The Judgment of these great Lawyers (says "the Archbishop) settled both Houses of Convoca-"tion. So we proceeded according to the Power "given us under the Broad Seal, as is required by "the Statute 25 Hen. VIII. cap. 19. For, because the first Commission determined with the Parliament, a new Commission, dated May 12. was pro-duc'd by his Grace this day, not differing from the former of April 15. saving in a Clause repealing the old Commission, and in altering the Force and Continuance of this new one: for whereas the Licence and Power were before to treat and conclude from time to time during the present Parliament, it was now alter'd into during our Will and Pleasure. A new Commission.

In the next Session, May 15. Sir Henry Vane, one of the principal Secretaries of State, was sent from his Majesty with a Message, "That his Majesty "had granted a Commission to this Synod for the "making of Canons and Constitutions Ecclesiasti-"cal; and that the Lords of the Council had una-"nimously agreed, that this Synod ought to pro-"ceed in the same, as being highly necessary; and "that therefore he was sent in his Majesty's Name "to exhort them with all expedition to make such "Canons as the present state and exigency of Affairs "required: and that it was his Majesty's farther "Pleasure, that none of the said Prelates or Cler-"gy should withdraw themselves from the said Sy-"nod or Convocation, till the Affairs they had in "Command from the King were perfected and fi-"nished. King sends a Message to the Convocation.

May 16. the Form of a Grant of free Benevolence, or Contribution of four Shillings in the Pound for six Years following, according to the Valuation of the First-fruits, was unanimously agreed to in the Lower House, with the Provisions for raising of it, under the Penalty of Ecclesiastical Censures. But because the Grants of the Clergy in Convocation had been usually confirm'd by an Act of Parliament, the Benevolence thus granted without the Civil Legislature gave great Offence: And yet by original Constitution the Clergy had certainly the power of giving away their own Money independently on the Lay Lords and Commons; and even since the Reformation there had been a Precedent of it. The Archbishop therefore is right in representing the Fact and the Law in this manner. "We made up our "Act perfect for the Gift of six Subsidies, accor-"ding to antient Form in that behalf, and deliver-"ed it under Seal to his Majesty. This passed ne-"mine refragante, as may appear apud Acta. And "we followed a Precedent in my Lord Archbishop "Whitgift's time, Ann. 1586. who was known to be "a pious and a prudent Prelate, and a Man not gi-"ven to do boisterous things against the Laws of "the Realm, or the Prerogative of the Crown; but "one that went just and fair ways to both. Nor did "this Grant lie dead and useless; for divers Pro-"cesses are yet to be seen, for the fetching in of "that which was so granted to the Queen's use, in "case any Man refused Payment. Benevolence to the King. Invidious; because not confirm'd by Parliam. Troubles and Trial of Abp. Laud, p. 80

May 18. the Archbishop communicated a Letter from his Majesty, to will and require them to propose, treat, and conclude upon such a Canon as might secure him and all his loving Subjects against all Growth and Increase of Popery in this Kingdom; as also of any Heretical or Schismatical Opinions to the prejudice of the Doctrine or Discipline of the Church of England established by Law; with an Oath to be taken by All in Holy Orders, that they shall adhere constantly to the Doctrine and Discipline here established, and never give way (for King recommends a Canon against Popery.

so

1640. 16 Car. And then the Oath enjoin'd for preventing Innovations, was in this Form.

Oath enjoin'd by Convocat.

" I A. B. do swear, that I do approve the Doctrine " and Discipline or Government established in " the Church of England, as containing all things " necessary to Salvation. And that I will not en- " deavour, by my self or any other, directly or in- " directly, to bring in any Popish Doctrine, con- " trary to that which is so established: Nor will I " ever give my Consent to alter the Government of " this Church by Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, and " Archdeacons, &c. as it stands now established, " and as by right it ought to stand; nor yet ever " to subject it to the Usurpations and Superstitions " of the See of Rome. And all these things I do " plainly and sincerely acknowledge and swear, ac- " cording to the plain and common Sense and Un- " derstanding of the same Words, without any E- " quivocation, or mental Evasion, or secret Reser- " vation whatsoever. And this I do heartily, will- " lingly, and truly, upon the Faith of a Christian. " So help me God in Jesus Christ.

The several Constitutions and Canons bear this Title. 1. Concerning the Regal Power. 2. For the better keeping of the Day of his Majesty's most happy Inauguration. 3. For the suppressing of the Growth of Popery. 4. Against Socinianism. 5. Against Sectaries. 6. An Oath enjoin'd for the preventing of all Innovations in Doctrine and Government. 7. A Declaration concerning some Rites and Ceremonies. 8. Of Preaching for Conformity. 9. One Book of Articles of Enquiry, to be used at all Parochial Visitations. 10. Concerning the Conversation of the Clergy. 11. Chancellours Patents. 12. Chancellours alone not to censure any of the Clergy in sundry cases. 13. Excommunication and Absolution not to be pronounced but by a Priest. 14. Concerning Commutations, and the disposing of them. 15. Concerning concurrent Jurisdiction. 16. Concerning Licences to marry. 17. Against vexatious Citations.

Abp.'s Account of Proceedings in this Convocat.

The manner of passing these Canons, and Subscription to them, is thus deliver'd by the Archbp. " In the Debates concerning these Canons, I dare " be bold to say, Never any Synod sate in Christen- " dom, that allow'd more freedom either of Speech " or Vote. The Canons which we made, were in " number seventeen; and at the time of the Sub- " scription, no Man refused, or so much as checked " at any one Canon, or any one Branch in any one " of them; saving a Canonist or two, who excep- " ted against two or three Clauses in some of the " last of the Canons, which concerned their Profit, " and their Carriage towards the Clergy, in which " they were publickly, and by joint Consent, o- " verruled in the House; and excepting Godfrey " Goodman Lord Bishop of Glouceſter, who was star- " tled at the first Canon about the Proceedings a- " gainst the Papists —— Yet he at last subscribed " in open Convocation.

Heylin's Animad. on Fuller's Ch. Hist. p. 240.

Before these Canons were subscribed, they were imparted to the King by the Archbishop, and by the King laid before the Lords of his Privy Council, who calling to them the Assistance of the Judges, and some of the King's Counsel, learned in the Laws of this Realm, did cause the said Canons to be read and considered of in presence of the King: By all which, upon due and mature Deliberation the Canons were approv'd; and being so approv'd, were sent back to the Clergy in Convocation, and by them subscribed. And that Work ended, the Convocation was dissolv'd by the Archbishop in pursuance of his Majesty's Writ for that purpose, on Friday May the 29th. 1640. 16 Car. I.

Canons publish'd.

These Canons were immediately Printed, and at their first Publication (says the Archbishop) " they " were generally approved in all parts of the King- " dom; and I had Letters from the remotest parts " of it, full of Approbation: Insomuch, that not " my self only, but my Brethren which lived near " these Parts, and which were not yet gone down, " were very much joyed at it. But about a Month " after their Printing, there began some Whisper- " ings against them by some Ministers in London, " and their Exceptions were spread in Writing a- " gainst them: And this set others on work, &c. Nay, Dr. Heylyn farther tells us, " That these Ca- " nons found great Approbation from the Mouths " of some, from whom it had been least expected; " particularly from Justice Crook, —— of whom I " have been told, by a Person of great Worth and " Credit, that having read over the Book of Ca- " nons when it first came out, he lifted up his " hands, and gave hearty Thanks to Almighty " God, that he had lived to see such good Effects " of a Convocation.

Scots and Puritans against them.

It was however the Interest of the Covenanting Scots, and all their Well-wishers in England, to raise Objections and Clamours against these new Canons. And for this purpose the disaffected London Ministers had many secret Meetings, and particularly at the House of Dr. Downham of St. Bartholomew Exchange, where they drew up Reasons, and obtain'd Hands to a Petition against the Oath. And their Example soon infected the Country: For on Tuesday Aug. 25. there was an Assembly of Ministers at Ketering in Northamptonshire, where they concluded against the Oath, and agreed not to take it. And from Botheby-Paynel in Lincolnshire, Dr. Sanderson, by Letter to the Archbishop Septemb. 13. inform'd him, " That he found, to his great grief (as well by the " Speeches of some in those parts as by Letters " from others farther off) that great Distaste was " generally taken in the Kingdom at the Oath en- " joined by the late Canons. And that he had exa- " min'd the Exceptions, and could find no just Scru- " ple; and should endeavour to remove the Scru- " ples of others. But that divers Papers passed se- " cretly from hand to hand, containing large Col- " lections of sundry Reasons against the taking the " said Oath. For preventing the encrease of Dis- affection, and the encouragement to the Scotish Re- bels, and other Inconveniences, he suggests, " That " his Majesty should give special Direction to for- " bear pressing the Oath for a time; or that some " short Explanation of such Passages in the said " Oath, as by reason of their Ambiguity are most " subject to Cavil and Misconstruction, should " be sent to all the several Persons that shall have " power to administer the same, to be publickly " read before the Tendry of the said Oath. The Advice of this judicious Man was taken by Archbishop Land: He employ'd the Bishop of Exeter to draw up a Paper, entitled, A clear Explanation of the Clauses which are stuck at in the Oath appointed by the late Synod, according to the true sense of the Canon. And he himself seems to have advis'd the King to send his Commands for suspending the Oath till the next Convocation; as was done by this Letter from Mr. Secretary Vane.

London Clergy dislike the Oath.

May it please your Grace,

Abp.'s Orders to forbear the Oath.

In obedience to theſe Inſtructions, his Grace ſent out his circular Letters dated Octob. 6. to the Suffragans of his Province, totally to forbear the Oath both at Ordinations and Inſtitutions as well as otherwiſe, till the next enſuing Convocation. But all this Caution and Temper, however they juſtified the Wiſdom and Integrity of the King and Archbiſhop, yet, like all other occaſions, they made the factious Spirits but the bolder to extort more and more from the Crown and the Church.

Next Parliament declaims againſt the Convocation.

When the Parliament began Nov. 3. it was made a popular Topick among the Commons to declaim againſt the Benevolence, Canons, and Oath. The Lord Digby, in his Speech Nov. 9. ſaid, " The gran- " ting of Subſidies under ſo prepoſterous a Name as " of a Benevolence, was a Malevolence indeed. A Lord Digby.

" Malevolence in thoſe that granted it againſt Parlia- " ments; and a Malevolence in thoſe that refuſed it " againſt thoſe that granted it: to ſee wreſted from " them what they were not willing to part with " under no leſs a Penalty than the loſs both of Hea- " ven and Earth; of Heaven by Excommunication, " and of the Earth by Deprivation. and this with- " out Redemption by Appeal. And that no good " Chriſtian could think with Patience of the enſna- " ring Oath by the new Canons enjoined; where, " beſides the ſwearing ſuch Impertinence, as that " things neceſſary to Salvation are contained in " Diſcipline; beſides the ſwearing thoſe to be of " Divine Right, which amongſt the Learned never " pretended to it, as the Arch things in our Hie- " rarchy; beſides the ſwearing not to conſent to " the Change of that, which the State may upon " great reaſon think fit to alter; beſides the bot- " tomleſs Perjury of an, &c. Men muſt ſwear " that they ſwear freely and voluntary what they " are compelled unto; and laſtly, that they ſwear " that Oath in the literal Senſe, whereof no two of " the Makers themſelves could ever agree in the " underſtanding. On the ſame day Sir John Cul-

Sir John Culpeper.

peper argued theſe Canons to be a Grievance; 1. " In " reſpect of the Matter, beſides the &c. Oath. 2. In " reſpect of the Makers, choſen to ſerve in a Con- " vocation, that falling with the Parliament, the " Scene was alter'd; the ſame Men, without any " new Election ſhuffled into a ſacred Synod. 3. In " reſpect of the Conſequence, which in this Age, " when the ſecond ill Preſident becomes a Law, is " full of Danger. The Clergy, without Confirma- " tion of a Parliament, have aſſumed unto them- " ſelves Power to make Laws, to grant Relief by " the Name of Benevolence, and to intermeddle " with our Freehold by Suſpenſions and Depriva- " tions. This (ſays he) is a Grievance of a high

" nature. And then Mr. Harbottle Grimſton ſpoke thus to the ſame Point. " Mr. Speaker, There hath " been ſince the laſt Parliament a Synod, and in " that Synod a new Oath hath been made and fra- " med, and enjoined to be taken. They might as " well have made a new Law, and enjoined the Exe- " cution of that, as enjoined and urged the taking " of the other, not being eſtabliſhed by Act of Par- " liament.—— Exception is to be taken to the Mat- " ter of the Oath; They would have us at the ve- " ry firſt daſh ſwear in a damnable Hereſie, that " Matters neceſſary to Salvation are contained in " the Diſcipline of our Church; whereas it hath 1640. " ever been the Tenet of our Church, that all things 16 Car. I. " neceſſary to Salvation are comprehended in the " Doctrine of our Church only. And for Preven- " tion in caſe the Wiſdom of the State in this great " Council ſhould at any time think fit to alter any " thing in the Government of our Church, they " would anticipate and foreſtall our Judgments by " making us ſwear before-hand, that we would ne- " ver give our Conſent to any Alteration. Nay, " Mr. Speaker, they go a little farther, for they " would have us ſwear, that the Government of " the Church by Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, Arch- " deacons, &c. is Jure divino; their Words are, As " of Right it ought to ſtand; whereas we meet not " with the Name of an Archbiſhop, or a Dean, or " an Archdeacon, in all the New Teſtament: And " whatſoever may be ſaid of the Function of Biſhops " it is one thing; but for their Juriſdiction, it is " meerly humanâ inſtitutione, and they muſt thank " the King for it. As for their groſs, abſurd, &c. " wherein they would have them ſwear they know " neither what, nor how many Fathom deep, there " is neither Divinity nor Charity in it; and yet " they would put that upon us.—— They have " likewiſe in this Synod granted a Benevolence; " but the Nature of the thing agrees not with the " Name; for in plain Engliſh it is ſix Subſidies to " be paid by the Clergy in ſix Years: and the Pe- " nalty they have impoſed upon the Refuſers for " Non-payment, is, to be deprived of their Funcți- " ons, to be ſtripped of their Freehold, and to be " Excommunicated: And this Act of their Synod is " not publiſhed amongſt their Canons, for which " they might have ſome colourable ſeeming Autho- " rity; but it comes out in a Book alone by it ſelf " in the Latin Tongue, ſuppoſing, as I conceive, " that Lay-men are as ignorant as they would have " them.

Warm Debates.

Theſe Debates about the Book of Canons ended in an Order for Mr. Selden, Sir Tho. Widdrington, and Mr. Whiſtles to get the Warrants by which the Convocation was held after the Parliament, and the Letters Patents of the Benevolence. And when this Subject came to be afterwards reaſſum'd in the Houſe, there were many other ſevere Speeches, by Mr. Bagſhaw, Mr. Nath. Fiennes, Sir Edward Dering, and others, that ſeem to have no new Matter, but what is before recited. Only that Mr. Bagſhaw laboured to prove it Law, that the Biſhops and Clergy who held the late Synod were in a Præmunire for holding of it, and were ſubject to the Pains and Penalties of a Præmunire. But the Zeal of the Houſe could be carried no farther than theſe two Votes and Reſolutions, Decemb. 16.

Reſolutions of the Houſe of Commons.

Reſolved, " That theſe Canons and Conſtitutions " Eccleſiaſtical treated upon by the Archbiſhops of " Canterbury and York, and the reſt of the Biſhops " and Clergy of thoſe Provinces, and agreed upon " with the King's Majeſty's Licence in their ſeveral " Synods begun at London and York 1640. do con- " tain in them many matters contrary to the King's " Prerogative, to the fundamental Laws and Sta- " tutes of this Realm, to the Rights of Parliament, " to the Property and Liberty of the Subject, and " matters tending to Sedition, and of dangerous " conſequence.

Reſolved, " That the ſeveral Grants of the Bene- " volence or Contribution granted to his moſt ex- " cellent Majeſty by the Clergy of the Provinces of " Canterbury and York, in the ſeveral Convocations " or Synods holden at London and York 1640. are " contrary to the Laws, and ought not to bind the " Clergy.

Made a Charge againſt Abp. Laud.

The farther Senſe of the Houſe upon this matter, was put into the fifth Article of Impeachment carried up againſt Archbiſhop Laud; running thus.

" He hath traiterouſly cauſed a Book of Canons " to be compoſed and publiſhed, and thoſe Canons " to be put in execution without any lawful War-

" rant

1640. 16 Car. I. " rant and Authority in that behalf. In which pre-
" tended Canons many Matters are contained con-
" trary to the King's Prerogative, to the fundamen-
" tal Laws and Statutes of this Realm, to the Right
" of Parliament, to the Property and Liberty of the " Subjects, and Matters tending to Sedition, and of " dangerous Conſequence; and to the eſtabliſhment
" of a vaſt unlawful and preſumptuous Power in
" himſelf and his Succeſſors. Many of the which
" Canons, by the Practice of the ſaid Archbiſhop,
" were ſurreptitiouſly paſſed in the laſt Convocati-
" on, without due Conſideration and Debate: O" thers by Fear and Compulſion were ſubſcrib'd to
" by the Prelates and Clerks there aſſembled, which " had never been voted and paſſed in the Convo-
" cation as they ought to have been. And the ſaid
" Archbiſhop hath contriv'd and endeavour'd to
" aſſure and confirm the unlawful and exorbitant
" Power which he hath uſurped and exerciſed over
" his Majeſty's Subjects by a wicked and ungodly
" Oath, in one of the ſaid pretended Canons, en-
" joined to be taken by all the Clergy, and many
" of the Laity of this Kingdom.

Abp's Anſwer. To which Charge the Archbiſhop plainly anſwer'd,
" I compoſed no Book of Canons; the whole Con-
" vocation did it with unanimous Conſent: So ei" ther I muſt be free, or that whole Body muſt be " guilty of High-Treaſon; for in that Crime all are
" Principals that are Guilty, Acceſſory there is " none.

" Neither did I Publiſh or put in Execution thoſe
" Canons, or any of them, but by lawful Authori" ty. And, I do humbly conceive, and verily be" lieve, there is nothing in thoſe Canons contrary
" either to the King's Prerogative, the fundamental " Laws of the Realm, the Rights of Parliament, the " Propriety and Liberty of the Subjects, or any mat-
" ter tending to Sedition, or of dangerous Conſe-
" quence, or to the Eſtabliſhment of any vaſt or un-
" lawful Power in my ſelf and my Succeſſors; nei-
" ther was there any Canon in that Convocation ſur-
" reptitiouſly paſſed by any Practice of mine, or " without due Conſideration and Debate; neither was
" there any thing in that Convocation but what
" was Voted firſt, and Subſcribed after, without " Fear or Compulſion in any kind. And I am veri-
" ly perſwadad, there never ſate any Synod in Chri-
" ſtendom wherein the Votes paſſed with more free-
" dom or leſs practice than they did in this. And
" for the Oath injoin'd in the ſixth Canon, as it was " never made to confirm any unlawful or exorbi-
" tant Power over his Majeſty's Subjects, ſo I do
" humbly conceive that it is no wicked or ungodly
" Oath in any Reſpect. And I hope I am able to " make it good in any learned Aſſembly in Chri-
" ſtendom, that this Oath and all thoſe Canons (then " made and here before recited) and every Branch
" in them, are Juſt, and Orthodox, and Moderate,
" and moſt Neceſſary for the preſent Condition of
" the Church of England, how unwelcome ſoever to
" the preſent Diſtemper.

Enquiry into the validity of theſe Canons. And yet theſe publick Cenſures of the Canons, however grounded on Prejudice and Faction, have made them ever ſince reputed null and void, tho' it is hard to find any defect of Legality in the making of them, or any juſt Authority that did afterward annul them. It is true the Act 13 Car. II. Cap. 12. would not confirm them, but ſo neither did it repeal them; they are left with the ſame force they had from the Beginning. There was indeed a Reſolution made in the Houſe of Commons December 15. 1640. That the Clergy of England, convented in any Convocation or Synod, or otherwiſe, have no Power to make any Conſtitutions, Canons or Acts whatſoever, in Matter of Doctrine, Diſcipline, or otherwiſe to bind the Clergy or the Laity of the Land without common conſent of Parliament. But as this was a warm Vote, contrary to the Stream of Cuſtom and Statutes: ſo the Houſe it ſelf ſeem'd to recede from it by forming their Reſolutions the next Day to a different Senſe. And indeed if the King's Licence and Confirmation does not make the Canons regularly paſs'd in Convocation to be binding without Parliament, we have had no proper Canons ſince the Reformation: Thoſe of 1603. are as invalid as theſe of 1640. Some Writers have ſuggeſted that their Invalidity ariſes from their paſſing in a Convocation ſitting after the Parliament: But this cannot be a Reaſon in the true Conſtitution of Parliaments and Synods, which may certainly act independently on one another. But whatever Reaſons of State have combin'd to let theſe Canons ſink into a dead letter; yet it muſt be confeſſed, that in very much of Doctrine and Diſcipline they would be a good Example to any future Convocation: and we can hardly hope for Unity and any tolerable Regularity, without ſome Conſtitutions of the like Nature, if poſſible to be had with leſs Offence. 1640. 16 Car. I.

2d Convocation. There was another Convocation this Year that met with the ſecond Parliament, and open'd in the Church of St. Paul's Novemb. 4. The Sermon was preach'd by Dr. Iſaac Bargrave Dean of Canterbury, and Dr. Stewart Dean of Chicheſter, was again choſen Prolocutor. At their next Meeting in Henry VII's Chapel, the Archbiſhop in an eloquent but ſad Oration, bemoan'd the Infelicities which he ſaw hanging over the Church, adviſing every one there preſent to perform their Duties, and not to be wanting to themſelves, or the cauſe of Religion, as far forth as they were concerned in their ſeveral Places. There was no Commiſſion granted, and therefore no Buſineſs propoſed: But ſome of the Lower-Houſe began to be afraid of the Popular Offence taken againſt their Proceedings in the laſt Convocation; and therefore Mr. Thomas Warmiſtre one of the Clerks for the Dioceſe of Worceſter, made a Motion to this effect, " That they ſhould endea-
" vour, according to the Levitical Law, To cover
" the Pit which they had opened; and to prevent their
" Adverſaries Intention by condemning ſuch offen-
" ſive Canons as were made in the laſt Convocati-
" on, But the Houſe were of no ſuch Opinion as to think the Canons obnoxious to juſt Cenſure; nor had they that meanneſs of Spirit as to condemn themſelves before they were accuſed. So that Mr. Warmiſtre, in a very irregular manner, ſeem'd to appeal from his Brethren to the People, by printing a long Speech as deliver'd on this Occaſion, Bitter enough againſt ſome Canons and Proceedings in the former Seſſion, but ſuch as could not ſave him from a Sequeſtration, when the reſt of the Clergy were brought under the ſame Condition. The Houſe of Commons were diſpos'd to ſhew them no Favour; and therefore when Dr. Layfield Archdeacon of Eſſex, was complained of for Innovations in his Church of Allhallows Berking, he inſiſted upon his Privilege declared by Statute 8. Hen. VI. Cap. 1. The Committee for Religion were of Opinion, that Though he were a Member of the Convocation Houſe, yet he ſhould be ſent for as a Delinquent. And it was accordingly order'd by the Houſe Novemb. 25. " That Dr. Layfield Vi-
" car of St. Allhallows Berking, be forthwith ſent for
" as a Delinquent, by the Serjeant at Arms atten-
" ding on this Houſe, notwithſtanding he is a Mem-
" ber of the Convocation Houſe. All that related more to the Convocation was an Order on Friday March 19, " That Mr. Treaſurer and Mr. Comp-
" troller move his Majeſty to grant a Commiſſion
" to the Convocation, to treat about the granting
" of Subſides to the Clergy.

No Commiſſion and therefore no Buſineſs.

Motion againſt the late Canons.

Privilege of Convocation over-ruled by the Commons.

But this came to no effect, for by the Archbiſhop's impriſonment the regular Seſſions broke off, the Bps diſcontinued their meeting, and the Lower-Houſe by degrees dwindled away. And indeed there was by this time no occaſion for Synodical Meetings: for there was not only one very buſie Committee for Religion in the Houſe of Commons, but on Monday Mar. 15. there was another ſettled in the Houſe of Lords, to conſiſt of ten Earls, ten Barons, and ten Biſhops; on which the Archbiſhop made this Reflection, This Committee (wherein the Lay

Convocation ſinks away.

1640. 16 Car. I. Lay Votes will be double to the Clergy) will meddle with Doctrine as well as Ceremonies, and will call ſome Divines to them to conſider of the Buſineſs; as appears by a Letter hereto annexed, ſent by the Lord Biſhop of Lincoln to ſome Divines to attend this Service. Upon the whole matter, I believe this Committee will prove the National Synod of England, to the great Diſhonour of this Church. And what elſe may follow upon it, God knoweth. The Divines called to be Aſſiſtants, were Dr. Brownrig, Dr. Featley, Dr. Hacket, Dr. Weſtfield, Dr. Burges, Mr. Shute, Mr. Calamy, Mr. White, Mr. Marſhal. This was laying a Foundation for an Aſſembly of Divines.

Diary of Abp. Laud

Commons ſhew greater Diſaffection to the Chur.

The prevailing Party in the Houſe of Commons betray'd a great Diſaffection to the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, by holding their ſolemn Faſts on Tueſdays; by ordering the Communion-Table to be remov'd from the Chancel to the middle of the Church at the time of their Receiving the Sacrament, as a Houſe; by troubling and puniſhing thoſe Divines who had been moſt zealous for Conformity, as Dr. Coſins, Dr. Pocklington, Dr. Belcanquail, Dr. Layfield, Dr. Brag, Dr. Chuſlin, &c. by chuſing out the moſt diſaffected Miniſters to Preach before them, as Mr. Marſhal, Mr. Calamy, &c. by countenancing and reſtoring thoſe Miniſters who had ſuffer'd any Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, as Mr. Burton, Mr. Smart, Mr. Wilſon, &c. by receiving and juſtifying a Petition of the Refuſe of the People in and about London, on December 11. that the Government of Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, &c. with all its Dependencies, Roots and Branches, may be aboliſhed, &c. by Ordering January 23. " That Commiſſions be ſent into " all Counties, for the defacing and demoliſhing, " and quite taking away out of Churches and Cha- " pels, all Images, Altars, or Tables turned Altar- " wiſe, Crucifixes, ſuperſtitious Pictures, Monu- " ments, and Reliques of Idolatry. By ordering " Febr. 5. that the Lord Keeper be deſired to leave " out the Clergy in England and Wales at the renew- " ing of the Commiſſion of the Peace. By reſolving " upon the Queſtion, That the Legiſlative and Ju- " dicial Power of Biſhops in the Houſe of Peers in " Parliament, is a great Hindrance to the Diſ- " charge of their Spiritual Function, prejudicial " to the Commonwealth, and fit to be taken away " by Bill; and that a Bill be drawn to that pur- " poſe. And farther reſolving, March the 11th, " That for Biſhops or any other Clergy-man what- " ſoever to be in the Commiſſion of the Peace, or " to have any judicial Power in the Star-Chamber, " or in any Civil Court, is a great Hindrance to " the Diſcharge of their Spiritual Function, preju- " dicial to the Commonwealth, and fit to be taken " away by Bill. And indeed the Diſpoſition of the Houſe did ſo much abet and encourage the Schiſmatical and Enthuſiaſtick People, that they broke into the moſt inſolent Rudeneſs; of which a Complaint and Proof being made in the Houſe, they reſolv'd that this Order following ſhould be read publickly in all the Pariſh-Churches of London, Weſtminſter, and the Borough of Southwark and the Liberties, " That the Divine Service be per- " formed as it is appointed by the Acts of Parlia- " ment of this Realm: And that all ſuch as ſhall " diſturb this wholſome Order, ſhall be ſeverely " puniſhed according to Law; and that the Par- " ſons, Vicars, and Curates, in the ſeveral Pa- " riſhes, ſhall forbear to introduce any Rites or " Ceremonies that may give Offence, otherwiſe " than thoſe which are eſtabliſhed by the Laws of " the Land.

They encourage the Mob,

Till forc'd to reſtrain them.

The King was ſo well pleas'd, as to return the Houſe Thanks for this Order; not ſo much conſidering that the Reading it in Churches ſhould have been rather enjoin'd by his own Prerogative, or the Juriſdiction of the Ordinary; nor believing that, ſoon after when the chief Offenders were brought to the Houſe and convicted of denying the Act 35 Elizabeth to be a true Law becauſe it was made by Biſhops; of refuſing to go to their Pariſh-Churches, becauſe they were not true Churches; of ſaying, the King could not make a perfect Law, becauſe he was not a perfect Man, &c. Yet the Houſe diſmiſs'd them with a ſoft Admonition only; by which one might ſuſpect, that they retain'd the Sectaries as they did the Scots, for ſome future Uſe and Service.

1640. 16 Car. I.

Yet they ſtill countenance them.

The Storm againſt the Church fell with greateſt Violence on the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. May the 11th at Midnight, his Palace at Lambeth was beſet with five hundred of the Raſcally Mob, who for two hours were aſſaulting the Gates and Walls to enter; but were repulſed, and one of them hanged. And again October the 22d the High Commiſſion ſitting at St. Paul's as a Place of the greateſt Safety, the Archbiſhop being ſuppoſed to be preſent, two thouſand of the Sectaries made a Tumult at the End of the Court, tore down all the Benches in the Conſiſtory, and cried out, They would have no Biſhop, and no High Commiſſion. But the Blows of the Parliament were heavier than thoſe of the People. Upon Voting down the Canons and Benevolence December the 16th a Committee was appointed to conſider in particular, How far the Archbiſhop of Canterbury had been an Actor in thoſe Proceedings, and in the great Deſign of the Subverſion of the Laws of the Realm and of Religion; and to draw up a Charge againſt him: And even ſome Members ſtood up to have him accus'd of High Treaſon. The next Day the Earl of Briſtol acquainted the Houſe of Lords, that the Scotch Commiſſioners had preſented ſome Papers concerning the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, which were read that Day at a Conference of the two Houſes: And on December the 18th the Debate ariſing in the Houſe of Commons, Mr. Grimſton made an aggravating Speech, and concluded with a Motion, To ſtrike while the Iron was hot, and to go up to the Lords in the Name of the Commons, and to accuſe him of High Treaſon, and to deſire their Lordſhips his Perſon may be ſequeſtred; and that in convenient time they would bring up his Charge. And accordingly Mr. Denzil Hollis went up to the Lords and deliver'd the ſaid Charge. Upon which the Archbiſhop was commanded to withdraw; but deſiring firſt the liberty of Speaking, he ſpoke to this effect: " That he was heartily ſorry for the " Offence taken againſt him; and that he was " moſt unhappy to have his Eyes open to ſee that " Day, and his Ears to hear ſuch a Charge; but " humbly deſired their Lordſhips to look upon " the whole courſe of his Life, which was ſuch, " as that he did verily perſuade himſelf, not one " Man in the Houſe of Commons did believe in " his Heart, that he was a Traitor. At which the Earl of Eſſex interrupted him, and ſaid, That Speech of his was a Scandal put upon the whole Houſe of Commons, that they ſhould charge him with ſo high a Crime which themſelves did not believe. " He then " humbly deſired that he might be proceeded with " in the ancient Parliamentary way of England. To this the Lord Say excepted, as if he would preſcribe them how they ſhould proceed. So he withdrew; and being called in again to the Bar, was delivered to the Uſher of the Black Rod, to be kept in ſafe Cuſtody, till the Houſe of Commons ſhould farther Impeach him. On December the 21ſt he was condemn'd, by an Order of the Houſe of Lords, to pay Five hundred Pounds to Sir Robert Howard for falſe Impriſonment, by a Decree of the High Commiſſion. After ten Weeks Reſtraint in the Uſher's Houſe, the Charge was brought up to the Lords by Sir Henry Vane junior, on February the 26th, conſiſting of Fourteen General Articles. Upon which he was brought to the Houſe; and after the Articles were read, he ſpoke to this effect: " That " it was a great and heavy Charge, and he muſt 1640. 16 Car. I. " be unworthy to live if it could be made good " againſt him. However, it was yet but in Generals, and Generals made a great Noiſe, but no " Proof. For humane Frailties he could not acquit " himſelf: but for Corruption in the leaſt degree, " he fear'd no Accuſer that would ſpeak Truth. " But that which went neareſt to him was, that " he ſhould be thought foul and falſe in the Profeſſion of his Religion; as if he ſhould profeſs with " the Church of England, and have his Heart at " Rome. This, he confeſs'd, troubled him exceedingly. Then he beſought their Lordſhips that he might enlarge himſelf, and ſo made his Vindication to every Article with great Eloquence and Strength of Argument. But he was to be a Sacrifice to an Army and to the People: and therefore on Monday March 1. he was carried in Mr. Maxwell's Coach through the City to the Tower. All was quiet till he came to Cheapſide: " There (ſays he) ſome one " Prentice firſt hallowed out, and more and more " followed the Coach (the Number ſtill encreaſing " as they went) till by that time I came to the " Exchange the Shouting was exceeding great. And " ſo they followed me with Clamour and Revilings " even beyond Barbarity it ſelf, not giving over " till the Coach was enter'd in at the Tower-Gate. " Mr. Maxwell, out of his Love and Care, was extremely troubled at it; but, I bleſs God for it, " my Patience was not moved: I looked upon a " higher Cauſe than the Tongues of Shimei and his " Children.

Severe Proceedings againſt him.

His Speech

Outrage of the People.

The Abp. moſt averſe to Popery.

It appears plain, that though the Archbiſhop had ſome hopes to reconcile the more moderate Papiſts by a ſeeming Compliance in ſome innocent matters, yet he was in his Judgment and Reſolutions moſt averſe to Popery, and was indeed well known by that Faction to be their greateſt Enemy. And therefore there was a Treaſon plotted by Signior Con and his Complices in England, wherein they reſolved that the Life of the Archbiſhop muſt be firſt taken away, before they could hope to get their Will of the King. This Plot was diſcovered to Sir William Boſwell his Majeſty's Agent in Holland; and the Letters and Papers ſent over, which are all now publiſhed, and are a Demonſtration that the Papiſts, who knew their own Intereſt, did know that the Archbiſhop was the greateſt Obſtructor of it. " Now this (ſays he) is a hard Straight into " which I am caſt: The Pope's Agent plots my " Death becauſe I will not be wrought upon to " help bring in the Roman Superſtition; and the " Parliament, on the other ſide, Articles to overthrow me, out of a Jealouſie that I go about to " bring it in.

Troub. & Trial of Abp. Laud p. 163.

1641. 17 Car. I. Had more againſt his Enemies than they againſt him

This Year 1641. muſt begin with the Fall of the greateſt Stateſman and Soldier of the Age, Thomas Earl of Strafford, who at the opening of the Parliament in November laſt was at the Head of the King's Army in the North, while the Scots were labouring to take him Priſoner at Weſtminſter. For this Plot, many Iriſh People were encourag'd to prefer their Complaints to the Houſe of Commons in England, and to ſue for Relief from Oppreſſion and Male-Government. This Practice, that was now laid for a Snare to this great Man, turn'd by Divine Juſtice into a Prejudice to the whole Kingdom of Ireland, by Appeals and Reviews, and including Powers that made their Courts and very Parliaments more depending. Upon this Complaint of the Subjects in Ireland, Nov. 6. a Grand Committee was appointed to conſider of that Grievance. The Friends of the Lord Strafford knew the Meaning, and ſent him notice of it, leaving to his own Prudence, whether he would ſtay at the Head of the Army, or come up to the Houſe. Thoſe about him diſſwaded him from expoſing himſelf to a confederate Malice, adviſed him to keep in his Poſt of Command in the Engliſh Army, or ſtep over to his Army in Ireland, or retire into foreign Parts, till things were more calm and cool. But a ſenſe of Honour and his own Innocence made him reſolve to go directly to Parliament, and ſtand the Storm that was there riſing againſt him. He took one Method of Defence that wanted nothing but Expedition; for he had got good Evidence in the North, that the Scots came in by Invitation and Confederacy between the Heads of the Covenanters and ſome of the Engliſh Members of both Houſes: which Intelligence he had almoſt digeſted into the Form of an Impeachment, and intended to preſent it to the Houſe of Peers. But the leading Commons were too quick for him; for on November 11. Mr. Pym carried up an Impeachment of High Treaſon, and the Lords ſequeſtred him from their Houſe, and committed him to Cuſtody. And then came the Scotiſh Commiſſioners with a moſt bitter and virulent Declaration againſt him, preſſing vehemently the Trial of him, and intimating there could be no Treaty of Peace between the two Kingdoms, before exemplary Juſtice was done upon that Earl.

1641. Fall of the E. of Strafford.

Too confident of his own Innocence

Scots implacable againſt him.

In this impetuous Haſte, two exorbitant Steps were taken to expedite the Trial: the Firſt, For a Committee to be ſettled of both Houſes for the taking Preparatory Examinations; which was indeed an Inquiſition contrary to the Practice of former times, and capable of extorting Evidence in any other crafty Proſecution of innocent Men: The Second was, For the examining upon Oath Privy Counſellors, upon ſuch matters as had paſs'd at the Council Table. This indeed could not have been without the Conſent of the King and his Council: They, conſcious of no ill Myſteries that would not bear the Light, did unhappily conſent. " The Damage (ſays a " Stateſman) was not to be expreſs'd, and the Ru- " in that Act brought to the King was irreparable; " for beſides that it ſerv'd their Turn to prove thoſe " Words againſt the Earl which Sir Harry Vane ſo " punctually remembred; and beſides that it was " matter of Horror to the Counſellors, to find that " they might be arraign'd for every raſh Word they " had uſed there; it baniſh'd for ever all future " freedom from that Board, &c.

Extraordinary Methods of Proceeding againſt him.

Clar. Hiſt. of Rebell.

On Monday March the 22d the Earl was brought to his Trial in Weſtminſter-hall; and next Day Mr. Pym began to open the Evidence with great Indignation. The Trial laſted eighteen Days; in all which time, " The Earl behaved himſelf with great " ſhew of Humility and Submiſſion; and in truth " made his Defence with all imaginable Dexterity; " anſwering this Charge, and evading that, with " all poſſible Skill and Eloquence: And though he " knew not till he came to the Bar, upon what " parts of his Charge they would proceed againſt " him, or what Evidence they would produce, he " took very little time to recollect himſelf, and " left nothing unſaid that might make for his own " Juſtification.

Trial begins.

The Earl makes a good Defence.

The moſt terrible (yet malicious and falſe) Allegation againſt him, was the Evidence given by Sir Harry Vane Secretary of State, " That upon Diſ- " ſolution of the laſt Parliament the King adviſ'd " with his Cabinet Council what Courſe he ſhould " now take, ſince he fail'd of the Aſſiſtance he expe- " cted by Subſidies. The E. of Strafford anſwer'd, Sir " you have now done your Duty, and your Subjects " have fail'd in theirs; and therefore you are abſol- " ved from the Rules of Government, and may ſup- " ply your ſelf by extraordinary ways: You have an " Army in Ireland with which you may reduce this Kingdom. The Earl poſitively deny'd the Words; and the other Privy Counſellors examin'd to them did all upon Oath declare, that they did not hear thoſe Words: Nay, and the Lord Digby in the Houſe of Commons, a ſufficient Adverſary to the Earl, did afterward, in a pathetical Speech, obſerve, that thoſe Words upon which the Impeachment was principally grounded, were ſo far from being prov'd by two Witneſſes, that he could not acknowledge it to be Malicious Evidence.

by

1641. 17 Car. I. by one; ſince he could not admit Sir Henry Vane to be a competent Witneſs, who being firſt examin'd, denied that the Earl ſpoke thoſe Words; and at his ſecond Examination remember'd ſome, and at his third the reſt of 'em.

Impeachment chang'd into a Bill of Attainder.

Nay, the proſecuting Party were ſo conſcious of the Earl's Innocence, at leaſt of their Defect of Evidence againſt him, that they were forced to change their Impeachment into a Bill of Attainder, which April 19. was paſſed in the Houſe of Commons, No's 59, Yea's 204, and carried to the Lords, who agreed to hear the matter of Law pleaded by the Council of Commons, among whom Mr. Sollicitor St. Johns offer'd two inſufferable Arguments; 1. That tho' Teſtimony was not ſo clear, yet in this way of Bill, private Satisfaction to each Man's Conſcience was ſufficient, although no Evidence had been given in at all. 2. That the Earl had no Title to plead Law, becauſe he had broke the Law. It's true (ſays he) we give Law to Hares and Deers, becauſe they be Beaſts of Chaſe; but it was never accounted either Cruelty or foul Play to knock Foxes and Wolves on the Head as they can be found, becauſe theſe be Beaſts of Prey.

Shameful Arguments of the Sollicitor General.

This Bill was depending and ſticking in the Houſe of Lords, when the King came, and ſending for the Commons, told both Houſes, "That he could not "in Conſcience condemn the Earl of High Treaſon; "for he muſt tell them three great Truths, 1. That "he never had any Intention of bringing over the "Iriſh Army into England, nor ever was adviſed by "any body ſo to do. 2. That there never was any "Debate before him, neither in publick Council, "nor at private Committee, of the Diſloyalty and "Diſaffection of his Engliſh Subjects, nor had he "ever any ſuſpicion of them. 3. That he was never "counſell'd by any to alter the leaſt of any of the "Laws of England, much leſs to alter all the Laws. "Yet he ſhould be content to have the Earl con-"demn'd for Miſdemeanour, and made incapable "to ſerve in any Place of Truſt.

King's Speech for the Earl

Inflames his Enemies.

This Speech did but more inflame the ſworn Enemies of the Earl, who pretended to diſcover Plots for his Eſcape; and enter into a Proteſtation taken by the Speaker and moſt of the Members; and encourag'd Petitions and Clamours for Juſtice; and a Black Liſt of the Straffordians to be poſted up, and cry'd about the Streets; till many of the Lords, for fear of Violence, abſented from their own Houſes; and the Biſhops declined Voting in the Act, as well as Appearing in the Trial: tho' it was not believ'd (ſays the Hiſtorian) now the formal Trial and way of Judicature was waved, the Biſhops would ſo ſtupidly (to ſay no worſe) exclude themſelves from Voting in a Law which was to be an Act of Parliament. So that in an Afternoon, when of the Fourſcore who had been preſent at the Trial, there were only Six and forty Lords in the Houſe, (the People crying at the doors for Juſtice) the Bill paſs'd, with the Diſſent only of eleven Peers.

L. Clarend.

Bill paſs'd the Lords.

K. ſeems reſolv'd to reject it.

The King was firmly reſolved not to give his Conſent: but to give all poſſible Satisfaction in it, he adviſ'd firſt with his Privy Council, who moſt of them preſs'd him to paſs the Bill upon this Argument, That he ought to be more tender of the Safety of the Kingdom, than of any one Perſon how innocent ſoever. His Majeſty then adviſed with the Biſhops, who in general reſolved him, that he ought not to go againſt his own Conſcience for any Conſideration whatſoever. But (ſays the ſame Hiſtorian) the Archbiſhop of York told him, that there was a private and a publick Conſcience; that his publick Conſcience as a King might not only diſpenſe with, but oblige him to do that which was againſt his private Conſcience as a Man. —— And by ſuch Imprelatical ignominious Arguments, in plain Terms adviſed him, even for Conſcience ſake, to paſs that Act.

Unhappy Diſtinction.

E. deſires the K. to paſs the Bill,

While the King was under infinite Perplexities in his own Mind, and under the moſt imminent Dangers of Aſſaults of the Rabble in his own Palace, who were taught the Word Juſtice, Juſtice; the Earl wrote a Letter May 4. from the Tower to his Majeſty, to offer up his Life for a Sacrifice to the Publick, —— "With much ſadneſs I am come "to a Reſolution of that which I take to be beſt "becoming me, and to look upon it as that which "is moſt principal in it ſelf, which doubtleſs is the "Proſperity of your ſacred Perſon and the Com-"monwealth, things infinitely before any private "Man's Intereſt. And therefore in few Words, as "I put my ſelf wholly upon the Honour and Juſtice "of my Peers, ſo clearly as to wiſh your Majeſty "might pleaſe to have ſpared that Declaration of "yours on Saturday laſt, and entirely to have left "me to their Lordſhips; ſo now, to ſet your Ma-"jeſty's Conſcience at liberty, I do moſt humbly "beſeech your Majeſty, for Prevention of Evils "which may happen by your Refuſal, to paſs this "Bill; and by this means to remove (praiſed be "God) I cannot ſay this accurſed, but (I confeſs) "this unfortunate thing forth of the way towards "that bleſſed Agreement which God (I truſt) ſhall "ever eſtabliſh between you and your Subjects. "Sir, My Conſent ſhall more acquit you herein to "God, than all the World can do beſides: To a "willing Man there is no Injury done: and as by "God's Grace I forgive all the World with a Calm-"neſs and Meekneſs of infinite Contentment to my "diſlodging Soul; ſo, Sir, to you I can give the "Life of this World with all the chearfulneſs ima-"ginable in the juſt Acknowledgment of your ex-"ceeding Favours, and only beg that in your Good-"neſs you would vouchſafe to caſt your gracious "Regard upon my poor Son and his three Siſters, "leſs or more, and no otherwiſe than as their (in "preſent) unfortunate Father may hereafter appear "more or leſs guilty of this Death. God long pre-"ſerve your Majeſty.

1641. 17 Car. I.

In an admirable Letter.

On Friday May 7. the Lords paſſed the Bill of Attainder, with the like unreaſonable and more fatal Bill for Continuance of the preſent Parliament. Next day the Commons deſired the Lords to join with them to move his Majeſty for his Conſent. And the day following, being Sunday May 9. the King conſulted with his Privy Council, and Judges, and Biſhops; and in fine, with the utmoſt Reluctancy, the King commiſſion'd the Earl of Arundel, the Lord Privy Seal, and two other Peers, to paſs the two Bills; which was accordingly done May 10. The King next day betrayed the Affliction of his Conſcience by writing a Letter to the Lords, and ſending it by the Prince.

King paſſes the Bill by Commiſſion.

My Lords,

"I Did yeſterday ſatisfie the Juſtice of this King-"dom by paſſing the Bill of Attainder againſt "the Earl of Strafford: but Mercy being as inhe-"rent and inſeparable to a King as Juſtice, I deſire "at this time in ſome meaſure to ſhew That like-"wiſe, by ſuffering that unfortunate Man to fulfill "the natural courſe of his Life in a cloſe Impriſon-"ment: yet ſo, if ever he make the leaſt Offer to "eſcape, or offer directly or indirectly to meddle "in any ſort of publick Buſineſs, eſpecially with "Me either by Meſſage or Letter, it ſhall coſt him "his Life without farther Proceſs. This, if it may "be done without the Diſcontentment of my Peo-"ple, will be an unſpeakable Contentment to me. "To which end, as in the firſt place, I by this Let-"ter do earneſtly deſire your Approbation, and to "endear it more, have choſen him to carry it that "of all your Houſe is moſt dear to me; ſo I de-"ſire, that by a Conference you will endeavour to "give the Houſe of Commons Contentment, aſſu-"ring you that the exerciſe of Mercy is no more "pleaſing to me, than to ſee both Houſes of Parli-"ament conſent for my ſake, that I ſhould mode-"rate the ſeverity of the Law in ſo important a "Caſe.

Then intercedes for the Earl by Letter to the Lords.

1641. 14 Car. I.

" I will not ſay that your complying with me in " this my intended Mercy, ſhall make me more wil- " ling; but certainly 'twill make me more chearful " in granting your juſt Grievances: But if no leſs " than his Life can ſatisfie my People, I muſt ſay, " Fiat Juſtitia. Thus again recommending the con- " ſideration of my Intention to you, I reſt

Charles R.

P.S. If he muſt die it were Charity to reprieve him till Saturday.

On Wedneſday May 12. the Earl was brought to the Scaffold upon Tower-Hill; as he paſſed near the Lodgings of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury (whom he had deſired by a Meſſage to be at the Window and to Bleſs him as he went to Execution) he look'd up, and bowing ſaid, My Lord, your Prayers and your Bleſſing. The Archbiſhop lift up his Hands for the ſign of beſtowing both, but was ſo overcome with Grief that he fell back in a ſwoond; the Earl bowed again, and ſaid, Farewel, my Lord, God protect your Innocency. Many of the Spectators obſerved, that he walked more like a General, at the Head of an Army, than like a condemn'd Man. The Lieutenant deſir'd him to take Coach, for fear the People ſhould ruſh in upon him and tear him in Pieces: No, (ſaid he) Maſter Lieutenant, I dare look Death in the Face, and I hope the People too. Have you a care that I do not eſcape, and I care not how I die, whether by the Hand of the Executioner, or the Madneſs and Fury of the People, if that may give them better Content; it is all one to me. Upon the Scaffold attended by the Archbiſhop of Armagh, the Earl of Cleveland, his Brother Sir George Wentworth, and his own Chaplain, he delivered his Speech with a very compos'd and courageous Air; the chief Parts were as follow.

Brought to the Scaffold.

His dying Speech.

——— " I ſpeak in the preſence of Almighty " God, before whom I ſtand, that there is not a diſ- " pleaſing Thought that ariſeth in me againſt any " Man: I thank God, I ſay truly, my Conſcience " bears me witneſs, that in all the Honour I had to " ſerve his Majeſty, I had not any Intention in " my Heart but what did aim at the joint and in- " dividual Proſperity of the King and his People.---- " I was ſo far from being againſt Parliaments, that " I did always think Parliaments in England to be " the happieſt Conſtitution of the Kingdom and Na- " tion, and the beſt Means, under God, to make " the King and his People happy. ——— I profeſs " heartily my Apprehenſion, and do humbly re- " commend it to you, and wiſh that every Man " would lay his Hand on his Heart and conſider ſe- " rioufly, whether the beginning of the Peoples " Happineſs ſhould be written in Letters of Blood; I " fear they are in a wrong way. I deſire Almigh- " ty God, that no one drop of my Blood riſe up in " Judgment againſt them; I have but one Word " more, and that is for my Religion. My Lord of " Armagh, I do profeſs my ſelf ſeriouſly, faithfully " and truly to be an Obedient Son of the Church " of England. In that Church I was born and bred, " in that Religion I have lived, and now in that I " die: Proſperity and Happineſs be ever to it.—— " The Lord ſtrengthen my Faith, and give me " Confidence and Aſſurance in the Merits of " Chriſt Jeſus. I truſt in God we ſhall All meet " to live eternally in Heaven, and receive the Ac- " compliſhment of all Happineſs; where every " Tear ſhall be wiped from our Eyes, and ſad " Thoughts from our Hearts: And ſo God bleſs " this Kingdom, and Jeſus have Mercy on my " Soul.

After this Speech he pray'd out of the Common Prayer-Book, laid by his Chaplain before him; and then uſed ſome private Devotions, concluding with the Lord's-Prayer; then taking leave of his Brother, he ſaid, Brother, we muſt part; Remember me to my Siſter and to my Wife; and carry my Bleſſing to my eldeſt Son, and charge him from me that he fear God, and continue an obedient Son of the Church of England, and that he approve himſelf a faithful Subject of the King; and tell him, that he ſhould not have any private Grudge or Revenge towards any concerning me; and bid him beware to meddle not with Church-Livings, for that will prove a Moth and Canker to him in his Eſtate; and wiſh him to content himſelf to be a Servant to his Country, as a Juſtice of Peace in his County, not aiming at higher Preferments, &c.

1641. 17 Car. I.

The Executioner ſtruck off his Head at one blow: and ſo fell this noble Earl, who if his Maſter could have ſaved him, might have been able to ſave his Maſter: This was indeed the blow that by degrees reach'd up to the King's own Head. Take his Character thus given by the Lord Clarendon. Thus fell the greateſt Subject in Power, and little inferiour to any in Fortune, that was at that time in any of the three Kingdoms; who could well remember the time when he led thoſe People who then purſued him to his Grave. He was a Man of great Parts, and extraordinary Endowments of Nature, not unadorn'd with ſome addition of Art and Learning: But to return to the courſe of other Affairs. While the two Houſes were enter'd upon meaſures ſo apparently againſt the Inclination and the Intereſt of the King, they had reaſon to fear, that he might truſt to his Armies rather than to his Parliament. Two Armies he yet had, one in Ireland and the other in the North againſt the Scots. And therefore the Care of the leading Members was to deprive the King of any ſuch laſt Reſort. Hence April 6. the Commons reſolv'd, " That during the " Seſſion of this Parliament, neither the King's Ar- " my nor any of the Train'd-Bands of Yorkſhire, " ſhould march or advance without ſpecial Order of " his Majeſty, with the Advice and Conſent of both " Houſes of Parliament, except in caſe the Scotiſh Ar- " my ſhould paſs the Limits appointed by the Treaty. And for the Iriſh Army, of which they were more afraid, becauſe the Officers were leſs at their Devotion; they importun'd the King for a ſpeedy diſbanding of it, and prevailed with him ſo to diſable himſelf, after he had thus ſpoke to the two Houſes on Wedneſday Apr. 28.

King's Speech.

" FOR the Iriſh Army, you muſt underſtand, I " am already upon conſultation how to disband " it, but I find many Difficulties in it. Therefore " I hold it not only fit to wiſh it, but to ſhew the " way how it may be conveniently done. This is " not all I deſire; but ſince you have mentioned the " disbanding of Armies, it is my Duty to my Coun- " try to with for disbanding of all Armies, and to " reſtore the ſame Peace to all my three Kingdoms " that the King, my Father, did leave them in: " And I conjure you, as you will anſwer the ſame " to God and to the Country, to join with me hear- " tily and ſpeedily, for the disbanding of the two " Armies in England; to which end there are two " things requiſite, Money and the Concluſion of " the Scots Treaty. ——

For keeping up the Scots Army.

But indeed the Managers in the Parliament intended to keep the Scots Army as in their own Pay and Service, and therefore from time to time renewed the Pacification without concluding the Treaty. And they ſo applied themſelves to the Engliſh Army, as if it muſt now enter into the new Service of the two Houſes. For a formal Letter was drawn up by a Committee, and ſent by Mr. Ruſhworth to the Army, with promiſe of Proviſion and all ſuitable Supplies. And to make the Combination perfect, there was a ſolemn Form of Proteſtation drawn up, for promiſing, vowing and proteſting to maintain and defend, with Life, Power and Eſtate, the true Refor-

1641. 17 Car. I. Reformed Proteſtant Religion, expreſſed in the Doctrine of the Church of England, againſt all Popery and Popiſh Innovation, &c. taken by the Houſe of Commons May 3. and carried up next Day to the Lords with a deſire of their Concurrence, who generally took it, and ſet a Preſident for the Solemn League and Covenant that came ſoon after.

They had little now to fear, but that the King would exert his Prerogative in proroguing or diſſolving the Parliament; they had gained the Point for frequent Seſſions, but it would be now better to make this one Seſſion perpetual; and therefore May 7. the Commons ſent up to the Lords a Continuance-Bill, or An Act to prevent Inconveniences that may happen by the untimely Adjourning, Proroguing and Diſſolving this preſent Parliament, which was agreed to, and paſs'd by Commiſſion the Royal Aſſent May 10. on which Day Mr. Treaſurer brought a kind Meſſage to the Commons and ſaid, By this you may ſee how ready his Majeſty is to ſatisfie all our juſt Requeſts, and is reſolv'd to repoſe himſelf upon the Affections of his People.

Moſt fatal Bill.

On May 13. the King in Perſon gave his conſent to three other Bills. 1. For the Abbreviation of Michaelmaſs Term. 2. For the Preſſing Mariners for the King's Ships. 3. For the Remainder of the ſix entire Subſidies.

Commons in a perfect Conſpiracy with the Scots.

May 17. Reſolved by the Commons, "That this "Houſe doth approve of the Affection of their Bre- "thren of Scotland, in their deſire of a Conformity "in Church-Government between the two Nations, "and doth give them Thanks for the ſame. So as the Conſpiracy of the Malecontents in both Kingdoms began now to diſcover it ſelf againſt Epiſcopacy and Monarchy. Hence a Paper, called the Scots Belief, was referred to the Committee for Printing May 18. and next Day the Bill was read to take away the Biſhops Votes in Parliament. And upon this proſpect of Confuſion, Dr. Juxon Biſhop of London, reſigned his Treaſurer's Staff, and that Office was put into Commiſſion.

May 21. Upon a Meſſage from the Lords for diſbanding the Armies, Mr. Treaſurer reported, that there was in Arrear due to the Scots 120000 l. beſides the 300000 l. and it was voted by both Houſes, that the two Armies ſhould be disbanded and ſatisfied next Month. In the Debate upon raiſing Money for this purpoſe June 2. it was found that no leſs than eight hundred thouſand Pounds would ſuffice. And becauſe the King was preparing for another Progreſs into Scotland, for fear he ſhould in his Paſſage thither influence the Armies that lay upon his Road, it was reſolved June 16. "That both Houſes be hum- "ble Suitors to his Majeſty, that the Armies may "be disbanded before the King's going into the "North, and all parts of the Kingdom put into a "poſture of Defence. Upon which the Earl of Holland General, was ſent down to disband the Engliſh Army. And on June 19. it was concluded that the Scots ſhould have three hundred thouſand Pounds paid for a condition of their disbanding.

Engliſh Army diſbanded.

Compliance of the King conteſt by his Enemies.

June 21. Sir Edward Deering a leading Member, did in a Speech acknowledge, that the King had yet denied them nothing; ſays he, We are all bound unto the Goodneſs of his ſacred Majeſty (God preſerve him and his for it) none of all our Bills, none of our Petitions this Parliament, have miſcarried in his Royal Hand, but have been all compleated with the Royal Aſſent. And indeed the Compliance of the King to all the Reſolutions of his Parliament did abundantly demonſtrate, that he yet thought of no future War with them. If he had meant Fighting, or could have foreſeen it, he would never have ſo diſarm'd himſelf and diſabled his Friends.

June 22. the Commons having condemn'd the taking of the old cuſtomary Tonnage and Poundage without conſent of Parliament, drew up a Bill to ſettle it as a Gift of the two Houſes to the King, who at the paſſing of it made this Speech.

1641. 17 Car. I.

King's Speech at paſſing the Bill for Tonnage and Poundage.

"I Do very willingly accept your Offer made at "this time, as a Teſtimony of your Love, and "beginning of your dutiful Affections to me: and "I no way doubt but that you will perform that "which you have intimated unto me, and that in "due time you will perform the reſt when you have "leiſure.

"I doubt not likewiſe, but that in paſſing this "Bill, you will ſee a Teſtimony of the truſt and "confidence I have in your Affections; as alſo that "I omit no occaſion whereby I may ſhew that Af- "fection to my People that I deſire my People "would ſhew to me; as in this Parliament hither- "to no Body can ſay, but that I have ſought occa- "ſions, both to ſhew my Affections unto them and "to remove Diſputes.

"And therefore in this particular Bill I hope you "will know, that I do freely and frankly give over "the Right which my Predeceſſors have ever chal- "lenged unto them (though I confeſs diſputed, but "yet they did never yield it in their Times) there- "fore you will underſtand this but as a mark of my "confidence, to put my ſelf wholly upon the Love "and Affection of my People for my Subſiſtence; "and therefore I hope that in proſecution of this you "will go on as you have ſaid. And tho' you have "rumours of Jealouſies, and Suſpicions by flying "and idle Diſcourſes that have come to my Ears, con- "cerning the Extraordinary Way, I confeſs I never "underſtood it otherwiſe than as having relation "to the Scotiſh Army, and preventing Inſurrection, "which vaniſhed as ſoon as they were born.

"And therefore now you ſee my Clearneſs, I "will leave that to you, and will not meddle with "it one way or other; for I never had other De- "ſign, but to win the Affections of my People by "my Juſtice in my Government.

The Parliament afraid of the King's going to Scotland.

The two Houſes were ſtill afraid of the King's intended Journey to Sotland, and therefore made ſeveral Propoſitions to retard it; which was likely to have created ſome difference between the Engliſh and Scotch Brethren. For June 26. the Scots Commiſſioners acquaint the Commons, that they having heard as if the Parliament would endeavour to diſſuade his Majeſty from his Royal Intentions of going into Scotland, they found themſelves obliged to ſay, that the ſame would be a great Prejudice to them. However on this ſame Day the Commons thought fit to move the Lords, to join in Petitioning his Majeſty, that he would be pleaſed not to begin his Journey into Scotland till the 12th of Auguſt.

But he was not to go in Peace without paſſing the two Bills prepared for taking away the High-Commiſſion Court and the Star-Chamber, which were ancient Courts that had indeed of late exceeded their original Juriſdiction, and might want to be reformed; but nothing would ſatisfy without aboliſhing of them. And therefore on July 5. the King aſſented with this Speech.

King's Speech at paſſing the Bills againſt High Commiſſion and Star-Chamber Courts.

"I Am come to do the Office which I did defer "on Saturday laſt, to give determination to theſe "two Bills; but before I do it I muſt tell you, that "I cannot but be very ſenſible of thoſe Reports of "Diſcontent that I hear ſome have taken, for my "not giving my conſent on Saturday. Methinks it "ſeems ſtrange that any one ſhould think I could "paſs two Bills of that importance as theſe were, "without taking ſome fit time to conſider of them: "For it is no leſs than to alter in a great meaſure "thoſe fundamental Laws Eccleſiaſtical and Ci- "vil, which many of my Predeceſſors have eſta- "bliſhed.

"If you conſider what I have done this Parlia- "ment, diſcontent will not ſit in your Hearts: For "I hope you remember I have granted, that the "Judges hereafter ſhall hold their Places Quamdiu bene ſe geſſerint. I have bounded the Foreſts not accor-

1641. 17 Car. I. " according to my Right, but according to late " Cuſtoms. I have eſtabliſhed the Property of the " Subjects, as witneſs the free giving, not the ta- " king away of Ship-money. I have eſtabliſhed by " Act of Parliament the Property of the Subject in " Tonnage and Poundage, which never was done in " any of my Predeceſſors time. I have granted a " Law for a Triennial Parliament; and given way " to an Act for the ſecuring of Moneys advanced " for the Diſbanding of the Armies. I have given " free courſe of Juſtice againſt Delinquents. I have " put the Laws in execution againſt the Papiſts. " Nay, I have given way to every thing that you " have asked of me; and therefore methinks you " ſhould not wonder, if in ſome things I begin to " refuſe: But I hope it ſhall not hinder your Pro- " greſs in your great Affairs, and I will not ſtick " upon trivial Matters to give you Content. I hope " you are ſenſible of theſe beneficial Favours be- " ſtowed on you at this time.

" To conclude, You know by your Conſent, there " is a preſixed time ſet for my going into Scotland, " and there is an abſolute Neceſſity for it. I do " not know, but things may ſo fall out, that it " may be ſhortned: therefore I hope you will haſten " the diſpatching of thoſe great Buſineſſes that now " are neceſſary to be done, and leave trivial and " ſuperficial Matters to another Meeting.

" For my part, I ſhall omit nothing that may " give you juſt Contentment, and ſtudy nothing " more than your Happineſs. And therefore I hope " you ſhall ſee a very good Teſtimony of it by " Paſſing theſe two Bills.

Abuſe of the King's Goodneſs.

But indeed the Condeſcenſions of the King did but elevate the Faction, who thought every Royal Conceſſion to be an Argument of their own Power, rather than of the King's Juſtice or Mercy. And therefore tho' his Majeſty favour'd the two Houſes by a Manifeſto approv'd by them in the Cauſe of the Palatinate; yet on July 6. the Commons proceeded in their Charge againſt the Judges, and carried up Articles of Impeachment againſt Sir Robert Berkley one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench, and againſt Sir Francis Crawley one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and againſt the Lord Chief Baron Davenport, Baron Weſton, and Baron Trevor: and appointed a Committee to receive Complaints againſt any other Miniſter of Juſtice, by which they gain'd this Advantage at leaſt, to keep many of the King's Friends under Dread and Silence.

Charge againſt the Judges.

July 28. the King ſent another Meſſage of his intended Journey toward Scotland Aug. 10. which the Commons labour'd to retard, by deſiring at a Conference with the Lords, that his Majeſty might be requeſted to appoint a Cuſtos Regni during his Abſence, and Commiſſion him to give the Royal Aſſent to Bills in Parliament. A Propoſal extravagant and illegal.

On Aug. 7. at another Conference with the Lords, Mr. Hollis offer'd Reaſons to move the King to ſtay his Journey: which brought the King the ſame day to the Houſe of Lords; where, in a ſhort Speech, he urged the Neceſſity of his ſpeedy Going. This raiſed greater Heats and Paſſions, and the Commons reſolved (and prevailed with the Lords to do the like) to ſit next day, being Sunday, thinking fit to excuſe it by a ſhort Declaration, that it ſhould not be drawn into Precedent.

On Monday Aug. 9. the King again told the Houſe of Peers, That his Faith was engaged to be in his Kingdom of Scotland, that he could not but go, that the condition of Affairs in that Kingdom required his Preſence, &c. So that on Tueſday Morning the King came again to the Houſe, and gave his Aſſent to an Act for the Treaty between the two Kingdoms; to a Bill for the prevention of vexatious Proceedings touching the Order of Knighthood; and to a Bill for regulating the Clerks of the Market: and ſign'd a limited Commiſſion to ſome Lords for paſſing Bills in his Abſence: and ſo took Leave of the two Houſes in a ſhort Speech, and began his Journey about Two that Afternoon.

King goes for Scotland.

1641. 17 Car. I.

The leading Members were ſtill afraid to truſt the King out of their own Sight; and therefore order'd, that a Committee of Lords and Commoners ſhould be ſent to the Parliament in Scotland, to remain there, and maintain a Correſpondence between the two Nations. Accordingly the Lord Howard, Mr. Hampden, and Sir Philip Stapleton, were ſent to be as it were Ambaſſadors from the Parliament, and Spies upon the King.

Parliam. ſet Spies upon him.

When his Majeſty came to York, he found no part of either Army disbanded, becauſe the Money was not yet return'd. While his Majeſty ſtaid at York, the E. of Holland, Lord General, made a Suit to the King for the Favour of making a Baron; which being denied by the King, the Earl turn'd a Malecontent; and as ſoon as ever the King was gone, he enter'd into a Correſpondence with the oppoſite Party, betray'd the King's Secrets, and became his moſt ungrateful and unfaithful Adverſary.

E. of Holland deſerts the King.

His Majeſty came ſafe to Edinburgh, and on Auguſt 19. made this Speech to the Parliament of Scotland.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech to Scots Parliament.

" THere hath been nothing ſo diſpleaſing to me, " as thoſe unlucky Differences which have " happen'd between Me and my People; and no- " thing that I have more deſired, than to ſee this " Day, wherein I hope not only to ſettle theſe un- " happy Miſtakings, but rightly to know and to " be known to my Native Country.

" I need not tell you (for I think it is well " known to moſt) what Difficulties I have paſſed " through and overcome, to be here at this preſent. " Yet this I will ſay, If Love to my Native Coun- " try had not been a chief Motive to this Journey, " other Reſpects might eaſily have found a ſhift to " do that by a Commiſſion, which I am come to " perform my ſelf.

" And this conſidered, I cannot doubt of ſuch " real Teſtimonies of your Affections for the Main- " tenance of that Royal Power which I enjoy af- " ter an hundred and eight Deſcents; and which " you have profeſſed to obtain; and to which your " own National Oath doth oblige you; that I ſhall " not think any Pains ill beſtow'd.

" Now the End of my Coming is ſhortly this; " To perfect whatſoever I have promiſed, and with- " all to quiet the Diſtractions which have and may " fall out amongſt you: And this I mind not ſuper- " ficially but fully and chearfully to perform. For " I aſſure you, that I can do nothing with more " Chearfulneſs, than to give my People a general " Satisfaction. Wherefore not offering to endear " my ſelf unto you in Words (which indeed is not " my Way) I deſire in the firſt place to ſettle that " which concerns the Religion and juſt Liberties of " this my Native Country, before I proceed to any " other Act.

Theſe are the moſt material things done in the Scots Parliament. Auguſt 26. Act anent the Ratifications of the Articles of Treaty, &c. Sept. 2. Act anent incovenanting Patrons. Nov. 6. Act in favour of Prince Elector Palatine, for ten thouſand Foot to be ſent into Germany. Novemb. 17. Act appointing the next Parliament to convene the firſt Tueſday of June 1644.

Engliſh Parliam.

The Engliſh Parliament ſitting without their King, were much more uneaſie. Aug. 16. the Lords receiving a perfidious Letter from the Earl of Holland Lord General, with obſcure Intimation as if there were new Practices and Deſigns againſt the Parliament, held a Conference with the Commons upon this Subject-matter: and the Commons to improve 1641. 17 Car. I. prove the Fears and Jealouſies, appointed a Committee to conſider of putting the Kingdom into a poſture of Defence. And to prepare a way for inveſting the two Houſes with the Legiſlature, on Auguſt 27. they made what they call'd an Ordinance of Parliament for a Day of Publick Thankſgiving, for the Peace between England and Scotland on Tueſday Sept. 7. And within twenty Days after the King's remove, the Houſe of Peers being reduc'd to not above twenty Lords, and the Houſe of Commons to little more than a hundred Members, and thoſe all Zealots for the new Cauſe; they made many exorbitant Votes and Declarations, till being weary and almoſt aſham'd, on Sept. 9. the two Houſes Adjourn'd to Octob. 20. but not without irregularly (for the like had never been before practis'd) making a Committee of each Houſe to meet twice a Week, and oftner if they ſaw cauſe, during the Receſs, and to tranſact ſuch Buſineſs as they were authoriz'd to do by their Inſtructions.

Receſs of the two Houſes.

Lord Clarend. Hiſt. of Rebel. B. iv. p. 233.

When the two Houſes after their Receſs met again, they got the Train'd-Bands of Weſtminſter to attend with their Arms in the Palace-yard; and proceeded in Speeches and Votes and Bills againſt the Biſhops, againſt Ceremonies, againſt the Liturgy, and to draw up a Remonſtrance of the State of the Kingdom.

Meet again with Guards.

While in Scotland the King had reaſon to be weary of the Place, for he found all things propoſed to him as to a vanquiſh'd Perſon, without conſideration of his Honour or his Intereſt; having not one Counſellor about him but the Duke of Lenox, and very few Followers who had either Affection to his Perſon or Reſpect of his Honour. But whatever Acts they were pleaſed to preſent to him concerning Church or State, the King confirm'd, and then gratified the Promoters of them. He made the Lord London who had been the principal Manager of the Rebellion, an Earl, and Chancellour of Scotland; he created the Earl of Argyle a Marquis; their General Leſly Earl of Leven, and their Lieutenant-General Earl of Calender; and conferred other Honours and Offices upon his greateſt Enemies, in hopes to reconcile and retain them. So that he ſeem'd to have made that Progreſs into Scotland, only that he might make a perfect Deed of Gift of that Kingdom, which he could never have done ſo abſolutely without going thither. And ſo having nothing more to do there, he began his Journey towards England about the middle of November.

King weary of Scotland.

Where in effect he gave away the Kingdom.

But to compleat the King's Misfortunes, and give him particular Plagues in every one of his three Kingdoms; about the middle of October came the News of the Iriſh Rebellion: For the Papiſts and old Natives taking advantage of the King's Neceſſities, and of the Army disbanding, and of the Earl of Leiceſter Lord Lieutenant's abſence in England, conſpired to deſtroy the Engliſh Proteſtants, and to ſecure the Kingdom in their own Hands. Their Deſign upon Dublin was miraculouſly diſcovered the Night before it was to be executed, and ſo the ſurprizal of that Caſtle prevented, and the principal Conſpirators apprehended. But in other parts they obſerv'd the Time appointed, and made their Inſurrection in ſuch an inhumane and barbarous manner, that there were forty or fifty thouſand Engliſh Proteſtants murther'd before they ſuſpected themſelves to be in Danger, or could provide for their Defence.

Iriſh Rebellion.

The King wrote from Scotland to the two Houſes, that he was ſatisfied this was no raſh Inſurrection, but a formed Rebellion, which muſt be ſuppreſt by a declared War, the Management of which he would leave to their Care and Wiſdom. This occaſioned a Committee of both Houſes to conſider of the Affairs of Ireland, and to provide for ſuppreſſing that Rebellion. And this Reference gave the Houſes another conſiderable ſtep to a ſeparate Power; acting in this Matter without the King, and enforcing ſeveral Orders with as much effect as if they had been legal Statutes; beſide the borrowing Monies and conferring Offices, and doing other Acts that gave them poſſeſſion of a large Power and Dependence, the Miſchief whereof, tho' in the beginning little taken notice of, was afterwards felt by the King very ſenſibly: Nay, and ſome of the artificial Managers took all occaſions to inſinuate, "That this Rebellion in Ireland was contrived and fomented by the King, or at leaſt by "the Queen, for the advancement of Popery; and "that the Rebels publiſh'd and declar'd, that they "had the King's Authority for all they did; which Calumny, though without the leaſt ſhadow or colour of Truth, made great impreſſion upon the Minds of ſober and moderate Men. The Iriſh Rebels did indeed pretend a Commiſſion under the Great-Seal, dated at Edinburgh Octob. 1. 1641. but the Impudence of this Calumny was proteſted againſt by the Lords Juſtices and Council in Ireland; and the whole Trick was afterward confeſt, how they forged the Commiſſion, and affix'd a broad Seal to it which they had taken off from an old Patent.

1641. 17 Car. I. Lord Clarendon.

Pretended Commiſſion.

But theſe and other vain Fears gave a better opportunity to a Committee in the Houſe of Commons, to draw up a Remonſtrance of the State of the Kingdom, and report it to the Houſe, in order to prepare it for the King's reception, who was now returning home. "It contained a very bitter Repreſentation "of things, with all the ſharp Reflections that could "be made, and all unreaſonable Jealouſies, &c. In "a Word, they left not any Error or Misfortune "in Government, or any paſſionate exerciſe of Po"wer unmentioned or unpreſs'd; with the ſharpeſt "and moſt pathetical Expreſſions to affect the Peo"ple, that the general Obſervation of the Wiſeſt, "or the particular Animoſity of the moſt Diſobli"ged, or ill affected Perſons could ſuggeſt to the "diſadvantage of the King, from the Death of his "Father to the unhappy beginning of the preſent Par"liament. The Houſe ſeemed generally to miſlike it, and many argued that it was both Unneceſſary and Unſeaſonable; Unneceſſary, all thoſe Grievances being already redreſs'd, and as good Security being given for the future as could poſſibly be done: And Unſeaſonable, after the King had gratified them in every thing they deſired, and after ſo long abſence in the ſettling the Diſorders in another Kingdom, which he had happily compos'd, to be now well-com'd home with ſuch a volume of Reproaches for what others had done amiſs, and which he himſelf had reformed. Sir Edward Deering ſpoke bluntly againſt it, Mr. Palmer and others proteſted againſt it. But after all the Oppoſition, by ſitting late and quarreling much, it was at laſt carried in the Affirmative by nine Voices, and ordered to be printed. 'Tis obſervable that the greateſt ſtickler for it was Oliver Cromwell, a Member hitherto obſcure, who ſollicited the Cauſe with vehement Applications, and after the paſſing, told the Lord Falkland with ſome Aſſeveration, that If the Remonſtrance had been rejected, he would have ſold all he had the next Morning, and never have ſeen England more; and he knew there were many other honeſt Men of the ſame Reſolution. So near was the poor Kingdom at that time to its Deliverance or to its Deſtruction.

Bitter Remonſtrance.

Oppos'd in vain.

Lord Clarendon.

On Thurſday November 25. the King paſſed thro' London, in his Return from Scotland, and was received and entertained by the Lord-Mayor, Sheriffs and Aldermen, with ſuch extraordinary Reſpect and Joy, that the King in anſwer to the Recorders Speech thank'd the good Citizens for their hearty Expreſſions of Love to him, and ſaid, "He could not expreſs "the Contentment he received herein, becauſe he "now ſaw that all thoſe Tumults and Diſorders "had only riſen from the meaner ſort of People, "and that the Affections of the better and main "part of the City had been ever Loyal and Af"fectionate to his Perſon and Government.

King returns.

King pleaſed with the City.

The King commanded the Guards that had been attending on the two Houſes to be diſmiſſed: This diſpleaſed thoſe Members who thought it a piece of State,

K. diſmiſſes the Guards of the two Houſes.

1641. 17 Car. I. State, and pretended it to be a needful Security: So the King was petitioned to continue them; to which when the King answered Novemb. 27. that he would order some Train'd-Bands to wait for a few Days, tho' he knew no cause they had of Fears, and it was a great trouble to his Subjects to perform that Service, and gave strange Apprehensions and Jealousies to the People. They appointed a Committee to draw up Reasons for a Guard, and desired such Guard might be under the Command of the Earl of Essex, which indeed foreboded the raising of an Army, and the chusing of their own General.

Remonstrance delivered. Decemb. 1. a committee of the House of Commons waited on the King at Hampton-Court, and delivered the Petition, and the large Remonstrance, read over to his Majesty by Sir Ralph Hopton, the King was much concerned at the Harshness of it, but promised an Answer, as soon as the weight of the Business would permit; and desired there should be no publishing that Declaration, till they had received his Answer to it. But they did publish it, and that by Order of the House; and the King in his Answer complained of his being sensible of that Disrespect; but however promised and assured them that he would do all that was possible for the Comfort and Happiness of his People.

King's Speech. Decemb. 2. the King came to the House of Lords and passed the Bill for Tonnage and Poundage with this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I Think it fit after so long absence at this first " occasion, to speak a few Words unto you, but " no ways in Answer to Mr. Speaker's learned Speech. " Albeit I have staid longer than I expected to have " done when I went away, yet in this I have kept " my Promise with you, that I have made all the " haste back again that the settling my Scotch Affairs " could any ways permit. In which I have had so " good success, that I will confidently affirm to you, " that I have left that Nation a most peaceable and " contented People; so that although I have a little " misreckon'd in Time, yet I was not deceived in " my End.

" But if I have deceived your Expectations a little in the time of my Return, I am assured that " my Expectation is as much and more deceived in " the condition wherein I hoped to have found Business at my Return. For since that before my going, I settled the Liberties of my Subjects, and " gave the Laws a free and orderly Course, I expected to have found my People reaping the Fruits " of these Benefits by living in quietness and satisfaction of Mind; but instead of this, I find them " disturb'd with Jealousies, Frights and Alarms of " dangerous Designs and Plots; in consequence of " which, Guards have been set to defend both Houses. I say not this as in doubt that my Subjects " Affections are any way lessen'd to me in this time " of my absence: For I cannot but remember to my " great comfort the joyful Reception I had now at " my entry into London; but rather, as I hope, that " my Presence will easily disperse these Fears: For " I being at perfect and true Affections to my People, as ever Prince did, or as good Subjects can " possibly desire. And I am so far from Repenting " me of any Act done in this Session for the good of " my People, that I protest if it were to do again " I would do it, and will yet grant what else can " be justly desired for satisfaction in point of Liberties, or in maintenance of the true Religion that is " here established.

" Now I have but one Particular to recommend " unto you at this time; it is Ireland, for which tho' " I doubt not your Care, yet methinks the Preparations for it go but slowly on. The occasion is " the fitter for me now to mention, because of the " arrival of two Lords from Scotland, who came instructed from my Council there (who now by Act " of Parliament have full Power for that purpose) " to answer that Demand which it pleased both " Houses to make me, by way of Petition, that met " me at Berwick, and which the Duke of Richmond " sent back by my Command to my Scotch Council. " Therefore my Desire is, that both Houses would " appoint a select Committee to end this Business " with these Noblemen. I must conclude in telling " you, that I seek my People's Happiness; for their " flourishing is my greatest Glory, and their Affections my greatest Strength.

1641. 17 Car. I.

Another Speech. On Decemb. 14. the King made another Speech to both Houses, to recommend the dispatch of reducing the Irish Nation to their true and wonted Obedience, and to take notice of the Bill for pressing of Soldiers now depending among them, declaring He would pass it, if it did not infringe or diminish his Prerogative; and offering to avoid Debate, that the Bill might pass with a Salvo Jure both for King and People. But this gave another occasion of quarreling to them who lay catching at occasions: And so a Remonstrance under the name of a Petition of the Lords and Commons in Parliament, was presented to the King setting forth, " That it is their ancient and undoubted Right, that his Majesty ought not to take notice of any Matter in agitation and Debate in either House of Parliament, but by their Information and Agreement, and ought not to propound any Condition, Provision or Limitation to any Bill or Act in Debate or Preparation; and declaring that these their Privileges had been broken to their great Sorrow and Grievance by his Majesty's Speech on Tuesday last Decemb. 14. and finally desiring to know the Names of the Persons who had given that evil Council, that they might receive condign Punishment.

Another Remonstrance.

Commons for confiding Men. Decemb. 23. the King removed Sir William Balfore from the Lieutenancy of the Tower, and placed Colonel Lunsford in that important Trust. The Majority of the Commons were afraid of him, and drew up Reasons of his being unfit for that Place, and would recommend Sir John Coniers to it. The Lords refused to join in any such Address, because they conceived it an Intrenchment upon his Majesty's Prerogative. Upon which the Commons make a separate Declaration of Colonel Lunsford's being unfit to be Lieutenant of the Tower, as being a Person whom the Commons of England could not confide in; and enter'd a Protestation against the Lords refusal to join with them; and sent two of their own Members to the Earl of Newport Constable of the Tower, to desire him to reside there and take custody of it, and encouraged and read in their House a Petition of the Apprentices of London for the security of the Tower, and let the Lord Mayor acquaint the King, that the Apprentices would rise if Lunsford were not remov'd; so that the King was forc'd to displace him on Sunday Night Decemb. 26. The Day following came the Mob to Westminster, crying, No Bishops, no Bishops; and made so great a Tumult, that the Lords in a Conference with the Commons insisted upon the speedy suppressing of these tumultuous Assemblies, and required a Declaration to be published for that purpose. The Commons only answered, " That their " House would agree to all good and lawful Ways " and Means for preventing of Tumults and Routs, " that shall be against the safety and privilege " of Parliament; but for printing a particular De- " claration the same was a matter that would re- " quire some time to be considered of. By which Answer they betray'd what was afterward sufficiently known, that the Apprentices and Mob were prepared and managed and invited by some leading Members. So as the King's Proclamation against Tumults, dated Decemb. 23. could have no effect but to encrease them, because the King was against them. Nay, and the Commons made this Concourse and Mutinies (which they artfully fomented) to be a new argument of their own Fears; and on Decemb 31. address'd to the King for a Guard, and demanded an Answer without Delay. The King did answer, " That he was wholly ignorant of the grounds of their King prefers Articles of Treaſon againſt 5 Members.

His Majeſty now finding that there could be no underſtanding between him and his Parliament, without detecting and proſecuting thoſe whom he thought the prime Leaders of the Faction. He order'd Sir Edward Herbert his Attorney General to prefer Articles, in the Houſe of Lords, of High-Treaſon and other Miſdemeanours againſt the Lord Kimbolton, Mr. Denzil Hollis, Sir Arthur Haſlerig, Mr. John Pym, Mr. John Hampden and Mr. William Stroud. This was accordingly done Jan. 3. and after reading the Articles, the Attorney deſired on his Majeſty's behalf, that a ſelect Committee, under a command of Secrecy, might be appointed to take the Examination of ſuch Witneſſes as the King ſhould produce. Upon this News, the Commons reſolv'd to ſtand by their Member, and order'd that if any Perſons whatſoever ſhould ſeal up their Trunks or Papers, or offer to ſeize upon their Perſons, it ſhould be lawful for ſuch Members to ſtand upon his Defence and make Reſiſtance. Soon after a Serjeant at Arms delivered this Meſſage at the Bar of the Commons. I am commanded by the King's Majeſty my Maſter, upon my Allegiance, that I ſhould come and repair to the Houſe of Commons, and require of Mr. Speaker five Gentlemen Members of the Houſe of Commons, and thoſe Gentlemen being deliver'd, I am commanded to arreſt them in his Majeſty's name of High-Treaſon. To which Demand the Houſe ſent Word to the King by ſome of their Members, that they would take the Matter into ſerious conſideration, and then give an Anſwer. The next Day Jan. 5. after Noon, the King attended by his own Guard and ſome few Gentlemen, went to the Houſe of Commons, and leaving his Attendants at the Door, went into the Houſe and took the Speaker's Chair, and ſaid thus.

King goes to the H. of Commons and demands the five Members.

Gentlemen,

" I Am ſorry for this occaſion of coming unto you; " yeſterday I ſent a Serjeant at Arms upon a very " important occaſion to apprehend ſome that by my " Command were accuſed of High-Treaſon; where- " unto I did expect Obedience and not a Meſſage. " And I muſt declare unto you here, that albeit no " King that ever was in England ſhall be more care- " ful of your Privileges, to maintain them to the " uttermoſt of his Power than I ſhall be; yet you " muſt know, that in caſes of Treaſon no Perſon hath " a Privilege: and therefore I am come to know if " any of theſe Perſons that were accuſed are here. " For I muſt tell you, Gentlemen, that ſo long as " theſe Perſons that I have accuſed (for no ſlight " Crime, but for Treaſon) are here, I cannot ex- " pect that this Houſe will be in the right way that " I do heartily wiſh it. Therefore I am come to " tell you, that I muſt have them wherever I find " them.

" Well! ſince I ſee all the Birds are flown, I do " expect from you that you ſhall ſend them unto me, " as ſoon as they return hither. But I aſſure you, " in the Word of a King, I never did intend any " Force, but ſhall proceed againſt them in a legal " and fair way, for I never meant any other.

" And now ſince I ſee I cannot do what I came " for, I think this no unfit occaſion to repeat what " I have ſaid formerly, that whatſoever I have done " in Favour and to the good of my Subjects, I do " mean to maintain it.

" I will trouble you no more, but tell you I do " expect as ſoon as they come to the Houſe, you " will ſend them to me, otherwiſe I muſt take my " own courſe to find them.

The five Members had withdrawn by Order of the Houſe. The King, when he had done his Speech, ask'd the Speaker, Where thoſe Perſons were? The Speaker excuſed his making any Anſwer, and the King went out, ſeveral of the Members crying out, Privilege, Privilege: The King in this ſurprizing Viſit was no doubt moſt welcome to his greateſt Enemies, becauſe they knew their advantage in it. His Friends were amazed; and 'tis thought no one Perſon was appriſed of it, but the Lord Digby who gave the Council, whoſe Integrity in this matter might be as well ſuſpected as his Wiſdom: For he let it be betray'd to the Houſe of Commons, and diſſembled his knowledge of it in the Houſe of Lords; and under the fatal effects of it deſerted the King and went over into Holland.

1641. 17 Car. I. Unhappy ſtep.

Nothing could have been more prejudicial to the King's Intereſt and Honour than this one imprudent Action, which if it had ſucceeded would have ſerv'd no purpoſe but that of blackening the King for breaking the ordinary courſe of Law and Juſtice; and being diſappointed was the more popular ſuggeſtion to Self-defence and open War. The Commons fell immediately upon remonſtrating againſt this breach of Privilege; and to prevent ſuch farther Aſſaults at Weſtminſter, they ſate in a Committee at Guild-Hall, and ſo work'd the City, and eſpecially the Apprentices and Rabble, into Diſorders and Tumults, that on Jan. 10. the King with his Royal Family were forc'd for their own ſafety to remove from White-Hall to Hampton-Court, thence to Windſor, and by degrees to York, coming no more to Weſtminſter till he was inglorioufly brought thither a Priſoner and as a Malefactor.

Commons make their advantage of it.

This one act of entering the Houſe of Commons would never be forgiven, tho' the good King did all that was poſſible to atone for this Raſhneſs. For on Jan. 12. his Majeſty ſent a gracious Meſſage to the Houſe, that He would wave his Proceedings againſt the five Members, and be as careful of their Privileges as of his own Life or Crown; and gave them freſh Aſſurances Jan. 14. and offer'd a general Pardon Feb. 2. yet nothing would do, they made a large Declaration againſt it; they encouraged Petitions out of the Country in abhorrence of it; they impeached the Attorney-General for preferring the Articles; and got a Sentence from the Lords to diſable him from being Member, Aſſiſtant or Pleader in either Houſe, and to commit him to Priſon during the Houſes pleaſure.

King repents of it.

And now in the King's abſence the majority of the two Houſes thought themſelves poſſeſs'd both of the Legiſlature and of the Executive Power. They order'd a Guard to be ſet about the Tower, and took the Lieutenancy from Sir John Biron; drew in the Scotch Commiſſioners to offer a Mediation, or rather to offer their Service for the Parliament againſt the King; extorted the Militia out of the King's hands into their own; and ſent out repeated Declarations that did ſufficiently proclaim a War againſt him. While he acted with great Calmneſs and Moderation, ſending Meſſages, Anſwers and Replies, drawn up with admirable Reaſon and Temper; and making Propoſitions for the remedy of all Evils on Jan. 20. wherein he concludes, " How ready he will be to " exceed the greateſt Examples of the moſt indulgent " Princes in their Acts of Grace and Favour to their " People. So that if all the preſent Diſtractions " (which ſo apparently threaten the Ruin of this " Kingdom) do not by the Bleſſing of Almighty " God, end in a happy and bleſſed Accommodation, " his Majeſty will be ready to call Heaven and " Earth, God and Man to witneſs, that it hath not " failed on his part. And when on March 9. a Committee preſented to him at New-Market a Declaration of both Houſes, he made a moſt pathetical Speech to them, —— What would you have? Have I violated your Laws? Have I denied to paſs any Bill for the Eaſe and Security of my Subjects? I do not ask you what you have done for me. Have any of my People been tranſported with Fears and Apprehenſions? I have offer'd as free and general a Pardon as your ſelves can deviſe. All

2 Houſes without a King.

King's Pathetical Speech.

1641. 17 Car. I. this considered, there is a Judgment from Heaven upon this Nation, if these distractions continue. God so deal with me and mine, as all my Thoughts and Intentions are upright for the maintenance of the true Protestant Profession, and for the observation and preservation of the Laws of this Land; and I hope God will bless and assist those Laws for my Preservation.

As to Ecclesiastical Matters in this Year, they ought to have been interwoven with the Civil: for the whole Business of Religion was got within the Parliament; nothing done by the Supremacy of the King, or by the ordinary Jurisdiction of the Bishops. The House of Commons were the Church Representative, and were busie in destroying the Constitution of it.

Commons the sole Judges of Religion.

March 30. a Bill for the more free Passage of the Gospel, and a Bill to restrain Bishops and others in Holy Orders from intermeddling with Secular Affairs. Soon after, a Bill for repeal of a Statute 1 Eliz. concerning Commissions for Causes Ecclesiastical. And to terrifie the Convocation from daring to assert their Right, they order'd a Bill to be brought in for punishing and fining of the Members of the late Convocation of the Province of Canterbury; putting into the Bill the expres Fines set upon each Member, the Archbishop of Canterbury twenty thousand Pounds, the Dean of Canterbury 1000 l. Proctor 1000 l. and so for every Diocese upon each Member of it, at such a very exorbitant rate that the Penalty should have been ten times greater than what the Clergy suffer'd for their Premunire under Hen. VIII.

Bills to alter the Constitution of the Church.

And to take away the Revenues.

Then they proceeded to rob the Church as well as the Clergy: they prepared a Bill to take away the Deans and Chapters Lands; and tho' for a shew of Justice they admitted Dr. Hacket to plead against the Bill May 12. and received Petitions of the two Universities against it, yet they would never drop or dismiss it, but kept it in reserve for a Power to enforce it. They declared for Presbytery by Resolving May 17. that this House doth approve of the Affection of their Brethren of Scotland, in their desire of a Conformity in Church Government between the two Nations. So that May 19. they read the Bill to take away the Bishop's Votes in Parliament; and the next Day order'd, that no Minister be forc'd hereafter to take any Oath at his Induction but such as shall be warranted by Scripture. And because the Lords after Conference and Debates had resolv'd, that The Bishops ought to retain their Votes in Parliament, therefore they brought in another Bill to abolish Episcopacy, "As a great impediment to the perfect Reformation and growth of Religion, and very prejudicial "to the State and Government of this Kingdom. And that the Bishops persons might make their Order criminal, they carried up Articles of Impeachment July 20. against Bishop Wren of Ely, with a very aggravating Speech deliver'd by Sir Thomas Widdrington.

And to abolish Episcopacy.

But to make a shorter Work, they sent up Serjeant Wild to impeach thirteen Bishops at once of Crimes and Misdemeanors for contriving, making and promulging several Constitutions and Canons Ecclesiastical, contrary to the King's Prerogative, to the fundamental Laws and Statutes of the Realm, to the Rights of Parliament, to the Propriety and Liberty of the Subjects, and Matters tending to Sedition, and of dangerous Consequence; and by granting a Benevolence contrary to Law.

And to take away the Liturgy.

On Sept. 1. they had such warm Debates against the Common-Prayer, that the Lords found it necessary to declare, that The Book of Common-Prayer should be observed in all Churches, without any Omission or Alteration; and that none should offer any Contempt at the use of it. But in a return of Zeal the Commons made a Declaration September 9. for suppressing Innovations, by removing the Communion Table from the East end, taking away the Rails, levelling the Chancels, forbidding to bow at the Name of Jesus, &c. Octob. 23. Sir Edward Deering observ'd in a Speech, that there had long been in some hand within that House, a Bill for a National Synod ready drawn, which he desired might be now read, as the only Remedy for the sad Miseries of our distracted Church. The same Person, in another Speech against the Remonstrance Novemb. 22. excepted with a passionate Resentment against the Passage of Idolatry introduc'd by command of the Bishops, told them, "They could not prove that any one of all the Bi- "shops had issued forth any one Command for I- "dolatry; that the Learned, Pious and Painful "Bishop of Durham, had fought in Front against "Roman Superstition and Idolatry; that the Bishop "of Lincoln was the first of note who gave check to "our Papal Misleaders and Altarian Innovators; "that the Bishop of Exeter had ever the repute of a "good Man and a good Bishop; and that there "could be no Superstition proved upon the several "Bishops of London, Winchester, Chester, Carlisle and "Chichester. But the Commons went on, and their Proceedings gave so much countenance to Separation and Confusion, that the King thought himself obliged to publish his Proclamation Decemb. 10. to require Obedience to the Laws and Statutes ordain'd for establishing the true Religion in this Kingdom; and that Divine Service should be regularly perform'd, &c. but to little purpose, when his Majesty was already depriv'd of his Legal Power to execute any Laws.

1641. 17 Car. I.

The King for Conformity in vain.

The Bishops who had been driven and kept from the House of Peers, by the awe of Impeachments and Popular Tumults, by the Advice of Dr. Williams Archbishop of York, made the following Protestation, delivered into the House of Lords Decemb. 30.

Protestation of the Bishops.

To the King's most excellent Majesty, and the Lords and Peers now assembled in Parliament.

The Humble Petition and Protestation of all the Bishops and Prelates now called by his Majesty's Writs to attend the Parliament, and present about London and Westminster for that Service.

"THat whereas the Petitioners are called up by "several and respective Writs, and under great "Penalties to attend in Parliament, and have a clear "and indubitable Right to Vote in Bills and other "Matters whatsoever debateable in Parliament, "by the ancient Customs, Laws and Statutes of "this Realm, and ought to be protected by your "Majesty quietly to attend and prosecute that great "Service.

"They humbly remonstrate and protest, before "God, your Majesty, and the noble Lords and Peers "now assembled in Parliament, that as they have "an indubitable Right to Sit and Vote in the "House of Lords, so are they (if they may be pro- "tected from Force and Violence) most ready and "willing to perform their Duties accordingly; and "that they do abominate all Actions or Opinions "tending to Popery and the maintenance thereof; "as also all Propension and Inclination to any ma- "lignant Party, or any other Side or Party what- "soever, to the which their own Reasons and Con- "science shall not move them to adhere.

"But whereas they have been at several times vio- "lently Menac'd, Affronted and Assaulted by mul- "titudes of People, in their coming to perform their "Services in that Honourable House, and lately "chased away and put in danger of their Lives, "and can find no Redress or Protection, upon sun- "dry Complaints made to both Houses in these Par- "ticulars.

"They likewise humbly protest before your Ma- "jesty and the noble House of Peers, that saving "unto themselves all their Rights and Interests of "sitting and voting in that House at other times, "they dare not Sit and Vote in the House of Peers, "until your Majesty shall farther secure them from "all Affronts, Indignities and Dangers in the Pre- "mises.

Lastly,

1641. 17 Car. I. "Laſtly, whereas their Fears are not built upon "Phantaſies and Conceits, but upon ſuch Grounds "and Objects as may well terrifie Men of good Re- "ſolutions and much Conſtancy. They do in all "Duty and Humility Proteſt, before your Majeſty "and the Peers of that moſt Honourable Houſe of "Parliament, againſt all Laws, Orders, Votes, Re- "ſolutions and Determinations, as in themſelves "null and of none effect, which in their Abſence, "ſince the 27th of this inſtant Month December, have "already paſſed; as likewiſe againſt all ſuch as "ſhall hereafter paſs in that moſt Honourable Houſe "during the time of this their forced and violent "Abſence from the ſaid moſt Honourable Houſe; "not denying, but if their abſenting themſelves were "wilful and voluntary, that moſt Honourable Houſe "might proceed in all theſe Premiſes, their Abſence "or this their Proteſtation notwithſtanding.

"And humbly beſeeching your moſt excellent Ma- "jeſty to command the Clerk of the Houſe of Peers, "to enter this their Petition and Proteſtation amongſt "his Records,

They will ever pray God to bleſs and preſerve, &c.

New Matter of Offence. Archbiſhop Williams who drew up the Form, carried it to the King, who delivered it to the Lord-Keeper, who read it in the Houſe of Lords; and they at an immediate Conference did communicate it to the Houſe of Commons, as a Matter concerning the whole Parliament, and intrenching upon the Fundamental Privileges and Being of Parliaments. The Commons were quick in their Reſolution, to accuſe Bp's charged with Treaſon. theſe twelve Biſhops of High-Treaſon, for endeavouring to ſubvert the fundamental Laws and Being of Parliaments; and ſent Mr. Glynne to make the Charge at the Lord's Bar, and to deſire that they might be forthwith ſequeſter'd from Parliament and put into ſafe Cuſtody. And accordingly the Biſhops of Durham and Lichfield were committed to the Uſher of the Black Rod, and the other Ten ſent directly to the Tower.

On Jan. 15. they were all ſeverally brought to the Lords Bar, and put in their reſpective Anſwers; and being remanded into Cuſtody had no farther Trial, becauſe the meaning of all was anſwer'd, when it was carried in the Houſe of Lords Feb. 6. That the Biſhops ſhould have no Votes in Parliament. And this being thought a Satisfaction, the Houſe of Lords releaſed them upon Bail Feb. 16. but the Houſe of Commons had them recommitted to the Tower, to be ſafe till the Bill of their Excluſion paſſed, than which nothing could be more ſevere and arbitrary.

Some hard Reflections are made upon this Act of the Biſhops in vindication of their Parliamentary Rights, in the late Hiſtory of the Rebellion. But whatever Paſſion there might be in Archbiſhop Williams the Penner of it, and however improper to purge themſelves of Inclination to any malignant Party, and however indiſcreet to make the King perſonally concern'd in the conveyance of it to the Lords, and however conſcious they themſelves might be, that at this Juncture of Violence it could have no good Effect; yet it was certainly their Duty in Honour and Conſcience, to make ſome ſuch publick Proteſtation of their lawful Rights; eſpecially when their Lordſhips had already too much ſuffered in their Reputation by Silence and Abſence, and a voluntary Receſs from voting in the Lord Strafford's Bill.

Abp Laud not concern'd in this matter. Their Metropolitan, Archbiſhop Laud, was before impriſon'd in the Tower, and had no opportunity ſo much as to adviſe his Brethren. In tenderneſs to the Univerſity of Oxford (to which he had been an incomparable Benefactor) he reſign'd his Office of Chancellor, and the Earl of Pembroke was choſen to ſucceed him July 1. For this great Prelate ſaw that the Storms againſt him were not likely to abate; for on June 2. Information being given to the Houſe of Commons, that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury did uſe his Epiſcopal Power in Ordaining Miniſters, &c. within the Tower, it was mov'd that there might be an Order to reſtrain the ſame: But it was generally thought more fit for Prevention, to haſten the Proceedings for his Tryal. And the Houſe of Lords made an Order Octob. 23. to ſequeſter the Archbiſhop's Juriſdiction, and to put it into the hands of his inferiour Officers; and that he ſhould beſtow no Benefice without firſt acquainting the Houſe and taking their Approbation. 1641. 17 Car. I.

The Lords and Commons ſent a Petition to the King at York on March 26. 1642. to juſtify their Declaration which had been delivered at New-Market; and to deſire him to return and to cloſe with the Council and Deſire of his Parliament. To which his Majeſty return'd Anſwer, that they ought not to look upon him as Gone but Driven from them; that if they could not make his Reſidence in London ſafe, he would be content the Parliament ſhould be adjourned to ſuch a Place, where he might be fitly and ſafely with them. For tho' he was not pleaſed to be at that diſtance, yet they are not to expect his Preſence till they ſhould ſecure him againſt his juſt Apprehenſions of tumultuary Inſolencies, and likewiſe give him Satisfaction for thoſe inſupportable and inſolent Scandals that were raiſed upon him. 1642. The King driven from the Parliament.

March 28. the Lords and Commons began now to act, as a ſeparate and independent State, with the King, as an Ally, threatening a Rupture with him. For they told him in an expreſs Meſſage, "That the "Lords and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſ- "ſembled, had found it neceſſary to provide and "ſet to Sea a ſtrong and powerful Navy, the Charge "whereof was to be born by the Common-wealth; "and taking notice of the Indiſpoſition of the Lord "Admiral, they had recommended the Earl of War- "wick to ſupply his room; and deſired his Majeſty "that he would withdraw his Pleaſure of giving "that Command to Sir John Pennington. Having thus gained poſſeſſion of the Navy, they were entering upon the Militia; and having drawn up a Bill to put it entirely into the hands of their own Creatures, they ſent it to his Majeſty for his Royal Aſſent, which he juſtly refuſed, and gave his Reaſons in a Meſſage to the two Houſes April 28. You have by this Bill now tender'd to us (without taking notice of us) put the Power of the whole Kingdom, the Life and Liberties of the Subjects of all Degrees and Qualities into the hands of particular Men for two Years. Can you imagine we will truſt ſuch an abſolute Power in the hands of particular Perſons, which we refuſed to commit to both Houſes of Parliament? Nay, is not the Power it ſelf too abſolute, too unlimitted, to be committed to any private Hands? Hath not Sir John Hotham's high Inſolence ſhewed us what we may expect from an exorbitant legal Power, when he by a Power not warranted by Law, dares venture upon a treaſonable Diſobedience? —— This Repulſe that Sir John Hotham gave the King was indeed the firſt Hoſtile Act, and was thus occaſion'd. In the late Expedition againſt the Scots, Hull was made the common Magazine, and had great ſtore of Arms and Ammunition ſtill preſerved in it. This Place would be of the greateſt importance to his Majeſty's Service, and therefore the Parliament ſent down Sir John Hotham to take poſſeſſion of it, and to be Governour in their Name, not only without the King's Commiſſion but expreſly againſt it; for the King had given the Government of that Gariſon to the Earl of Newcaſtle. Upon this invaſion of the Rights of King and Subject, his Majeſty with about three hundred Horſe on April 23. came to Hull, and having the Gates ſhut againſt him, commanded them to be open'd; but Sir John Hotham anſwer'd, that He was intruſted by the Parliament to ſecure that Town 2 Houſes act independently on the K. King juſtly rejects the Bill for the Militia. Treaſon of Sir John Hotham. Caſe of Hull.

1642. 18 Car. I. for his Majesty's Honour and the Kingdom's Use, and he intended by God's help so to do. Upon reiterated Demands and Denials, the King was content to proclaim Sir John Hotham a Traitor, and so to retire; and to send a Message to the two Houses on Apr. 24. To demand Justice of his Parliament against the said Sir John Hotham, to be exemplarily inflicted upon him according to the Laws. But this only begat Answers and Replies to no purpose, but to shew the Power of the Parliament, and the Weakness of the King. Had his Majesty, with the Forces of the Gentry and Nobility which he could have then commanded, boldly attack'd the Town, and gain'd a Surrendry of it, with a generous Mercy to the Inhabitants and small Garison, and an exemplary Justice upon Sir John Hotham, it had been the most proper time to begin the War, and might have put a speedy End to it.

The King found it was now time to think of an Army, tho he had not yet so much as a Guard about him. He summon'd the Gentry of Yorkshire to appear before him May 12. and complaining of the Parliament's Commissioners, who staid there to watch him when he had expressly commanded them to return. He told them, You see my Magazine is going to be taken from me (being my own proper Goods) directly against my Will: the Militia, against Law and my Consent, is going to be put in execution: and lastly, Sir John Hotham's Treason is countenanced. All this considered, none can blame me to apprehend Danger. Therefore I have thought fit (upon these real Grounds) to tell you, that I am resolved to have a Guard (the Parliament having had one all this while upon imaginary Jealousies) only to secure my Person; in which I desire your Concurrence and Assistance, and that I may be able to protect You, the Laws, and the true Protestant Profession, from any Affront or Injury that may be offer'd: Which I mean to maintain my self, without Charge to the Country, intending no longer to keep them on foot, than I shall be secured from my just Apprehensions by having Satisfaction in the Particulars before mentioned.

K. forc'd to raise an Army.

But to deprive the King of all manner of Assistance and Protection, on May 19. the Lords and Commons publish'd a Declaration, That it was against the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom, for any of the Subjects to be commanded by the King to attend him at his pleasure: And that whosoever, upon pretence of his Majesty's Command, shall take Arms, shall be esteemed Disturbers of the publick Peace. And farther, to divest him of Arms and Ammunition, they order'd May 20. That the Magazines of the several Counties in England and Wales should be forthwith put into the Power of the Lords Lieutenants of the said Counties respectively, being such as the Parliament doth confide in.

Two Houses declare against it.

The King soon publish'd a very rational and elegant Answer to the Parliament's Declaration, accounting for all their particular Complaints, and concluding thus, We have been the longer (to our very great pain) in this Answer, that we might give the World Satisfaction, even in the most trivial Particulars which have been objected against us, and that we may not be again reproached with any more prudent Omissions. If we have been compelled to sharper Language than we affect, let it be considered how vile, how insufferable, our Provocations have been: and except to repel Force be to affront, and to give punctual and necessary Answer to rough and insolent Demands be to make Invectives, we are confident the World will accuse us of too much Mildness, and all our good Subjects will think we are not well dealt with, and will judge of us, and of their own Happiness and Security in us by our Actions; which we desire may no longer prosper, or have a Blessing of God upon them and us, than they shall be directed to the Glory of God, in the Maintenance of the true Protestant Profession, to the Preservation of the Property and the Liberty of the Subject, in the Observation of the Laws, and to the Maintenance of the Rights and Freedom of Parliament, in the Allowance and Protection of all their just Privileges.

King's Answer.

The Parliament, who were now resolv'd upon the War, made it one Stratagem to throw all the Cause and Odium on the King. So on May 20. the Commons vote, 1. "That it appears, that the King, "seduced by wicked Counsel, intends to make War "against the Parliament. 2. That whensoever the "King maketh War upon the Parliament, it is a "breach of the Trust reposed in him by his People, "contrary to his Oath, and tending to the Dissolu- "tion of this Government. 3. That whosoever "shall serve or assist him in such Wars, are Trai- "tors by the fundamental Laws of this Kingdom. On May 23. the two Houses sent a Petition to the King, to disband his Guard, and all other Forces, by his Command assembled. And having received his Majesty's Answer, that his raising of a Guard was a legal Action, and was with no other Design than the Safety of his Person; they made one Order to all Sheriffs to suppress the Raising or Meeting of any Soldiers by any Warrant from the King, without the Advice and Consent of the Lords and Commons in Parliament; and another Order to all Civil Officers to make Stay of all Arms and Ammunition carrying toward York. And having thus divested the King of all Aid and Assistance, on June 2. they sent a humble Petition and Advice with Nineteen Propositions, as the most necessary and effectual Means of removing the Jealousies and Differences which had unhappily fallen betwixt him and his People. To which his Majesty answered, That their Profession of Peace joined to such Propositions did but appear a Mockery and a Scorn, the Demands being such, as tho' he were unworthy of the Trust reposed in him by the Law, and of his Descent from so many great and famous Ancestors; and the Contrivers of them could have no Intention of settling any firm Accommodation, but to increase those Jealousies, and widen that Division, which had now fallen (not by his fault) between him and both Houses.

19 Propositions.

The Breach was now so wide, that several of the Lords, and some few Commons, and even the Lord Keeper Littleton with the Great Seal, found it high time to withdraw from the Parliament, and to attend the King at York. And tho' this Recess of the King's Friends put his Enemies into an absolute Possession of the two Houses, and left no Opposition to the Torrent that was breaking forth; yet it was a mighty Comfort to the distressed King to begin to see himself attended by so many of his Nobility and Gentry: and by their Advice, as the last Resort, he proclaim'd that he would set up his Standard at Nottingham on Monday Aug. 22. which accordingly was done with Sound of Trumpet, and a Proclamation that the Ground and Cause of it was to suppress the Rebellion of the Earl of Essex, to which he required the Aid and Assistance of all his loving Subjects. It appear'd to be a Case of utmost Necessity; therefore we are told, "That melan- "cholly Men observed many ill Presages about that "time: There was not one Regiment of Foot yet "brought thither, so that the Train'd-Bands, which "the Sheriff had drawn together, were all the "Strength the King had for his Person, and the "Guard of the Standard. There appear'd no Con- "flux of Men in obedience to the Proclamation: "The Arms and Ammunition were not yet come "from York, and a general Sadness cover'd the "whole Town: The Standard was blown down the "same Night it had been set up, by a very strong "and unruly Wind, and could not be fix'd again "in a day or two, till the Tempest was allay'd. "This was the melancholly State of the King's Af- "fairs when the Standard was set up.

Aug. 25. his Majesty sent a Message to both Houses of Parliament by the Earls of Southampton and Dorset, Sir John Culpeper, and Sir William Uvedale, in order to a Treaty for Peace, to be transacted by Commissioners on each side. To which Message the Lords and Commons answer'd, "That they could "receive no Proposal till his Majesty should recall "those Proclamations and Declarations, whereby "the Earl of Essex, and both Houses of Parliament, "and their Adherents and Assistants, are declared "Trai-

To which the Lords and Commons anſwer, " That they believed there was no o- " ther way to make himſelf happy, and the King- " dom ſafe, but by leaving his Forces, and return- " ing to his Parliament, and receiving their faith- " ful Advice. After ſome other ineffectual Meſſages, his Majeſty publiſhed a Declaration to all his loving Subjects Sept. 27, ſetting forth the good Intention of his late Meſſages to both Houſes of Parliament, and complaining of their Refuſal to treat with him for the Peace of the Kingdom. To which the two Houſes were diſpoſed to give Anſwer at the Head of an Army, to be commanded by the Earl of Eſſex, who Sept. 9. ſet out of London, attended in great State by ſeveral Members of both Houſes, toward his Head-Quarters at St. Albans, and thence to Northampton, where the main Body met him, and made up fifteen thouſand Men.

The King had march'd from Nottingham to Derby, Stafford, and Leiceſter, and ſo to Wales; and at Shrewsbury he found his Army encreaſed to a conſiderable Body. In his Paſſage through the ſeveral Counties, upon Reſort of the Gentry and People, the King had his Orders of Military Diſcipline and this Proteſtation read to them.

His Majeſty's Proteſtation.

K.'s Proteſtation for Peace, and Governing by Law.

I Do promiſe in the Preſence of Almighty God, and as I hope for his Bleſſing and Protection, that I will, to the utmoſt of my Power, defend and maintain the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England, and by the Grace of God in the ſame will live and die.

I deſire to govern by the known Laws of the Land, and that the Liberty and Property of the Subject may be by them preſerved with the ſame care as my own juſt Rights. And if it pleaſe God, by a Bleſſing upon this Army raiſed for my neceſſary Defence, to preſerve me from this Rebellion; I do ſolemnly and faithfully promiſe in the ſight of God, to maintain the juſt Privileges and Freedom of Parliament, and to govern by the known Laws of the Land to my utmoſt power, and particularly to obſerve inviolably the Laws conſented to by me this Parliament.

In the mean while, if this Time of War, and the great Neceſſity and Straits I am now driven to, beget any Violation of thoſe, I hope it ſhall be imputed by God and Man to the Authors of this War, and not to me, who have ſo earneſtly laboured for the Preſervation of the Peace of this Kingdom.

When I willingly fail in theſe Particulars, I will expect no Aid or Relief from any Man, or Protection from Heaven: But in this Reſolution I hope for the chearful Aſſiſtance of all Good Men, and am confident of God's Bleſſing.

Firſt Rencounter.

The firſt Rencounter was at Powick-Bridge near Worceſter, Sept. 22. The Earl of Eſſex was on his March with his Army toward Worceſter, intending that Place for a Head-Quarter, wherein lay Sir John Biron with ſome of the King's Forces; and Prince Rupert, with a good Body of Horſe, came to ſecure their Retreat from the Town, before the Parliament Army reach'd to it. When the Prince was advanced within two Miles of Worceſter, he was charg'd by a Party of Horſe commanded by Colonel Sandys, but he and Major Douglas were both ſlain, four Colours taken, and the Defeat ſo entirely given, that the Prince opened a clear Paſſage for the King's Forces to march away from Worceſter, before Eſſex with his Army enter'd. 1642. 18 Car. I.

K. inclin'd to march for London.

The King having greatly augmented his Forces, did ſeem reſolved to leave Eſſex behind him, and to march directly for London. This Apprehenſion put the Parliament into ſo much Terror, that they ſent expreſs Orders to their General the Earl of Eſſex to haſten after the King, and interrupt his March. Which Orders were ſo well executed, that while the King was ſummoning Banbury in Oxfordſhire to Surrender to him, he received Advice on Sunday Morning Octob. 23. that the Army of the Rebels was advanced to Keynton in Warwickſhire; upon which the King gave immediate Order for his whole Army to march with all Expedition to Edge-hill three Miles from Keynton: When they came about Noon to the Top of the Hill, they could ſee the other Army drawing into Battalia in Keynton-Field, and ſo went down the Hill to receive them. The Ordinance play'd ſome time, beginning from the Parliament Army: The Charge began between the two Wings of Horſe; that of the King's broke, and purſued that of the Parliament with great execution for three Miles together. But when the Bodies of Foot engaged, a Reſerve of the Parliament Horſe charg'd the Flank of the King's Foot; who wanting the Support of the Horſe (who had too far purſued the Rebels, and thought the Day their own) was in great Danger, till the Horſe rallied and reliev'd them: and the Night coming on, both Armies retreated, and the next Day look'd one upon another, till the Earl of Eſſex firſt withdrew to Warwick, and then the King return'd to Banbury, and forced that Gariſon to Surrender to him. Two different Relations of this Battle were publiſh'd, one by his Majeſty's Command at Oxford, the other by an Order of the Commons at London, both Sides aſſuming the Honour of a Victory, when it could not be ſo called on either Side; yet the King was much better intitled to the Credit of it, by killing the greater Numbers, and taking the greater Spoil, and ſeeing the Enemy break up and retire, while he immediately took a Gariſon which had juſt before refuſed to yield to him. Edge-hill Fight.

Death and Character of E. of Lindſey.

Yet the King loſt the General of his Army, the Earl of Lindſey, of whom the Lord Clarendon gives this good Character, " He was a Man of very noble Ex- " traction, and inherited a great Fortune from his " Anceſtors; which tho' he did not manage with ſo " great care as if he deſired much to improve, yet " he left it in a very fair Condition to his Family " which more intended the increaſe of it. He was " a Man of great Honour, and ſpent his Youth and " vigour of his Age in Military Actions and Com- " mands abroad; and albeit he indulg'd himſelf " great Liberties of Life, yet he ſtill preſerved a very " good Reputation with all Men, and a very great " Intereſt in his Country, as appeared by the Sup- " plies he and his Son brought to the King's Army; " the ſeveral Companies of his own Regiment of " Foot being commanded by the principal Knights " and Gentlemen of Lincolnſhire, who engaged them- " ſelves in the Service principally out of their per- " ſonal Affection to him. He was of a very gene- " rous Nature, and punctual in what he undertook, " and in exacting what was due to him; which made " him bear that reſtriction ſo heavily which was put " upon him by the Commiſſion granted to Prince " Rupert, and by the King's preferring the Prince's " Opinion in all Matters relating to the War before " his. Nor did he conceal his Reſentment; the " Day before the Battle he ſaid to ſome Friends, " with whom he had uſed freedom, That he did not " look upon himſelf as General, and therefore he was re- " ſolved, when the Day of Battle ſhould come, that he

And as " ſoon as the other Army was compoſed by the " coming on of the Night, the Earl of Eſſex about " Midnight ſent Sir William Balfour, and ſome other " Officers to ſee him, and to offer him all Offices, " and meant himſelf to have viſited him. They " found him upon a little Straw in a poor Houſe, " where they had laid him in his Blood, which had " run from him in great abundance, no Surgeon ha- " ving been yet with him, only he had great viva- " city in his Looks; and told them, he was ſorry " to ſee ſo many Gentlemen, ſome whereof were his " old Friends, engaged in ſo foul a Rebellion; and " principally directed his Diſcourſe to Sir William " Balfour, whom he put in mind of the great Obli- " gations he had to the King; how much his Maje- " ſty had diſoblig'd the whole Engliſh Nation by put- " ting him into the Command of the Tower; and " that it was the moſt odious Ingratitude in him to " make him that return. He wiſh'd them to tell " my Lord Eſſex, that he ought to caſt himſelf at " the King's Feet to beg his Pardon; which if he " did not ſpeedily do, his Memory would be odious " to the Nation; and continued this kind of Diſ- " courſe with ſo much vehemence, that the Officers " by degrees withdrew themſelves, and prevented " the Viſit the Earl of Eſſex intended him, who on- " ly ſent the beſt Surgeons to him; but in the very " opening of his Wounds he died before the Mor- " ning, only upon the loſs of Blood. He had very " many Friends and very few Enemies, and died ge- " nerally lamented.

K.'s Declaration of Thankſgiving for his Safety.

His Majeſty publiſh'd a Declaration, and commanded it to be read in all Churches and Chapels, To attribute the Preſervation of himſelf and his Children in the late Bloody Battle with the Rebels, to the Mercy and Goodneſs of Almighty God. —— In a Word, as whoever knows what danger our Perſon was in on Sunday Octob. 23. can never believe that the Army which gave us Battle, was raiſed for our Defence and Preſervation; ſo when they conſider how much the Liberty of the Subject is invaded by their Rapine and Impriſoning; and that four parts at leaſt of five of the Members of both Houſes, are by violence driven from being preſent in that Council; that the Book of Common-Prayer is rejected, and no countenance given but to Anabaptiſts and Browniſts, they will eaſily find the Pretences of Care of the Proteſtant Religion, the Liberty of the Subject, and of the Privilege of Parliament to be as vain and pretended as thoſe which refer to the Safety of our Perſon, and the Preſervation of our Poſterity.

King advances toward London.

The King march'd from Banbury to Oxford, thence to Reading, and ſo in nearer Approaches toward London. At Colebrook on Nov. 11. he received a Petition of the two Houſes for a Treaty, toward which he had granted a ſafe Conduct to the Earls of Northumberland and Pembroke, to Viſcount Wenman, Mr. Pierpoint and Sir John Hippiſley. The E. of Eſſex had been called to London to guard the Parliam. and City, and to that purpoſe had quarter'd his Army in the adjacent Towns, ſome at Windſor, ſome at Kingſton, at Acton, at Brainford, &c. The King being informed that the Earl of Eſſex was coming out of London with a Train of Ordnance and great Forces, reſolved in a Council of War to beat-up the Quarters of Colonel Hollis's Regiment in Brainford, and accordingly Novemb. 12. the King marching ſlowly ſurprized Brainford, and beat out the Forces quarter'd in it; and had he marched reſolutely on to London, 'tis probable the Conſternation of Eſſex and the two Houſes, had given him advantage to take poſſeſſion of the City. But the King immediately quitted Brainford and retreated toward Reading, and ſo back to Oxford, leaving the Parliament at liberty to recruit and augment their Army, and to throw the Action at Brainford as a breach of Honour upon the King, while there was a Treaty in agitation.

Brainford Fight.

King's retreat.

Novemb. 24. the two Houſes preſented another Petition to the King at Oxford, to return to his Parliament with his Royal not Martial Attendance, to the end that Religion, Laws and Liberties might be ſettled and ſecur'd by their Advice. The King took this as a Scorn and Inſult upon him, as it really was: And from this time the mutual Meſſages were more rare and more ſharp. 1642. 18 Car. I.

Parliament inſult the King.

About the end of November the Earl of Newcaſtle had aſſociated the Counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Weſtmoreland, the Biſhoprick of Durham and Newcaſtle for the Defence and Aſſiſtance of the King, and was marching at the Head of a conſiderable Army toward York, and at Piercebrig beat a Party of the L. Fairfax's Horſe commanded by Capt. Hotham, and enter'd York, and had his Commiſſion enlarg'd to govern that and other Counties. Upon which by a Declaration of the two Houſes, the Earl of Eſſex ſent a Commiſſion to the Lord Fairfax to command in chief for the Parliament in the Northern Parts.

Loyalty of the E. of Newcaſtle.

Decemb. 1. Sir William Waller with a Party of Horſe took Farnham Caſtle, from the poſſeſſion of Mr. Denham High-Sheriff, and other Commiſſioners of Array for the King. And Decemb. 5. the Lord Digby with ſome Troops of Horſe took Marlborough, which had been fortified, and was defended by the Parliament Forces. Decemb. 13. Sir William Waller recovered Winchester for the Parliament, and December 18. Colonel Ruthin Commander of the Gariſon of Plymouth for the Parliament, ſurpriz'd the High-Sheriff of Devonſhire and other Commiſſioners of Array, and ſent them Priſoners to London. And in moſt parts of England, Skirmiſhes, Aſſaults and Sallies were ſo frequent and ſo fierce, that all People dreaded the ſad Effects of a Civil War.

City of London for Peace.

Under this diſpoſition the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, by the hands of ſome of the chief Citizens, preſented a Petition to the King at Oxford, " To wipe off all ſuſpicion of " their diſloyalty, and to beſeech his Majeſty to re- " turn to his Parliament, that a Peace may be ob- " tained. The King gave Anſwer, " That he did " not entertain any miſapprehenſion of the Love " and Loyalty of the City of London, and that no " good Citizen could more deſire the eſtabliſhment " of the particular Peace and Proſperity of that place " by his Majeſty's Acceſs thither than he himſelf " doth. But he could have no hope of Safety there " whilſt Alderman Pennington their pretended Lord " Mayor, Venn, Foulke and Mainwaring did commit " ſuch Outrages in oppreſſing, robbing and impri- " ſoning the beſt of his Majeſty's loving Subjects.---- " He deſires the good Citizens to gather up Cou- " rage and Reſolution to join with his Majeſty in " defence of that Religion, Law and Liberty which " hitherto hath and only can make themſelves, his " Majeſty and his Kingdom happy. This Anſwer was read at a Common-Hall on Friday Jan. 13. but to prevent the Influence of it, a Committee of the Lords and Commons were order'd to be preſent at Guild-hall; of whom the Earl of Mancheſter and Mr. Pym made ſuch artificial Speeches, as ſecured the governing part of the City entirely to the Parliament. His Majeſty ſent another Letter and Declaration to the Sheriffs and City of London Jan. 17. but the Parliament forbid the Reading of it, and took effectual care to prevent all farther Correſpondence between the King and the City.

Cirenceſter Taken.

Feb. 2. the Town of Cirenceſter, a ſtrong Gariſon for the Parliament, was taken by Prince Rupert, and the Earl of Stamford's Regiment put to the Sword, and great Numbers of Priſoners brought to Oxford in an ignominious manner: which was made uſe of to improve the Scandal of Pride and Cruelty on the King's ſide.

Death of Ld. Brook.

March 1. Lichfield being held for the King by the Lord Cheſterfield, was aſſaulted by the Lord Brook, who gain'd the Town, but in Storming the Cloſe and Church loſt his Life by a Bullet in the Left Eye. Many look'd upon it as Providential, that this

His Character is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. " There were many Diſcourſes " and Obſervations upon his Death, that it ſhould " be upon St. Chad's Day (being the ſecond Day " of March:) And it was reported, That in his " Prayer that very Morning (for he uſed to pray " publickly tho' his Chaplain were in the Preſence) " he wiſh'd, That if the Cauſe he was in were not " right and juſt, he might be preſently cut off. They " who were acquainted with him believ'd him to be " well-natur'd and juſt, and rather ſeduced and " corrupted in his Underſtanding, than perverſe " and malicious. Whether his Paſſions or Conſci- " ence ſway'd him, he was undoubtedly one of " thoſe who could have been with moſt difficulty " reconciled to the Government of Church or State: " And therefore his Death was look'd upon as no ill " Omen to Peace, and was exceedingly lamented " by his Party, which had ſcarce a more abſolute " Confidence in any Man than in him.

E. of Northampton ſlain.

March 19. there was a ſharp Fight at Salt-Heath near Stafford, between the King's Forces commanded by the Earl of Northampton and Colonel Haſlings, and the Parliament's under Conduct of Sir John Gell and Sir William Brereton. The King's Forces, at firſt victorious, were in effect defeated by the ſingle Loſs of their General the valiant Earl of Northampton; of whom the Earl of Clarendon gives this Account. " In the ſecond Charge the Earl of Northampton, " being engaged on the Execution, very near or a- " mong their Foot, had his Horſe killed under him; " ſo that his own Horſe (according to their unhap- " py practice) with too much Fury purſuing the " Chaſe, he was left encompaſſed by his Enemies. " What his Behaviour was afterwards, and their " Carriage towards him, can be known only by the " Teſtimony of the Rebels; who confeſs'd, that af- " ter he was on his Feet, he kill'd with his own " Hand the Colonel of Foot who made firſt Haſte " to him; and that after his Head-piece was ſtrick- " en off with the Butt-end of a Musket, they offer'd " him Quarter, which they ſay he refuſed, anſwer- " ing, That he ſcorn'd to take Quarter from ſuch baſe " Rogues and Rebels as they were. After which, he " was ſlain by a Blow with a Halbert on the hinder " part of his Head, receiving at the ſame time ano- " ther deep Wound in his Face. —— He was a Per- " ſon of great Courage.

" That if " he had not given up all the Faculties of his Soul " to an earneſt Endeavour of a Peace and Reconci- " liation with his People, or if he would ſuffer him- " ſelf by any Provocation to be drawn to a Sharp- " neſs of Language at a time when there ſeems " ſomewhat like an Overture of Accommodation, " he could not but reſent the heavy Charges upon " him, &c. But tho' many of their Propoſitions " did appear very derogatory from, and deſtructive " to his juſt Power and Prerogative, and no way " beneficial to his Subjects; yet he was pleaſed that " a ſpeedy Time and Place ſhould be agreed upon " for meeting of ſuch Perſons as his Majeſty and " both Houſes ſhould appoint to diſcuſs their Pro- " poſitions, and ſuch other as his Majeſty now pro- " poſed; I. To which the Parliament again made Additions and Alterations, and the King farther Exceptions. So that all that could be done this Year, was for the Parliament to grant Leave for their Commiſſioners to treat, though the Ceſſation was not agreed upon. This on the laſt Day of this Year, March 24. 1642.

King's Anſwer.

No Ceſſation.

As to Matters of Religion, there was no longer the Face of a Church; for, the Biſhops had not only loſt their Votes in the Houſe of Lords, but all their ordinary Juriſdiction in their reſpective Dioceſes, and lay impriſon'd in the Tower upon a moſt illegal Commitment by the Commons, till May 5. the Peers, without conſulting the other Houſe, releas'd them upon Bail: But even their Liberty gave them no Property, nor Safety; none of them could find Protection in their own Palaces, but were forced to fly from Plunder and Seizure; and the Biſhop of Ely, who flatter'd himſelf with a ſafe Retirement in his Houſe at Downham, was apprehended by a Party of Soldiers, and brought back again to the Tower, where he continued till the End of the Year 1659, without any Charge or Accuſation form'd againſt him.

No Face of an eſtabliſh'd Church.

Biſhops Fright and Imprisonment.

Theſe ſad Confuſions in the Church, and Obſtruction of all the publick Offices and Service, open'd the Eyes of many good Chriſtians, and put them upon Petitions and Remonſtrances againſt the growing Hypocriſie and Profaneneſs. Many of theſe pious Addreſſes were preſented to the King; two from the County of Cheſter, two from Cornwal, from both Univerſities, from the Dioceſe of Exeter, from the ſix Counties of North-Wales, from the Counties of Notingham, Huntingdon, Somerſet, Rutland, Stafford, Lancaſter, Oxford, and Hereford. All which were to the ſame effect with one from Kent, wherein the Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders, ſet forth to the two Houſes themſelves, " That notwithſtanding " this Kingdom hath, by the ſingular Providence of " Almighty God, for many Years laſt paſt happily " flouriſhed above all other Nations in the Chriſtian " World, under the Religion and Government by " Law eſtabliſhed; yet hath it been of late moſt " miſerably diſtracted, through the ſiniſter Practi- " ces of ſome private Perſons ill-affected to them " both: By whoſe means the preſent Government is

But the two Houſes well knowing that theſe Petitions were but loud Reflexions upon them and their Proceedings, not only rejected them, and ſhew'd their Diſpleaſure to all that preſum'd to make them, but they even complain'd to his Majeſty for his receiving of them, and pretended 'em to be mutinous and malignant; and this in their ſolemn Declaration or Remonſtrance May 19. Rejected by the Parliam.

Anſwer'd by the King.

This is certain, that not only the diſaffected Divines and the moderate Presbyterians went in by Intereſt and Inclination to the Parliament; but all the moſt violent Schiſmaticks and Enthuſiaſts of every wild Denomination, run into the ſame Cauſe. And it muſt be to tempt over and ſecure theſe Men, that the two Houſes did now apparently threaten the whole Conſtitution of the Church. Their firſt Clamours were only againſt Popery and Innovation; but to ſilence all Pretences of this kind, the King offer'd an abſolute Satisfaction in his Anſwer to their Nineteen Propoſitions deliver'd June 2.

King's Anſwer to Matters of Religion.

" For the ſixth Demand, concerning the Laws " in Force againſt Jeſuits, Prieſts, and Popiſh Re- " cuſants, We have by many of our Meſſages to " you, by our voluntary Promiſe to you ſo ſolemn- " ly made never to pardon any Popiſh Prieſt, by " our ſtrict Proclamations lately publiſh'd in this " Point, and by the publick Examples which we " have made in that caſe ſince our Reſidence at " York, and before at London, ſufficiently expreſs'd " our Zeal herein. ng re. res the anders Popery.

And farther (if poſſible) to take away all the Jealouſies of Popery, the King, by Proclamation at York Aug. 10. declared his expreſs Command, that no Popiſh Recuſant, nor any other, who ſhould refuſe to take the two Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, ſhould be lifted or retained in his Service. And in his Declaration of October 22. his Majeſty utterly diſowns the Slanders caſt upon him of encouraging Popery, and ſays, For that continued diſhoneſt Accuſation of our Inclination to the Papiſts, which the Authors of it in their own Conſciences (which will one day be dreadful to them) know to be moſt unjuſt and groundleſs; We can ſay no more, and We can do no more to the Satisfaction of the World.

arliament aſſociates with their brethren of Scotland.

But the two Houſes deſired now to be remembred by their Brethren in Scotland; and in their Declaration of October 22. they told his Majeſty, We expect our Brethren of Scotland, according to the Act of Pacification, whereby the two Kingdoms are mutually bound to ſuppreſs all Debates and Differences to the Diſturbance of the publick Peace, that they will help and aſſiſt us in Defence of the Cauſe, which if the Popiſh Party prevail, muſt either invalid them in that Alteration of Religion which will be made here, or engage them in a War againſt this Kingdom to defend their own Religion and Liberty. They had good Grounds to threaten his Majeſty with a new Storm from Scotland: for they had entred a Correſpondence, and received Aſſurance of Aid. There had been A Declaration of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament ſent to the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland; and An Anſwer of the General Aſſemby of the Kirk of Scotland to the Declaration ſent by the Parliament of England the 25th of Auguſt 1642. And farther, A Letter ſent by ſome Brethren of the Miniſters of the Church of England to the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, dated at London the 22d of July. And An Anſwer of the General Aſſembly to the Letter ſent by the Miniſters of England, dated the 5th of Auguſt 1642. And though his Majeſty, to hinder the Effects of this Confederacy, ſent his Letter to the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, given at Leiceſter the 23d of July; and had in Return, The hearty Thankſgiving and humble Petition of the General Aſſembly met at St. Andrews, to the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, the 27th of July 1642. yet the Vein of theſe Papers did ſufficiently abode, that the Kirk of Scotland would ſhew forth all her Power to help deſtroy Epiſcopacy, Liturgy, and all the eſtabliſh'd Order in England.

Presbyterian Divines aſſiſt the Parliam.

And indeed ſome of the Presbyterian Divines had by this time got a powerful Influence over the two Houſes, and began to pen for them their Publick Ordinances of Religion, in ſuch a canting Stile, and with ſuch a broad Hypocriſie, that the Members of Senſe and Sobriety could not but Bluſh at Reading their own Acts. For Example, on February the 15th there was an Ordinance of the Lords and Commons exhorting to the Duty of Repentance as the only Remedy to preſent Calamities. And it began thus,

And draw up their publick Inſtruments.

" That flouriſhing Kingdoms have been ruin'd by " impenitent going on in a courſe of Sinning, the " Sacred Story doth plainly tell us: And how near " to ſuch a Ruin our ſinful Nation now is, the " preſent lamentable Face of it doth too apparent- " ly ſhew. And though we ſhould feel the heavy " Strokes of God yet ſeven times more, it is our " Duty to accept the Puniſhment of our Iniquity, " and to ſay, Righteous art thou, O Lord, and juſt " are thy Judgments! Yet becauſe the Lord who is " juſt is alſo merciful, and in his infinite Mercy " hath left the excellent and ſucceſsful Remedy of " Repentance to Nations brought near to the Gates " of Deſtruction and Deſpair; O let not England " be negligent in the Application of it! Humble " Addreſſes of a penitent People to a merciful God, " have prevailed with him: They prevailed for Ni- " neveh when the Sentence ſeem'd to be gone out " againſt her, and may alſo prevail for England. " It is therefore thought moſt neceſſary by the Lords " and Commons in Parliament, that all his Maje- " ſty's Subjects in this Kingdom of England be exci- " ted and ſtirred up ſpeedily to lay hold upon this " only and unfailing Remedy of Repentance; free- " ly acknowledging, and heartily bewailing, even " with deepeſt Humiliation, godly Sorrow, and " Deteſtation, &c.

Then they come to the preſcribing a Confeſſion of National Sins; and that the Devotion might be a Libel upon the King and the Church, they chuſe out for National Sins, Idolatry and Bloodſhed. " That " of Idolatry, as it was the Sin of our Anceſtors, " ſo it is the ſpreading Sin of theſe latter times, " while by a general Connivance and almoſt Tole- " ration it hath been ſeveral ways fomented and " encouraged, the grievous Effects whereof this " Kingdom of England now begins to feel, &c. " And for the other crying and cruel Sin of Blood- " ſhed, that calls aloud for Vengeance (beſides " many Murders not expiated, and the Blood-guilty

" pardon'd) did it not go hand in hand with that " abominable Idol of the Mass in the days of Queen " Mary and some of her Predecessors, when many " Hundreds of the dear Martyrs and Saints of God " lost their precious Lives in Flames and Pri- " sons, &c.

The Chur. to be utterly dissolv'd.

When once the two Houses could descend to have such fulsome Penitential Forms put upon them, for them to adopt and to obtrude in their Name upon the Nation; it was a sure sign, that All that was sound and decent in Faith and Worship, was now to be commanded into Enthusiasm and endless Schism. And to this purpose, their Votes, and Orders, and Bills, by degrees came up to an utter Dissolution of the Church. To recite the Particulars is the less needful, because they are summ'd up into One of their Humble Desires and Propositions tender'd to his Majesty Febr. 1. when the Commissioners carried five Bills along with them, and press'd the Passing of them in this 4th Proposition.

IV. " That your Majesty will be pleased to give " your Royal Assent unto the Bill for taking away " Superstitious Innovations; to the Bill for the ut- " ter abolishing and taking away of all Arch- " bishops, Bishops, their Chancellors and Commis- " saries, Deans, Sub-deans, Deans and Chapters, " Arch-deacons, Canons, and Prebendaries, and all " Chantors, Chancellors, Treasurers, Sub-treasurers, " Succentors, and Sacrists, and all Vicars Choral " and Choristers, old Vicars and new Vicars of " any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, and all other " their Under-officers, out of the Church of Eng- " land; to the Bill against Scandalous Ministers; " to the Bill against Pluralities; and to the Bill for " Consultation to be had with Godly, Religious, " and Learned Divines; that your Majesty will " be pleased to promise to pass such other good " Bills for settling of Church-Government, as upon " Consultation with the Assembly of the said Di- " vines shall be resolved on by both Houses of Par- " liament, and by them be presented to your Majesty.

Sad Confusions.

And though they could not hope for the legal passing of these Bills, yet they had already come to the arbitrary Execution of them: For on October 15. it was Resolved upon the Question, " That the " Fines, Rents, and Profits of Arch-bishops, Bishops, " Deans and Chapters, and of such notorious De- " linquents who have taken up Arms against the " Parliament, or have been active in the Commissi- " on of Array, shall be sequestred for the Use and " Service of the Commonwealth. The Organs and painted Glass, and very Monuments of the Dead, were defaced; Tithes were denied to them who read the Common-Prayer; and these old regular Divines were plunder'd, sequestred, and driven away, to make room for all the angry Men, who had been by Episcopal Authority suspended or deprived; and for all the new little Creatures that began now to cover the Land.

Sufferings of Abp. Laud.

The good Archbishop lay still in the Tower, and his Sufferings there may be best known from his own Words. " Having broke the Sinew of my " right Leg, it was two Months before I could " go out of my Chamber. On Monday May 15. I " made shift, between my Man and my Staff, to " go to Church: There one Mr. Foslin preached, " with Vehemency becoming Bedlam, with Treason " sufficient to hang him in any other State, and " with such particular Abuse to me, that Women " and Boys stood up in the Church, to see how I " could bear it. I humbly thank God for my Pa- " tience. —— Nov. 3. seventy eight Pounds of my " Rents taken from my Comptrouler by Mr. Holland " and Mr. Ashurst, which they said was for Mainte- " nance of the King's Children. —— Nov. 9. That Day in the Morning, " my young Dun Horses were taken away by War- " rant under the Hands of Sir John Evelyn, Mr. Pym, " and Mr. Martin. —— Decemb. 23. Dr. Layton came " with a Warrant from the House of Commons for " the Keys of my House to be deliver'd to him, and " more Prisoners to be brought thither. —— Jan. 5. " a final Order from both Houses for settling of " Lambeth Prison. All my Wood and Coals spent " and to be spent there, not reserving in the Order " that I should have any for my own Use; nor " would that Motion be hearken'd to. —— Mar. 24. " Friday, one Mr. Ford told me (he is a Suffolk " Man) that there was a Plot to send me and Bi- " shop Wren as Delinquents to New England within " fourteen Days.

Account of Foreign Protestants.

The Foreign Protestants in England had been too much incensed by the severe Proceedings of Abp. Laud, and some other Prelates, against them. The Account may be best taken from the late History of the Rebellion. " When the Reformation of Religi- " on first begun in England in the time of K. Ed. VI. " very many out of Germany and France left their " Countries, where the Reformation was severely " prosecuted, and transplanted themselves, their " Families, and Estates, into England, where they " were received very hospitably: And that King, " with great Piety and Policy, by several Acts of " State granted them many Indempnities, and the " free Use of Churches in London for the exercise of " their Religion; whereby the Number of them en- " creased, and the Benefit to the Kingdom by such " an Access of Trade and Improvement of Manufa- " ctures, was very considerable. Which Q. Eliza- " beth finding, and well knowing that other nota- " ble Uses of them might be made, enlarg'd their " Privileges by new Concessions; drawing, by all " means, great Numbers over, and suffering them " to erect Churches, and to enjoy the exercise of " their Religion after their own Manner, and ac- " cording to their own Ceremonies, in all Places " where, for the Conveniency of their Trade, they " chose to reside. And so they had Churches in " Norwich, Canterbury, and other Places of the King- " dom, as well as in London; whereby the Wealth " of those Places marvellously encreased. And be- " sides the Benefit from thence, the Queen made use " of them in her great Transactions of State in " France and the Low Countries; and by the Media- " tion and Interposition of those People, kept an " useful Interest in that Party in all the foreign Do- " minions where they were tolerated. The same " Charters of Liberty were continued and granted " to them during the peaceable Reign of K. James, " and in the Beginning of this King's Reign, altho' " it may be, the politick Considerations in those " Concessions and Connivances, were neither made " use of, nor understood.

" Some few Years before these Troubles, when " the Power of Church-men grew more transcen- " dent, and indeed the Faculties and Understand- " ings of the Lay Counsellors more dull, lazy, and " unactive (for without the last, the first could " have done no hurt) the Bishops grew jealous " that the countenancing another Discipline of the " Church here, by Order of the State (for those " Foreign Congregations were govern'd by a " Presbytery, according to the Custom and Con- " stitution of those Parts of which they had " been Natives; the French, Dutch, and Wal- " loons, had the free Use of several Churches " according to their own Discipline) would at " least diminish the Reputation and Dignity of 1642. 18 Car. I. "the Epiſcopal Government, and give ſome countenance to the factious and ſchiſmatical Party in England to hope for ſuch a Toleration.

"Then there wanted not ſome fiery, turbulent, "and contentious Perſons of the Congregations, "who upon private Difference and Conteſts, were "ready to inform againſt their Brethren, and to diſ"cover what they thought might prove of moſt "prejudice to them: ſo that, upon pretence that "they far exceeded the Liberties which were gran"ted to them, and that under the Notion of Fo"reigners many Engliſh ſeparated themſelves from "the Church, and join'd themſelves to thoſe Con"gregations (which poſſibly was in part true) the "Council-board connived at, or interpoſed not, "whilſt the Biſhops did ſome Acts of Reſtraint, "with which thoſe Congregations grew generally "diſcontented, and thought the Liberty of their "Conſciences to be taken from them; which cauſed "in London much complaining of this kind, but "much more in the Dioceſe of Norwich, where Dr. "Wren, the Biſhop there, paſſionately and warmly "proceeded againſt them: ſo that many left the "Kingdom, to the leſſening the wealthy Manufa"cture there of Kerſeys and narrow Cloths; and, "which was worſe, tranſporting that Myſtery into "Foreign Parts.

"And that this might be ſure to look like more "than what was neceſſary to the Civil Policy of the "Kingdom; Whereas in all former times the Am"baſſadors and all foreign Miniſters of State em"ployed from England into any Parts where the "Reform'd Religion was exerciſed, frequented their "Churches, gave all poſſible Countenance to their "Profeſſion, and held Correſpondence with the moſt "active and powerful Perſons of that relation; and "particularly, the Ambaſſador Lieger at Paris, had "diligently and conſtantly frequented the Church "at Charenton, and held a fair Intercourſe with "thoſe of that Religion throughout the Kingdom, "by which they had ſtill received Advantage, That "People being induſtrious and active to get into "the Secrets of the State, and ſo deriving all ne"ceſſary Intelligence to thoſe whom they deſired to "gratify: The contrary to this was now with great "Induſtry practiſed, and ſome Advertiſements, if "not Inſtructions, given to the Ambaſſadors there, "to forbear any extraordinary Commerce with the "Men of that Profeſſion. And the Lord Scudamore, "who was the laſt Ordinary Ambaſſador there be"fore the Beginning of this Parliament, whether by "the Inclinations of his own Nature, or by Advice "from others, not only declined going to Charen"ton, but furniſh'd his own Chapel in his Houſe "with ſuch Ornaments (as Candles upon the Com"munion Table and the like) as gave great Offence "and Umbrage to thoſe of the Reformation there, "who had not ſeen the like: beſides that, he was "careful to publiſh upon all Occaſions, by himſelf, "and thoſe who had the neareſt Relation to him, "That the Church of England look'd not on the Hugo"nots as a part of their Communion: which was like"wiſe too much, and too induſtriouſly, diſcourſed "at home.

"They of the Church of England who committed "the greateſt Errors this way, had undoubtedly not "the leaſt Thoughts of making Alterations in it "towards the countenancing of Popery, as hath "been uncharitably conceiv'd; but (having too "juſt Cauſe given them to diſlike the Paſſion and "Licence that was taken by ſome Perſons in the "Reformed Churches, under the Notion of Conſci"ence and Religion, to the Diſturbance of the Peace "of Kingdoms) unskilfully believed, that the total "declining the Intereſt of that Party, where it ex"ceeded the neceſſary Bounds of Reformation, "would make this Church of England look'd upon "with more Reverence, and that thereby the com"mon Adverſary, the Papiſt, would abate ſome"what of his Arrogance and Supercilioufneſs; and "that both Parties, piouſly conſidering the Charity 1642.
"which Religion ſhould beget, might, if not unite, 18 Car. I.
"yet refrain from the Bitterneſs and Uncharitable"neſs of Contention in Matters of Opinion, and "agree in the practical Duties of Chriſtians and "Subjects. Thus, contracting their Conſiderations "in too narrow a compaſs, theſe Men contented "themſelves with their pious Intentions, without "duly weighing Objections, or the Circumſtances of "Policy. And ſome of our own Communion who "differ'd with them in Opinion in this Point, tho' "they were in the right, not giving, and it may be "not knowing the right Reaſons, rather confirm'd "than reform'd them in their Inclinations: neither "of them diſcerning the true and ſubſtantial "Grounds of that Policy upon which that good "Correſpondence had been founded which they "were now about to change. And ſo the Church "of England, not giving the ſame Countenance to "thoſe of the Religion in foreign Parts which it "had formerly done, no ſooner was diſcern'd to be "under a Cloud at home, but thoſe of the Religion "abroad were glad of the Occaſion to publiſh their "Malice againſt her, and to enter into the ſame "Conſpiracy againſt the Crown, without which "they could have done little Hurt to the Church.

This Year began with the Proſecution of the 1642.
Treaty lately commenc'd between the Commiſſioners from the Parliament and the King in Perſon at Oxford, manag'd with ſeveral Inſtructions, Propoſitions, Anſwers, Replies, and other Papers, recited at large in the Collections of Mr. Ruſhworth. The Manner of Treating is thus repreſented by Mr. Bulſtrode Whitlock, who was one of the Parliament's Commiſſioners. Treaty continu'd at Oxford.

"The King uſed them (i. e. the Parliament's "Commiſſioners) with great Favour and Civility; "and his General Ruthen, and divers of his Lords "and Officers, came frequently to their Table, and "they had very friendly Diſcourſes and Treat"ments together. The King himſelf did them the "Honour ſometimes to accept of part of their Wine "and Proviſions which the Earl ſent to him when "they had any thing extraordinary. The Commiſ"ſioners finding Whitlock's Pen uſeful in the Ser"vice, did put him upon Drawing of all their Pa"pers, which were Tranſcribed afterwards by their "Secretaries. Their Inſtructions were very ſtrict, "and tied them up to treat with none but the King "himſelf, whom they often attended at his Lodg"ings in Chriſt-Church, and had Acceſs at all times "when they deſired it, and were allow'd by his Ma"jeſty a very free Debate with him. He had com"monly waiting on him, when he Treated with "them, Prince Rupert and the Lord Keeper Little"ton, the Earl of Southampton, the Lord Chief Ju"ſtice Banks, and ſeveral Lords of his Council, "who never debated any Matters with them, but "gave their Opinion to the King in thoſe things "which he demanded of them, and ſometimes would "put the King in mind of ſome particular Things, "but otherwiſe they did not ſpeak at all. In this "Treaty the King manifeſted his great Parts and "Abilities, Strength of Reaſon, and Quickneſs of "Apprehenſion, with much Patience hearing what "was objected againſt him; wherein he allowed all "freedom, and would himſelf ſum up the Argu"ments, and give a moſt clear Judgment upon "them. His Unhappineſs was, that he had a bet"ter Opinion of others Judgments than of his own, "tho' they were weaker than his own; and of this "the Parliament's Commiſſioners had Experience, "to their great Trouble. They were often wait"ing on the King, and debating ſome Points of the "Treaty with him until Midnight before they came "to a Concluſion. Upon one of the moſt material "Points they preſſed his Majeſty with their Reaſons "and beſt Arguments they could uſe to grant what "they deſired. The King ſaid, He was fully ſatiſ"fied; and promiſed to give them his Anſwer in Wri"ting,

1643. 19 Car. I.

" ting according to their Desire; but because it was " then past Midnight, and too late to put it into " Writing, he would have it drawn up next Morning " (when he commanded them to wait on him " again) and then he would give them his Answer " in Writing, as it was now agreed upon. They " went to their Lodgings full of joyful Hopes to " receive this Answer the next Morning; and which " being given, would have much conduced to a happy " Issue and Success of this Treaty; and they had " the King's Word for it; and they waited on him " the next Morning at the Hour appointed. But instead of that Answer which they expected and " were promised, the King gave them a Paper quite " contrary to what was concluded the Night before, " and very much tending to the breach of the Treaty. They did humbly expostulate this with his " Majesty, and press'd him upon his Royal Word, " and the ill consequences which they feared would " follow upon this his new Paper: But the King " told them, He had alter'd his Mind, and that this " Paper which he now gave them was his Answer, which " he was now resolv'd to make upon their last Debate. " And they could obtain no other from him, which " occasioned much Sadness and Trouble to them. " Some of his own Friends, of whom the Commissioners enquir'd touching this Passage informed " them, that after they were gone from the King, " and that his Council also were gone away, some " of his Bed-chamber (and they went higher) hearing from him what Answer he had promised, and " doubting that it would tend to such an Issue of the " Treaty as they did not wish, they being rather " for the continuance of the War, they never left " pressing and perswading of the King, till they had " prevailed with him to change his former Resolutions, and to give Order for his Answer to be " drawn as it was now delivered.

Allowing this Relation of one of the Commissioners themselves to be true and candid, we cannot but lament the unhappiness of the good King, that some of his most intimate Confidents were against his concluding a Peace; and some others, or perhaps the same, were against his obtaining an absolute Victory: Afraid he should comply least his Prerogative might be not great enough to protect them; and yet afraid he should conquer, least he might be then tempted to assume an Arbitrary Power.

But indeed in the present Case 'tis possible, that the Friends whom he consulted did really apprehend, that the more he yielded the more burthen was pressed upon him; and therefore might well endeavour to prevail, that he should never recede from an Authority sufficient to restore himself, and defend those who had faithfully adher'd to him. For the Answer to which Mr. Whitlock refers, and which was sent in a Message to both Houses April 12. was only this.

King's final Answer.

" To shew to the whole World how earnestly his " Majesty longs for Peace, and that no Success shall " make him desire the continuance of his Army to " any other End, or for any longer time than that, " and until things may be so settled, as that the " Law may have a full, free and uninterrupted " Course, for the Defence and Preservation of the " Rights of his Majesty, both Houses and his good " Subjects.

1. " As soon as his Majesty is satisfied in his first " Proposition, concerning his own Revenue, Magazines, Ships and Forts, in which he desires nothing, but that the just, known, legal Rights of " his Majesty (devolved to him from his Progenitors) and of the Persons trusted by him, which " have been violently taken from both, be restored " unto him and unto them; unless any just and " legal Exceptions against any of the Persons trusted " by him (which are yet unknown to his Majesty) " can be made appear to him.

1643. 19 Car. I.

" 2. As soon as all the Members of both Houses " shall be restored to the same capacity of Sitting " and Voting in Parliament, as they had upon the " first of January 1641. the same of Right belonging " to them by their Birth-rights, and the free Election " of those that sent them, and having been voted " from them for adhering to his Majesty in these distractions; his Majesty not intending that this " should extend either to the Bishops whose Votes " have been taken away by Bill, or to such in whose " Places, upon new Writs, new Elections have been " made.

" As soon as his Majesty and both Houses may be " secured from such tumultuous Assemblies, as to " the great breach of the Privileges, and the high " dishonour of Parliaments, have formerly assembled " about both Houses, and awed the Members of the " same, and occasioned two several Complaints from " the Lords House, and two several Desires of that " House to the House of Commons, to join in a " Declaration against them; the complying with " which Desire might have prevented all these miserable Distractions which have ensued. Which " Security his Majesty conceives can be only setled " by adjourning the Parliament to some other place, " at the least 20 Miles from London, the choice of " which his Majesty leaves to both Houses.

" His Majesty will most cheerfully and readily " consent, that both Armies be immediately disbanded, and give a present meeting to both his " Houses of Parliament, at the Time and Place, at, " and to which the Parliament shall be agreed to be " Adjourn'd.

As soon as the two Houses had receiv'd this Answer, they immediately recall'd their Commissioners from Oxford; and so the Treaty having continued from the 4th of March to the 15th of April, was broke off without effect; tho' the main Articles seem'd easy enough to be adjusted, and the only Question was, Who should be first and most trusted in the performance of them? Treaty broke off.

The War was to be now prosecuted with the greater fury; the most active raiser of Forces for the Parliament was Sir William Waller, who on March 19. had advanced from Bristol, and forc'd the Town of Malmsbury (garison'd for the King, and commanded by Colonel Herbert Lunsford) to surrender. After which he defeated a great Body of Welsh near Glocester, raised and led by the Lord Herbert, Son to the Marquis of Worcester. Thence he march'd and took Chepstow, Monmouth and Hereford, and so victoriously on, till at Round-way-Down in Wiltshire he was shamefully beat, and forc'd to post up to London. War prosecuted with greater Fury.

The Earl of Essex with the Parliaments main Army besieged Reading on Apr. 15. commanded by Sir Arthur Aston, who being wounded in the Batteries, was forced to substitute Colonel Fielding; he hung out a Flag, and enter'd upon a Treaty of Surrender; but while it was depending, the King in Person march'd from Walingford to raise the Siege; but not able to gain the Pass at Caversham-bridge, he retired, and Fielding Surrender'd the Town upon Articles on April 26. for which he was shortly after by a Council of War at Oxford sentenc'd to die; but by his Majesty's Favour was repriev'd. Siege of Reading. The Town Surrender'd.

May 20. his Majesty sent a Message to the two Houses to renew a Treaty of Peace. —— " And he " requires them as they will answer to God, to himself and all the World, that they will no longer " suffer their fellow Subjects to welter in each others " Blood; that they would remember by whose Authority, and to what end they met in the Council; and send such an Answer to his Majesty as " may open a Door to let in a firm Peace and Security to the whole Kingdom. But the Houses thought they could now depend upon their own Strength: So on April 1. they made an Ordinance for King desires to renew the Treaty for Peace.

1643. 19 Car. I. Sequeſtering the Eſtates of notorious Delinquents. And it was but in vain that the King iſſued his Proclamation April 7. To prohibit the Aſſeſſing, Collecting or Paying any weekly Taxes, and Seizing or Sequeſtering the Rents or Eſtates of his good Subjects, by colour of any Orders or pretended Ordinances of one or both Houſes of Parliament. And the Commons cut off all correſpondence between the King and them, by an Order of April 10. to prevent Spies and Intelligencers; and on May 23. they reſolv'd to impeach the Queen of High-Treaſon, and Mr. Pym carried up the Charge to the Bar of the Lords, and died ſoon after, leaving this Character given by the Lord Clarendon. " Mr. Pym was look'd upon as the Man of greateſt Experience in Parliament, where he had ſerv'd very long, and was always a Man of Buſineſs, being an Officer in the Exchequer, and of a good Reputation generally; though known to be inclin'd to the Puritan Faction, yet not of thoſe furious Reſolutions againſt the Church as the other leading Men were, and wholly devoted to the Earl of Bedford who had nothing of that Spirit.

Pym's Death and Character.

His Funeral Sermon was Preach'd and Printed by Mr. Stephen Marſhal, who compar'd him to John the Baptiſt, For that he was taken away violently, after but two or three Years work. On occaſion of his Death the Character of him was thus continued by the ſame Noble Peer; " About this time the Councils at Weſtminſter loſt a principal Supporter by the Death of John Pym; who died with great Torment and Agony of a Diſeaſe unuſual, and therefore the more ſpoken of, Morbus Pediculoſus, as was reported, which render'd him an Object very loathſome to thoſe who had been moſt delighted with him. No Man had more to anſwer for the Miſeries of the Kingdom, or had his Hand or Head deeper in their contrivance: And yet, I believe, they grew much higher even in his Life than he deſign'd. He was a Man of a private Quality and Condition of Life; his Education in the Office of the Exchequer, where he had been a Clerk, and his Parts rather acquir'd by Induſtry than ſupplied by Nature, or adorn'd by Art. He had been well known in former Parliaments, and was one of thoſe few who had ſate in many; the long intermiſſion of Parliaments having worn out moſt of thoſe who had been acquainted with the Rules and Orders obſerv'd in thoſe Conventions: This gave him ſome Reputation and Reverence amongſt thoſe who were but new introduc'd.

" He had been moſt taken notice of for being concern'd and paſſionate in the Jealouſies of Religion, and much troubled with the Countenance which had been given to thoſe Opinions that had been imputed to Arminius; and this gave him great Authority and Intereſt with thoſe who were not pleaſed with the Government of the Church, or the growing Power of the Clergy; yet himſelf Induſtriouſly took care to be believ'd, and he profeſs'd to be very entire to the Doctrine and Diſcipline of the Church of England. In the ſhort Parliament before this, he ſpoke much, and appeared to be the moſt leading Man; for beſides the exact knowledge of the former, and Orders of that Council, which few Men had, he had a very comely and grave way of expreſſing himſelf, with great volubility of Words, natural and proper, and underſtood the Temper and Affections of the Kingdom as well as any Man; and had obſerv'd the Errors and Miſtakes in Government, and knew well how to make them appear greater than they were. After the unhappy Diſſolution of that Parliament, he continued for the moſt part about London, in Converſation and great Repute amongſt thoſe Lords who were moſt Strangers to the Court, and were believed moſt averſe to it; in whom he improv'd all imaginable Jealouſies and Diſcontents towards the State; and as ſoon as this Parliament was reſolv'd to be ſummon'd, he was as diligent to procure ſuch Perſons to be elected as he knew to be moſt inclin'd to the way he meant to take. 1643. 19 Car. I.

" At the firſt opening of this Parliament, he appear'd paſſionate and prepared againſt the Earl of Strafford; and though in private deſigning he was much govern'd by Mr. Hambden and Mr. St. John, yet he ſeem'd to all Men to have the greateſt Influence upon the Houſe of Commons of any Man; and, in truth, I think he was at that time, and ſome Months after, the moſt popular Man, and the moſt able to do hurt, that hath lived in any time. Upon the firſt Deſign of ſoftning and obliging the powerful Perſons in both Houſes, when it was reſolv'd to make the Earl of Bedford Lord High Treaſurer of England, the King likewiſe intended to make Mr. Pym Chancellor of the Exchequer; for which he received his Majeſty's Promiſe, and made a return of a ſuitable profeſſion of his Service and Devotion; and thereupon the other being no ſecret, ſomewhat declined from that ſharpneſs in the Houſe which was more Popular than any Man's, and made ſome Overtures to provide for the Glory and Splendor of the Crown; in which he had ſo ill Succeſs, that his Intereſt and Reputation there viſibly abated, and he found that he was much better able to do hurt than good, which wrought very much upon him to Melancholly, and complaint of the violence and diſcompoſure of the Peoples Affections and Inclinations. In the end, whether upon the Death of the Earl of Bedford, he deſpaired of that Preferment, or whether he was guilty of any thing, which upon his converſion to the Court, he thought might be diſcover'd to his damage, or for pure want of Courage, he ſuffer'd himſelf to be carried by thoſe who would not follow him, and ſo continued in the Head of thoſe who made the moſt deſperate Propoſitions.

" In the proſecution of the Earl of Strafford, his Carriage and Language was ſuch as expreſſed much perſonal Animoſities; and he was accuſed of having practis'd ſome Arts in it not vvorthy a good Man, as an Iriſh-man of very mean and lovv Condition afterwards acknowledg'd, that being brought to him as an Evidence of one part of the Charge againſt the Lord Lieutenant, in a particular of vvhich a Perſon of ſo vile Quality vvould not be reaſonably thought a competent Informer; Mr. Pym gave him Money to buy him a Sattin Suit and Cloak, in vvhich Equipage he appeared at the Trial, and gave his Evidence; which, if true, may make many other things which vvere confidently reported afterwards of him to be believed; as that he received a great ſum of Money from the French Ambaſſadour (vvhich hath been before mention'd) to hinder the Tranſportation of thoſe Regiments of Ireland into Flanders upon the diſbanding that Army there, vvhich had been prepared by the Earl of Strafford for the Buſineſs of Scotland; in vvhich, if his Majeſty's Directions and Commands had not been diverted and contradicted by the Houſes, many do believe the Rebellion in Ireland had not happen'd.

" Certain it is, that his power of doing ſhrewd Turns was extraordinary, and no leſs in doing good Offices for particular Perſons; and that he did preſerve many from Cenſure who were under the ſevere Diſpleaſure of the Houſes, and look'd upon as eminent Delinquents; and the Quality of many of them made it believ'd, that he had ſold that Protection for valuable Conſiderations. From the time of his being accuſed of High Treaſon by the King, with the Lord Kimbolton, and the other Members, he never entertained Thoughts of Moderation, but always oppoſed all Overtures of Peace and Accommodation; and when the E. of Eſſex was diſpoſed, the laſt Summer, by thoſe Lords to an Inclination towards a Treaty, as is before remember'd, Mr. Pym's Power and Dexterity wholly changed him, and wrought him to 1643. 19 Car. I. " that Temper which he afterwards ſwerv'd not " from. He was wonderfully ſollicitous for the " Scots coming in to their Aſſiſtance, tho' his Indiſ- " poſition of Body was ſo great, that it might well " have made another Impreſſion upon his Mind. " During his Sickneſs he was a very ſad Spectacle; " but none being admitted to him who had not " concurr'd with him, it is not known what his laſt " Thoughts and Conſiderations were. He died to- " wards the end of December, before the Scots en- " ter'd; and was buried with wonderful Pomp and " Magnificence, in that place where the Bones of " our Engliſh Kings and Princes are committed to " their Reſt.

Soon after died another Leader of the Houſe of Commons, Mr. Hampden, who went out with a Party of the Buckinghamſhire Forces to oppoſe Prince Rupert, who made frequent Incurſions into the Parliament Quarters; and engaging with him in Chalgrave-Field, was routed and wounded June 18. and died of his Wounds June 24. His Character thus given by the ſame Author. " Mr. Hampden was a " Man of much greater Cunning, and it may be of " the moſt diſcerning Spirit, and of the greateſt " Addreſs and Inſinuation to bring any thing to " paſs which he deſired, of any Man of that time, " and who laid the Deſign deepeſt. He was a Gen- " tleman of a good Extraction and a fair Fortune, " who from a Life of great Pleaſure and Licence, " had on a ſudden retired to extraordinary Sobriety " and Strictneſs, and yet retain'd his uſual Chear- " fulneſs and Affability; which, together with the " Opinion of his Wiſdom and Juſtice, and the Cou- " rage he had ſhew'd in oppoſing the Ship-Money, " rais'd his Reputation to a very great height, not " only in Buckinghamſhire where he lived, but gene- " rally throughout the Kingdom. He was not a " Man of many Words, and rarely begun the Diſ- " courſe, or made the firſt Entrance upon any Buſi- " neſs that was aſſumed; but a very weighty Spea- " ker: and after he had heard a full Debate, and " obſerved how the Houſe was like to be inclined, " took up the Argument, and ſhortly, and clearly, " and craftily ſo ſtated it, that he commonly con- " ducted it to the Concluſion he deſired: and if he " found he could not do that, he was never with- " out the Dexterity to divert the Debate to another " time, and to prevent the determining any thing " in the Negative which might prove inconvenient " in the future. He made ſo great a ſhew of Civi- " lity, and Modeſty, and Humility, and always of " miſtruſting his own Judgment, and eſteeming his " with whom he conferr'd for the preſent, that he " ſeem'd to have no Opinions or Reſolutions, but " ſuch as he contracted from the Information and " Inſtruction he receiv'd upon the Diſcourſes of o- " thers, whom he had a wonderful Art of Govern- " ing, and leading into his Principles and Inclina- " tions, while they believed that he wholly depen- " ded upon their Counſel and Advice. No Man " had ever a greater Power over himſelf, or was leſs " the Man that he ſeem'd to be; which ſhortly af- " ter appear'd to every body, when he cared leſs " to keep on the Maſque. His Death is thus re- ported, and his Character thus farther continued by the ſame noble Author: " Mr. Hampden being ſhot " into the Shoulder with a Brace of Bullets, which " brake the Bone, within three Weeks after died " with extraordinary Pain, to as great a Conſterna- " tion of all that Party, as if their whole Party had " been defeated or cut off. Many Men obſerved, " that the Field in which the Skirmiſh was, and " upon which Mr. Hampden received his Death's " Wound, Chalgrave-Field, was the ſame place in " which he had firſt executed the Ordinance of the " Militia, and engaged that County, in which his " Reputation was very great in this Rebellion: and " it was confeſs'd by the Priſoners that were taken " that Day, and acknowledged by all, that upon " the Alarm that Morning, after their Quarters " were beaten up, he was exceeding ſollicitous to 1643. " draw Forces together to purſue the Enemy; and 19 Car. I. " being a Colonel of Foot, put himſelf among thoſe " Horſe as a Volunteer, who were firſt ready; and " that when the Prince made a Stand, all the Offi- " cers were of opinion to ſtay till their Body came " up, and he alone (being ſecond to none but the " General himſelf in the Obſervance and Applicati- " on of all Men) perſwaded and prevailed with " them to advance; ſo violently did his Fate carry " him to pay the Mulct in the place where he had " committed the Tranſgreſſion about a Year be- " fore.

Hampden's Death and Character.

" He was a Gentleman of a good Family in Buck- " inghamſhire, and born to a fair Fortune, and of a " moſt civil and affable Deportment. In his En- " trance into the World, he indulged to himſelf all " the Licence in Sports and Exerciſes, and Compa- " ny, which were uſed by Men of the moſt jolly " Converſation. Afterwards he retir'd to a more " reſerv'd and melancholly Society, yet preſerving " his own natural Chearfulneſs and Vivacity, and " above all, a flowing Courteſie to all Men: Tho' " they who converſed nearly with him found him " growing into a Diſlike of the Eccleſiaſtical Go- " vernment of the Church, yet moſt believ'd it ra- " ther a Diſlike of ſome Church-men, and of ſome " Introducements of theirs, which he apprehended " might diſquiet the publick Peace. He was rather " of Reputation in his own Country, than of pub- " lick Diſcourſe or Fame in the Kingdom, before " the buſineſs of Ship-money; but then he grew the " Argument of all Tongues, every Man enquiring " Who and What he was that durſt, at his own " Charge, ſupport the Liberty and Property of the " Kingdom, and reſcue his Country, as he thought, " from being made a Prey to the Court. His Car- " riage, throughout this Agitation, was with that " rare Temper and Modeſty, that they who watch'd " him narrowly to find ſome Advantage againſt " his Perſon, to make him leſs reſolute in his Cauſe, " were compell'd to give him a juſt Teſtimony: " And the Judgment that was given againſt him in- " finitely more advanced him than the Service for " which it was given. When this Parliament be- " gun (being return'd Knight of the Shire for the " County where he liv'd) the Eyes of all Men were " fixed upon him as their Patriæ Pater, and the Pi- " lot that muſt ſteer the Veſſel through the Tem- " peſts and Rocks which threatned it. And I am " perſwaded his Power and Intereſt at that time " was greater to do Good or Hurt than any Man's " in the Kingdom, or than any Man of his Rank " hath had in any time: for his Reputation of Ho- " neſty was univerſal, and his Affections ſeem'd ſo " publickly guided, that no corrupt or private Ends " could byaſs them.

" He was of that rare Affability and Temper in " Debate, and of that ſeeming Humility and Sub- " miſſion of Judgment, as if he brought no Opini- " on of his own with him but a Deſire of Informa- " tion and Inſtruction; yet he had ſo ſubtle a way " of Interrogating, and, under the Notions of " Doubts, inſinuating his Objections, that he infu- " ſed his own Opinions into thoſe from whom he " pretended to learn, and receive them. And even " with them who were able to preſerve themſelves " from his Infuſions, and diſcern'd thoſe Opinions " to be fix'd in him with which they could not com- " ply, he always left the Character of an ingenious " and conſcientious Perſon. He was indeed a very " wiſe Man, and of great Parts, and poſſeſs'd with " the moſt abſolute Spirit of Popularity, and the " moſt abſolute Faculties to govern the People, of " any Man I ever knew. For the firſt Year of the " Parliament, he ſeem'd rather to moderate and " ſoften the violent and diſtemper'd Humours, than " to inflame them. But wiſe and diſpaſſion'd Men " plainly diſcern'd, that that Moderation proceeded " from Prudence, and Obſervation that the Seaſon

" was

1643. 19 Car. I.

" was not ripe, rather than that he approv'd of the " Moderation, and that he begat many Opinions " and Motions, the Education whereof he committed to other Men; ſo far diſguiſing his own Deſigns, that he ſeem'd ſeldom to wiſh more than " was concluded; and in many groſs Concluſions, " which would hereafter contribute to Deſigns not " yet ſet on foot, when he found them ſufficiently " bark'd by majority of Voices, he would withdraw himſelf before the Queſtion, that he might " ſeem not to conſent to ſo much viſible unreaſonableneſs, which produc'd as great a Doubt in ſome " as it did Approbation in others of his Integrity. " What Combination ſoever had been originally with " the Scots for the Invaſion of England, and what " farther was enter'd into afterwards in favour of " them, and to advance any Alteration of the Government in Parliament, no Man doubts was at " leaſt with the Privity of this Gentleman.

" After he was among thoſe Members accuſed by " the King of High-Treaſon he was much alter'd; his " Nature and Carriage ſeeming fiercer than it did " before: And without queſtion, when he firſt drew " his Sword he threw away the Scabbard; for he " paſſionately oppoſed the Overture made by the " King for a Treaty from Nottingham, and as eminently all Expedients that might have produced " any Accommodations in this that was at Oxford; " and was principally relied on to prevent any infuſions which might be made into the Earl of Eſſex " towards Peace, or to render them ineffectual if " they were made; and was indeed much more relied on by that Party than the General himſelf. " In the firſt entrance into the Troubles, he undertook the Command of a Regiment of Foot, " and performed the Duty of a Colonel upon all occaſions moſt punctually. He was very temperate " in Diet, and a ſupreme Governour over all his " Paſſions and Affections, and had thereby a great " Power over other Mens. He was of an Induſtry " and Vigilance not to be tired out or wearied by " the moſt laborious; and of Parts not to be impoſed " upon by the moſt Subtle or Sharp, and of a perſonal Courage equal to his beſt Parts; ſo that he " was an Enemy not to be wiſh'd wherever he might " have been made a Friend, and as much to be apprehended where he was ſo as any Man could deſerve to be: And therefore his Death was no leſs " pleaſing to the one Party than it was condoled in " the other. In a Word, what was ſaid of Cinna " might well be applied to him; he had a Head to " contrive and a Tongue to perſwade, and a Hand " to execute any Miſchief. His Death therefore " ſeem'd to be a great deliverance to the Nation.

On July 5. there had been a Battle at Lanſdown, between the King's Forces commanded by Prince Maurice and the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Parliaments led by Sir Will. Waller. Either Party was ſufficiently tired and batter'd; Waller in the Night march'd away to Bath, and in the Morning the King's Army found themſelves poſſeſſed entirely of the Field and the Dead, and all other Enſigns of Victory. The Lord Clarendon obſerves, " That in this " Battle, on the King's part there were more Officers and Gentlemen of Quality ſlain than common " Men, and more hurt than ſlain. That which " would have clouded any Victory, and made the " Loſs of others leſs ſpoken of, was the Death of " Sir Bevil Greenvil: He was indeed an excellent " Perſon, whoſe Activity, Intereſt and Reputation, " was the Foundation of what had been done in " Cornwal; and his Temper and Affections ſo publick that no Accident which happen'd could make " any Impreſſions in him; and his Example kept o-

1643. 19 Car. I.

Many of thoſe who ſided with the Parliament, ſeeing the ſad Effects of Civil War, began now to deſert them, and to reconcile themſelves to his Majeſty's Favour and Service, as Colonel Goring at Portſmouth, Sir Hugh Cholmley Governour of Scarborough, and even Sir John Hotham Governour of Hull, who had been ſoften'd to the Royal Intereſt by the Addreſſes of the Lord Digby; and by degrees he and his Son Captain Hotham were more and more ſuſpected by the Parliament, and were both ſeized and carried to the Tower, and without Mercy both beheaded. It was thought a Judgment on Sir John Hotham that being the firſt Man declared Traytor by the King, he was the firſt Man put to Death for a Traytor to the Parliament. His Character is thus deliver'd. " The Man was of a fearful Nature and " perplexed Underſtanding, and could better reſolve " upon deliberation than on a ſuddain; and many " were of opinion, that if he had been prepared dexterouſly before-hand, and in confidence he would have conformed to the King's Pleaſure; for he was " Maſter of a noble Fortune in Land, and rich in " Money; of a very ancient Family and well allied; " his Affections to the Government very good; and " no Man leſs deſired to ſee the Nation involved in " a Civil War than he; and when he accepted this " Imployment from the Parliament, he never imagined it would engage him in Rebellion, but believed that the King would find it neceſſary to " comply with the Advice of his two Houſes, and " that the preſerving that Magazine from being poſſeſſed by him, would likewiſe prevent any poſſible " Rupture into Arms. —— When he ſtood on the Wall of Hull and talked with the King who demanded Poſſeſſion, the King telling him, " That this " act of Diſobedience in him would probably bring " many Miſeries upon the Kingdom and much loſs " of Blood, which it ſhould lie upon his Conſcience " to prevent. Sir John with much diſtraction in his Looks talked confuſedly of the Truſt he had from the Parliament, then fell on his Knees and wiſh'd, That God would bring Confuſion upon Him and His, if he were not a loyal and faithful Subject to his Majeſty.

The King's Enemies reconcil'd to him.

Good Deſign of Waller, &c.

Mr. Waller, Tompkins, Challoner and others, had enter'd into a more expeditious Deſign to ſeize ſome leading Members, to ſurprize the City, and bring up the King to diſſolve the Parliament. But they were all unhappily diſcover'd, tried and condemn'd; Tompkins and Challoner were hang'd, but Mr. Waller having been a Member well affected to the Cauſe, and one of the Commiſſioners in the Treaty at Oxford, was Repriev'd by General Eſſex, and after a Year's Impriſonment purchas'd his Pardon for ten thouſand Pounds; and travelling into France improv'd himſelf in good Letters, and for the reſt of his Life, which was very long, he choſe rather to be admir'd for a Poet, than to be envied for a Politician. And ſeveral of the greateſt Lords as well as Commons, came over to the King; but many of them thinking themſelves to be ſlighted or ſuſpected, again cool'd in their Loyalty, and return'd to be Enemies or Neuters. The two potent Earls of Holland and Bedford receded from the Parliament about Auguſt 25. and waited on the King at Oxford, with great profeſſions of Duty and Allegiance; yet ſoon after they deſerted the King, and took refuge again at Weſtminſter. The Earl of Clare did the ſame.

The two Houſes to ſtrengthen themſelves againſt the growing Intereſt of the King, reſolv'd to ſend for Aſſiſtance into Scotland, by Commiſſioners choſe out of both Houſes, to go and negotiate a Treaty of Alliance, who came to Edinburgh Aug. 7. and brought with them a Declaration of the Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England to the Kingdom and Eſtates of Scotland, and another to the General Aſſembly ſembly of the Church of Scotland. They promiſed to aid their Brethren in England upon Condition of a ſolemn League and Covenant, and tranſmitted a Form of it to the two Houſes at Weſtminſter, where it was conſented to Aug. 28. order'd to be printed and publiſh'd Sept. 21. and the next Day taken by the Houſe of Commons and Aſſembly of Divines. And tho' his Majeſty publiſhed a Proclamation againſt taking of it, dated Octob. 19. it was by degrees impoſed and rigorouſly exacted of all People, as they would eſcape the Brand and the Penalty of Malignants. And upon this Confederacy the Scots Army enter'd England at Berwick Jan. 15. and ſoon after was publiſh'd The Declaration of the Kingdoms of England and Scotland joined in Arms for the Vindication and Defence of their Religion, Liberties and Laws againſt the Popiſh Prelatical and Malignant Party, by the Honourable Houſes of Parliament in England, and the Honourable Convention of Eſtates of the Kingdom of Scotland.

In the mean time the chief Actions in the Field were the Siege of Briſtol by Prince Rupert, who attack'd it with ſo much Bravery, that he brought the Governour Colonel Fiennes to a Parley and a Surrender upon Articles July 22. Upon this encouragement the King beſieged Glouceſter Aug. 10. which was obſtinately defended till on Sept. 5. upon the advance of Eſſex's recruited Army, the King was forced to raiſe the Siege with great loſs of Time, Men and Honour. And at Newberry Sept. 20. the Earl of Eſſex fell on the King's Army, who maintained the Fight from ſeven in the Morning till eight at Night, when the King ſuffering much the greater Loſs, drew off his Forces and marched to Oxford, having loſt three excellent Perſons of Quality, the Earl of Carnarvan, the Earl of Sunderland and the Lord Viſcount Falkland. Their Characters are thus drawn by the admirable Hand of the Lord Clarendon. " Here fell " the Earl of Sunderland, a Lord of great Fortune, " tender Years (being not above three and twenty " Years of Age) and an early Judgment; who having no Command in the Army, attended upon " the King's Perſon, under the obligation of Honour, and putting himſelf that Day in the King's " Troop a Voluntier, before they came to Charge " was taken away by a Cannon Bullet.

" This Day alſo fell the Earl of Carnarvan, who " after he had charg'd and roured a Body of the " Enemies Horſe, coming careleſly back by ſome of " the ſcatter'd Troopers, was by one of them who " knew him, run through the Body with a Sword, " of which he died within an Hour. He was a Perſon with whoſe great Parts and Virtue the World " was not enough acquainted. Before the War, tho' " his Education was adorn'd by Travel, and an exact obſervation of the Manners of more Nations " than our common Travellers uſe to viſit (for he " had, after the View of Spain, France and moſt " parts of Italy, ſpent ſome time in Turky and thoſe " Eaſtern Countries) he ſeem'd to be wholly delighted with thoſe looſer Exerciſes of Pleaſure, " Hunting, Hawking and the like; in which the " Nobility of that time too much delighted to excel. " After the Troubles began, having the Command " of the firſt or ſecond Regiment of Horſe that was " raiſed for the King's Service, he wholly gave himſelf up to the Office and Duty of a Soldier, no " Man more diligently Obeying or more dexterouſly Commanding; for he was not only of a very " keen Courage in the expoſing his Perſon, but an " excellent Diſcerner and Purſuer of Advantage upon his Enemy. He had a Mind and Underſtanding very preſent in the Article of Danger, which " is a rare benefit in that Profeſſion. Thoſe Infirmities and that Licence which he had formerly indulg'd to himſelf, he put off with Severity, when " others thought them excuſable under the Notion " of a Soldier. He was a great lover of Juſtice, and " practis'd it then moſt deliberately when he had " Power to do wrong; and ſo ſtrict in the obſervation of his Word and Promiſe, as a Commander, " that he could not be perſwaded to ſtay in the Weſt, " when he found it not in his Power to perform the " Agreement he had made with Dorcheſter and Weymouth. If he had lived, he would have proved a " great Ornament to that Profeſſion, and an excellent Soldier, and by his Death the King found a " a ſenſible weakneſs in his Army.

The Lord Falkland was diſſuaded from expoſing himſelf in the Battle, being only a Civil Officer; but he ſaid he was weary of the Times, foreſaw they would be worſe, and believ'd he ſhould be happily delivered from them. In the Morning he called for a clean Shirt, ſaying jocoſely, that If his Body fell the Rebels ſhould not find it in foul Linnen. His Character was thus drawn by the Lord Clarendon. " The Lord " Falkland was wonderfully belov'd by all that knew " him, as a Man of excellent Parts, of a Wit ſo ſharp " and a Nature ſo ſincere, that nothing could be " more lovely. The King knew him to be of good " Eſteem in the Houſe, and good Affections to his " Service and the Quiet of the Kingdom. No Man " could be more ſurpriz'd than he was, when the " firſt Intimation was made to him of the King's " Purpoſe. (i. e. to make him Secretary of State) He " had never propoſed any ſuch thing to himſelf, nor " had any veneration for the Court, but only ſuch " a Loyalty to the King as the Law required from " him. And he had naturally a wonderful Reverence for Parliaments, as believing them moſt ſolicitous for Juſtice, the violation whereof in the " leaſt degree he could not forgive any mortal Power; and it was only his Obſervation of the Diſingenuity and want of Integrity in this Parliament which leſſened that Reverence to it, and had " diſpoſed him to croſs and oppoſe their Deſigns. " He was ſo totally unacquainted with Buſineſs and " the Forms of it, that he did believe really he could " not execute the Office with any ſufficiency. But " there were two Conſiderations that made moſt " Impreſſion upon him; the one, leaſt the World " ſhould believe, that his own Ambition had procured this Promotion, and that he had therefore " appeared ſignally in the Houſe to oppoſe thoſe Proceedings, that he might thereby render himſelf " Gracious to the Court; the other, leaſt the King " ſhould expect ſuch a Submiſſion and Reſignation " of himſelf, and his own Reaſon and Judgment to " his Commands, as he ſhould never give or pretend " to forgive: For he was ſo ſevere an Adorer of " Truth, that he could as eaſily have given himſelf " leave to ſteal as to diſſemble, or to ſuffer any " Man to think that he would do any thing which " he reſolv'd not to do, which he thought a more " miſchievous kind of Lying than a poſitive Averring what could be moſt eaſily contradicted.

On the occaſion of his Death his Character was thus continued by the ſame excellent Writer. " In " this unhappy Battle was ſlain the Lord Viſcount " Falkland, a Perſon of ſuch prodigious Parts of " Learning and Knowledge, of that inimitable " ſweetneſs and delight in Converſation, of ſo flowing and obliging a Humanity and Goodneſs to " Mankind, and of that primitive Simplicity and " Integrity of Life, that if there were no other " Brand upon this odious and accurſed Civil War " than that ſingle Loſs, it muſt be moſt infamous " and execrable to all Poſterity.

Turpe mori, poſt te, ſolo non poſſe dolore.

" Before this Parliament, his condition of Life was " ſo happy, that it was hardly capable of improvement. Before he came to be twenty Years of " Age, he was Maſter of a noble Fortune, which deſcended to him by the Gift of a Grandfather, " without paſſing through his Father or Mother, " who were then both alive, and not well enough " contented to find themſelves paſſed by in the " Deſcent. His Education for ſome Years had been " in Ireland, where his Father was Lord Deputy;

" ſo

" ſo that when he returned into England, to the poſ-
" ſeſſion of his Fortune, he was unintangled with " any Acquaintance or Friends which uſually grow
" up by the cuſtom of Converſation, and therefore
" was to make a pure election of his Company;
" which he choſe by other Rules than were preſcri-
" bed to the young Nobility of that Time. And it " cannot be denied, though he admitted ſome few
" to his Friendſhip for the agreeableneſs of their
" Natures, and their undoubted Affection to him,
" that his Familiarity and Friendſhip, for the moſt
" part, was with Men of the moſt eminent and ſub-
" lime Parts, and of untouch'd Reputation in point
" of Integrity, and ſuch Men had a Title to his Bo-
" ſom.

" He was a great cheriſher of Wit, and Fancy,
" and good Parts in any Man; and if he found them
" clouded with Poverty or Want, a moſt liberal
" and bountiful Patron towards them, even above
" his Fortune; of which, in thoſe Adminiſtrations
" he was ſuch a Diſpencer, as if he had been truſted
" with it to ſuch Uſes, and if there had been the
" leaſt of Vice in his Expence he might have been " thought too prodigal. He was conſtant and per-
" tinacious in whatſoever he reſolv'd to do, and not " to be wearied by any pains that were neceſſary to " that end. And therefore having once reſolv'd not
" to ſee London, which he loved above all places,
" till he had perfectly learn'd the Greek Tongue, he " went to his own Houſe in the Country, and pur-
" ſued it with that indefatigable Induſtry, that it
" will not be believ'd in how ſhort a time he was
" Maſter of it, and accurately read all the Greek
" Hiſtorians.

" In this time, his Houſe being within little more
" than ten Miles of Oxford, he contracted familiari-
" ty and friendſhip with the moſt polite and accurate
" Men of that Univerſity; who found ſuch an im-
" menſeneſs of Wit, and ſuch a ſolidity of Judgment
" in him, ſo infinite a Fancy, bound in by a moſt
" Logical Ratiocination, ſuch a vaſt Knowledge that
" he was not ignorant in any thing, yet ſuch an ex-
" ceſſive Humility as if he had known nothing, that " they frequently reſorted and dwelt with him as in
" a College ſituated in a purer Air; ſo that his
" Houſe was a Univerſity in a leſs Volume, whi-
" ther they came not ſo much for Repoſe as Study,
" and to examine and refine thoſe groſſer Propoſiti-
" ons which Lazineſs and Conſent made current in " vulgar Converſation.

" Many Attempts were made upon him by the in-
" ſtigation of his Mother (who was a Lady of ano-
" ther Perſwaſion in Religion, and of a moſt maſ-
" culine Underſtanding, allay'd with the Paſſion
" and Infirmities of her own Sex) to pervert him
" in his Piety to the Church of England, and to re-
" concile him to that of Rome; which they proſecu-
" ted with the more confidence, becauſe he declin'd
" no opportunity or occaſion of Conference with
" thoſe of that Religion, whether Prieſts or Laicks,
" having diligently ſtudied the Controverſies, and
" exactly read all, or the choiceſt of the Greek
" and Latin Fathers, and having a Memory ſo ſtu-
" pendious that he remember'd on all Occaſions
" whatſoever he read. And he was ſo great an E" nemy to that Paſſion and Uncharitableneſs which
" he ſaw produced by difference of Opinion, in Mar-
" ters of Religion, that in all thoſe Diſputations
" with Prieſts, and others of the Roman Church, he
" affected to manifeſt all poſſible Civility to their
" Perſons and Eſtimation of their Parts; which " made them retain ſtill ſome hope of his Reducti-
" on, even when they had given over offering far-
" ther Reaſons to him to that purpoſe. But this " Charity towards them was much leſſen'd, and any
" Correſpondence with them quite declined, when,
" by ſiniſter Arts, they had corrupted his two youn-
" ger Brothers, being both Children, and ſtolen
" them from his Houſe, and Tranſported them
" beyond Seas, and perverted his Siſters; upon 1643.
" which occaſion he writ two large Diſcourſes a- 19 Car. I.
" gainſt the principal Poſitions of that Religion,
" with that ſharpneſs of Style, and full weight of
" Reaſon, that the Church is deprived of great
" Jewels in the concealment of them, and that they " are not publiſh'd to the World.

" He was ſuperior to all thoſe Paſſions and Af-
" fections which attend vulgar Minds, and was
" guilty of no other Ambition than of Knowledge,
" and to be reputed a lover of all good Men, and
" that made him too much a Contemner of thoſe
" Arts, which muſt be indulged in the Tranſacti-
" ons of Humane Affairs. In the laſt ſhort Parlia-
" ment he was a Burgeſs in the Houſe of Commons;
" and from the Debates which were there managed
" with all imaginable Gravity and Sobriety, he con-
" tracted ſuch a Reverence to Parliaments, that he " thought it really impoſſible they could ever pro-
" duce Miſchief or Inconvenience to the Kingdom,
" or that the Kingdom could be tolerably happy in
" the intermiſſion of them. And from the unhapp-
" py and unſeaſonable Diſſolution of that Conven" tion, he harbour'd, it may be, ſome jealouſie and
" prejudice to the Court, towards which he was
" not before immoderately inclin'd; his Father ha-
" ving waſted a full Fortune there, in thoſe Offices
" and Employments by which other Men uſe to ob" tain a greater. He was choſen again this Parlia" ment to ſerve in the ſame Place, and in the be" ginning of it, declared himſelf very ſharply and
" ſeverely againſt thoſe Exorbitances which had been
" moſt grievous to the State; for he was ſo rigid an
" obſerver of eſtabliſhed Laws and Rules, that he " could not endure the leaſt breach or deviation
" from them; and thought no Miſchief ſo intolera-
" ble as the Preſumption of Miniſters of State, to " break poſitive Rules for Reaſons of State, or
" Judges to tranſgreſs known Laws upon the Title
" of Conveniency or Neceſſity; which made him ſo
" ſevere againſt the Earl of Strafford and the Lord
" Finch, contrary to his natural Gentleneſs and Tem-
" per; inſomuch, as they who did not know his
" Compoſition to be as free from Revenge as it was
" from Pride, thought that the ſharpneſs to the for" mer, might proceed from the Memory of ſome
" Unkindneſſes, not without a mixture of Injuſtice
" from him towards his Father. But without doubt
" he was free from thoſe Temptations, and in both
" Caſes was only miſled by the Authority of thoſe
" who he believed underſtood the Laws perfectly;
" of which himſelf was utterly ignorant; and if the
" aſſumption, which was then ſcarce controverted
" had been true, That an Endeavour to overthrow
" the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom was Trea-
" ſon, a ſtrict Underſtanding might make reaſona-
" ble Concluſions to ſatisfy his own Judgment,
" from the exorbitant parts of their ſeveral Char" ges.

" The great Opinion he had of the Uprightneſs
" and Integrity of thoſe Perſons who appeared moſt
" Active, eſpecially of Mr. Hambden, kept him lon-
" ger from ſuſpecting any Deſign againſt the Peace
" of the Kingdom; and tho' he differ'd from them
" commonly in Concluſions, he believed long, their
" Purpoſes were honeſt. When he grew better in-
" form'd what was Law, and diſcern'd in them a
" deſire to controul that Law by a Vote of one or
" both Houſes, no Man more oppoſed thoſe At" tempts, and gave the adverſe Party more trouble
" by Reaſon and Argumentation; inſomuch as
" he was by degrees look'd upon as an Advocate
" for the Court, to which he contributed ſo little,
" that he declined thoſe Addreſſes, and even thoſe
" Invitations which he was obliged almoſt by Civi-
" lity to entertain. And he was ſo jealous of the " leaſt Imagination that he ſhould incline to Pre-
" ferment, that he affected even a Moroſeneſs to
" the Court and to the Courtiers, and left nothing

1643. 19 Car. I. " undone which might prevent and divert the King's " or Queen's Favour towards him, but the deſer- " ving it. For when the King ſent for him once " or twice to ſpeak with him, and to give him " Thanks for his excellent Comportment in thoſe " Councils, which his Majeſty graciouſly termed " Doing him Service, his Anſwers were more negli- " gent and leſs Satisfactory than might be expected; " as if he car'd only that his Actions ſhould be " Juſt, not that they ſhould be Acceptable, and " that his Majeſty ſhould think that they proceeded " only from the impulſion of Conſcience, without any " ſympathy in his Affections; which from a Stoi- " cal and ſullen Nature might not have been miſin- " terpreted; yet, from a Perſon of ſo perfect a Ha- " bit, of generous and obſequious Compliance with " all good Men, might very well have been inter- " preted by the King as more than an ordinary a- " verſeneſs to his Service; ſo that he took more " Pains, and more forc'd his Nature to Actions un- " agreeable and unpleaſant to it, that he might not " be thought to incline to the Court, than moſt Men " have done to procure an Office there. And if " any thing but not doing his Duty, could have " kept him from receiving a Teſtimony of the " King's Grace and Truſt at that time, he had not " been called to his Council; not that he was in " truth averſe from receiving publick Employment, " for he had a great devotion to the King's Perſon, " and had before uſed ſome ſmall Endeavour to be " recommended to him for a Foreign Negotiation, " and had once a deſire to be ſent Ambaſſador into " France; but he abhorr'd an Imagination or Doubt " ſhould ſink into the Thoughts of any Man, that " in the diſcharge of his Truſt and Duty in Parlia- " ment, he had any biaſs to the Court, or that the " King himſelf ſhould apprehend, that he looked " for a Reward for being Honeſt.

" For this reaſon, when he heard it firſt whiſper- " ed, that the King had a purpoſe to make him a " Privy Counſellor, for which there was in the be- " ginning no other ground, but becauſe he was " known ſufficient (Haud ſemper errat fama, ali- " quando & eligit) he reſolved to decline it; and " at laſt ſuffer'd himſelf only to be over-ruled, " by the Advice and Perſwaſions of his Friends to " ſubmit to it. Afterwards when he found that " the King intended to make him Secretary of " State, he was poſitive to refuſe it; declaring to " his Friends, That he was moſt unfit for it, and " that he muſt either do that which would be great " diſquiet to his own Nature, or leave that undone " which was moſt neceſſary to be done by one that " was honour'd with that Place: For the moſt juſt " and honeſt Men did, every Day, that which he could " not give himſelf leave to do.

" And indeed he was ſo exact and ſtrict an obſer- " ver of Juſtice and Truth, that he believed thoſe " neceſſary Condeſcenſions and Applications to the " weakneſs of other Men, and thoſe Arts and In- " ſinuations which are neceſſary for Diſcoveries and " prevention of ill, would be in him a declenſion " from his own Rules of Life; though he acknow- " ledged them fit, and abſolutely neceſſary to be " practiced in thoſe Employments. He was, in " truth, ſo preciſe in the practick Principles he pre- " ſcribed himſelf (to all others he was as indulgent) " as if he had lived in Republica Platonis, non in fæce " Romuli.

" Two Reaſons prevail'd with him to receive " the Seals, and but for thoſe he had reſolutely " avoided them. The firſt, the Conſideration that " his refuſal might bring ſome blemiſh upon the " King's Affairs, and that Men would have belie- " ved, that he had refuſed ſo great an Honour " and Truſt, becauſe he muſt have been with it " obliged to do ſomewhat elſe not juſtifiable. " And this he made matter of Conſcience; ſince " he knew the King made choice of him, before " other Men, eſpecially becauſe he thought him 1643. " more Honeſt than other Men. The other was, 19 Car. I. " leſt he might be thought to avoid it out of fear " to do an ungracious thing to the Houſe of " Commons, who were ſorely troubled at the diſ- " placing Sir Harry Vane, whom they look'd upon " as removed for having done them thoſe Offices " they ſtood in need of; and the Diſdain of ſo " popular an Incumbrance wrought upon him next " to the other.

" For as he had a full Appetite of Fame by " juſt and generous Actions, ſo he had an equal " contempt of it by any ſervile Expedients; and " he ſo much the more conſented to, and appro- " ved the Juſtice upon Sir Harry Vane, in his own " private Judgment, by how much he ſurpaſſed " moſt Men in the Religious Obſervation of a Truſt, " the Violation whereof he would not admit of any " Excuſe for.

" For theſe Reaſons, he ſubmitted to the King's " Command, and became his Secretary, with as " humble and devoted an Acknowledgment of the " greatneſs of the Obligation as could be expreſſed, " and as true a ſenſe of it in his Heart. Yet two " things he could never bring himſelf to, whilſt " he continued in that Office, that was to his Death; " for which he was contented to be Reproached, as " for omiſſions in a moſt neceſſary part of his place.

" The one, employing of Spies, or giving any " Countenance or Entertainment to them. I do " not mean ſuch Emiſſaries as with danger would " venture to view the Enemies Camp, and bring in- " telligence of their Number, or Quartering, or any " Particulars that ſuch an Obſervation can compre- " hend; but thoſe, who by communication of " Guilt, or Diſſimulation of Manners, wind them- " ſelves into ſuch Truſts and Secrets as enable " them to make Diſcoveries. The other, the Li- " berty of opening Letters, upon a ſuſpicion that " they might contain Matter of dangerous Conſe- " quence. " Buſineſs, or other indiſpoſition had poſſeſſed him, " did with him leſs intangled and engaged in the " Buſineſs of the Court or State: though I ſpeak it " knowingly, he had a ſingular eſtimation and re- " verence of his great Learning and confeſſed Inte- " grity; and really thought his own letting himſelf " looſe to thoſe Expreſſions which imply'd a diſ- " eſteem of the Archbiſhop, or at leaſt an acknow- " ledgment of his Infirmities, would enable him to " ſhelter him from part of the Storm he ſaw raiſed " for his Deſtruction, which he abominated with his " Soul.

" The giving his Conſent to the firſt Bill for the " diſplacing the Biſhops, did proceed from two " Grounds: The firſt, his not underſtanding then " the Original of their Right and Suffrage there; " the other, an Opinion that the Combination a- " gainſt the whole Government of the Church by " Biſhops was ſo violent and furious, that a leſs " Compoſition than the diſpenſing with their inter- " medling in Secular Affairs, would not preſerve " the Order. And he was perſwaded to this by the " profeſſion of many Perſons of Honour, who de- " clared, they did deſire the one, and would not " then preſs the other; which, in that Particular, " miſled many Men. But when his Obſervation " and Experience made him diſcern more of their " Intentions than he before ſuſpected, with great " frankneſs he oppoſed the ſecond Bill that was pre- " ferr'd for that purpoſe, and had, without ſcruple, " the Order it ſelf in perfect Reverence, and thought " too great Encouragement could not poſſibly be " given to Learning, nor too great Rewards to " Learned Men. He was never in the leaſt degree " ſway'd or mov'd by the Objections which were " made againſt that Government in the Church " (holding them moſt ridiculous) or affected to the " other, which thoſe Men fancied to themſelves.

" He had a Courage of the moſt clear and keen " Temper, and ſo far from Fear that he ſeem'd not " without ſome Appetite of Danger, and therefore " upon any occaſion of Action, he always engaged " his Perſon in thoſe Troops which he thought, by " the forwardneſs of the Commanders to be moſt " like to be fartheſt engaged; and in ſuch Encoun- " ters he had about him an extraordinary Chearful- " neſs, without at all affecting the execution that u- " ſually attended them, in which he took no delight, " but took pains to prevent it, where it was not by " Reſiſtance made neceſſary; inſomuch, that at " Edgehill, when the Enemy was routed, he was " like to have incurr'd great Peril by interpoſing " to ſave thoſe who had thrown away their Arms, " and againſt whom, it may be, others were more " fierce for their having thrown them away; ſo that " a Man might think, he came into the Field chief- " ly out of curioſity to ſee the Face of Danger, and " Charity to prevent the ſhedding of Blood. Yet " in his natural Inclination he acknowledged he was " addicted to the Profeſſion of a Soldier; and ſhort- " ly after he came to his Fortune, before he was of " Age, he went into the Low Countries, with a Re- " ſolution of procuring Command, and to give him- " ſelf up to it; from which he was diverted by the " compleat inactivity of that Summer: So he re- " turn'd into England, and ſhortly after enter'd upon " that vehement courſe of Study we mentioned be- " fore, till the firſt alarm from the North; then a- " gain he made ready for the Field, and though he " received ſome repulſe in the Command of a Troop " of Horſe, of which he had a Promiſe, he went a " Voluntier with the Earl of Eſſex.

" From the entrance into this unnatural War, his " natural Chearfulneſs and Vivacity grew clouded, " and a kind of Sadneſs and Dejection of Spirit ſtole " upon him, which he had never been uſed to: " yet being one of thoſe who believed that one Bat- " tle would end all Differences, and that there " would be ſo great a Victory on one ſide, that the " other would be compelled to ſubmit to any con- " ditions from the Victor (which Suppoſition and " Concluſion generally ſunk into the Minds of moſt " Men, and prevented the looking after many Ad- " vantages that might then have been laid hold of) " he reſiſted thoſe Indiſpoſitions, Et in luctu, bellum " inter remedia erat. But after the King's return " from Brainford, and the furious Reſolution of the " two Houſes not to admit any Treaty for Peace, " thoſe Indiſpoſitions which had before touch'd him " grew into a perfect habit of unchearfulneſs; and " he who had been ſo exactly eaſy and affable to all " Men, that his Face and Countenance was always " preſent and vacant to his Company, and held any " cloudineſs, and leſs pleaſantneſs of the Viſage, a " kind of Rudeneſs or Incivility, became on a ſud- " dain leſs communicable, and thence very ſad, pale, " and exceedingly affected with the Spleen. In his " Cloaths and Habit, which he had minded before, " always with more Neatneſs, Induſtry and Ex- " pence, than is uſual to ſo great a Soul, he was not " now only Incurious but too Negligent; and in his " Reception of Suitors, and the neceſſary or caſual " Addreſſes to his Place, ſo quick, and ſharp, and " ſevere, that there wanted not ſome Men (Stran- " gers to his Nature and Diſpoſition) who belie- " ved him Proud and Imperious, from which no " mortal Man was ever more free.

" It is true, that as he was of a moſt incomparable " Gentleneſs, Application and even Submiſſion to " good, and worthy, and entire Men, ſo he was " naturally (which could not but be more evident " in his Place, which objected him to another Con- " verſation and Intermixture than his own Election " would have done) adverſus malos injucundus, and " was ſo ill a Diſſembler of his diſlike and diſin- " clination to ill Men, that it was not poſſible for " ſuch not to diſcern it. There was once in the " Houſe of Commons ſuch a declared Acceptation " of the good Service an eminent Member had done " to them, and, as they ſaid, to the whole King- " dom, that it was moved, he being preſent, That " the Speaker might in the Name of the whole Houſe " give him Thanks; and then that every Member might " as a teſtimony of his particular Acknowledgment, ſtir " or move his Hat towards him; the which (though " not order'd) when very many did, the Lord Falk- " land (who believed the Service it ſelf not to be of " that moment, and that an honourable and gene- " rous Perſon could not have ſtoop'd to it for any " Recompence) inſtead of moving his Hat, ſtretch- " ed both his Arms out, and claſped his Hands to- " gether upon the Crown of his Hat, and held it " cloſe down to his Head, that all Men might ſee " how odious that Flattery was to him, and the ve- " ry approbation of the Perſon, though at that time " moſt Popular.

" When there was any Overture or Hope of Peace, " he would be more erect and vigorous, and exceed- " dingly ſollicitous to preſs any thing which he " thought might promote it; and ſitting among his " Friends, often, after a deep Silence and frequent " Sighs, would, with a ſhrill and ſad Accent, in- " geminate the Word Peace, Peace; and would paſ- " ſionately profeſs, That the very Agony of the War, " and the View of the Calamities and Deſolation the " Kingdom did and muſt endure, took his Sleep from " him, and would ſhortly break his heart. This made " ſome think, That he was ſo much enamour'd on " Peace, that he would have been glad the King ſhould " have bought it at any price: which was a moſt un- " reaſonable Calumny. As if a Man that was him- " ſelf the moſt punctual and preciſe in every Cir- " cumſtance that might reflect upon Conſcience or " Honour, could have wiſh'd the King to have com- " mitted a Treſpaſs againſt either. And yet this " ſenſeleſs Scandal made ſome Impreſſion upon him, " or at leaſt he uſed it for an Excuſe of the Daring- " neſs of his Spirit; for at the Leaguer before Glou- " ceſter, when his Friend paſſionately reprehended " him for expoſing his Perſon unneceſſarily to Dan- " ger

" ger (for he delighted to visit the Trenches and " nearest Approaches, and to discover what the E- " nemy did) as being so much beside the Duty of " his Place, that it might be understood rather to " be against it, he would say merrily, That his Of- " fice could not take away the Privilege of his Age; and " that a Secretary in War might be present at the grea- " test Secret of Danger; but withall alledg'd seriously, " That it concern'd him to be more active in En- " terprises of Hazard than other Men, that all might " see that his Impatiency for Peace proceeded not from " Pusillanimity, or Fear to adventure his own Person.

" In the Morning before the Battle, as always " upon Action, he was very chearful, and put him- " self into the first Rank of the Lord Byron's Re- " giment then advancing upon the Enemy, who had " lined the Hedges on both sides with Musqueteers, " from whence he was shot with a Musquet in the " lower part of the Belly, and in the instant falling " from his Horse, his Body was not found till the " next Morning; till when, there was some hope " he might have been a Prisoner; tho' his nearest " Friends, who knew his Temper, receiv'd small " Comfort from that Imagination. Thus fell that " incomparable Young-man, in the four and thir- " tieth Year of his Age, having so much dispatch'd " the true Business of Life, that the Eldest rarely " attain to that immense Knowledge, and the " Youngest enter not into the World with more In- " nocency: Whosoever leads such a Life, needs be " the less anxious upon how short Warning it is " taken from him.

Parliament resolve on a new Broad-Seal.

The two Houses wanted nothing so much as the Broad-Seal, that had been carried away by the Lord Keeper Littleton to the King; and without which they could not exercise that supreme Power which they had now assumed to themselves. Hence the Commons voted July 4. that, 1. The Great-Seal of England ought to attend the Parliament. 2. That the Absence thereof hath been a Cause of great Mischief to the Commonwealth. 3. That a Remedy ought to be provided for these Mischiefs. 4. That the proper Remedy is by making a new Seal. Upon these Resolutions a Conference was had with the Lords, who were prevailed with to join in an Ordinance dated Novemb. 11. That every Act under the old Seal should be void, and that a new Great-Seal of England, already by them made and provided, should only be in force, and be put in the Custody of these following Commissioners; John Earl of Rutland (in whose room was substituted Ruthin Earl of Kent) Oliver Earl of Bolingbrook, Oliver St. Johns Esq; John Wild Serjeant at Law, Samuel Brown and Edmund Prideaux Esquires.

Seize on the King's Revenues.

An Ordinance was made Sept. 21. For the due and orderly Receiving and Collecting of the King's, Queen's, and Prince's Revenue, and the Arrearages thereof. And in Return the King issued a Proclamation Sept. 25. forbidding all the Tenants or Debtors of such who are in actual and open Rebellion, or who adhere to, or assist the Rebels, to pay any Rents or Debts to such Persons, or any of them. So that all Property was now put upon the Point of the Sword, and no Law but that of Arms.

Affairs in Ireland.

As to Affairs in Ireland, the King being under a Necessity to recall as many of those Forces as would obey his Orders to assist him nearer home, did grant a Commission Apr. 23. to the Marquis of Ormond, Lieutenant-General of his Majesty's Army and Forces in Ireland, to treat with the Irish Rebels upon a Cessation of Arms for one Year. This was soon objected against the King, by those who brought him into the Necessity of doing it. The Lords and Commons resolv'd to take the Government of Ireland, as they had done that of England, into their own hands. So on June 16. they publish'd a Declaration touching the present lamentable Condition of Ireland, and establish'd the Project of a Company of Adventurers, who for advancing Moneys here should be paid in the Lands of that Kingdom. In the mean time his Majesty pursued the Exigent of a Cessation of Arms, and declared his Resolution in a Letter to the Lords Justices of that Kingdom, dated July 2. And by another of Septemb. 7. he commanded the Lords Justices to agree upon making a Cessation, and after that to send over the Forces which were employed against the Irish to assist his Majesty against his English Rebels. And accordingly the Articles of Cessation of Arms were agreed and concluded on at Siggings-Town in the County of Kildare Sept. 15. Before the News of this Treaty came into England, the Lords and Commons had publish'd a Declaration Sept. 30. against the intended Cessation or Treaty with the Irish. Several of the Forces under Colonel Ermley came over to serve the King; but many of them that came over with Vavasour refused to fight against those they were taught to call their Fellow-Protestants, and so joined with the Army under Essex, being assured that they then fought against the Papists: And, in short, this Cessation in Ireland, and the Recruits call'd from thence to the King, were represented by the Artifice of Lying so odious and so Popish, that these Measures, as most others taken up by the King upon Necessity, were basely improved to his greater Disadvantage. 1643. 19 Car. King and Parliament at Oxford.

It was so with the Parliament, which his Majesty began now to form at Oxford. The Nobility and Gentry were in such great Numbers attending upon the King, and many of them Members excluded from the two Houses at Westminster, that it was thought proper to assemble them into a Parliament at Oxford; where the King being in Person at the Head of them, might give them a better Title than the two Houses had at Westminster. And therefore the King publish'd his Proclamation, dated Dec. 22. for the assembling of the Members of both Houses at Oxford on Monday Jan. 22. upon occasion of the Invasion by the Scots. And upon their Meeting on that Day, the King made this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

" WHen I consider your Publick Interests and " Concernments in the Happiness and Ho- " nour of this Nation, and your continual Suffer- " ings in this Rebellion for your Affection and Loy- " alty to me, I must look upon you as the most " competent Considerers and Counsellors how to " manage and improve the Condition we are all in; " for sure our Condition is so equal, that the same " Violence hath oppressed us all.

" I have therefore called you together to be Wit- " nesses of my Actions, and privy to my Intenti- " ons; and certainly if I had the least Thought " disagreeing with the Happiness and Security of " this Kingdom, I would not advise with such Coun- " sellors: And I doubt not but your Concurrence " with me will so far prevail over the Hearts and " Understandings of this whole Kingdom, who must " look upon you as Persons naturally and original- " ly trusted by and for them; that it will be above " the Reach and Malice of those who have hitherto " had too great an Influence upon the People, to " discredit my most entire Actions and sincere Pro- " mises. You will be the best Witnesses for the " one, and Security for the other.

" Very many of you can bear me Witness with " what Unwillingness I suffer'd my self to take up " these defensive Arms; indeed with so great, that " I was first almost in the Power of those who in " two set Battles have sufficiently informed the " World how tender they have been of the Safety " of my Person. I foresaw not only the Rage and " Oppression which would every Day break out " upon my Subjects as the Malice of these ill Men " encreas'd, and their Purposes were detected; but " also the great Inconveniences my best Subjects " would suffer, even by my own Army raised and " and kept for their Preservation and Protection: " For I was not so ill a Soldier, as not to foresee " how impossible it was to keep a strict Discipline, 1643. 19 Car. I. "I being to ſtruggle with ſo many Defects and Neceſſities. And I aſſure you, the Senſe I have of their Sufferings who deſerve well of me, by my Forces, hath been a greater Grief to me than any thing for my own Particular. My Hope was, that either by Succeſs on my part, or Repentance on theirs, God would have put a ſhort End to this great Storm: But Guilt and Deſpair have made theſe Men more wicked than I imagin'd they intended to be; for inſtead of removing and reconciling theſe bloody Diſtractions, and reſtoring Peace to this languiſhing Country, they have invited a foreign Power to invade this Kingdom, and that in your Names, and challenge this Invaſion from them as a Debt to the Commonwealth.

" I

"You, My Lords, have like Yourſelves (as good Patriots) expreſs'd your Diſſent, and vindicated Yourſelves from that Imputation: And I doubt not but you, Gentlemen, will let your Countries know, how far you are from deſiring ſuch Aſſiſtance; and how abſolute and peremptory a Breach this Raiſing of Arms of my Scotiſh Subjects is of that Pacification which was ſo lately and ſolemnly made by you, and can intend nothing but a Conqueſt of you and your Laws. I ſhall ſend you all the Advertiſements I have of that Buſineſs which is threatned from Scotland, and what is already acted from thence, and ſhall deſire your ſpeedy Advice and Aſſiſtance what is to be ſaid or done, both with reference to this and that Kingdom.

"Our Ends being the ſame, I am ſure there will be no other Difference in the way, than what upon Debate and a right Underſtanding will be eaſily adjuſted. Let our Religion, in which we are all moſt nearly concerned, and without Care of which we muſt not look for God's Bleſſing, be vindicated and preſerved: Let my Honour and Rights, which you find to have an inſeparable Relation with your own Intereſt, be vindicated and reſtored: Let your Liberties, Properties, Privileges, without which I would not be your King, be ſecured and confirmed: And there is nothing you can adviſe me to, I will not meet you in, and I doubt not we ſhall together inform Poſterity how much our Truſt and Confidence in each other is a better Expedient for the Peace and Preſervation of the Kingdom, than Fears and Jealouſies.

"I ſhall keep you no longer from Conſulting together, than in telling you, that I have prepared fit Places for your Meeting, to which I deſire you to repair this Night, aſſuring you that I will be always ready to receive any thing from you, admitting you to me, or coming to you myſelf, whenſoever you ſhall deſire it. And ſo God direct you the beſt way.

Proceedings of Lords and Commons.

The chief Votes and Reſolutions of the Lords and Commons were to declare, That all the Subjects of Scotland who had conſented to the late Declaration, or had enter'd England in an hoſtile manner, and all the Subjects of England who were aſſiſting to them, are to be deem'd and taken as Traitors and Enemies to the State. That the Lords and Commons now remaining at Weſtminſter, who had conſented to the raiſing Forces under Command of the Earl of Eſſex, or to the making a new Seal, or to calling in the Scots, are guilty of High Treaſon. Theſe laſt Votes were not till March 12. after many of their Propoſals for Peace had been rejected by the other Parliament; and for which reaſon they at the ſame time Reſolved upon the Queſtion, That all the Endeavours and Offers of Peace and Treaty, made by his Majeſty, by the Advice of the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled at Oxford, have been refuſed and rejected by the Lords and Commons remaining at Weſtminſter. And ſoon after they drew up a large Declaration of their Proceedings touching a Treaty of Peace and the Refuſal thereof, with the ſeveral Letters and Anſwers that paſſed therein, actually ſubſcribed by 50 Peers and 140 Commoners, beſides thoſe who were employ'd in his Majeſty's Service, or abſent with Leave, or by Sickneſs; and after their Subſcription concluding thus, Whoever now conſiders, how many have retired themſelves into ſeveral Counties, and ſo are abſent from Weſtminſter, and yet cannot, through the danger of Travelling, be preſent at Oxford; how many have withdrawn themſelves into the Parts beyond the Seas; how many of their own principal Inſtruments are voted out of the Houſe by themſelves, as Sir John Hotham and his Son, Sir Alexander Carew, Mr. Martin, Mr. Fienes, and many others; and how many now are Impriſoned by them; how many Members from the beginning have been factiouſly kept from the Houſe, upon Queſtions of Election; and how many without any colour are kept in, by not ſuffering their Elections to be reported; and that there are thirty five Members dead, into whoſe rooms no new Perſons are choſen; how many ſince are become Barons by Deſcent or Creation; will eaſily conclude how ſmall the Number is which remains, and of thoſe how few in truth have Right to ſit there. 1643. 19 Car. I.

Character of this Oxford Parliament.

We may indeed reaſonably infer, that the Peers and Commoners with the King did exceed thoſe at Weſtminſter in Number and Figure: And one of the Reaſons why they did the King and Nation ſo little Service, muſt needs be this; They were afraid of War and Victory, and too inclinable to Peace and Treaty. If inſtead of ineffectual Papers and Propoſals they had unanimouſly took the Field, and exerted all their Strength for one or two deciſive Blows, they could not have fail'd, humanely ſpeaking, of bringing the other Parliament and Army to much better Terms of Accommodation, than thoſe which to no Purpoſe, by idle Letters and Meſſages, they now offer'd to them.

State of Religion.

As to the Affairs of Religion in this Year 1643, they were all agreeable to the Times, changeable and tumultuous. The two Houſes for an Art of caſting the Odium of Profaneneſs on the Royal Party, made an Ordinance May 5. for burning, by the Hand of the common Hangman, the Book of Sports, or the Proclamation of K. James reviv'd by K. Charles for tolerating Exerciſes and ſome lawful Sports upon Sundays after Divine Service. And they mark't out all the Clergy of England for Scandalous, who dar'd appear to Write, or Preach, or Talk for the true old legal Conſtitution of Church and State, Sequeſtring, Impriſoning, and Depriving by ſuch arbitrary Intimations of their Will and Pleaſure, that the King was obliged May 15. to publiſh his Proclamation againſt the Oppreſſion of the Clergy, by the Intruſion of factious and ſchiſmatical Perſons into their Cures, and inverting and detaining their Tythes and Poſſeſſions, by Orders of one or both Houſes of Parliament, contrary to all Law and Juſtice.

The Clergy miſerab'y oppreſt.

Convocation retir'd.

The greateſt Noiſe was about an Aſſembly of Divines. The regular and legal Convocation called with this Parliament, did not think themſelves bound to a continual Attendance on it; and therefore, as the Upper Houſe was effectually diſſolved by the Impriſonment and other Perſecutions of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, ſo the Lower Houſe or inferiour Clergy (knowing themſelves incapable to act without the Metropolitan and his Suffragan Brethren) did ſoon after retire and abſent themſelves without any Application to the Lay Lords or Commons; who indeed were glad to connive at their Departure, and asked no Queſtion what was become of them: for they intended to ſubſtitute an Aſſembly of themſelves, and their own choſen Creatures to be a ſtanding Council to the Parliament in Matters of Religion. This had been long in Agitation, tho' not paſs'd into Ordinance till June 12. in this Year; when it was intitled, An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons in Parliament for the calling of an Aſſembly of learned and godly Divines and others to be conſulted with by the Parliament for the ſettling of the Government and Liturgy of the Church of England, and

Aſſembly of Divines

1643. 19 Car. I. and for vindicating and clearing of the Doctrine of the said Church from false Aspersions and Interpretations; wherein they declare, "That nothing being dearer "to them than the Purity of Religion, that many "things remaining in the Liturgy, Discipline, and "Government of the Church which require more "perfect Reformation, that the present Church-Government by Archbishops, Bishops, &c. shall be "taken away, and such a Government shall be set-"tled, as is most agreeable to God's Word, and of "nearer Agreement with the Church of Scotland; "therefore it was thought fit and necessary to call "an Assembly of Learned, Godly, and Judicious "Divines, to consult and advise of such Matters as "should be proposed unto them by both or either "of the Houses of Parliament, and to give their "Advice and Counsel when and as often as they "shall be thereunto required. To which purpose "the Persons in this Ordinance named, that is to "say, Algernon Earl of Northumberland, William "Earl of Bedford, and eight other Peers; John Sel-"den Esq; Francis Rous Esq; and eighteen other "Commoners; Herbert Palmer of Ashwell B. D. Oli-"ver Boles of Sutton B. D. with about 118 other Di-"vines, and such other Persons as should be nomi-"nated by both Houses of Parliament, upon Sum-"mons signed by the Clerks of Parliament to as-"semble at Westminster in K. Hen. VII.'s Chapel on "July 1. 1643. from time to time to sit, and be "removed and dissolved, in such manner as by both "Houses of Parliament should be directed; to con-"fer and treat amongst themselves of such Matters "and Things as shall be proposed by both, or ei-"ther of the said Houses and no other. And it was "farther ordained, that William Twiss Dr. in Divi-"nity, should sit in the Chair as Prolocutor of the "said Assembly, and upon his Death or Sickness "such other Person as shall be agreed on by both "Houses of Parliament. Every Divine to be al-"lowed for their Attendance four Shillings a Day. "If any Person die, others to be nominated by the "two Houses. Nor shall they in this Assembly as-"sume to exercise any Jurisdiction, Power or Au-"thority Ecclesiastical whatsoever, or any other "Power than is herein particularly expressed.

Lord Clarendon's Character of this Assembly of Divines.

The manner of packing this Assembly is thus reported by the great Historian. "They shew what "Consultation they meant to have with Godly and "Learned Divines, and what Reformation they in-"tended, by appointing the Knights and Burgesses "to bring in the Names of such Divines for the se-"veral Counties, as they thought fit, to constitute "an Assembly for the framing a new Model for "the Government of the Church, which was done "accordingly: Those who were true Sons of the "Church, not so much as endeavouring the Nomi-"nation of Sober and Learned Men, abhorring "such a Reformation, as begun with the Invasion "and Suppression of the Churches Rights in a Sy-"nod, as well known as Magna Charta. And if "any well affected Member, not enough consider-"ing the Scandal and the Consequence of that Vi-"olation, did name an Orthodox and well reputed "Divine to assist in that Assembly, it was argument "enough against him, that he was nominated by a "Person in whom they had no confidence. And "they only had Reputation enough to commend to "this Consultation, who were known to desire the "utter demolishing of the whole Fabrick of the "Church: So that of about one hundred and twen-"ty, of which that Assembly was to consist (tho' "by the Recommendation of two or three Members "of the Commons, whom they were not willing "to displease, and by the Authority of the Lords, "who added a small number to those named by the "House of Commons, a few very reverend and "worthy Men were inserted, yet of the whole "number) they were not above twenty, who were "not declared and avow'd Enemies to the Doctrine "or Discipline of the Church of England; some of "them infamous in their Lives and Conversations, "and most of them of very mean Parts in Learning, if "not of scandalous Ignorance, and of no other Re-"putation than of Malice to the Church of England; "so that that Convention hath not since produced "any thing that might not then reasonably have "been expected from it. 1643. 19 Car. I.

Opening of that Assembly.

This Assembly met on Saturday July 1. in the Chapel of King Henry VII. where a Sermon was preach'd by the appointed Prolocutor Dr. Twiss, both Houses of Parliament being present. After which they open'd their Session with reading over the Ordinance for their Convention, and calling over the List of the Clergy appointed for that Assembly, sixty nine then appearing, and the Names of such as appeared not were mark'd, and so they adjourned till Monday, and on Friday following kept a Fast with both Houses; every Member before his Admission to Sit and Vote, took this Oath or solemn Vow:

I A. B. do seriously Promise and Vow, in the presence of Almighty God, that in this Assembly, whereof I am a Member, I will maintain nothing in point of Doctrine, but what I believe to be most agreeable to the Word of God; nor in point of Discipline but what may make most for God's Glory and the Peace and Good of his Church.

On July 19. they delivered a Petition to both Houses of Parliament, humbly shewing, "That up-"on the two late, sad and unexpected Defeats of "our Forces in the North and in the West, they pre-"sent unto their religious and prudent Considera-"tion, First, That they would command a publick "and extraordinary Day of Humiliation. Second-"ly, That they would vouchsafe instantly to take "it into their more serious Consideration how they "may most speedily set up Christ more gloriously "in all his Ordinances within this Kingdom, and "reform all things amiss throughout the Land. For "which they humbly lay before them these Parti-"culars. 1. The brutish Ignorance and palpable "Darkness of the People. 2. The grievous and "heinous pollution of the Lord's Supper. 3. Assembly's Petition to the Parliament.

The Spirit of this Assembly appears much in this Petition, that, impartially speaking, is stufft with Schism, Sedition, Cruelty and Cant: But the two Houses knew it their Interest to gratifie most of these Petitions, therefore in Answer to the 8th. an Ordinance was made 28 Aug. for the utter demolishing and removing all Monuments of Superstition or Idolatry, as Altars and Tables set Altarwise, and all Rails about them, Tapers, Candlesticks, Crosses, Images, Pictures and superstitious Inscriptions. In answer to the 5th. Petition, an Order of the Commons was given Sept. 5. to enquire into and proceed against scandalous Ministers, and such as were assistant to the Forces raised against the Parliament. And most of the other Desires were suitably satisfied.

Who grant some of their Requests.

Many additional Members were join'd to the Assembly, and a Commitee of Scotch Brethren were taken in with them. When they had been very servile

Scotch Brethren taken into the Assembly.

1643. 19 Car. I. vile Inſtruments in promoting the Parliamentary Cauſe at home, they were to be then employ'd in ſoliciting the ſame Cauſe with foreign Nations. Hence on Novemb. 22. it was order'd by the Commons, That the Aſſembly of Divines be moved to write Letters unto ſome Divines, or Churches of Zealand and Holland, and to the Proteſtant Churches in France, Switzerland and other Reformed Churches, to inform them againſt the great Artifices and Diſguiſes of his Majeſty's Agents in theſe Parts, &c.

Accordingly they drew up Letters directed to ſeveral Paſtors and Elders in the Belgick, French, Helvetian and other reformed Churches, running in Engliſh thus:

Right Reverend and dearly Beloved in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

They write to Foreign Churches.

WE the Aſſembly of Divines and others —— ſalute you in the Lord. We doubt not but the ſad Reports of the Miſeries under which the Church and Kingdom of England do bleed, and wherewith we are all ready to be ſwallowed up (the Cup which the Righteous Lord hath given us to drink) is long ſince come to your Ears. And it is probable that the ſame Inſtruments of Satan and Antichriſt, have endeavoured by their Emiſſaries to preſent us as black as may be among you; who by Falſhood and Lyes endeavour every where to put fair Gloſſes upon their own bloody Deſigns, and to Reproach our ſtruglings after a more thorough Reformation of Religion in the Church of England, according to the Word of God and our juſt Defence of our Lives, Liberties and Religion, againſt their cruel and unjuſt Violencies. And ſo they proceed to juſtify the two Houſes, and to caſt the Odium of the War upon the King and his Friends. And then they deſire three things of the dear Brethren they write to: 1. That you would judge aright of our afflicted Condition, and of our Innocency and Integrity in this our juſt Defence. —— 2. That ye will ſympathize with us as Brethren who ſuffer in and for the ſame Cauſe wherein your ſelves have been oppreſſed. —— Laſtly, That as all the Antichriſtian Faction owns the Cauſe of our Adverſaries as their own, and contributes what lies in their power every way to their Help and our Ruin; ſo that you would embrace our Condition as your own common Cauſe, &c. —— And we crave your Prayers, that God who heareth Prayer, now he hath humbled us and broken all our Arms of Fleſh, (whereon alas we have been too prone to lean) would himſelf bring Salvation to us, that the Bleſſings of Truth and Peace might reſt upon us, that theſe three Nations may be joined as one Stick in the Hand of the Lord, and that we our ſelves, contemptible Builders, called to repair the Houſe of God in a troubleſome time, being aſhamed of our former Pollutions, may ſee the Pattern of this Houſe, and commend ſuch a Platform to our Zorobabels, as may be moſt agreeing to his own ſacred Word, of neareſt Conformity to the beſt Reformed Churches, and greateſt Uniformity amongſt our ſelves, that all Mountains may become Plains before them and us, that then all who now ſee the Plummet in our hands, may alſo behold the Top-ſtone ſet upon the Head of the Lord's Houſe amongſt us, and may help us with ſhouting to cry, Grace, Grace, unto it. —— The Senſe and the very Language of theſe Letters had been a Reproach to any Divines but ſuch as were ſingular Enemies to the King and the Church of England. Their Ignorance is expoſed by a Friend of their own, Mr. Whitlock, who in his Memoirs does relate, " That divers Members of both " Houſes were Members of the Aſſembly of Divines, " and had the ſame Liberty with the Divines to ſit " and debate, and give their Votes in any Matter " which was in conſideration amongſt them: In " which Debates Mr. Selden ſpake admirably, and " confuted divers of them in their own Learning. " And ſometimes when they had cited a Text of " Scripture to prove their Aſſertion, he would tell " them, Perhaps in your little Pocket-Bibles with gilt " Leaves (which they would often pull out and read) " the Tranſlation may be thus, but the Greek or the Hebrew ſignifies thus and thus: and ſo would totally " ſilence them. Archbiſhop Laud gave this Opinion of them: " A great, if not the greater part of " them were Browniſts, or Independents, or New-England Miniſters, if not worſe, or at beſt refractory Perſons to the Doctrine or Diſcipline, or " both, of the Church of England eſtabliſh'd by " Law, and now brought together to reform it. " An excellent Conclave! but I pray God that befall " not them which Tully obſerves fell upon Epicurus, " Siqua corrigere voluit deteriora fecit, He made every " thing worſe that he went about to mend. — It would " become this Synod to remember, that there is a " Convocation of the Engliſh Prelates and Clergy " lawfully choſen and ſummoned, and by no ſupreme or legal Authority as yet diſſolved. —— " This, without God's infinite Mercy, will bring " forth a Schiſm fierce enough to rend and tear Religion out of this Kingdom.

Whitlock's Opinion of the Aſſembly.

1643. 19 Car. I.

Their greateſt Duty this Year was to prepare the Hearts of the People for taking the Solemn League and Covenant. When both Houſes of Parliament met to take the Covenant at St. Margaret's Church in Weſtminſter, Sept. 25. the Aſſembly of Divines waited on them. Mr. White, a Member of the Aſſembly, Prayed a whole Hour that God would ſanctifie them for that good Work. Then Mr Nye, another Member, preach'd it up laboriouſly from the Pulpit, ſhew'd the Warrant of it from Scripture, gave Examples of it ever ſince the Creation, and ſet forth the Benefits of it to the Church of Chriſt and to this Kingdom. Mr. Henderſon, a Scotch Commiſſioner in the Aſſembly, made a long Declaration of the great Mercies the Scots had received by ſuch Covenants, of the Expedience and Neceſſity of the preſent taking of this Covenant; and of its being a ſure Condition of the States of Scotland aſſiſting the Parliament of England. Then Mr. Nye again from the Pulpit read out the Covenant, and all held up their Hands in Teſtimony of their Aſſent to it: Then all the Members of Parliament, and after them all the Members of the Aſſembly, ſubſcribed their Names: And to conclude the Service of the Day, Dr. Gouge from the Pulpit prayed for a Bleſſing upon it, and upon all that took it.

Dr. Featley weary of them.

Dr. Featley was the almoſt only Epiſcopal Divine who remain'd with them; and he grew ſo uneaſie at their zealous Proceedings, that he gave account of them in Letters to Oxford, and promis'd to withdraw from them; but his Letters being intercepted, he was not only expell'd the Aſſembly, but deprived of all his Eccleſiaſtical Preferments. And Dr. Uſher, Primate of Armagh, was ſoon after voted out of the Aſſembly, only becauſe he refuſed to appear in it, and choſe rather to attend his Royal Maſter at Oxford; who being to receive the Sacrament from his Hands at Chriſt-Church, riſing up from his Knees, and beckoning to the Archbiſhop for a ſhort Forbearance, made this Proteſtation.

Archbiſh. Uſher expell'd.

My Lord,

King's Proteſtation at the Sacrament.

I eſpy here many reſolved Proteſtants, who may declare to the World the Reſolution I do now make. I have, to the utmoſt of my power, prepared my Soul to become a worthy Receiver: And may I ſo receive Comfort from the bleſſed Sacrament, as I do intend the Eſtabliſhment of the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion, as it ſtood in its beauty in the happy days of Queen Elizabeth, without any connivance at Popery. I bleſs God that in the midſt of theſe publick Diſtractions, I have ſtill liberty to communicate: And may this Sacrament be my Damnation, if my Heart do not join with my Lips in this Proteſtation.

A farther Account and Character of theſe Presbyters Aſſembling, and Acting without their Biſhops, is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. " The Aſſembly, beſides that it was conſtituted of Members " who had all renounced their Obedience to their " King, and Submiſſion to the Church of England, " by their Appearance and Preſence in that Convention, had been lately taught how dangerous it " was to diſſent from the current Opinion of the " Houſe of Commons; for Dr. Featly (upon whoſe " reputation in Learning they had raiſed great ad- " vantages to themſelves) having made many Spee- " ches in the Aſſembly in the behalf of the Order of " Biſhops and their Function, and againſt the Alie- " nation of Church Lands, as Sacrilege, and eſpe- " cially inveigh'd againſt The Liberty that was taken " in Matter of Religion, by which ſo many Sects were " grown up to the Scandal and Reproach of the Pro- " teſtant Doctrine, if not of Chriſtianity it ſelf, had " ſo far incurr'd their Diſpleaſure, and provoked their " Jealouſie, that an ordinary fellow (ſo well con- " firmed in Spirit that they feared not his failing " or converſion) was directed to make Application " to him in caſes of Conſcience, and after he had " gotten ſufficient Credit with him (which was no " hard matter) to intimate to him, That he had a " ſure and unqueſtionable Conveyance to Oxford, or that " he was to go thither himſelf, and if he had any oc- " caſions to uſe his Service thither, he would faithfully " execute his Commands. The Dr. believing the Meſ- " ſenger to be ſincere, and the King's Affairs ſtan- " ding then proſperous, gave him Letters for the " Archbiſhop of Armagh Primate of Ireland, who " waited on his Majeſty; and by this Artifice the " ſame Inſtrument receiv'd two or three Letters from " him, pretending they were ſtill ſent by infallible " Hands, and brought them always to thoſe Perſons " by whom he was entruſted in the Work of his " Impoſture.

" The Letters contained many Apologies for him- " ſelf, For being engaged in ſuch a Congregation to " which he ſubmitted purely out of Conſcience, and " for the Service of the King and Church, in hope that " he might be able to prevent many Extravagancies, and " to contain thoſe unruly Spirits within ſome Bounds of " Regularity and Moderation; of his Endeavours that " way he gave many Inſtances, and ſent Copies of " what he had ſaid in juſtification of Epiſcopacy, " the Liturgy, and the eſtabliſh'd Government, and " concluded with a Deſire to his Grace, To procure " a good Opinion from the King towards him, and ſome " Biſhoprick or Deanery for his recompence. About the " time that this Agitation was in Scotland, and very " little before this Covenant was tranſmitted, theſe " Letters were produc'd, and a Charge againſt that " Doctor, For betraying the Truſt repoſed in him, and " adhering to the Enemy; and thereupon the poor " Man was expelled the Aſſembly of Divines, both " his Livings (for he had two within a very ſmall " diſtance of London) ſequeſter'd; his Study of " Books and Eſtate ſeiz'd, and himſelf committed to " a common Goal, where he continued to his Death; " which befel him the ſooner through the extreme " wants he underwent, ſo ſollicitous was that Party " to remove any impediment that troubled them, " and ſo implacable to any who were weary of their " Journey, though they had accompanied them very " far in their way.

" This freſh Example the Aſſembly of godly and " Learned Divines, had before their Eyes when this " Covenant was ſent to them for their Conſidera- " on and ſpeedy Reſolution; and according to the " haſte it requir'd, that Clergy return'd within two " Days their full approbation of it, there having " been but two Miniſters who made any pauſe or " ſcruple of it, and they again ſoon confeſſing They " had received full ſatisfaction to their Doubts in the " Debate, and that they were fully convinc'd of the Law- " fulneſs and Piety of it. Having received ſo abſo- " lute an Approbation and Concurrence, and the " Battle of Newbury being in that time likewiſe o- " ver (which cleared and removed more Doubts " than the Aſſembly had done) it ſtuck very few " Hours with both Houſes; but being at once judg'd " convenient and lawful, the Lords and Commons " and their Aſſembly of Divines, met together at " the Church, with great Solemnity to take it, on " September 25. a double Holiday, by the Earl of Ef- " ſex's return to London and this Religious Exer- " ciſe.

" There two or three of their Divines went up " into the Pulpit ſucceſſively, not to Preach but to " Pray; others, according to their ſeveral Gifts, to " make Orations upon the Work of the Day. Sufferings of Abp. Laud.

Archbiſhop Laud in the Tower had long expected his threaten'd Tryal, but before his Tryal he was to bear ſeveral Sentences paſſed upon him. On May 16. an Ordinance was made to deprive him of the Right of Preſenting or Collating to any Eccleſiaſtical Benefice, and to oblige him to accept of ſuch Perſons as ſhould be nominated by both Houſes of Parliament. And on June 10. another Ordinance was made to ſuſpend the Archbiſhop Ab Officio & Beneficio & omni & omnimoda Juriſdictione Archiepiſcopali, and that all his Temporalties be ſequeſter'd by and unto the Parliament. Nay, and April 25. it was moved in the Houſe of Commons to ſend him to New England, a Plot laid by Peters, Wells and others, but it was rejected, May 1. his Chapel Windows at Lambeth were defaced, and the Steps torn up. May 9. his Goods and Books were ſeiz'd, and his Perſon put under cloſer Reſtraint. On May 31. his implacable Enemy Mr. Prynne came with a Warrant His Chamber and Pockets ſearch'd by Mr. Prynne. from the cloſe Committee, and forced into the Archbiſhop's Chamber before he was out of Bed, and fell immediately upon ſearching his Pockets, and then ranſacking all his Trunks and Boxes, and took from him twenty and one Bundles of Papers, which he had prepared for his Defence, Letters from the King, the Scotiſh Service-Book, the Diary of his own Life, and his Book of private Devotions, and carried all away with him. On October 23. additional Articles were carried up to the Lords againſt him. Oxford Parliament Petition the King.

The Lords and Commons at Oxford seeing no hopes of Peace, advised the King to take the Field, as the only visible Means now left, and to give them a Recess from their Parliamentary Attendance till the next Winter; In order to this, they presented a Petition the Day before their rising, wherein To satisfie all the World, or to leave them inexcusable who will not be satisfied, they humbly desire; 1. "That his Majesty "will give Direction for the Reprinting his Protestation made in the Head of his Army, and his other Declarations for maintaining the Protestant "Religion. 2. That when there may be a full and "free Convention of Parliament, a national Synod "may be lawfully called, with a Care for the Ease "of tender Consciences. 3. To satisfie his Subjects "against the false and malicious Aspersions, that if "his Majesty prevail, he intends not to use the frequent Council of Parliaments. 4. To declare that "the present Contributions, Loans and Taxes, shall "not be drawn into Example. 5. That the Contracts for Contribution may be justly observ'd, "without free Quarter or other Grievance. And "lastly, that his Majesty will retain his pious Endeavours to procure the Peace of this languishing "Kingdom, not to be removed or alter'd by any Advantages or prosperous Success. To which his Majesty gave in Writing a most gracious Answer, and promised them fully to grant and observe their several Petitions, concluding thus, "Lastly, as "the support and maintenance of the Religion, "Laws and Privileges of Parliament, is (as you "well know) the only Argument of our defensive "Arms; so those being secured, we shall with all "imaginable Joy lay down those Arms; and as you "have been our Witnesses and our Assistants in our "earnest Desires of Peace, so we promise you we "shall not only with the same earnestness always "embrace it, if it shall be offer'd, but pursue and "press it upon the least likelihood or opportunity: "And this our Resolution, by God's blessing, shall "never be alter'd by any Advantages or prosperous "Success.

King's Speech.

And the next Day being April 16. the King dismissed them with a Speech; wherein he told them, that he could not so soon have parted with them, if they had not themselves desired it, out of Zeal and Affection to him and to their Country. He heartily thanked them for what they had done, and fully approved of what they desired. And because most of them were engaged in his Service, either in a Civil or a Martial way, he gave them directions how to be most serviceable to him in their respective ways; ending thus: "To conclude, my Lords and Gentle"men, I do now again (yet never enough) thank "you for your great and unanimous Expressions of "your Affections to me, which hath laid an inexpressible Obligation upon me: And be assured, "that there is no Profession which I have made for "the defence and maintenance of our Religion, "Laws and Liberties, which I will not inviolably "observe. Now God who hath blessed this meeting "with an unexpected Unanimity (which I esteem "as one not of his least Blessings) will I hope bring "us all safe together again the eighth Day of October "next. In the mean time I shall be ready to receive "any thing from your Committees that shall be desired.

And now to look into the Field, that which ruin'd the King was the March of the Scots Army into England, to answer the Invitation and come in to the brotherly assistance of the two Houses at Westminster, who sent a Committee of their own to meet them on the Borders, and conduct them, and supply them in the most friendly, faithful manner. This English Committee was join'd to another select Company of Scots, and they were the Committee of both Kingdoms, and in effect a united Camp Parliament. By their Advice the Scots Army under General Leven had advanc'd from Berwick on Jan. 19. and without opposition came before New-Castle Feb. 3. but not being able to take that Town, they passed the Tyne on Feb. 28. and enter'd Sunderland March 4. the Marquis of New-castle, General for the King in those northern Parts, having reinforc'd his Army to about 14 thousand Horse and Foot, attended so near upon the Scots Army, and so intercepted their Supply, that sometimes they had neither Meat nor Drink, and never above twenty four Hours Provision before hand: But they colour'd over this Necessity by keeping a Solemn Fast, and by pressing on toward Durham for better Quarters. To stop their Advance, the Marquis drew up his Army on March 23. at Hilton, on the North of the River Wear, the Scots being drawn up on a Hill East from them towards the Sea. So the Armies fac'd each other, and skirmish in Parties; the Field-Word given by the Marquis being Prophetically enough, Now or never, and by the Scots in their way of profaning Religion, The Lord of Hosts is with us. The Marquis not able to force the Scots to a Battle, retreated toward his Quarters at Durham, and the Scots slowly followed. The two Houses at Westminster knowing that a defeat of the Scots would be a ruin to their whole Cause, were extremely sollicitous for their safe Progress; and by their Advice the Committee of both Kingdoms on March 5. wrote a Letter to the Lord Fairfax to join with his Son Sir Thomas Fairfax (who was to leave the Siege of Lathom House in Derbyshire, and to hasten with two thousand Horse into the Westriding of Yorkshire) and so with joint Forces to keep Intelligence with the Scotish Army, and give them the best Accommodation and Assistance. Colonel Bellasis Governor of York drew his Forces to Selby to hinder if possible, the conjunction of the two Fairfax's; but they notwithstanding join'd, and fell upon Bellasis and his inferiour Forces at Selby, and obtained a compleat Victory over them on April 11. taking Prisoners the Colonel, many Officers, and 1600 Soldiers; for which the two Houses appointed a Solemn Thanksgiving on April 23.

Scots Army invited by the English Parliament.

Their March.

The Parliament extremely concern'd for the Scots Army.

Send an English Army to join with 'em.

The Marquis of New-castle now finding that he should be between two Armies, was resolved to prevent that Danger by marching back to York to make the better Defence for that important place; the Scots followed with the double joy of seeming to pursue their Enemies, and hasting to join their Friends. And accordingly on April 20. they join'd with the English Army under Lord Fairfax and Sir Thomas Fairfax, and immediately marched to York and shut up the Marquis of Newcastle, who had just enter'd that City, and defended it with great Bravery for several Months against the united Armies, that were farther reinforc'd on June 3. by a considerable Body under the Earl of Manchester, who had took Lincoln May 6. and marched on to the Leaguer at York without opposition.

York Besieged.

Under this Pressure the Marquis and his Garison of York depended on no hopes of Relief but from Prince Rupert, who had relieved Newark, and then marching into Shropshire had took in the Garisons of Longford near Newport, and of Stopworth in Cheshire; and then relieving the brave Countess of Derby in her House at Lathom, he took the Town of Bolton May 28. and Leverpool June 11. and then directed his March with all expedition toward York, where the Marquis was brought to Treaty and to Propositions of Surrendery; but on the News of Prince Ru- pert's advance, the three Generals, Earl of Leven, Lord Fairfax, and Earl of Manchester, ingloriously raised the Siege, and retired to Marston-Moor, hoping to intercept the Prince in his way to York; but he declined engaging, and safely enter'd York to the great Joy of that long distressed Place. Here the Marquis would have perswaded the Prince to have repos'd himself, till they recruitted their Forces and could then pursue the Enemy. But the Prince, who was by Nature alway forward and impatient, drew out the Forces from the City, and finding them to make up an Army of 14000 Foot, and 9000 Horse, he led them directly to Marston-Moor, and on Tuesday July 2. offer'd Battle to the three conjoin'd Armies, whose Right-wing of Horse was commanded by Sir Thomas Fairfax, the main Battalia of Foot by the Lord Fairfax towards the Right-wing, and towards the Left General Leven with the rest of the Scotish Foot; the Left-wing of Horse by the Earl of Manchester and his Lieutenant-General Cromwel. The Field-Word given by the Prince was God and the King, by the other Party God with Us. By Cromwel's breaking through the Right-wing of the Princes, and coming back from the chase of them to the timely Relief of Sir Thomas Fairfax, beat and pursued by Colonel Harry, who commanded the Prince's Left-wing, the Victory fell to the Parliament Army, and the Generals gave this Account of it in a Letter to the Committee of both Kingdoms. —— " Before " both Armies were in a readiness, it was seven a- " clock at Night, about which time they advanc'd " the one to the other, whereupon followed a very " hot Encounter, for the space of three Hours, " whereof (by the great Blessing and good Provi- " dence of God) the issue was the total routing of " the Enemies Army, the loss of all their Ordnance " to the number of twenty, their Ammunition and " Baggage, about one hundred Colours, and ten " thousand Arms. There were killed upon the place " about three thousand of them, whereof many are " chief Officers, and fifteen hundred Prisoners ta- " ken, among whom there were above a hundred " Officers, in which number is Sir Charles Lucas " Lieutenant-General to the Marquis of Newcastle's " Horse, Major-General Porter, and Major-General " Tillier, besides divers Colonels, Lieutenant Co- " lonels and Majors. Our Loss (God be praised) " is not very great, being only of one Lieutenant- " Colonel, some few Captains, and about two or " three hundred common Soldiers.

Relievd by Prince Rupert.

Fight at Marston-Moor.

Prince Rupert defeated.

Marquis of Newcastle leaves the Kingdom.

The next Morning after the Battle, the Marquis of Newcastle resolv'd to leave the Kingdom, and with his two Sons and Brother, and Dr. Bramhal Bishop of Londonderry, Lord Falconbridge, Lord Widdrington and others, took Ship at Scarborough, and arrived at Hamburgh on July 8. the Marquis not returning into England till the Restauration of King Charles the Second.

York surrender'd.

Prince Rupert with some rallied Forces drew off into Lancashire, and left Sir Thomas Glemham Governour of York to surrender that City upon Articles on July 16. After which, upon consultation between the Generals and Parliament Commissioners it was agreed, 1. That the Lord Fairfax should remain Governour of York, and send a thousand Horse into Lancashire, to join the Forces in those Parts, and to attend the Motions of Prince Rupert. 2. That the Scotish Army should march Northward, to join with the Earl of Calendar, who was advancing with additional Forces, and to reduce Newcastle. 3. That the Earl of Manchester should march towards Lincolnshire, and recruit his Army from his own Association.

All unfortunate on the King's side.

After this disposition, the Earl of Manchester took in Tickhil Castle July 26. and Sheffield Castle Aug. 10. and Colonel Fretchwell's House Aug. 12. and Balsover Castle Aug. 14. and Wingfield Manor Aug. 21. and the next Day Welbeck House. General Leven join'd the Earl of Calendar in the Siege of Newcastle, and took the Town by Storm October 19. so that all things in the North went most unhappily against the King. 1644. 20 Car. I.

The Earl of Essex by an Ordinance of the Lords and Commons March 26. was to have an Army consisting of seven thousand five hundred Foot and three thousand Horse, with which he kept his head Quarters sometimes at Windsor and sometimes at St. Albans. Sir William Waller by help of the Associated Counties of Southampton, Sussex, Surry and Kent, had another Army for the Parliament of ten thousand Men, with which he fought the Lord Hopton and Earl of Forth at Cheriton-Down in Hampshire March 29. and though the King's Forces for a while seem'd to have the better of it, they were afterwards defeated with very considerable Loss. The two Houses made an Ordinance for a Thanksgiving for this Victory on April 9. and took advantage of that Joy to send a Committee of Lords and Commons the same Day to Guild-hall, who in set Speeches drew in the Citizens to advance Men and Money for the Cause, which, they said, God had prosper'd.

Waller's Army successful.

The King providing now in Person to open the Campaign, issued a Proclamation dated March 22. commanding all his Subjects and Servants that have any Office, Place, or Fees of his Gift or Grant, to attend his Person before April 20. and another dated April 15. requiring the Country to bring in their Corn and other Provisions to Oxford, for ready Money at reasonable Prizes, under pain of having it fetch'd away, or burnt upon approach of the Rebels. Against which the two Houses at Westminster made a Declaration April 22. promising Defence and Protection to those Parts, if they would refuse to carry in their Provisions as the Proclamation requir'd.

King prepares to go to the Army.

The King's Affairs by the coming in of the Scots, and the defeat of Bellasis at Selby April 11. were under an ill Aspect in the North; and the great blow given to the Lord Hopton by Waller March 29. was a great damp to the King's Interest in the South; and the Eastern Counties were all associated against him. His only Hopes were in the West, where Prince Maurice lay with a considerable Army before Lyme: And therefore those Parts were thought to be the safest Retreat for the Queen, who left Oxford April 17. and came safe to Exeter, where on June 16. she was delivered of the Princess Henrietta, and was forc'd to take shipping at Falmouth July 14. and to take Refuge in France, never more seeing her Royal most Affectionate Consort.

Queen forc'd to leave the Kingdom.

May 14. his Majesty in Person at Reading drew out his Forces there Quarter'd, and demolished the Works, and marched away to Oxford. On the same Day Essex set out from London, and came to his Army at Beaconsfield, and marched them slowly to Abington May 26. to Sanford May 28. and next Morning drew up his Army on Bullington-Green, within a Mile of Oxford, and marched that Night to Islip; from whence May 31. he sent out a Party that gained the Pass at Ainslow Bridge, in the way to Woodstock, where the Body of the King's Army lay. And Waller had brought up his Army to Newbridge, so as the King must have been besieged in Oxford, or must have fought with two superiour Armies, he himself drawing up his Army at North-Lye, finding them no more than three thousand Foot and four thousand Horse marched away to Evesham, and on June 6. to Worcester.

Essex's Army follow the King.

Upon which the two Houses determined, that Essex should march down into the West for relief of Lyme and Plymouth, &c. and Waller should attend the Motions of the King; and Major General Brown with considerable Forces should be employ'd for reducing Oxford, Wallingford, Banbury and parts adjacent. Waller in pursuit of the King marched to Stow in the Wold June 5. took Shudeley Castle June 9. and made his Approaches so fast toward Worcester, that the King was obliged to leave that City on June 12. and marched his Army to Bewdley, and finding his his Forces unequal, he resolv'd to return toward Oxford, and came to Woodstock June 21. and next Day advanc'd to Buckingham. Waller follow'd after augmenting his Forces all the way, and quartered at Hanwel near Banbury June 26. and came up to face the King's Army June 28. on the foot of Crouch-Hill, the River Charwel between them. The King drew off toward Daventry, leaving a Guard of Dragoons at Cropredry Bridge, the only Pass between the two Armies. Waller order'd two Regiments of Horse, and some Companies of Foot to make their way over the Bridge and fall on the King's Rear; but though they got over, they were driven back again withgreat loss, and left the King to pursue his intended Retreat.

Retreats from Waller.

Essex marching Westward, received Orders May 30. to relieve Lyme a Port Town in Dorsetshire, which had been besieg'd from April 20. by Prince Maurice with a considerable Army, and had made a very wonderful Defence, till the Earl of Warwick riding before it with the Navy, and the Earl of Essex drawing his Army near it, the Prince raised his Siege June 15. and went to Exeter, sending part of his Army toward Bristol. Upon which Essex took in Weymouth June 19. and held there a consult with the Admiral Earl of Warwick. The King himself had intended to march Northward, but hearing of the Defeat of Prince Rupert at Marston-Moor, he resolv'd to march into the West, and upon that Design came to Evesham, whence July 4. he sent a Message for Peace to the Lords and Commons at Westminster. We being deeply sensible of the Miseries and Calamities of this our Kingdom, and of the grievous Sufferings of our poor Subjects, do most earnestly desire that some Expedient may may be found out which by the Blessing of God may prevent the farther effusion of Blood, and restore the Nation to Peace, &c. To which the two Houses would return no Answer. His Majesty came to Bath and summoning the Inhabitants of Somersetshire to Kingsmore July 23. he made an affectionate Speech to them, to join with him in Defence of their Religion, Liberty and Property; hence by their Aid and a Conjunction of the Lord Hopton's Forces, he advanced to Ilchester, and had now formed a very considerable Army.

Essex's Army in the West.

Kings Message for Peace despis'd.

Essex in a Council of War concluded to relieve Plimouth, besieged by Sir Richard Greenvil, and so march into Cornwal. Upon his advance Sir Richard was obliged to draw off his Forces, and to quit his small Garisons of Mount-Stampford, Plympton, Saltash, and his own Greenvil House at Tavestock; and disputing the Passage at Newbridge to no effect, saw the Parliament Army take an easy possession of the Shire-Town Lancester. The King came to Exeter June 26. and being join'd by Prince Maurice follow'd Essex into Cornwal, and quarter'd his Army at Liskerd, while the other Army was at Lestithiel, and wrote a Letter to General Essex, To lay hold on this opportunity of effecting the happy Settlement of this miserable Kingdom, it being now in his Power to redeem his Country and the Crown, and to oblige his King in the highest degree. And a Day or two after, other Letters were sent him by Prince Maurice, the Earl of Brainford and the Lord Hopton, to all which he did at last return Answer to the Earl of Brainford, that "He "had received the several Letters, but it was not in "his Commission to be concern'd in any Treaty, nor "could he betray the Trust reposed in him by the "Parliament. Upon this Denial the King drew his Army from Liskard, and pressed on upon the Rebels in their Quarters at Lestithiel, and being join'd by Sir Richard Greenvil, he so encompassed and in a manner besieged them for several Days, and upon their attempting to retreat, he fell upon them to so great advantage, that Essex, reduc'd to the utmost Difficulties, deserted his Army, and shifted away in a small Vessel to Plymouth Sept. 1. leaving his Horse entirely routed and dispers'd, and his Foot hemm'd up under Major General Skippon; to whom the King allowed Articles of laying down their Arms, and being convey'd to Parliament Quarters, when their Liberties and Lives were absolutely in his Royal Power and Mercy.

King marches into the West.

Sends offers of Peace to Essex.

Essex runs away from his Army.

1644. 20 Car. I.

Upon this glorious Success the King return'd to Tavestock, and sent thence a Message for Peace dated Sept. 8. with a Duplicate of his former Message from Evesham: but being directed To the Lords and Commons of Parliament assembled at Westminster, the two Houses Voted, "That these Directions and the Matter in "them, did not sufficiently acknowledge them to "be the two Houses of Parliament of England, and "therefore would send no Answer. His Majesty not discourag'd with their scornful rejecting of all Correspondence with him, declin'd to spend time in besieging Plymouth, and taking in Barnstaple Sept. 17. He marched Eastward to Chard, and publish'd there a Proclamation, declaring his Royal Resolutions to draw toward London, in order to obtain a Treaty for Peace and a good Accommodation, inviting all his Loyal Subjects to join in his Assistance for that necessary End. Upon which the Gentry and Freeholders of that County of Somerset Address the King at Sturmister Octob. 9. for liberty to wait in Person upon his Majesty nearer London, to become Petitioners to the Lords and Commons at Westminster, to embrace his Majesty's offers of Peace, and in case of refusal to spend their Lives in assisting his Majesty to compass that by the Sword which by fair and just ways could not be effected. The King accepted their Service, and came to Salisbury Oct. 15. But the Parliament resolved to have a new Army to meet him; and therefore enabled Essex to take the Field from Portsmouth Octob. 17. and to join with two other great Bodies under the Earl of Manchester and Sir William Waller at Basing Octob. 21. and thence to Newberry where the King was encamp'd, and cast up some Works to avoid fighting, the Parliament Armies being very much superiour in Numbers. The General Essex was indisposed and absent from the Battle, which was forc'd upon the King on Octob. 27. wherein (by Account of the Committee attending the Army) for three Hours the Fight was maintained with as much Resolution, Bravery and Desperateness on both Sides, as had been since the commencement of the War; but in conclusion, the Parliament's Forces beat the King's from their Works at Speen, and took nine pieces of Canon, among which six were those they lost in Cornwal, which the Foot that had been there disarm'd, and in Mercy dismist by the King, ventur'd desperately to regain, and when they had got them embraced them for Joy, and said they must give them a Cornish-Hug. The King sensible of his Disadvantage, marched from Newberry in the Night, and securing his Canon, Carriages and Baggage in Denington Castle, he went off to Walingford, and so to Oxford. And being soon reinforc'd by the accession of Prince Rupert and the Earl of Northampton, he came back and reliev'd Denington Castle, took out his Train, drew out his Army in the Field, and offer'd the Rebels another Battle; but they in a Council of War declined fighting, and left the King to march leisurely away toward Walingford; and when the bare Report of his going to relieve Basing House had raised the Siege of it, the two Armies retreated both to their Winter Quarters, the King's to Oxford, Marlborough, Basing, Odham, Newberry, &c. the Parliament's to Reading, Henley, Abington, Faruham, &c.

2d Newberry fight.

Disadvantage to the King.

The King offers another Battle.

And now the two Houses at Westminster, who had rejected several Messages of Peace from the King, thought fit to send him their own Terms by Commissioners; Earl of Denbigh and Lord Maynard for the Peers, Mr. Pierpoint, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Whitlock, and Lord Wenman of the Commons; the Lord Maitland, Sir Charles Erskins, and Mr. Barclay, for Scotland: who came to Oxford Nov. 23. and were very obligingly received by the King, who heard the Propositions read by the Earl of Denbigh with much Patience, and then ask'd the Commissioners, If they had Power to Treat? They answered No: but their Commission was to receive his Majesty's Answer in Writing.

ting. The King replied, Then a Letter Carrier might have done as much as you. Says the Earl of Denbigh, I ſuppoſe your Majeſty looks upon us as Perſons of another Condition than Letter Carriers. The King ſaid calmly again, I know your Condition; but I ſay, that your Commiſſion gives you power to do no more than a Letter Carrier might have done. The King had ſoon after an opportunity of private Diſcourſe with two of the Commiſſioners, Hollis and Whitlock, and had ſuch Confidence in them and in his own Integrity, that he left it to them two to draw up in Writing what they apprehended might be fit to return in Anſwer to the Meſſage. The Reſult was, That Uxbridge was appointed a Place of Treaty, and Commiſſioners were nominated, with Inſtructions and ſafe Conduct on either ſide.

Treaty of Uxbridge open'd with a ſeditious Sermon by Mr. Love.

This Treaty of Uxbridge began Jan. 30. Thurſday, which being Market-day, a Sermon was Preach'd in the Pariſh-Church by Mr. Chriſtopher Love; ſo full of Railing and Sedition, that on the next Day the King's Commiſſioners thought themſelves obliged to give in a Paper of Complaint, "That there was "Yeſterday a Sermon preach'd by one Mr. Love, "in which were many Paſſages very ſcandalous to "his Majeſty's Perſon, and derogatory to his Ho- "nour, ſtirring up the People againſt this Treaty, "and incenſing them againſt us, telling them, "that we come with Hearts full of Blood, and that "there is as great diſtance between this Treaty and "Peace as between Heaven and Hell. The Parliament Commiſſioners anſwered, That Mr. Love was none of their Retinue, nor came thither by any Privity of theirs. And upon the Reply of the King's Commiſſioners, that they muſt inſiſt on their former Deſire concerning the Sermon preach'd by Mr. Love, and muſt refer the way of doing Juſtice to their Lordſhips; they made farther Anſwer, that they would repreſent it to the Lords and Commons at Weſtminſter, who would proceed therein according to Juſtice: But no Juſtice was done in it.

Propoſitions offered by the Parl. Commiſſioners concerning Religion.

On this ſame Day, Jan. 31. the Parliament Commiſſioners offer'd theſe Propoſitions concerning Religion.

I. "That the Bill be paſſed for aboliſhing Epiſcopacy.

II. "That the Ordinances for Calling and Sitting "of the Aſſembly of Divines, be confirmed.

III. "That the Directory for publick Worſhip, "and the Model of Presbyterian Government an- "nex'd, be enacted as a Part of Reformation and "Uniformity.

IV. "That his Majeſty take the ſolemn League "and Covenant, and enjoin it to all his Subjects.

As to the firſt, the King's Commiſſioners offer'd many Arguments to ſhew the Injuſtice and Inconveniency which would follow upon Paſſing the Bill for aboliſhing Epiſcopacy, from Conſcience, Law, and Reaſon. To the ſecond, That they need not inſiſt on Confirmation of the Calling and Sitting of the Aſſembly of Divines, till the Alterations of Church-Government were agreed or not. To the third, That they could not conceive the Directory for publick Worſhip was ſo likely to procure and preſerve the Peace of the Kingdom, as the Liturgy already by Law eſtabliſhed. And as for the Covenant, they could not adviſe his Majeſty to ſwear and ſign the ſame, nor conſent that an Act of Parliament ſhould paſs for enjoining the taking thereof by his Majeſty's Subjects.

Propoſitions concerning the Militia.

Febr. 4. the Propoſitions concerning the Militia were propoſed by the Parliament Commiſſioners, to this effect: That all Forces by Sea and Land ſhould be ſettled in Commiſſioners nominated by both Houſes of Parliament, to be removed and filled up from time to time as the ſaid Houſes ſhould think fit: and that it ſhould be High-Treaſon to levy Forces without ſuch Authority and Conſent: and the Militia of London, and Tower of London, to be in the Government of the ſaid City. To which the King's Commiſſioners anſwer'd, that they could not conſent to ſuch great Alterations in the main Foundation of the Frame of the Government, as by expreſs Words or neceſſary Conſequence took the whole Military and Civil Power out of the Crown, without any Limitation in Time, or Reparation propoſed. 1644. 20 Car. I.

Concerning Ireland.

Febr. 7. the Parliament Commiſſioners preſented the Propoſitions concerning Ireland, that an Act ſhould paſs to make void the Ceſſation of Ireland, and all Treaties with the Rebels, without Conſent of both Houſes of Parliament, and to ſettle the Proſecution of that War in the two Houſes, his Majeſty to aſſiſt, and to do no Act to diſcountenance or moleſt them therein. All Perſons who had any hand in Plotting, Deſigning, or Aſſiſting that Rebellion, to expect no Pardon: and the ſucceſſive Deputies and Judges, &c. of that Kingdom to be nominated by the two Houſes, &c. To which the King's Commiſſioners anſwer'd, That his Majeſty had full Power and juſt Grounds to conſent to that Ceſſation, and it could not be declared void without a breach of Faith and Honour in his Majeſty; but it would of it ſelf expire in March next. Nor could it be agreeable to his Majeſty's Honour, or the Juſtice and Protection which he ows to his Subjects of the Kingdom of Ireland, to put the Nomination of his Lieutenant and Judges out of himſelf, and to commit the whole Power of that Kingdom unto others.

Febr. 20. Eighteen Days having been ſpent in the ſaid Propoſitions concerning Religion, Militia, and Ireland, and the Treaty being limited to twenty Days; the King's Commiſſioners deſired to ſpend the two remaining Days in giving better Satisfaction upon thoſe three Heads, and in Treating for an Expedient of Peace by disbanding all Armies, and by his Majeſty's coming to Weſtminſter: and for this purpoſe deſired the time of Treaty to be prolonged. To which the Parliament Commiſſioners anſwered, That till they had Satisfaction in their Demands concerning Religion, Militia, and Ireland, they could receive no Propoſitions from his Majeſty, nor give any Addition of Time. By the Papers in this Treaty it plainly appears, That the King's Commiſſioners, though they could not go in to the literal Demands on the other ſide; yet they made as many Conceſſions toward granting ſome Equivalent, or other Expedient, as it was poſſible to do. But the Parliament Commiſſioners were tied up to rigid Rules, and ſeem'd to have no Power of receding from the very Letter of the Propoſitions brought along with them: as if only Meſſengers to report the Senſe and very Words of thoſe who ſent them, rather than Commiſſioners to argue and determine upon others Arguments, and their own Judgment of 'em. Parl. Commiſ. but meer Meſſengers.

D. Wellwood's Opinion of breaking off this Treaty.

A late Writer of Memoirs tells it as a Secret in Hiſtory, that the Occaſion of breaking off this Treaty was a Letter from the Marquis of Montroſs in Scotland, who had entirely defeated the Earl of Argyle Feb. 2. and next Day ſent an Expreſs of it in a Letter to the King; wherein he declares his utter Averſion to all Treaties with his Rebel Parliament in England; and is heartily ſorry to hear, that his Majeſty had conſented to Treat, and hopes it is not true; adviſes him not to enter into any Terms with his rebellious Subjects; and aſſures him, that he ſhould be able within a few Months to march into England to his Majeſty's Aſſiſtance with a brave Army. Suppoſing ſuch a Letter was written; though this Relator pretends to have ſeen nothing but a Copy under another Hand: and ſuppoſing the Difficulty remov'd, which the Relator himſelf can hardly imagine, "That a "Letter writ February 3. in the farthermoſt North "Corner of Britain, ſhould come ſo ſoon to Oxford, "conſidering the Length of the Journey, the Bad- "neſs of the Roads at that time of the Year, eſpe- "cially through the mountainous Parts of Scotland, "together with the Parliament's and Scotch Armies "and Gariſons that were poſted all along the Road: Suppoſing theſe hard things to be true; yet it ſeems to be no Inference that the King himſelf was the Cauſe

Vindication of the King.

1644. 20 Car. I. Cauſe of breaking off this Treaty, when a Denial of any the leaſt Conceſſions, and even of a few farther Days, was the ſole Act of the Parliament Commiſſioners. And yet had the Rupture been made ſolely at the King's Command, he would have ſtood juſtified by all the Laws of Conſcience and Honour: For, to have yielded to all their Propoſitions, as they inſiſted, without the leaſt Mitigation of them, would as effectually have diveſted him of his Crown and Dignity, as they did afterward deprive him of his Liberty and Life. It had been more glorious in him to reſolve, That Monarchy ſhould not be murder'd before the King.

The Dutch Ambaſſadors interpoſe. After the Treaty was diſſolv'd, the Ambaſſadors of the States of Holland, who had been at Oxford to ſollicit the Succeſs of it, being now in London, obtained Leave of Admiſſion firſt to the Houſe of Lords, and then of Commons; where they repreſented the great Deſires and Endeavours of their Maſters for an Accommodation between the King and Parliament, which concerned all Proteſtants, and particularly their Lords and Maſters: and own'd, That his Majeſty, whilſt they were at Oxford, had honoured them, by communicating to them what paſſed at the Treaty in Uxbridge; and declared to them, That if the Parliament be not ſatisfied with what he offer'd concerning Church-Government, his Majeſty is contented that a General Synod be called of Divines from all the Proteſtant Churches in Europe, for their Advice herein. This perhaps was thought to be a Meſſage from the King, and therefore no Anſwer was return'd to it.

Parliam. ſeem well pleas'd. For the Parliament found themſelves every Day more and more ſuperiour to the King: and therefore approving what was done by their Commiſſioners, and thanking them for having diſcharged their Duties with ſingular Judgment and Fidelity; and ſolemnly acquainting the City with their Proceedings, and poſſeſſing them with the Averſneſs of the King's Party to a Peace; they made very diligent Preparations for continuing the War: And finding their General Eſſex to be too much inclined to Moderation, and the Defenſive ſide; they modell'd a new Army, to be Commanded by Sir Thomas Fairfax: To whom, by an Ordinance, they gave an ample Commiſſion, to exerciſe all Martial Juriſdiction, to fight with and to ſlay all ſuch as ſhould oppoſe him; and, to ſuppreſs all Forces not raiſed by Authority of both Houſes of Parliament.

State of Religion. As to the Eccleſiaſtical State in this Year 1644. The long-impriſon'd Archbiſhop of Canterbury had been brought upon his Tryal before the Peers on Tueſday March 12. and Arraign'd in a long Speech by Mr. Serjeant Wild; concluding thus: This Man, my Lords, is like Naaman the Syrian, a Great Man, but a Leper. Upon which the Archbiſhop ſpoke as follows:

Tryal of Abp. Laud

My Lords,

HisSpeech "MY being in this Place, and in this Condition, recalls to my Memory that which I "long ſince read in Seneca, Tormentum eſt, etiamſi "abſolutus quis fuerit, cauſam dixiſſe; 'Tis not a "Grief only, no, 'tis no leſs than a Torment, for "an ingenuous Man to plead criminally, much more "capitally, at ſuch a Bar as this; yea though it "ſhould ſo fall out, that he be abſolved. The "great Truth of this I find at preſent in myſelf; "and ſo much the more, becauſe I am a Chriſtian, "and not that only, but in holy Orders; and not "ſo only, but by God's Grace and Goodneſs pre-"ferred to the greateſt Place this Church affords; "and yet now brought cauſam dicere to Plead, and "for no leſs than Life, at this great Bar. And "whatſoever the World thinks of me (and they "have been taught to think more ill than, I humbly "thank Chriſt for it, I was ever acquainted with) "yet, my Lords, this I find tormentum eſt; 'tis no "leſs than Torment to me to appear in this Place "to ſuch an Accuſation. Nay, my Lords, give me "Leave, I beſeech you, to ſpeak plain Truth: No "Sentence that can juſtly paſs upon me (and other "I will never fear from your Lordſhips) can go "ſo near me as cauſam dixiſſe to have pleaded for "myſelf upon this Occaſion, and in this Place. For "as for the Sentence (I thank God for it) I am at "St. Paul's Word, If I have committed any thing worthy of Death, I refuſe not to die: For, I bleſs God, "I have ſo ſpent my time, as that I am neither a-"ſham'd to Live, nor afraid to Die. Nor can the "World be more weary of me than I am of it: for "ſeeing the Malignity which hath been raiſed a-"gainſt me by ſome Men, I have carried my Life in "my Hands theſe divers Years paſt.

1644. 20 Car. I.

"But yet, my Lords, if none of theſe things "whereof theſe Men accuſe me, merit Death by "Law; though I may not in this Caſe, and from "this Bar, appeal unto Cæſar, yet to your Lord-"ſhips Juſtice and Integrity I both may and do "appeal; not doubting, but that God of his Goodneſs "will preſerve my Innocency. And as Job, in the "midſt of his Affliction, ſaid to his miſtaken "Friends, ſo ſhall I to my Accuſers, God forbid I "ſhould juſtifie you: till I die I will not remove my "Integrity from me: I will hold it faſt, and not let "it go: my Heart ſhall not reproach me, as long as "I live.

"My Lords, I ſee by the Articles, and have now "heard from this Gentleman, that the Charge a-"gainſt me is divided into two main Heads; the "Laws of the Land, and the Religion by thoſe "Laws eſtabliſhed.

And ſo with great Eloquence and Courage he went on, to ſhew himſelf a ſtrict Obſerver of the Laws, and a true Profeſſor of the Religion eſtabliſht in the Church of England; and wiped off all the Aſperſions of Popery; concluding with the Names of 21 eminent Popiſh Recuſants, whom he by perſonal Conference had reduced to the Proteſtant Communion.

He had 20 ſeveral Days of Hearing, which ended July 29. wherein he had ſuch a heap of Accuſations, and made ſuch an admirable Defence againſt them, that the Innocence of this Prelate, and the Malice of his Enemies, are hardly to be match'd in any Account of the Primitive Perſecutions. On the laſt Day of his Tryal he made a Recapitulation of all that had been charg'd upon him, and of all that he had anſwer'd in his own Defence, and then concluded.

Speech at Concluſion of his Tryal. "And now, My Lords, I do in all Humility lay "myſelf low at God's Mercy-Seat, to do with me "as he pleaſes: and under God, I ſhall rely upon "your Lordſhip's Juſtice, Honour, and Clemency, "of which I cannot doubt. And, without being "farther tedious unto your Lordſhips (who have "with very honourable Patience heard me through "this long and tedious Trial) I ſhall conclude with "that which St. Auguſtin ſaid to Romanianus, a Man "that had tried both Fortunes as well as I; If the "Providence of God reaches down to us (as moſt "certain it doth) Sic tecum agi oportet, ſicut agitur, "It muſt ſo be done with thee (and ſo with me al-"ſo) as it is done. And under that Providence "which will, I doubt not, work to the beſt to my "Soul, that loves God, I repoſe myſelf.

Acquitted by the Lords. When all the Articles and utmoſt Proof of them by the moſt prejudic'd Parties were not likely to prevail with the Lords (though but a few, and thoſe Adverſaries to the Archbiſhop's Perſon and Character, and to the Church and King) to find him Guilty of the Impeachment; the Commons (at the Inſtigation of the Scots) took the Judicature in the moſt illegal manner to themſelves, had him brought to their Bar on ſeveral Days, and on Novemb. 16. paſſed an Ordinance to make him Guilty of High-Treaſon: Which being tranſmitted to the Lords, they referred themſelves to the Judges, who unani-

1644. 20 Car. I. And by the Judges unanimouſly anſwered, "That nothing charged a- "gainſt him was Treaſon by any known and eſta- "bliſhed Law of the Land. Upon which the Lords in a Conference with the Commons Decemb. 24. de- clared, "That they had diligently weigh'd all things that were charged againſt him, but could not by "any one of them, or all, find him Guilty of Trea- "ſon. And yet by the over-ruling of all Honour and Conſcience, the Bill of Attainder paſs'd the Houſe of Lords Jan. 4. and a Scaffold being prepared on Tower-hill, he was brought to it Jan. 10. where he made his own Funeral Sermon, beginning thus:

To be con- demn'd by an Ordi- nance of the two Houſes.

Good People,

His dying Speech.

"THis is an uncomfortable time to Preach, yet I "ſhall begin with a Text of Scripture, Heb. 12. "2. Let us run with Patience the Race that is ſet before "us, looking unto Jeſus the Author and Finiſher of our "Faith; who for the Joy that was ſet before him, en- "dured the Croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is ſet down "at the Right-hand of the Throne of God.

"I have been long in my Race, and how I have "looked unto Jeſus the Author and Finiſher of my "Faith, he beſt knows. I am now come to the end "of my Race, and here I find the Croſs; a Death of "ſhame, but the Shame muſt be deſpiſed or no coming "to the Right-hand of God. Jeſus deſpiſed the Shame "for me, and God forbid but that I ſhould deſpiſe "the Shame for him. I am going apace (as you "ſee) towards the Red Sea, and my Feet are now "upon the very brink of it, an Argument, I hope, "that God is bringing me into the Land of Pro- "miſe; for that was the way thro' which he led "his People: But before they came to it, he inſti- "tuted a Paſſover for them, a Lamb it was, but "muſt be eaten with four Herbs. I ſhall obey, and "labour to digeſt the four Herbs as well as the "Lamb; and I ſhall remember it is the Lord's Paſſo- "ver: I ſhall not think of the Herbs, nor be angry "with the Hand that gathereth them, but look up "only unto him who inſtituted that and governs "theſe. For Men can have no more power over me, "than what is given from above. I am not in love "with this Paſſage through the Red Sea, for I have "the weakneſs and Infirmities of Fleſh and Blood "plentifully in me; and I have pray'd with my Sa- "viour, ut tranſiret calix iſte, that this Cup of red "Wine might paſs from me; but if not, God's Will not "mine be done. And I ſhall moſt willingly drink of "this Cup as deep as he pleaſes, and enter into "this Sea, yea and paſs through it in the way that "he ſhall lead me.

"But I would have it remember'd (good Peo- "ple) that when God's Servants were in this boi- "ſterous Sea, and Aaron amongſt them, the Egyp- "tians which perſecuted them (and did in a man- "ner drive them into the Sea) were drowned in the "ſame Waters while they were in purſuit of them.--- "And as for this People, they are at this Day mi- "ſerably miſled (God of his Mercy open their Eyes "that they may ſee the right way) for at this Day "the Blind lead the Blind, and if they go on both "will certainly fall into the Ditch. ——

"Though the weight of my Sentence be heavy "upon me, I am as quiet within as ever I was in "my Life. And though I am not only the firſt "Archbiſhop but the firſt Man that ever died by an "Ordinance in Parliament; yet ſome of my Prede- "ceſſors have gone this way, though not by this "means. —— Here is a great clamour that I would "have brought in Popery: I ſhall anſwer that more "fully by and by. In the mean time, you know "what the Phariſees ſaid againſt Chriſt himſelf, If "we let him alone All Men will believe in him, & ve- "vient Romani, and the Romans will come and take "away our Place and Nation. Here was a cauſeleſs "Cry againſt Chriſt, that the Romans would come: "and ſee how juſt the Judgment was; they cruci- "fied Chriſt for fear the Romans ſhould come, and "his Death was it that brought in the Romans upon "them: God puniſhing them with that which they "moſt feared. And I pray God this Clamour of venient Romani (of which I have given no cauſe) help "not to bring them in: For the Pope never had ſuch "an Harveſt in England ſince the Reformation, as "he hath now upon the Sects and Diviſions that "are among us. —— This I ſhall be bold to ſpeak "of the King our Gracious Soveraign: He hath been "much traduc'd alſo for bringing in of Popery; but "in my Conſcience (of which I ſhall give God a ve- "ry preſent Account) I know him to be as free "from this Charge as any Man living; and I hold "him to be as ſound a Proteſtant (according to the "Religion by Law eſtabliſh'd) as any Man in this "Kingdom; and that he will venture his Life as "far and as freely for it. And I think I do, or "ſhould know both his Affection to Religion, and "his Grounds for it, as fully as any Man in Eng- "land. —— I have been accuſed as an Enemy to "Parliaments: No! I underſtand them, and the "Benefit that comes by them too well to be ſo: But "I did miſlike the Miſgovernments of ſome Parlia- "ments many ways, and I had good Reaſon for it. "For Corruptio Optimi eſt Peſſima, there is no Cor- "ruption in the World ſo bad as that which is of the "Beſt thing within it ſelf: For the better the thing "is in Nature, the worſe it is corrupted. And that "being the higheſt Court, over which no other hath "Juriſdiction, when it is miſinformed or miſgover- "ned, the Subject is left without all Remedy: But "I have done. I forgive all the World, All and E- "very of thoſe bitter Enemies which have perſecu- "ted me; and humbly deſire to be forgiven of God "firſt, and then of every Man, whether I have of- "fended him or not, if he do but conceive that I "have. Lord do thou forgive me, and I beg for- "giveneſs of him. And ſo I heartily deſire you to "join in Prayers with me.

His Execution.

His Speech and Prayer ended, he gave the Prayer which he read into the Hands of his Chaplain Mr. Stern; and ſeeing one Hind had been writing his Speech as it came from his Mouth, he deſired him Not to do him wrong in publiſhing a falſe or imperfect Co- py. Finding many People upon the Scaffold, he de- ſired he might have room to dye, beſeeching them to let him "Have an end of his Miſeries, which he His Chri- "had endured very long. Coming near the Block, ſtian Be- he ſaid, "God's Will be done, I am willing to go haviour. "out of this World; none can be more willing to "ſend me. Seeing ſome Chinks through the Boards with People under them, he called to the Officer for ſome Duſt to ſtop them, or to remove the People, ſaying, "It was no part of his Deſires, that his "Blood ſhould fall upon the Heads of the People. Sir John Clotworthy did rudely interrupt him with im- pertinent Queſtions, which he anſwer'd with all Chriſtian Meekneſs. The firſt Queſtion was, "What "was the moſt comfortable Saying which a dying "Man would have in his Mouth? He anſwer'd, Cupio diſſolvi & eſſe cum Chriſto. The other asked a- gain, "What was the fitteſt Speech a Man would "uſe to expreſs his Confidence and Aſſurance? He anſwer'd, Such Aſſurance is to be found within, and no Words are able to expreſs it rightly. The buſie man demanding "a place of Scripture, whereupon ſuch "Aſſurance might be grounded. He uſed ſome Words to this effect, that It was the Word of God con- cerning Chriſt and his dying for us. Then he turned a- way to the Executioner, gave him Money, and ſaid, "Here, honeſt Friend, God Forgive thee and I do, "and do thy Office upon me with Mercy. Then giving him a ſign when the Blow ſhould come, he kneeled down and made another ſhort Prayer; then laying his Head on the Block, and praying ſilently to himſelf, he ſaid aloud, Lord receive my Soul! which being the Signal given, his Head was cut off at a blow, and his Body decently interred in the Church 1644. 20 Car. I. of Allhallows Berking, by the Office of the Liturgy, which on that very Day was, by an Ordinance of Parliament, aboliſh'd, and the Directory eſtabliſh'd in room of it. On his Coffin was nail'd a little braſs Plate, with his Arms and this Inſcription: In hac Ciſtula conduntur Exuviæ Gulielmi Laud Archiepiſcopi Cantuarienſis qui ſecuri percuſſus immortalitatem adiit die x. Januarii, Ætatis ſuæ LXXIII. Archiepiſcopatus xii. His laſt Character is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. " He underwent his Sentence with all " Chriſtian Courage and Magnanimity, to the Ad- " miration of the Beholders, and Confuſion of his " Enemies. Much hath been ſaid of the Perſon of " this great Prelate before, of his great Endow- " ments and natural Infirmities; to which ſhall be " added no more in this Place (his Memory deſer- " ving a particular Celebration) than that his " Learning, Piety, and Vertue, have been attain'd " by very few, and the greateſt of his Infirmities " are common to all, even to the beſt Men.

His Burial.

The King being in Arms could have no other Care for the Church, but to fight for the Reſtitution of it. But however, to take off as far as poſſible the Prejudice of Foreign Proteſtants, which had been induſtriouſly raiſed and fomented by Letters from the Aſſemblies of Divines in England and Scotland; the King drew up a Declaration to all foreign Reformed Churches, in Latin, dat. in Academia & Civitate noſtra Oxonienſi in die Idus Maii 1644. proteſting againſt the falſe Rumours and ſcandalous Letters ſpread among the Reformed Churches in foreign Parts, as if his Majeſty had an Inclination to recede from the Religion wherein he was born, baptized, and bred: and ſolemnly profeſſing, that he will keep entire and inviolable the moſt holy Religion of the Anglican Church, ordained by many Convocations of learned Divines, confirmed by many Acts of Parliament, and ſtrengthen'd by many Royal Proclamations; with a Liturgy and Diſcipline approved and applauded by the moſt eminent of Proteſtant Writers.

King's Latin Declaration to Foreign Churches.

His Majeſty endeavours to reform his Army.

And to keep up, if poſſible, the Honour of Religion in his Army, and wipe away the popular Objection, that the Malignants were lewd and profane Men; the King iſſued his Proclamation, dated Apr. 18. for the farther Reſtraint of profane Swearing and Curſing, and the better obſerving of Prayer and Preaching in his Majeſty's Armies, and in the City of Oxford, and all other Parts. When it was agreed upon to hold a Treaty at Uxbridge, the King publiſhed a Proclamation, dated at Oxford January 27. commanding that Wedneſday Febr. 5. ſhould be kept as a ſolemn Faſt, that both Prince and People might then join together in a true Humiliation, and devout and earneſt Prayers unto God, that he would be pleaſed to bleſs and proſper the intended Treaty, that it might produce a happy Peace for his Honour, the Good of his Church, and of the King and all his Subjects. And for a conſtant Prayer during the Treaty, the King himſelf dictated this Form: O moſt merciful Father, Lord God of Peace and Truth, We a People ſorely afflicted by the Scourge of an unnatural War, do here earneſtly beſeech thee to command a Bleſſing from Heaven upon this preſent Treaty, begun for the Eſtabliſhment of a happy Peace. Soften the moſt obdurate Hearts with a true Chriſtian Deſire of ſaving thoſe Mens Blood for whom Chriſt himſelf hath ſhed his. Or if the Guilt of our great Sins cauſe this Treaty to break off in vain, Lord let the Truth clearly appear, who thoſe Men are, which under pretence of the publick Good do purſue their own private Ends; and that this People may be no longer ſo blindly miſerable as not to ſee at leaſt in this their Day, the things that belong unto their Peace. Grant this, gracious God, for his ſake who is our Peace it ſelf, even Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Amen. Which ſhews the Piety of this Prince, and the Sincerity of his Heart, in deſiring the Succeſs of this Treaty upon any Terms conſiſtent with the Being of a Church and Monarchy.

The K.'s own Form of Prayer for Peace.

The two Houſes at Weſtminſter made the Aſſembly of Divines and the City Clergy their Inſtruments of the Cauſe to be called Good. On April 8. they made an Ordinance, that the Miniſters within the City and Bills of Mortality, ſhould on the Morrow, being Thankſgiving-Day for the Victory over Sir Ralph Hopton's Forces, publiſh in their ſeveral Churches, the Reſolution taken by the Parliament to draw all their Forces together, and put a ſpeedy Iſſue to theſe lingring Miſeries; and that therefore they ſhould exhort the People to contribute to the uttermoſt for ſending forth what poſſible Strength can be had. April 17. it was ordered, That the Candleſticks, Crucifixes, and other Plate, that ſtood hererofore upon the Altar in St. Paul's Church, be ſold by the Committee at Grocer's-Hall, and the Money employ'd for the publick Safety. On May 9. there was another Ordinance for the farther demoliſhing all Monuments of Idolatry and Superſtition, and taking away all Organs, Surplices, ſuperſtitious Veſtments, &c. And the Price of Sacrilege to ſerve the Cauſe. This way of Reformation gave Riſe to ſo many Hereſies and Diviſions, that the Miniſters of the City of London, in a Petition to the Commons Houſe, Sept. 18. beg leave to ſigh out their Sorrows, and confeſs, Through many erroneous Opinions, ruinating Schiſms, and damnable Hereſies (unhappily fomented in City and Country) the Orthodox Miniſtry is neglected; the People ſeduced; Congregations torn aſunder; Families diſtracted; Rights and Duties of Relations, National, Civil, and Spiritual, ſcandalouſly violated; the Power of Godlineſs decayed; Parliamentary Authority undermined; fearful Confuſion introduced; imminent Deſtruction threatned, &c.

1644. 20 Car. I. Proceedings of Parl. in Matters of Religion.

Growth of Sects and Parties.

As to the Proceedings of the Aſſembly of Divines, they procured in May an Order of Parliament to ſuppreſs an erroneous Edition of the Engliſh Bible at Amſterdam. When the Earl of Eſſex march'd into the Weſt, it was at the Motion of this Aſſembly that a Day of publick Humiliation was appointed, to implore the Aſſiſtance of God for the proſperous Undertaking of the Lord General. Soon after they communicated to the Parliament a Letter ſent to them from the Kirk of Scotland, lamenting that Church-Government was not yet ſettled. Upon which they had Leave to debate the whole matter of an Ordinance made for the Ordination of Miniſters, and for ſettling the Government of the Church. In which Debate it was propounded to put the Queſtion, that the Government by Presbytery is Jure Divino. But the putting it to the Queſtion was diverted by a Speech of one of the Lay-Members, who among other Arguments uſed this Dilemma; If this Government be not Jure Divino, no Opinion of any Council can make it to be what it is not; and if it be Jure Divino, it continues ſo ſtill, although you do not declare it to be ſo. The Oppoſition between the Presbyterians and Independents, and other Sectaries, began to interrupt every Scheme of Settlement; ſo that in September a Committee of Lords and Commons was appointed to confer with the Aſſembly, and to endeavour to reconcile ſome Differences amongſt them, and to find out a way how tender Conſciences may be borne withall, ſo far as may ſtand with the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Word of God. Octob. 2. an Ordinance was paſs'd for the Ordination of Miniſters; whereby twenty three Presbyters (of which the Aſſembly named ten of themſelves, and thirteen of the City) or any ſeven of them, were to ordain ſucceſſive Miniſters, and none to Preach, or exerciſe the Miniſterial Function, without their Allowance. Juſt before Newberry ſecond Fight, October, the Commons being inform'd that in probability the Armies were now Engag'd, they ſent to the Aſſembly of Divines to ſpend ſome time in Prayer for the good Succeſs of the Parliament's Forces; which was done accordingly. In November, by Deſire from the Scots Commiſſioners, both Houſes ſent to the Aſſembly, to bring in the Proceedings of the Aſſembly of Divines.

Particulars of what they had finiſhed for the Government of the Church, that it might be approved and confirmed by the Parliament; and to haſten the Diſpatch of what farther lay before them. Soon after the chief Members of the Aſſembly came to the Houſe of Commons, and preſented their Draught of humble Advice for ſettling the Presbyterian Government; in which they had an Expreſſion that did aſſert it to be Jure Divino. This gave Offence, and Mr. Glynne, Recorder of London, ſtood up and ſpoke againſt determining a Jus Divinum: wherein he was ſeconded by Mr. Whitlock; till, upon the Queſtion, it was carried to lay aſide all Aſſertion of Divine Right; and Glynne and Whitlock had many Thanks for preventing the Surpriſal of the Houſe upon this great Queſtion. Upon Deſire of ſome Members in the Aſſembly who diſſented from the Form of Presbyterian Government, a Day was appointed to hear their Arguments againſt it; and the other part had liberty to anſwer in Writing the Reaſons of their Diſſenting Brethren; and the Arguments on each ſide were to be preſented to the Houſe of Commons. In November the Aſſembly ſent to the Commons their Directory for Prayer, Preaching, and all other parts of Publick Worſhip; and toward the end of December preſented ſome farther Additions to their firſt Form: all which were Debated and Reſolved by the Commons. And to ſhew the Spirit of Contradiction that was now to prevail, an Ordinance was made Decemb. 19. to turn Chriſtmas-day into a ſolemn Faſt and Humiliation, becauſe it may call to remembrance our Sins, and the Sins of our Forefathers, who have turned this Feaſt, pretending the Memory of Chriſt, into an extreme Forgetfulneſs of him, by giving Liberty to carnal and ſenſual Delights. In January the Directory of Worſhip was fully agreed upon by both Houſes, and order'd to be Printed, and two of the Aſſembly to take care thereof. The Commons order'd, that the Divines of the Aſſembly ſhould write a congratulatory Letter to the General Aſſembly in Scotland, and acquaint them what they had done, and how the Parliament had agreed with them. In the Debate of theſe Matters in the Houſe of Commons, it was voted, that to have a Presbytery in the Church, is according to the Word of God; and that many Congregations may be under one Presbyterian Government; and that Paſtors, Doctors, Teachers, Elders, and Deacons, are the Officers of the Church, in the Government of it; and that ſeveral Congregations ſhould be under one Claſſis, and the Church governed by Congregational, Claſſical, Synodical Aſſemblies; and that there ſhould be one at leaſt in every Congregation to labour in the Word and Doctrine. In the Uxbridge Treaty, Mr. Vines and Mr. Marſhal of the Engliſh, and Mr. Henderſon of the Scots, were ſent from the Aſſembly to attend the Parliament Commiſſioners, and diſpute for the Divine Right of Presbytery; againſt Dr. Steward who was named by the King to be one of his Commiſſioners on the Propoſitions of Religion only, and Dr. Sheldon. During this Treaty, a Petition was directed to the Commiſſioners of both Sides from many thouſand Inhabitants in the County of Bucks, to this effect; That Religion might be eſtabliſhed as it was in the pureſt times of Queen Elizabeth. A Copy being tranſmitted to the Commons at Weſtminſter, they condemn'd it, and ſent for Sir John Lawrence, the chief Promoter, into Cuſtody. After the End of the Treaty, by Concert of the Aſſembly and Houſe of Commons, there was a Day of Thankſgiving order'd for the Succeſſes which God gave the Parliament ſince the Breach of the Treaty. And then the laſt Act of the Aſſembly this Year, was to ſend a Meſſage to the Parliament touching the Title to the Directory, and the Ordinance for taking away the Common Prayer Book, and for ſettling an Able Miniſtry, and for keeping Profane and Ignorant Perſons from the Sacrament: all which the Commons debated in a grand Committee, and referred ſome things back to the Aſſembly, and order'd them to nominate ſome Miniſters to go with the Armies into the Field this next Summer.

Diſputes in the Uxbridge Treaty.

The Death of Mr. Chillingworth is thus remembred by the Lord Clarendon, upon Waller's forcing Arundel Caſtle to Surrender to the Parliament. "Here "the Learned and Eminent Mr. Chillingworth was "taken Priſoner, who out of Kindneſs and Reſpect "to the Lord Hopton had accompanied him in that "March; and being indiſpoſed by the terrible Cold- "neſs of that Seaſon, choſe to repoſe himſelf in that "Garriſon till the Weather ſhould mend. As ſoon "as his Perſon was known, which would have "drawn Reverence from any noble Enemy, the "Clergy that attended that Army proſecuted him "with all the Inhumanity imaginable; ſo that by "their barbarous Uſage he died within few days, to "the Grief of all that knew him, and of many who "knew him not but by his Book, and the Reputa- "tion he had with learned Men. They proceeded to inſult his Body and his Works in the very Grave; for when his Body was carried to the Cloyſter of the Church of Chicheſter, to be there interr'd; Mr. Francis Cheynel, Rector of Petworth, ſtood at the Grave ready to receive it, with the Author's Book of The Religion of Proteſtants in his hand: and when the Company were all ſettled, he made a ridiculous Speech, and in concluſion, throwing the Book inſultingly on the Corps in the Grave, ſaid thus; Get thee gone then, thou curſed Book! which haſt ſeduced ſo many precious Souls; Get thee gone, thou corrupt rotten Book, Earth to Earth, and Duſt to Duſt; Get thee gone into the place of Rottenneſs, that thou may'ſt rot with thy Author, and ſee Corruption. 1644. 20 Car. I.

This Year began with an Ordinance for the new Model of an Army, conſtituting Sir Thomas Fairfax General, Col. Skippon Major-General, giving Commiſſion Apr. 1. to lead an Army againſt all Rebels, Traitors, and other common Enemies, and them to kill and ſlay; and to exerciſe Martial Law; and to execute the Laws and Ordinances confirm'd this preſent Parliament, to be read at the Head of his Army. After which, April 3. the Ordinance paſſed for the diſcharging of the Members of both Houſes from all Offices both Military and Civil; called the Self-denying Ordinance. The Lord General Eſſex, the Earl of Manchester, and the Earl of Denbigh, having reſign'd their Commiſſions the Day before, Fairfax appointed his general Rendezvous at Windſor, and ſoon modell'd an Army of one and twenty thouſand Men; who by Order of Parliament, paſs'd Apr. 28. were to march Weſtward for the Relief of Taunton. 1645. New Army under General Fairfax.

Cromwel came to Windſor under pretence of taking his Leave of the new General, as if he now look'd on himſelf as diſcharged from all Military Employment by the late Ordinance. But he had made ſuch Intereſt in the Committee of both Kingdoms at Weſtminſter, that they had ſent Orders to their General Sir Tho. Fairfax to ſend a Party of Horſe to lie between Oxford and Worceſter to intercept the Correſpondence between the King and Prince Rupert, and particularly recommended Lieutenant-General Cromwel for that Service; who went away with a good Party of Horſe and Dragoons, and engaged a Brigade of the King's Horſe at Iſlip Bridge Apr. 24. and routed them; and purſued them to Blechington-Houſe gariſon'd for the King, and commanded by Col. Windebank, who in a Surprize ſurrender'd it upon Articles the ſame Day; for which he was condemn'd in a Council of War at Oxford, and ſhot to Death. Cromwel's Induſtry and Succeſs.

The Lord General Fairfax began his March April 30. toward Reading, in order to relieve Taunton: but the Committee of both Kingdoms hearing of the Prince's Advance toward Oxford, order'd him May 4. to ſtop his March; and May 6. an Ordinance paſs'd, that Sir Thomas Fairfax ſhould only ſend a Party of about 3000 Foot and 1500 Horſe to Taunton; and he, with the reſt of his Army, ſhould march back to joyn Cromwel and Brown, and attend the King's Motions with their united Force. Upon coming up of this Detachment near Taunton, the King's Forces raiſed the Siege; and the Parliament ſent a Letter March of General Fairfax.

The King took the Field from Oxford on May 7. and being join'd by Prince Rupert, march'd into Worceſterſhire, deſigning the Relief of Cheſter, which had been long Beſieg'd by the Parliament Forces under Sir William Brereton; who, by that time his Majeſty came within twenty Miles of Cheſter, raiſed his Siege, and retreated into Lancaſhire. Whereupon his Majeſty diverted his Courſe toward Leiceſter, and coming before that City May 29. took it by Storm.

King takes Leiceſter.

In the mean time the Lords and Commons agreed with the Committee of both Kingdoms, that General Fairfax ſhould lay Siege to Oxford, and ſpeedily reduce that important Head-Quarters of the King. Accordingly Fairfax march'd up his Army near Oxford, and began to beleaguer it May 22. having his own Quarters at Marſton, Cromwel at Wilcham, and Brown at Wolvercot. Fifteen Days were ſpent without much Action, when the two Houſes being ſtartled with the Loſs of Leiceſter, ſent poſitive Orders to General Fairfax to bring away his Army; who accordingly June 9. drew off all his Forces, and next Day came before Borſtal-Houſe, Gariſon'd for the King, and Commanded by Sir William Campian, Beſieged by Major-General Skippon. Fairfax ſent a Summons, and Sir William Campian return'd a ſtout Anſwer. Skippon that Night made a general Aſſault upon it, but was beaten off with great Loſs, and next Day raiſed the Siege, and followed after the main Army to Great-Brickhill.

Fairfax beſieges Oxford,

But is call'd away.

The King had march'd from Leiceſter toward Daventry, with intention to relieve Oxford; but hearing that Siege was raiſed, he turned to Northampton, and put the Aſſociated Parts into great dread of being call'd to account for their Confederacy againſt their Prince. Cromwel had been called from the Siege of Oxford to the Iſle of Ely, to ſupport the Aſſociation, and was ſhortly to attend his Place in the Houſe of Commons; but being much more diſpoſed for the Camp, he prevailed with a Council of War to reſolve, that General Fairfax ſhould write to the Parliament to diſpenſe with Cromwel's Abſence from the Houſe, and to appoint him Lieutenant-General of the Horſe, which was accordingly done. Upon this new Commiſſion, Cromwel came out of the Aſſociated Parts with ſix hundred Horſe and Dragoons, and join'd with General Fairfax and his main Army at Gilsborough, four Miles from Northampton, on June 12. the King having his Camp at Borough-hill, and thence moving toward Harborough.

K.'s March

Cromwel made Lie. Gen. of the Horſe.

Fairfax followed the Motions of the King, and came up to the Rear of the King's Army, near Naſeby, early in the Morning June the 14th. Upon which, both Armies were drawn into Battalia. On the King's ſide, Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice commanded the Right Wing, Sir Marmaduke Langdale the Left, and his Majeſty himſelf in Perſon the main Body; the Earl of Lindſey and Jacob Lord Aſhley the Right-hand Reſerve, and the Lord Bard and Sir George Liſle the Left Reſerve. On the Parliament Side, the Right Wing was led by Cromwel, the Left Wing by Colonel Ireton, the main Body by General Fairfax and Major-General Skippon; With Reſerves to be brought up by Rainſborough, Hammond, and Pride.

Fatal Battle at Naſeby.

Prince Rupert, with his Majeſty's Right Wing, firſt began the Charge on that ſide againſt Ireton, who was ſoon diſorder'd, and diſmounted, and run through the Thigh with a Pike, and into the Face with a Halbert, and taken Priſoner; till afterward, upon a Turn of the Battle, he gain'd his Liberty. Prince Rupert purſued the Advantage, and chas'd the Enemy almoſt to Naſeby Town; and in his Return ſummoned the Train, and was offering Quarter, not imagining that he ſhould come back too late to ſuccour his Friends: for Cromwel had charged Sir Marmaduke Langdale with great Succeſs; and though he met with gallant Reſiſtance, he broke through all the Diviſions, and forced them to fly beyond all their Foot. The Encounter between the two main Bodies were fierce and doubtful, the Succeſs ſeeming at firſt to incline to his Majeſty, all the Front Diviſions of Fairfax, except his own Regiment of Foot, giving ground, and in Diſorder falling behind the Reſerves: But the Colonels and Officers advancing with Colours and all their Men whom they could poſſibly make to rally and ſtand, by degrees repell'd the King's Forces, and at laſt put them to a diſorderly Retreat; yet one Diviſion of the King's Foot ſtood like a Rock, and tho' twice deſperately charg'd, would not move an inch: till Fairfax commanded a Captain to charge them once more in the Front, while he himſelf, with his own Regiment and a commanded Party, fell on them in the Rear, to meet together in the middle; which was done accordingly, and that laſt Body of the King's Foot put into Confuſion, and broken. The King, with undaunted Courage, rallied his Horſe, and put them into tolerable Order, and was join'd by Prince Rupert return'd from his fatal Succeſs: Fairfax preſently brought up a good Battalia of Horſe, Foot, and Artillery, to charge the King's Troops, who were unwilling to venture another Shock upon ſuch great Diſadvantages; the King with braveſt Magnanimity endeavoured all that was poſſible to encourage them, crying out, One Charge more, and we recover the Day: But he could not prevail; for they retreated in Diſorder, and Fairfax's Horſe purſued them within two Miles of Leiceſter. The King gained nothing but the Characters of Courage and Conduct from all his Enemies. He loſt, in a manner, his entire Army, his Artillery, Ammunition, Coaches, and what went neareſt to his Heart, his Cabinet of Papers and Letters; and with ſome ſcatter'd Horſe he was forced to fly from Leiceſter to Aſhby de la Zouch, thence to Lichfield, and ſo for a ſafer Retreat into Wales. General Fairfax following to Leiceſter, and regaining that Town upon Articles June 18. and thence marching his Army to the Relief of Taunton.

Courage and Conduct of the King.

General Goring, who beſieg'd Taunton, upon News of the Advance of Fairfax, march'd away his Army and march'd toward Langport; and being Maſter of the ſeveral Paſſes on the River, thought he could decline Fighting, and ſecure his Retreat toward Bridgwater: But Fairfax drew down his Ordnance to ſuch Places of Advantage, that they did great execution on Goring's Army, while his Foot reſolutely gain'd the Paſs, and his Horſe advanced over; and after ſome Diſadvantage being reliev'd by Major Bethel and Major Desborough, they gave ſuch an effectual Charge as put Goring's Horſe to a Retreat, and his Foot into ſuch Confuſion, that Fairfax chaſed them almoſt to Bridgwater, and with the Slaughter of three hundred, took about fourteen hundred Priſoners and twelve hundred Horſes. After this Victory, General Fairfax, in a Council of War, reſolv'd to ſtorm the ſtrong Gariſon of Bridgwater, and began the Aſſault the 22d of July, and forc'd a Surrendry the very next Day. The Taking of this Place was of moſt conſiderable Advantage to the Parliament; for, by it a Line of Gariſons was drawn over that Iſthmus of Ground between the South-Sea and Severn, by Bridgwater, Taunton, Lime, and Langport; by which the Counties of Devon and Cornwal, then wholly at the King's Devotion, except Plimouth, were in a manner block'd up from all Intercourſe with the Eaſtern Parts.

K.'s Intereſt declines in the Weſt.

July the 25th it was determined in a Council of War, that Fairfax, with his Army, ſhould advance farther to the Weſt, to hinder Goring from rallying his Forces: and the March was accordingly made as far as Marlock; but there the General took his own 1645. 21 Car. I. Reſolution to march back, and attempt the Taking of Bath and Sherborn, in order to the ſtraitning of Briſtol, and hindring Prince Rupert from raiſing any Recruits in thoſe Parts. With this Intention the General came to Wells; and Colonel Rich, with a Party of Horſe and Dragoons ſurprized Bath, by a deſperate Stratagem of the Dragooners creeping over the Bridge on their Bellies, and ſeizing the ſmall End of the Guard's Muſkets, frighted them into taking Quarter, and then firing the Gate, put the Town into ſuch a Conſternation, that they yielded upon Articles to leave the common Soldiers Priſoners, and to ſuffer the Officers to march away to what Gariſon they pleas'd. The Wall of the City, and the Works, were very ſtrong and tenable; and Prince Rupert was advanced with a Party of fifteen hundred Horſe and Foot, from Briſtol, within four Miles, to relieve it: but coming too late, Retreated.

After this, Fairfax advanced to Sherborn-Caſtle, a ſtrong Gariſon, Commanded by Sir Lewis Dives; and laying cloſe Siege to it Auguſt the 2d, entred a Breach Auguſt the 15th, and giving Quarter for Life only, took very great Plunder, and above four hundred Priſoners. The next Reſolution was, to Inveſt Briſtol, where Prince Rupert then was with a conſiderable Gariſon. This Siege was began Friday Auguſt the 22d by Land, and Vice-Admiral Moulton riding about Milford-haven, ſent Ships into King's-Road to block it up by Sea. So that after a brave Defence, the Prince offer'd to Surrender upon Honourable Articles on the 8th of September. But Fairfax inſiſting upon his own Propoſitions, Stormed the City in ſeveral Places September the 10th, and obliged the Prince to a Surrendry upon hard Conditions September the 11th. For which being tax'd by ſome who knew not to what Extremities he was reduc'd; his Highneſs drew up a Narrative of the State and Condition of the City and Gariſon of Briſtol when his Highneſs Prince Rupert came thither, and of the Actions during the Siege, and of the Treaties and Rendition thereof: which he laid before the King and his Council of War at Newark October the 18th, who unanimouſly declared, That he had not been guilty of the leaſt want of Courage or Fidelity in that Action.

Briſtol Surrendered.

The King recruits his Army.

We return to the King; who, after the fatal Battle of Naſeby, had been driven into Wales to recruit his Army: from whence, about the Beginning of Auguſt, he advanced with a Body of three thouſand Horſe toward Lichfield. On Auguſt the 15th he came to Welbeck-Houſe, and was there reinforced with Horſe and Dragoons from Newark; with which he was moving Northward, with a Deſign (as generally believ'd) to join with Montroſs, who was by this time Maſter of the Field in Scotland. But to prevent that Motion, Major-General Poyntz was poſted with above two thouſand Horſe about Doncaſter and Rotherham; with whom Colonel Roſſiter and the Staffordſhire and Derbyſhire Horſe were haſtning to join. So that his Majeſty finding his Paſſage that way intercepted, turn'd back Southwards, and fell into the Aſſociated Counties; and having lain one Night at Belvoir-Caſtle, made his next Head-Quarters at Stamford, and took Huntingdon after ſome Oppoſition Auguſt the 24th, thence to Woburn and Dunſtable, and thence to Oxford Aug. the 28th, the Day after the Death of the Lord Keeper Littleton.

Marches to Oxford.

His Majeſty taking out what Forces could be ſpared Auguſt 31. march'd from Oxford to Cambden, with Deſign, as the Parliament ſuppos'd, to raiſe the Siege of Hereford, then inveſted by General Leven and the Scots; or Briſtol, then beleagur'd by General Fairfax. The Scots, upon the King's Advance, raiſed their Siege before Hereford, and began to march homewards: and ſoon after his Majeſty received the unwelcome News of the Loſs of Briſtol; upon which he viſited Hereford, Worceſter, and Ludlow, and advanced to relieve Cheſter. Major-General Poyntz (who with Colonel Roſſiter was commanded by the Parliament to attend the King in his Motions from Oxford) followed the King with great Expedition, and on Ronton-Heath, within two Miles of Cheſter, began to engage his Majeſty's Forces, who receiv'd them ſo bravely, that they routed the Major, and were in purſuit of him; till Colonel Jones and Adjutant Lowthian having drawn out five hundred Horſe and three hundred Foot from their Leaguer before Cheſter, came to his Aſſiſtance, and charging the King's Troops on the other ſide, gave Poyntz's Men an opportunity to rally, whereby the King's Forces being obliged to fight in Front and Rear, were defeated, near ſix hundred ſlain upon the Place, among whom Bertue Stuart Earl of Lichfield, and many Officers and Perſons of Quality, and above a thouſand Soldiers taken, his Majeſty not without difficulty retiring with the Remainder into Wales; where he once more recruited, and brought back an Army of about three thouſand fighting Men Octob. 2. to Lichfield, next Day to Melburn, and on the 4th to Newark: From whence Oct. 12. he march'd to Welbeck, and drew out twelve hundred Horſe commanded by Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke Langdale, with Orders to march into Scotland and join Montroſs. They ſpeedily advanced to Doncaſter, took there many Parliament Soldiers, and beat up their Quarters in ſeveral other Towns; ſo proceeded to Sherborn, where they routed Colonel Wren's Regiment of Horſe, and took almoſt a thouſand Foot Priſoners. But Colonel Copley, with a Party of about 1300, came up to them; upon whoſe Approach, the Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke drew out to meet them, and both ſides charged with extraordinary Gallantry, but Copley prevail'd, and recovered all the Foot and Arms, and took about 300 Priſoners, with the Lord Digby's Coach, and his Letters and Papers, which with little Honour were Printed by Order of the two Houſes. After this Misfortune, they ſtill attempted to find a way into Scotland, and got very near the Borders, when Sir John Brown, Governour of Carliſle, with a Party met them about Carliſle-Sands, and broke their whole Body, and took many Priſoners, and above 200 Horſe and Arms. After this ſecond Defeat, they ſtill preſs'd on toward Dumfreeze; but finding their Paſſage intercepted by Leſley, they were glad to find Veſſels to tranſport themſelves into the Iſle of Man, and thence to Ireland.

1645. 21 Car. I. Unfortunate at Ronton-Heath.

Thence toward Hereford.

The King's Intereſt was now ſinking into Ruin and Deſpair in all Parts: After the Taking of Briſtol nothing could ſtand before the Army of Fairfax. The Caſtle of Devizes, commanded by Sir Charles Lloyd, was taken by Cromwel Septemb. 23. and Laicock-Houſe the ſame Day by Colonel Pickering, and Berkley-Caſtle by Colonel Rainsborough September 26. and Wincheſter by Cromwel October 5. and Baſing-Houſe October 15. Again Tiverton-Caſtle October 19. by General Fairfax, who after an Attempt upon Exeter, help'd to raiſe the Siege of Plimouth, and took Dartmouth by Storm January 18. and then cloſely block'd up Exeter, leaving the Command of that Siege to Sir Hardreſs Waller, while he himſelf, with the reſt of his Army, march'd off to watch the Motions of the Lord Hopton, who being Commander in chief under the Prince, had march'd to Torrington with near four thouſand Horſe and three thouſand Foot, expecting there ſome more Recruits from Barnſtaple. Here Fairfax engaged them, and gave them an abſolute Defeat; and then purſued the only Remains of a Royal Army into Cornwal, where the Prince had his own Regiment and other Corniſh Troops, that made a Body of about five thouſand Horſe and one thouſand Foot: but, not able to make a Stand againſt the Multitudes that Fairfax was pouring on upon him, he embark'd with ſeveral Lords and Gentlemen, and found Refuge in the Iſle of Scilly. The Royal Army was left under Command of the Lord Hopton, who was ſo purſu'd and preſs'd

The K.'s Affairs in a deſperate Condition.

1645. 21 Car. I. preſs'd upon by Fairfax, that he was glad to enter in a Treaty, and accept of Articles for disbanding all his Forces March 14.

The Royal Cauſe was equally ſuffering and expiring in all other parts of England. The City of Hereford that had bore and eſcaped a Siege from the Scots, was ſurpriz'd by a Stratagem under the Conduct of Colonel Morgan and Colonel Birch Decemb. 8. Beeſton Caſtle had been ſurrender'd Novemb. 16. and the ſtrong City of Cheſter delivered up by the Lord Byron into the Parliament's Hands Feb. 3. Newark (to which the King had retreated at the beginning of October) was commanded by the Parliament to be ſoon after beſieg'd by the Scots Army; and the King was forced to leave the Town by Night, and to get privately to Oxford, where he had leiſure to reflect how fatal the whole Year had been to him: and it concluded with one blow that ſeemed to cut off all hopes of Recovery; this was the Defeat of the Lord Aſtley, who had the only Forces in the Field for the King, about 3000 the greater part Horſe, with whom he was advancing from Worceſter toward Oxford to join with his Majeſty for helping to make up an Army for the next Campaign; on theſe Troops the poor Royaliſts in Oxford built all their Hopes, and therefore ſent out a good Party to meet them and conduct them; but all Intelligence and Paſſages were ſo intercepted by the Enemy, that this Party from Oxford could hear nothing of my Lord Aſtley's Motions, till they heard he was utterly defeated Mar. 22. near Stow in Glouceſterſhire, by Colonel Morgan, Sir William Brereton, Colonel Birch, &c. very few eſcap'd towards Faringdon and Oxford, and many of them taken in the way by Colonel Fleetwood. The Lord Aſtley himſelf being taken Priſoner, was ſo ſenſible of the Conſequences of this Defeat, that he told one of Brereton's Officers, You have now done your Work, and may go to Play, unleſs you will fall out among your ſelves.

The King driven back to Oxford.

Lord Aſtley defeated.

In the midſt of theſe Victories, the Commons at Weſtminſter amuſed the World with Peace, and Auguſt 7. took into conſideration the ſending of Propoſitions to the King, but took care to preclude all Accommodation by theſe two Votes. 1. That in regard they had met with ſo many Deluſions in the way of Treaty they would henceforth admit of no Treaty nor Debate by Commiſſioners. 2. That ſuch Propoſitions as ſhall be ſent ſhall be drawn up into Bills, that ſo the Royal Aſſent being deſired and had thereunto, they may become Acts of Parliament. Which in effect was to hold no Correſpondence, and to give no Terms but what ſhould be abſolutely impoſed upon a vanquiſh'd Prince. However the King ſent a Meſſage to both Houſes December 5. to ſhew The conſtant Application of his earneſt Endeavours to find ſome Expedient for the ſpeedy ending of theſe unhappy Diſtractions; and for that purpoſe deſires a ſafe Conduct for the Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Southampton, John Aſhburnham and Jeffry Palmer, Eſquires, with ſuch Propoſitions as his Majeſty is confident will be the Foundation of a happy and well-grounded Peace. His Majeſty ſent another Meſſage in purſuance of the former Decemb. 15. and again a third Meſſage with Propoſitions for committing the Militia into other Hands, and for having a perſonal Treaty with the two Houſes at Weſtminſter. At laſt the Lords and Commons ſent Anſwer Decemb. 25. to the two firſt Meſſages, denying ſafe Conduct and Treaty, and ſaying, They had now under their Conſideration Propoſitions and Bills for the ſettling of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace, to be preſented with all ſpeed to his Majeſty. Many other Meſſages, Anſwers and Replies, paſſed between the King and the two Houſes, to no effect but to ſhew the inſolence of prevailing Power. In the King's laſt Meſſage of this Year March 23. his Majeſty propoſed, that if he may have the Faith of both Houſes of Parliament for the Preſervation of his Honour, Perſon and Eſtate; and that Liberty be given to his Adherents to go home and live quietly, enjoying their Eſtates without Oaths impoſed upon them, he will immediately diſband all his Forces and diſmantle all his Gariſons, and return to his two Houſes of Parliament, and paſs an Act of Oblivion, and will farther do whatever they will adviſe him for the Good and Peace of this Kingdom. But theſe offers of the utmoſt Condeſcenſion, ſerved only to animate the prevailing Party in Parliament, who now look'd upon the King as their Priſoner, tho' in his own Gariſon at Oxford.

Parliament amuſe the Nation with Peace.

The King alone in earneſt for it.

As to the Confuſions in Religion, the Aſſembly of Divines on March 27. came with a farther Addreſs to the Houſe of Commons, touching the Non-Admiſſion of vicious and ignorant Perſons to the Sacrament. This occaſion'd ſeveral Debates in the Houſe of Commons, who order'd April 1. That the Aſſembly ſhould ſet down in Particular, what meaſure of Underſtanding Perſons ought to have of the Trinity, and other Points debated, before they be admitted to the Sacrament. In theſe Debates Mr. Selden and Mr. Whitlock in ſet Speeches deliver'd their Opinion againſt all Power of Excommunication and Suſpenſion from the Sacrament; the firſt beginning with this Aſſertion, That for four thouſand Years there was no ſign of any Law to ſuſpend Perſons from Religious Exerciſes; and concluding thus: It appears Excommunication is but Humane Invention that was taken from the Heathen.

Debates in the Aſſembly of Divines.

April 7. the aged excellent Biſhop Morton was brought before the Commons, for Chriſtning a Child in the old way, and ſigning it with the Sign of the Croſs; and refuſing to deliver up his Seal of the County Palatine of Durham, he was committed to the Tower.

Bp. Morton Impriſoned.

April 26. an Ordinance paſſed, that no Perſon be admitted to Preach, who is not ordained a Miniſter, either in this or ſome other Reformed Church, except ſuch as intending the Miniſtry ſhall be allowed for the Trial of their Gifts, by thoſe who ſhall be appointed by both Houſes of Parliament. The great Buſineſs of the Aſſembly was an Eccleſiaſtical Union with their Brethren in Scotland; and therefore May 6. a Preamble to the Proceedings in Church-Affairs to be ſent into Scotland, was preſented by the Aſſembly to the Commons, and aſſented to; and it was farther Order'd, That all the Proceedings of the Parliament and Aſſembly, in the Buſineſs of the Church, ſhould be drawn up and ſent into Scotland. We hear no more of the Aſſembly till July 14. when they preſented to the Commons a Book which they had examined and found to be full of Blaſphemies and Hereſies, and though the Author was dead, they deſire the Houſe to put ſome publick Example of Juſtice upon the Book. The Houſe referred it to the Committee of Examinations to find out the Printer, and order'd that all the Books ſhould be brought in by the Bookſellers, and burnt by the Hangman, and gave Thanks to the Aſſembly for their care in this Buſineſs, or rather for their ſordid Submiſſion of Heretical Books to the better Judgment of the Lay Commons.

Cenſuring of Books.

Auguſt 1. ſome Divines of the Aſſembly preſented a Petition to the Commons in the Name of the Aſſembly, deſiring ſpeedy courſe might be taken to keep from the Sacrament Ignorant, Scandalous and Profane People. The Speaker in the Name of the Houſe gave anſwer, That the Houſe was in Debate of the ſame Buſineſs long before their coming, and that they would expedite it with as much conveniency as could be. It was debated by the Commons Aug. 5. whether Chapels of Eaſe and thoſe in private Houſes ſhould not be exempted from the Church in the Presbyterial way, upon occaſion of the Ordinance ſent up to the Lords for ſettling the Form of Presbytery. Aug. 8. the Aſſembly ſent another Petition to the Commons, inſiſting upon their Claim of Jure Divino Power to ſuſpend from the Sacrament all ſuch as they ſhould judge to be Scandalous or Ignorant. And a new Petition Auguſt 11. for puniſhing ſuch as derogated from the Directory, or uſed the Common-Prayer Book, which by Aug. 23. procured a new Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for the "More effectual putting in execution "the Directory for publick Worſhip, and for bring-"ing in all Common-Prayer Books to the Commit-"tees Ordinance for the Directory.

1645. 21 Car. I. King's Proclamation for the Liturgy.

" tees of the reſpective Counties, to be diſpoſed of " as the Parliament ſhall direct. His Majeſty at Oxford by Proclamation dated Novemb. 13. required and commanded the " Common-Prayer to be kept " and uſed in all Churches and Chapels according to " the Statute of 1 Q. Eliz. and that the Directory " be in no ſort admitted, received or uſed, being " introduc'd by colour of Ordinance of Parliament, " made without and againſt our Conſent, and a- " gainſt an expreſs Act of Parliament ſtill in force. But, alas, the Proclamation was rather Proteſting for a Right than Aſſerting of it. The Force of the King's Orders could go no farther than that of his Arms, confined to Oxford, and a very few other ſmall Gariſons.

Aug. 20. it was order'd by the Commons, that no Foreign Impreſſion of Engliſh Bibles ſhould be vended here without peruſal and allowance of the Aſſembly. And upon occaſion of the Penalties that were to attend a ſuſpenſion from the Sacrament, it was voted Sept. 6. That the Presbytery ſhould not meddle with any thing of Meum and Tuum, till it were determined by the Civil Magiſtrate. And they began now to be ſo jealous of a Presbyterian Diſcipline, that the Houſe being informed of an intended Petition for eſtabliſhing Presbytery, they voted it Scandalous even before they received it. And October 15. they reſolved, That the Presbytery ſhould not ſuſpend from the Sacrament at their own Diſcretion, but for ſuch Offences only as ſhould be particularly expreſſed in an Ordinance made for that purpoſe; which Ordinance was paſſed by the two Houſes October 20. giving power to the ſeveral Elderſhips to ſuſpend from the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper all Ignorant and Scandalous Perſons, according to the Rules and Directions hereafter following, and not otherwiſe. So that the Presbyterians who had often objected to the Epiſcopal Clergy their want of Power to ſuſpend unworthy Communicants, were now themſelves under greater reſtraint; for more Authority was left by the Rubrick of the Liturgy to every private Miniſter, than was reſerved by this Ordinance to the Claſſical Aſſemblies.

Parliament afraid of eſtabliſhing Presbytery.

Reſtrain the power of Presbyters.

Ordinance for Ordaining Miniſters.

Novemb. 8. an Ordinance long depending was paſſed for the Ordination of Miniſters, declaring, That the Word Presbyter and the Word Biſhop in Scripture ſignifie one and the ſame Function, and therefore Presbyters being lawfully thereunto appointed and authorized may ordain other Presbyters, according to the Rules of Examination and Faſting and Praying and Impoſition of Hands in this Ordinance preſcribed. Provided that this Ordinance ſhall ſtand in force for twelve Months and no longer: And indeed one twelve Months ſpace was the utmoſt Reign of Presbytery and all the Parts of it.

Parliament aw'd by the Scots into a ſettlement of Presbytery.

The Model of this Presbyterian Government was not yet eſtabliſh'd, nor were the Lords or Commons much Friends to it, though to hold fair with the Scots, and to humour the Aſſembly, they now had it under conſideration, and framed it into an Ordinance before the end of the Year. But in the mean time they often betray'd their Fears and Jealouſies of it. For when Novemb. 19. the Common-Council of London petition'd the Houſe of Commons, that the Government of the Church might be ſpeedily ſettled and obſerved, and greater Power might be given to the Miniſters and Elders than was eſtabliſhed by the Parliament, according to the Word of God. The Houſe order'd a ſharp Anſwer to be penn'd to this effect, that the Houſe had taken much pains in debating and ſettling of Church Government, and they conceived the City and Common-Council were informed falſely of their Proceedings, or elſe they would not have precipitated the Judgement of the Parliament. And when another Petition of the ſame import was delivered from divers Miniſters of London, they referred it to a Committee to find out the Deſign of the Petition, and who were the advancers thereof; and then ſent out two of their Members to the Petitioners to tell them, They need not attend for any Anſwer, but ſhould go home and look to the Charges of their ſeveral Congregations.

However to pleaſe the Aſſembly, the Commons order'd Decemb. 4. that one hundred Pounds ſhould be given to the Prolocutor Dr. Twiſs for a Gratuity, and that the Members ſhould have all due Encouragement to meet daily, and proceed upon the Catechiſm. But the Faction within the Aſſembly it ſelf between the Presbyterians and Independents, was now growing into ſuch a ferment, that Decemb. 11. the Preſbyterian Divines came to the Houſe of Commons to inform them, that a printed Paper in the nature of a Remonſtrance was publiſh'd by the diſſenting Brethren of their Aſſembly, which they conceiv'd to be ſcandalous to them, and therefore deſired they might make an Anſwer to it. The Houſe named a Committee to peruſe the Remonſtrance, and conſider of the ſcandal of it, and to enquire by what Authority it was publiſh'd. Decemb. 31. the Commons order'd Mr. Strong one of the Preachers that Day before them, to be added to the Aſſembly, and gave one hundred pounds to Mr. Reynolds; and on Feb. 16. they appointed a Day to conſider of the Petition of the Aſſembly for ſettling the Presbyterian Government; wherein they were quicken'd with a Letter from the Parliament of Scotland, read Feb. 26. deſiring the ſpeedy ſettling of Religion, according to the Judgment and Requeſt of the Aſſembly of Divines. Upon which the Commons proceeded in this Church Buſineſs de die in diem, and ſent up to the Lords an Ordinance March 5. which was paſſed March 14. wherein they declare, that by the merciful Aſſiſtance of God having removed the Book of Common-Prayer, and eſtabliſhed the Directory; and having aboliſhed the Prelatical Hierarchy, and inſtead thereof laid the Foundation of a Presbyterial Government; they come now to ſupply the Defects of ſome former Ordinances and Directions of Parliament; and do ordain, 1. That there be a choice made of Elders throughout the Kingdom of England, according to the Directions of Aug. 19. 2. That notice of ſuch Election be given by the Miniſter in the publick Aſſembly. 3. That ſuch Elections be made by the major part of the Congregation, being ſuch as have taken the Covenant. 4. That there ſhall be Triers of Elections to hear and determine all Controverſies thence ariſing. And ſo on to three and twenty ſeveral Articles of Proviſion, that after all the Pretenſions and Title of Presbytery, made it rather a Scheme of Eraſtian Government, at the pleaſure of the Magiſtrate, and under the adminiſtration of the People.

1645. 21 Car. I. Parliament reward the Aſſembly.

Great quarrel between the Preſbyterian and Independant Divines.

Presbytery at laſt ſettled or rather an Eraſtian Form.

One little Attempt was made by the Aſſembly for the promoting of Letters and the ſtudy of the Scriptures. They ſent a Petition by ſome of their Brethren to the Commons March 13. that Mr. Patrick Young might be encouraged in the printing of the Greek Teſtament, much expected and deſired by the Learned, eſpecially beyond the Seas: And ſeemed to prevail for having an Ordinance read that Day, " for " Printing and Publiſhing the old Teſtament of the " Septuagint Tranſlation, wherein Mr. Young had " formerly taken pains, having in his hands as Li- " brary-Keeper of S. James's an Original Tecla Bible " of that Tranſlation. But though under the proſpect of this Encouragement Mr. Young made ſome progreſs in theſe Works, yet Religion and Learning were ſo little countenanc'd by the Parliament and Aſſembly, that they never more called for the performance of them, and they were left unfiniſh'd by Mr. Young at his death in 1652.

But one good Motion and that defeated.

The Conſcience and Honour of the King in charging the Prince to be conſtant in his Religion, does appear in ſeveral Letters written by his Majeſty under his greateſt Misfortunes and Diſtreſſes. In a Letter to the Lord Colepepper about the beginning of October, the King wrote thus: —— But that which is of more neceſſity, indeed abſolute, is, that with the beſt conveniency, the moſt ſecrecy and greateſt expedition, Prince Charles be tranſported into France; where his Mother is to have the ſole care of him in all things but one, which is his Religion, and that muſt ſtill be under the care

1645. 21 Car. I. care of the Biſhop of Salisbury: and this I undertake his Mother ſhall ſubmit unto. Soon after, the King, being ſenſible of the Temptations and Dangers in the Court of France, by direct Letters to the Prince, commanded him to Tranſport himſelf into Denmark, as a Proteſtant Kingdom. After which, the Prince being in Jerſey, the King thought him to be in France; and being much afraid he might be tamper'd with to change his Religion, he ſent him this Letter, dated at Oxford Mar. 22. 1645.

Charles,

" HOping that this will find you ſafe with your " Mother, I think fit to write this ſhort, but " neceſſary, Letter to you. Then know, that your " being where you are, ſafe from the Power of Re- " bels, is under God, either my greateſt Security, " or my certain Ruin. For your Conſtancy to Re- " ligion, Obedience to me, and to the Rules of Ho- " nour, will make theſe inſolent Men begin to " hearken to Reaſon, when they ſhall ſee their In- " juſtice not like to be crown'd with Quiet: But " if you depart from thoſe Grounds for which I " have all this time fought, then your leaving this " Kingdom will be (with too much probability) " called ſufficient Proof for many of the Slanders " heretofore laid upon me. Whererefore once again " I command you, upon my Bleſſing, to be conſtant " to your Religion, neither hearkning to Romiſh " Superſtitions, nor the ſeditious and ſchiſmatical " Doctrines of the Presbyterians and Independents; " for know, that a perſecuted Church is not there- " by leſs Pure tho' leſs Fortunate.

1646. The King's Intereſt was now reduc'd to ſo low an ebb, that it was impoſſible for him to take the Field. The two Houſes therefore had no apprehenſion of Danger, but from his coming in Perſon to Weſtminſter, and preſſing them to Peace and Reconciliation; which they had the greater reaſon to expect, becauſe he had ſent them repeated Offers of a perſonal Treaty with them. But not daring to truſt themſelves and the People with the Sight of the King, they paſs'd ſeveral Votes Mar. 31. to this effect: " That in caſe the K. ſhould, contrary to the Advice " of both Houſes of Parliament, come or attempt " to come within the Lines of Communication, that " then the Committee of the Militia and Guards a- " bout the City ſhould conduct him to St. James's, " and prevent all Reſort to him, and Impriſon all " that ſhould preſume to come with him. So as the King found he could not go to the Parliament without being their Priſoner, nor could he long continue ſafe in his Gariſon at Oxford, for his ſtrong Caſtle of Donnington was Surrendred to the Parliament Forces April 1. and Woodſtock was by neceſſity given up Apr. 26. and Exeter, Beſieg'd by the Army of Fairfax, was glad to yield upon Articles Apr. 9. and Barnſtaple Apr. 12. And Fairfax, fluſh'd with irreſiſtible Succeſs, was now marching to Beſiege Oxford. Under theſe Extremities his Majeſty reſolv'd to throw himſelf into the Hands of the Scots Army that lay before Newark, communicating his Deſign to the Marquis of Ormond in a Letter dated Apr. 13. in theſe Words; Having lately received very good Security that We, and all that do or ſhall adhere to us, ſhall be ſafe in our Perſons, Honours, and Conſciences, in the Scotiſh Army; and that they ſhall really and effectually join with us, and ſhall employ their Armies and Forces to aſſiſt us to the procuring of an happy and well grounded Peace, for the Good of us and our Kingdoms, in the Recovery of our juſt Right; we have reſolved to put Ourſelves to the hazard of paſſing into the Scots Army now lying before Newark. The King had greater reaſon to truſt to this Security that he ſays was given to him; becauſe the Animoſities between the Engliſh Parliament and the Scots Commiſſioners and Army were very high. The Scots had in a manner proteſted againſt the Propoſitions which the two Houſes were ſending to the King, and had as it were appeal'd to the People, by Printing their Papers. At which the Houſes were ſo incenſed, that they concurr'd in a joint Vote, That the Matter contained in the ſaid Papers was falſe and ſcandalous againſt the Parliament of England; That they ſhould be burnt by the common Hangman; That a Declaration ſhould be drawn up to hold forth to the whole World the Untruths therein contained, and the Innocency and Integrity of the Parliament; and that the Author or Publiſher was an Incendiary between the two Kingdoms. Which harſh Proceeding was ſuch a Breach of the Union between the two Covenanted Nations, that, like Herod and Pilate, nothing but trading for the Perſon of their Maſter could have made them Friends.

1646. 22 Car. I.

Upon the Approach of Fairfax toward Newberry, his Majeſty, on Monday Apr. 27. about Midnight left Oxford in Diſguiſe, in Company only of Dr. Hudſon a Divine, and Mr. John Aſhburnham, riding as a Servant to the latter with a Cloak-bag behind him. They went to Henley, Brentford, and Harrow on the Hill, thence toward St. Albans, making their way to Harborough in Leiceſterſhire, where they expected Monſieur Montrill the French Agent; who failing in his Appointment, his Majeſty went to Stamford, thence to Downham in Norfolk, where he lay from Thurſday Apr. 30. to Monday May 4. then to Southam, where meeting with the French Agent, he ſent to General Leven, and was conducted by a Troop of Horſe to Lieutenant-General David Leſley's Quarters on Tueſday May 5. A Deſign manag'd with ſo much Secrecy, that thoſe at Oxford, though they ſoon knew his Majeſty was gone, could not gueſs whither he intended his Courſe; but it was generally reported he was gone for London. This ſo alarm'd the two Houſes, that they publiſhed an Order, May 4. that what Perſon ſoever ſhould harbour and conceal, or know of the harbouring or concealing of the King's Perſon, and ſhould not immediately reveal it to the Speakers of both Houſes, ſhould be proceeded againſt as a Traitor to the Commonwealth, forfeit his whole Eſtate, and die without Mercy.

The King leaves Oxford.

The Parl. afraid.

On the 6th of May the two Houſes received Intelligence from Colonel Poyntz and their Commiſſioners before Newark, that the King was in the Scots Army. Upon which the Commons voted, That the Commiſſioners and General of the Scots Army be deſired, that his Majeſty's Perſon be diſpoſed of as both Houſes ſhall deſire and direct; and that his Majeſty be thence diſpoſed of and ſent to Warwick Caſtle.

The Parl. afraid of the K.'s coming to them.

General Leven immediately prevail'd with the King to ſend Order to the Lord Bellaſis Governour of Newark to ſurrender it to the Commiſſioners of the Parliament; which was done by Articles ſigned the 6th of May. And the ſame Day the Scotch General ſent Letters to the Committee of both Kingdoms at Weſtminſter to inform them of the ſtrange Providence with which they are now ſurprized, the King coming into their Army yeſterday in ſo private a way, that after they had made ſearch for him, they could not find him out in ſundry Houſes: a matter of much Aſtoniſhment to them, ſeeing they did not expect he would have come in any Place under their Power.

Hypocriſy of the Scots.

The King propoſes to throw himſelf upon the Scots Army.

Had ſome reaſon to truſt them

May 7. the Scots Army, with their unexpected Prize, took their March Northward, his Majeſty being with Lieutenant-General Leſley in the Van of them; and on May 13. came to Newcaſtle, where his Majeſty took up his Reſidence in the General's Quarters. On May 25. the Committee of Eſtates with the Scots Army ſent the two Houſes a Paper of Reaſons for not delivering up Colonel Aſhburnham and Dr. Hudſon the King's Guides. His Majeſty on May 18. ſent a Meſſage to the two Houſes, offering all poſſible Conceſſions, and deſiring to return to his Parliament for his and their mutual Comfort; and next Day a Letter to the City of London, expreſſing his Integrity and full Reſolution to comply with his Parliaments in every thing for ſettling Truth and Peace, that his Return to that his ancient City may be to the Satisfaction of his Parliament, the good liking of his Citizens, and all his good People, and to his own greater Joy and

Com-

1646. 22 Car. I. Comfort. And again June 10. another Meſſage to both Houſes, propoſing that He may come to London with Safety, Freedom, and Honour, where he reſolves to comply with his Houſes of Parliament in every thing which may be moſt for the Good of his Subjects. But this unfortunate Prince was now in ſuch a helpleſs ſtate, that neither would the Scots Army deliver him, nor the Engliſh Parliament receive him, but for a Victim to their mutual Deſigns of Avarice and Empire.

His unhappy Condition

General Fairfax came a ſecond time before Oxford with his victorious Army May 1. and prepared for the cloſe Siege of it, and ſent to Sir Thomas Glenham the Governour, to demand the Surrendry of it; who entred on a Treaty May 18. and receiving his Majeſty's Warrant dated at Newcaſtle June 10. did Surrender upon honourable Articles June 29. Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice taking Ship at Dover and going over into France, where the Prince of Wales was alſo retired from the Iſle of Jerſey, the Duke of York being brought up to St. James's.

Oxford Surrendred.

The few remaining Gariſons for the King made the like Terms of Surrendry; Worceſter on July 19. Wallingford July 22. Pendennis Caſtle Aug. 16. and Ragland Caſtle Aug. 17. So that there was not now one Gariſon in England or Wales remaining, but what was reduced to the Power of the two Houſes, ſave only thoſe in the North, which remained in the Hands of the Scots.

And all other Gariſons.

And therefore the two Houſes at Weſtminſter thought their only Buſineſs was now to get Poſſeſſion of the King's Perſon, and to get a fair Riddance of the Scots Army. In order to this, they enter'd into many Conferences with the Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland, and agreed with them upon what they called Propoſitions for Peace June 27. Gen. Leven and his Officers the ſame Day preſenting a mock Petition to the King, Praying his Majeſty to compaſſionate the diſtreſſed Condition of his Kingdoms groaning under the heavy Preſſures of manifold Calamities occaſioned by the Continuance of this unnatural War; and to comply with the Counſels of his Parliaments. The King returned Anſwer, that He came into the Scotiſh Army with full intent of ſettling a happy Peace, and to ſatisfy the juſt Deſires of his good Subjects, and to comply with his Parliaments in all things which ſhall be for the Good of Religion, and the Happineſs of his People.

Engliſh Parl. weary of the Scots Army.

Deſirous of the K.'s Perſon.

The Commons were more and more afraid of the good Meaning of the Scots, and therefore boldly voted July 6. that this Kingdom hath no farther need of the Scotch Army, and that the Kingdom is unable to pay them longer; and that therefore a Letter ſhould be ſent from both Houſes to the Commiſſioners of Scotland, to deſire them to withdraw their Army into Scotland.

Votes againſt the Scots.

On Monday July 13. the Propoſitions for Peace were ſent to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle by the E. of Pembroke, the E. of Suffolk, Peers, and Sir Walter Erle, Sir John Hippeſley, Kts, Rob. Goodwin, Luke Robinſon Eſqs. Commoners; Mr. Marſhal attending them as Chaplain. Theſe Propoſitions were, 1. By Act of Parliament to make null all Oaths, Declarations, and Proclamations, againſt both or either of the Houſes of Parliament, who have been neceſſitated to undertake a War in their juſt and lawful Defence. 2. That his Majeſty ſwear and ſign the late Solemn League and Covenant. 3. That a Bill be paſſed for the utter aboliſhing of Epiſcopacy. 4. That the Ordinances for the Aſſembly of Divines be confirmed. 5. That Reformation of Religion be ſettled according to the Covenant. 6. That both Kingdoms be brought to Uniformity of Religion, according to the Covenant. 7. That an Oath be adminiſtred to all Papiſts to renounce the Doctrines of Supremacy, Tranſubſtantiation, &c. 8. An Act for the Education of Children of Papiſts in the Proteſtant Religion. 9. An Act for the true Levy of all Penalties againſt Papiſts. 10. An Act to prevent ſaying Maſs in the Court. —— That ſuch Perſons (to a very great number) ſhall expect no Pardon: That the King ſhould part with the Power of the Militia, and the Cuſtody of the Tower of London: And, in ſhort, an entire Change of the ancient Government in Church and State.

Propoſitions of Peace.

Hard and unreaſonable.

1646. 22 Car. I.

The Commiſſioners brought theſe Propoſitions to Newcaſtle on Thurſday July 23. and on the Day after were admitted to his Majeſty's Preſence, and kiſs'd his Hand. The King firſt demanded, If they had any power to Treat? To which they anſwering No; his Majeſty replied, Then ſaving the Honour of the Buſineſs, an honeſt Trumpeter might have done as much. Then Mr. Goodwin read the Propoſitions, to which his Majeſty hearkned attentively, and at the end of Reading ſaid, Gentlemen, I hope you do not expect a very ſpeedy Anſwer, becauſe the Buſineſs is of high Concernment. The Earl of Pembroke anſwer'd, that they were limited not to ſtay above ten days after their coming to that Town, and muſt then return. His Majeſty replied, that he would diſpatch them in convenient time: and ſo for the preſent diſmiſs'd them.

The Commiſſioners not impower'd to Treat.

Aug. 1. his Majeſty deliver'd his Anſwer in Writing to the Commiſſioners, directed to the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro tempore to be communicated: wherein he told them, "That the Propoſitions "tendred to him did import ſo great Alterations in "Government, both in the Church and Kingdom, "that it was difficult to return a particular and po- "ſitive Anſwer before a full Debate: to which end "his Majeſty deſireth and propoſeth to come to "London, or any of his Houſes thereabouts; where "by his perſonal Preſence he may not only raiſe a "mutual Confidence betwixt him and his People, "but alſo have theſe Doubts cleared, and theſe "Difficulties explained unto him, which he now "conceives to be deſtructive to his juſt Regal Pow- "er, if he ſhall give a full Conſent to theſe Propo- "ſitions as they now ſtand.

King's Anſwer.

This Anſwer was Reported to the Houſe of Commons Aug. 12. and the Counſels to be now taken were how to bring up the King into ſafer Cuſtody, and how to ſend the Scots into their own Country. And therefore the Day following, the Houſe of Commons, upon conſideration of a Paper delivered to the Lords by the Scotch Commiſſioners, voted, that the Sum of a hundred thouſand Pounds ſhould be provided for the Advance of the Scots Army into Scotland. And did reſolve, that this Houſe do well and thankfully approve of their good Affections and Zeal to this Kingdom, and their Offer to deliver up our Gariſons and depart the Kingdom. That their Arrears ſhall be audited, and in convenient time paid. So they began to reckon with them: The Scots demanded two Millions from the 18th of Jan. 1643. to the 18th of Septemb. 1646. The Parliament accounted for one Million four hundred thouſand Pounds already paid; but the Scots excepted to ſeveral Particulars in the Account, and offer'd to accept of a Sum in groſs for a full Diſcharge of their Arrears, to be agreed on by Commiſſioners; who concluded on four hundred thouſand Pounds; of which one Moiety to be paid before their going home, and the other within ſtated terms.

Engliſh Parl. to purchaſe,

Scots Army to ſell the King.

Price agreed upon.

The delivering up the King was a tacit Condition of this Agreement: therefore Sept. 18. the Commons took into conſideration how his Majeſty's Perſon ſhould be diſpoſed of; and voted, 1. That whatſoever Conſultation and Debate the Scots Commiſſioners ſhould have concerning his Majeſty's Perſon, it ſhould not impede the March of the Scots Armies out of this Kingdom, nor violate or trench upon the Treaties between both Nations. 2. That his Majeſty ſhall be diſpoſed of as both Houſes of the Parliament of England ſhould think fit. Upon this, the Scots Commiſſioners put in their Claim to a joint Right of diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon; and ſeveral Conferences were held upon this matter, and many long Papers paſs'd upon it: the Scots inſiſting upon a Right in his Perſon who was King of Scotland as well as of England; and the Engliſh keeping to this Aſſertion, We do affirm, that the Kingdom of Scotland hath no Right of joint Exerciſe of Intereſt in in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, in the Kingdom of England. The Parliament of England truſted to this Argument, that the Scots Army would not carry away the King to looſe their Contract of four hundred thouſand Pounds; and that they ſhould receive no part of it without delivering up their Security the King's Perſon.

By Loan from the City, upon the Credit of a Sale of Church-Lands, the ſum of two hundred thouſand Pounds was ready at Goldſmith's-Hall by Novemb. 27. and being ſoon after ſent into the North, it was very well known that the Perſon of the King was to be given for a Scotch Receipt to the Engliſh. The King ſenſible of the Price ſet upon him, ſent one more Meſſage Decemb. 20. to the Lords and Commons at Weſtminſter, and the Scots Commiſſioners at London, for a Perſonal Treaty; concluding thus, "'Tis your King who deſires to be heard, (the "which if refuſed to a Subject by a King, he would "be thought a Tyrant for it) and for that End "which all Men profeſs to deſire. Wherefore his "Majeſty conjures you, as you deſire to ſhew your "ſelves really what you profeſs, even as you are "good Chriſtians and Subjects, that you will accept this his offer, which he is confident God will "ſo bleſs, that it will be the readieſt Means by "which theſe Kingdoms may again become a Comfort to their Friends and a Terrour to their Enemies. And his Majeſty diſcovering the Intrigues carried on, gave in ſeveral Queries to the Scots Commiſſioners then attending upon him; who declined all Anſwer, till they received a Letter and Declaration from the Parliament of Scotland to the Parliament of England, expreſſing their Conſent and Reſolution to concur with them in diſpoſal of the King's Perſon.

King ſends another Meſſage in vain.

Lords and Commons differ about cuſtody of the King's Perſon.

There was ſome Diſpute between the Lords and Commons as well as between the two Nations, about the Cuſtody of the King. The Lords voted December 22. that the King may come to Newmarket, there to remain with ſuch Attendants as both Houſes ſhall appoint. But the Commons voted, that Holmby-Houſe in Northamptonſhire would be a place moſt fit for his Majeſty to abide with ſuch Attendants; to which the Lords agreed, pretending to provide, that his coming thither ſhould be with reſpect to the Safety and Preſervation of his Majeſty's Perſon, and in Preſervation and Defence of the true Religion, the Commons adding this Explication, According to the Covenant. So Commiſſioners of both Houſes were named to go down to receive the King from the Scots, and to bring him to Holmby; of the Lords the Earl of Pembroke, Earl of Denbigh and Lord Mountague; of the Commons Sir John Holland, Sir Walter Earl, Sir James Harrington, Sir John Cook, Mr. John Crew and Major-General Brown, who ſet out from London Jan. 13. and came to Newcaſtle Jan. 23. and having all kiſs'd the King's Hand, the Earl of Pembroke told his Majeſty, They were commanded by both Houſes of Parliament to attend him to Holmby. The King betray'd no ill Reſentment nor any Surprize, but only enquired of the Goodneſs of the Ways: Yet he could not but take to Heart the baſe Dealing of the Scots, and took occaſion to tell their chief Leaders Jan. 28. that he had often deſired to go into Scotland, that he came into their Army for Protection, but now perceived they were not willing he ſhould go with them; he deſir'd to know how they would diſpoſe of him, and to whom they would deliver him? After withdrawing they came back and told his Majeſty, "They had conſider'd "of his Speech, and ſince his Majeſty had refuſed "to take the Covenant and ſign the Propoſitions, "they were to deliver him to the Commiſſioners of "both Houſes of the Parliament of England, who "were come to attend him to Holmby.

The King delivered up to the Parliament.

Carried to Holmby.

On Saturday Jan. 30. (a Day of Impriſonment that within two Years became the Day of his Martyrdom) the Scots marched out of Newcaſtle, and the Parliament Commiſſioners received the King into their Charge, and conducted him to Holmby, where he arrived on Tueſday Feb. 16.

The Parliament's firſt General the Earl of Eſſex, who had choſe rather to decline their Service than to deſert it; and was in his own Judgment too deſirous of Peace to be made the prime Inſtrument of War, was reſerv'd and melancholly at the preſent poſture of Affairs, and ſo in a viſible Diſcontent departed this Life at Eſſex Houſe in the Strand Sept. 14. of which the two Houſes having notice the next Day, they both immediately adjourn'd to the morrow, and then order'd that each Houſe ſhould accompany the Corps to the Grave, and aſſiſt at the Celebration of his Funeral Rites, towards which they appointed 5000 l. to be paid to his Executors for defraying the Charges thereof; which was celebrated with extraordinary State on October 22. His Body was interr'd in ——— ——, the Funeral-Sermon preach'd by Mr. Vines; his Character better drawn by the Lord Clarendon. "The Earl of Eſſex died without being "ſenſible of Sickneſs, in a time when he might "have been able to have undone much of the Miſ"chief he had formerly wrought, to which he had "great Inclinations, and had Indignation enough "for the Indignities himſelf had received from the "ungrateful Parliament, and wonderful Apprehenſion and Deteſtation of the Ruin he ſaw likely "to befal the King and the Kingdom. And it is "very probable, conſidering the preſent temper of "the City at that time, and of the two Houſes, he "might, if he had lived, have given ſome check "to the Rage and Fury that then prevail'd. But "God would not ſuffer a Man, who out of the Pride "and Vanity of his Nature, rather than the Wickedneſs of his Heart, had been made an Inſtrument of ſo much Miſchief, to have any ſhare in "ſo glorious a Work; though his Conſtitution and "Temper might very well incline him to the Lethargick Indiſpoſition of which he died, yet it was "loudly ſaid by many of his Friends that he was "Poiſoned. Sure it is, that Cromwel and his Party "(for he was now declared Head of the Army, tho' "Fairfax continued General in Name) were wonderfully exalted with his Death, he being the only Perſon whoſe Credit and Intereſt they feared "without any eſteem of his Perſon."

Death of the Earl of Eſſex.

His Character by Lord Clarendon.

As to the diſtractions in Religion within this Year 1646. the majority of Divines in the Aſſembly were often petitioning the Commons for a full and perfect Settlement of Church Government. Which being debated in the Houſe April 21. they began more freely to aſſert the Power of Parliaments in Spiritual Matters, which they would not ſuffer to be impeached by ſuch Petitions; and therefore April 30. they ſent theſe Queſtions to the Aſſembly and deſir'd ſatisfaction in them.

In anſwer to theſe Particulars, the Houſe of Commons deſired farther of the Aſſembly of Divines, their Proofs from Scripture, and to ſet down the ſeveral Texts of Scripture in the expreſs Words of the ſame. And it is order'd, "That every parti- "cular Miniſter of the Aſſembly, that is or ſhall be "preſent, at the Debate of any of theſe Queſtions, "do upon every Reſolution which ſhall be preſen- "ted to this Houſe concerning the ſame, ſubſcribe "his reſpective Name, either with the Affirmative "or Negative, as he gives his Vote. And that thoſe "that do diſſent from the major part, ſhall ſet down "their poſitive Opinions, with the expreſs Texts of "Scripture upon which their Opinions are groun- "ded.

Presbyterian Divines were ſick of their Attendance.

Theſe were ſuch hard Queſtions, that we do not find the Aſſembly could ever reſolve them: And indeed the Presbyterian majority were ſo confounded at the oppoſition in their own Houſe from their warm diſſenting Brethren, and at the Checks and Repulſes they frequently met with from the Houſe of Commons, that they grew very weary of their attendance on them, and began to fall off and retire home privately and by degrees, without any formalities of Proroguing and Diſſolving. And the wiſeſt of them were at laſt a little ſenſible of their own fatal Errors, in breaking off a Synodical Union with their Spiritual Governours, and ſubmitting to be made an independent Body of Presbyters, to quarrel eternally among themſelves; and to be made a Property to the Lay-powers, who meant no more than to ſerve a Turn by them, and then to deſpiſe them.

Petition of of the City in favour of Presbytery.

So that Presbytery now languiſhing within its own Aſſembly, was glad to call in the aſſiſtance of the Common-People. Hence a Remonſtrance was procured from the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of London to both Houſes, deſiring a ſtrict and ſpeedy Courſe for ſuppreſſing all private and ſeparate Congregations; and that all Hereticks and Sectaries who conformed not to the publick Diſcipline may be proceeded againſt; and that none diſaffected to the Presbyterian Government be employ'd in any place of publick Truſt. The Lords gave a kind Anſwer, acknowledging the great Services and Merit of the City, and giving them Thanks for this teſtimony of their Duty and good Affections: But the Commons expreſſed great Offence, that the City ſhould thus preſcribe to the Parliament what to do; and gave a ſhort Anſwer, That they would take their Remonſtrance and Petition into conſideration within convenient time. Amidſt theſe Party Squabbles it was obſerved, that General Fairfax was much inclined to the Presbyterians, Comwel and a ſtrong Party of the deepeſt Reach for the Independents, or rather for a Religion alway to depend upon the Supreme, Civil and Military Power. And therefore by their ſubtilty a Counter-Petition was preſented from the City of London to the Houſe of Commons June 2. who now perceived they ſhould have ſtrength enough to aboliſh Presbytery as well as Epiſcopacy.

The Commons offended.

A counter Petition.

The General-Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland began to be very jealous that their Covenant would not have its due effect in England; and therefore they reſolv'd to Expoſtulate this matter with their dear Brethren at London and Weſtminſter. Accordingly they in the Name of their whole Aſſembly ſent a Letter to both Houſes of Parliament dated June 18. to complain of the ſlow progreſs of the Work of God, and of the Generation of Men who retarded the Work of Uniformity, and fomented Jealouſies betwixt the Nations, ſtudying if it were poſſible to break our Bands aſunder; deſiring them to hold faſt the Band of their Covenant as Sacred and Inviolable. They ſent at the ſame time another Letter to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of the City of London, thanking them for their late and ſeaſonable Teſtimony given to the Truth of the Goſpel, manifeſted in their humble Remonſtrance and Petition to the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, which revives the remembrance of their former Faith and Zeal, and makes them precious in the Lord's ſight. And after theſe, a third Letter to the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter dated June 27. telling them, If any here hath ſeemed to be more jealous than godly Jealouſie would allow, it can be imputed to nothing elſe but to the vehemency of ardent Affection, and impatient Deſire to have our Brethren there and us join'd nearer to Chriſt, and to one another, in all his Ordinances, and eſpecially in Presbyterian Government.—— No doubt Mountains of Oppoſitions ariſe, and Gulfs of Difficulties open up themſelves in this your way, but you have found it is God who girdeth you with Strength, and maketh your way plain and perfect before you.—— We exhort you to continue and abound, knowing that your Labours ſhall not be in vain in the Lord. But their Army being now ready to be gone, theſe Exhortations were to little other purpoſe than to ſhew their Zeal and their Miſtake.

Letter from the Kirk of Scotland.

Mr. Herle made Moderator.

July 22. Mr. Herle was voted to be Moderator of the Aſſembly, in the room of Dr. Twiſs deceaſed; and the Divines were now buſying themſelves in drawing up a large Confeſſion of Faith, and on Sept. 25. brought to the Houſe of Commons ſuch Heads of the Articles as they had already perfected; which Articles were debated by the Commons October 5. who received a Complaint October 25. of an Indictment in the County of Bucks, againſt a Miniſter for not reading the Common-Prayer according to Statute; upon which they reſolv'd, that an Ordinance ſhould be brought in to take away that Statute of Uniformity, and to diſable malignant Miniſters from Preaching October 28. Mr. Sympſon formerly ſilenced from Preaching, becauſe he differed in Judgment from the Aſſembly in their beloved Points was reſtored to his Liberty. On Novemb. 19. a Petition of the inferiour People of Kent to the Houſe of Commons, that the Miniſters may no longer receive Tyths, but be provided for ſome other way. The Houſe took it, and gave them Thanks for their good Affections. On Decemb. 3. the Aſſembly preſented to the Commons the laſt part of their Confeſſion of Faith. Which being debated Decemb. 7. the Commons order'd five hundred Copies to be printed for the Members of both Houſes; and that the Aſſembly ſhould bring in their Marginal Notes to prove every part of it by Scripture; and ſhould likewiſe prepare their Anſwer to thoſe Queries touching the Point of Jus Divinum, which they had received from this Houſe.

A Confeſſion of Faith.

Conference between the King and Mr. Henderſon.

At the King's firſt coming to Newcaſtle, Mr. Henderſon a Scotch Presbyter came as an Agent for the Kirk, and much importun'd his Majeſty to paſs the Propoſitions. His Majeſty affirmed to him, that he could not in conſcience conſent to ſeveral things therein contained; eſpecially as to the change of Church-Government from the primitive Order of Epiſcopacy; and condeſcended to have ſeveral Conferences with him, and to let ſeveral Papers paſs between them upon this Subject; which being faithfully printed do demonſtrate the King's great Abilities, and his incomparable Knowledge in theſe Controverſies; being at a time when he had few or no Books, and could not have the aſſiſtance of any Chaplain. Mr. Henderſon returned from Newcaſtle to Edinburgh with a ſerious conviction of his Majeſty's Integrity and Learning, and died about the end of Auguſt, much lamented by thoſe of his Party, who themſelves ſuſpected that his Death was owing to his diſſatisfaction in his late trial of Skill with his Majeſty. The Lord Clarendon expreſſes it thus. "The King was ſo much too hard for Mr. Hender- "ſon in the Argumentation, that the old Man him- "ſelf was ſo far convinc'd and converted, that he "had a very deep ſenſe of the Miſchief he had him- "ſelf been the Author of, or too much contributed "to, and lamented it to his neareſt Friends and "Confidents, and died of Grief and Heart-broken

Rudeneſs of a Scotch Presbyter.

It is very obſervable, that another Scotch Presbyter of much leſs Moderation and Learning, preach'd very bold ſtuff before the King in the ſame Gariſon, and after Sermon call'd for the fifty ſecond Pſalm, beginning thus:

Why doſt thou Tyrant boaſt thy ſelf,
Thy wicked Works to praiſe?

His Majeſty ſtood up, and without any Reflection on the Inſolence of the Man, with great preſence of Mind called for the fifty ſixth Pſalm, which begins;

Have Mercy Lord on me I pray,
For Men would me devour.

And the Congregation were ſo well pleaſed with the happy turn, that they wav'd the Preachers Pſalm and fell in with that which the King called for.

King deſires the attendance of his Chaplains.

When the King was firſt brought to Holmby Houſe, he ſent a Letter to the Lords and Commons, deſiring, That in regard he was not ſatisfied with the Presbyterian Government, and could not be content that thoſe Miniſters ſhould officiate to him, Dr. Sheldon and ſome other of his Chaplains, or any two of them might be permitted to come to him, by whom he might receive the proper Comforts to his Soul

Delay and Denial of it.

And hearing of no return to this Requeſt, he ſent another Letter to the Parliament at the beginning of March, to deſire that Favour of his Chaplains; and told the Commiſſioners then with him, that indeed he had not now Power to command them or any Man; but he muſt needs importune them to be inſtrumental in ſatisfying this his Reaſonable Deſire. But ſtill no Anſwer was return'd till after March 29. when it was formed into a Denial, that they cannot conſent to his Majeſty's Deſire in ſending any of his Chaplains named in his Letter; becauſe they are diſaffected to the preſent Government of the Church; but for others of his Chaplains who have taken the Covenant, if his Majeſty pleaſe they will ſend them to him.

After this Anſwer, ſays the Ld Clarendon, "His Ma- "jeſty thought it to no purpoſe to importune 'em far- "ther in that particular: but next to the having his "own Chaplains, he would have been beſt pleaſed "to have been without any. They who were ſent "by them being Men of mean Parts, and of moſt "impertinent and troubleſome Confidence. ---Crom- "wel and his Officers took upon them to Preach and "Pray publickly to their Troops, and admitted few "or no Chaplains in the Army, but ſuch as bitter- "ly inveighed againſt the Presbyterian-Government "as more Tyrannical than Epiſcopacy; and the "Common Soldiers as well as the Officers did not "only Pray and Preach among themſelves, but went "up into the Pulpits in all Churches, and preached "to the People, who quickly became inſpired with "the ſame Spirit: Women as well as Men taking "upon them to Pray and Preach, which made as "great a noiſe and confuſion in all Opinions con- "cerning Religion, as there was in the Civil Go- "vernment of the State; ſcarce any Man being "ſuffered to be called in queſtion for delivering any "Opinion in Religion, by ſpeaking or writing how "Prophane, Heretical or Blaſphemous ſoever it was, "which they ſaid was to reſtrain the Spirit. The ſame Author well obſerves, "That it was an obſer- "vation in that time, that the firſt publiſhing of "extraordinay News was from the Pulpit.

1647. The King a Priſoner at Holmby Houſe.

We left the King a Priſoner to the Parliament, and under a Guard of their Commiſſioners at Holdenby or Holmby in Northamptonſhire; a very ſtately Houſe built by the Lord Chancellor Hatton; and in K. James's Reign purchaſed by the Queen for this her ſecond Son then Duke of York, not then foreſeeing that he ſhould make it a Royal Palace and Priſon. This Houſe had been prepared for the King's reception by Mr. Clement Kinerſley of the Wardrobe, with all ſuitable Accommodation. The two Divines Mr. Marſhal and Mr. Carrel (who came along with the Commiſſioners) attended the King at Dinner and Supper, as ready and willing to crave a Bleſſing; but the King alway ſaid Grace himſelf. And upon Sundays, when thoſe Miniſters preached in the Chapel, Forenoon and Afternoon by turns, the King allowed his Servants to go if they pleas'd; but ſequeſter'd himſelf to his own private Devotions. On Week Days the King ſpent two or three Hours daily in Prayer and Reading; would after Meals play a Game at Cheſs, and walk often in the Garden; and there being no Bowling-green at Holmby, would ſometimes under ſufficient Guard ride to Harrowden and to Althrop, where good Greens were well kept. In going once to Harrowden Major Boſvile ſtanding on a Bridge diſguis'd like a labouring Man, gave his Majeſty a Packet from the Queen. The King told the Commiſſioners it was to obtain his leave for the Prince to accompany Monſieur that Campaign in the French Army. Upon which the Commiſſioners ſeemed content to diſmiſs the Perſon in diſguiſe; but he was ſent up to the Parliament and committed to Newgate. This Accident being reported to the two Houſes, they ſent down Inſtructions to have a ſtricter Eye upon his Majeſty's Perſon, and to diſcharge thoſe Servants who had waited upon him at Oxford. The Commiſſioners ſoon acquainted the King with theſe Orders, who with great Expoſtulation for the ſeverity of them, was forced to diſmiſs all his old Attendants except Mr. James Maxwel and Mr. Patrick Mawl Grooms of his Bed-Chamber, to whom the King was willing to join Mr. Thomas Herbert and Mr. Harrington.

Put into ſtricter Cuſtody.

His old Servants taken from him.

K.'s Health and Moderation.

It is worth obſervation, that in all the time of his Majeſty's Reſtraint and Solitude, he was never Sick, nor took any thing to prevent Sickneſs, which (under God) was attributed to his quiet Diſpoſition, and moderate Exerciſe and regular Diet; eating but of few Diſhes, and drinking but twice at Dinner and Supper, once of ſmall Beer and once of Wine and Water mix'd, or after Fiſh of pure Wine; ſeldom or never eating or drinking before Dinner or between Meals.

Apr. 21. Letters came from the Parliament's Commiſſioners at Holmby, acquainting the Houſe of Commons with the great reſort of People to his Majeſty, to be touched for the King's-Evil: Upon which the Houſe ordered a Declaration to be drawn up, to inform the People of the fond Superſtition of being touched by the King for the Evil; and renewed their Orders for the ſtricter Cuſtody of him. At the beginning of May, his Majeſty told the Commiſſioners about him, that he had long waited for Propoſitions to be ſent him from London, but not receiving them, he had now prepared an Anſwer to thoſe Propoſitions deliver'd at Newcaſtle, which (not being allowed a Secretary) he muſt ſcribble over himſelf. His Majeſty ſent this Anſwer in a Letter read in the Houſes May 18. wherein the King conſented to ſome of the Propoſitions in whole, to others in part; and gave his Reaſons for whatever he diſſented from. "He was willing to have the Presbyte- "rial Government ſettled for three Years; and "conſented to ratifie the Aſſembly of Divines, pro- "poſing ſome other Miniſters to be join'd with "them; the King and his Houſhold only having "liberty to uſe the Common-Prayer Book. As to "the Militia he would yield it up for ten Years, "provided it might then be reſtored to him and his "Heirs. As to the Covenant he could not be ſatisfied, "but deſired ſome of his own Divines might be ſent "to reſolve his Scruples therein. The Great Seal "he will ratifie, if put into his own diſpoſal. To "the City of London he will grant the Tower and all "that is deſired. He will conſent to the Bills a- "gainſt Popery; and will paſs a general Act of Ob- "livion and free Pardon on all ſides. For all which He ſends an Anſwer to the Propoſitions made at Newcaſtle.

Factions in the Army.

The two Houſes began now to be afraid of their own Armies, and therefore disbanded ſome Forces, and would have ſent others into Ireland. This improved into Jealouſies and Factions between the Parliament and Army. The General Fairfax was diſpoſed to comply with the Orders he received from above; but Lieutenant-General Cromwel made a ſtrong Party for Military Power, and reſolv'd to rob the Parliament of the Perſon of the King; for which Expedient he ſent out a Party of Horſe under Colonel Joyce, to bring away the King to the Army. So on Friday June 4. about Midnight, Joyce drew up his Horſe in order before Holmby Houſe, and demanded entrance. Colonel Graves and Major-General Brown who upon Alarm had doubled the Guards, ask'd him his Name and Buſineſs. He ſaid his Name was Joyce a Cornet in Colonel Whaley's Regiment, and his Buneſs was to ſpeak with the King. Being ask'd from whom, he ſaid from my ſelf, my Errand is to the King, I muſt and I will ſpeak with him. Graves and Brown bid their Soldiers within ſtand to their Arms, and be ready to fire at the Word given; but they finding them to be their Fellow-Soldiers of the ſame Army, opened the Gates, and ſhook Hands with them as old Friends. Joyce ſet his Centinels at the Chamber-Doors of the Commiſſioners; and by the Back-Stairs went himſelf directly to the King's Bed-chamber, and knocked at the Door with a Piſtol cock'd in his Hand. The four Grooms were much amaz'd at this rudeneſs, and deſired Joyce to lay aſide his Arms, and to forbear giving diſturbance, aſſuring him, that the next Morning he ſhould have his Majeſty's Anſwer to his Errand. The Cornet with Sword and Piſtol inſiſted to have the Door open'd with ſo much noiſe that it wak'd the King, who mildly ſent him out Word, that he would not riſe nor ſpeak with him till Morning; upon which the Cornet hufft and retired. The King roſe early in the Morning, and after his Devotions ſent for Joyce, who came with great confidence, and told his Majeſty he had Commands to remove him. The King deſired the Commiſſioners might be ſent for; Joyce told him the Commiſſioners had nothing to do but to return back to the Parliament. The King then ask'd for a ſight of his Inſtructions. Joyce ſaid he ſhould ſee them preſently, and ſo drawing up his Troop in the Inner-Court: Theſe, Sir, (ſaid he) are my Inſtructions. The King took a good view of them, and finding them proper Men, well mounted and armed, ſmilingly told the Cornet, his Inſtructions were in fair Characters, legible without Spelling. The Cornet then preſs'd the King to go along with him; the King ſaid, He would not ſtir unleſs the Commiſſioners might attend him. The Cornet reply'd, He was very indifferent, they might go if they would. So at the King's deſire the Keepers of his Perſon being now themſelves made Priſoners, went along with his Majeſty, and were by Joyce conducted that Night to Colonel Mountague's Houſe at Hinchingbrook, and next Night to the Houſe of Sir John Cuts at Childerſly near Cambridge. Here Fairfax, Cromwel, Ireton, Skippon, and many other Officers, came to wait upon the King and kiſs'd his Hand. The King took General Fairfax aſide and diſcourſed with him about half an Hour; he diſavow'd his Majeſty's ſeizure at Holmby, as done without his Order or Approbation.

The King at Newmarket.

From Childerſly the King was removed to his Houſe at Newmarket, and ſuffered to divert himſelf upon the Heath ſometimes in his Coach, but moſt part Riding. His Preſence-Chamber was conſtantly throng'd with People, eſpecially at Dinner and Supper; and when he withdrew their Acclamations and Prayers alway followed him. He was now to make his involuntary Progreſs according to the Motion of the Army; and ſo by ſome ſhort Stages he was brought to his Houſe at Royſton; and after a ſtay of two Days, was carried June 26. to Hatfield, a Houſe of the E. of Salisbury in Hertfordſhire, where he ſtaid till the firſt of July, then hurried to Windſor, two Days after to Caverſham; where the Prince Elector Palatine, many of the Nobility, General Fairfax, and ſeveral of the chief Officers waited on him. Hence July 15. to Maidenhead, the 20th to Woburne; away again to Latimers, hence to New-Park, ſo to Stoke, and Aug. 14. to Oatlands, a large and beautiful Palace of the Queen's upon the River Thames; and from thence in a Day or two to Hampton-Court, where the King was allowed to appear in State and Luſtre; his Nobility about him; his Chaplains in waiting, and all Servants permitted to attend in their reſpective Places; the Intercourſe free between King and Parliament, and the Army ſeeming to endeavour a right underſtanding between them. His Majeſty had the Favour to viſit his Children then at Sion Houſe, under the Government of the Earl of Northumberland, who received the King and his Followers with a very noble Treat. Here the King met the young Duke of Glouceſter and the Princeſs Elizabeth, who on their Knees begg'd a Bleſſing from their Royal Father, who heartily gave it, and was overjoy'd to ſee them ſo well in Health, and ſo honourably regarded.

Hurried from Place to Place:

Settled at Hampton-Court.

And better treated.

Viſits his Children.

We leave the King a Priſoner at large in Hampton-Court, and look back on ſome Proceedings in the Parliament and Army. The two Houſes were wiſe enough to apprehend, that their aſſumed Legiſlature would not poſſibly conſiſt with a Standing Army. And the leading Heads in the Army were as apprehenſive, that if they parted with their Arms, they ſhould have little ſhare in the Prizes they had won. Hence a mighty Inclination in the Parliament to disband the Army, for which Petitions were brought out of the Country. And on the other ſide, a fierce Reſolution in the Soldiery not to be diſmiſt without full Pay and Reward; for which, bold and tumultuous Papers were often read in the Field. The Commons order'd ſix Months Pay to the Army for their encouragement to be quietly disbanded; and May 14. reſolved that the addition of a Fortnights Pay more ſhould be given to them, and ſix Weeks Pay advance to thoſe who would go into Ireland; and paſſed an Ordinance for Indempnity of the Soldiers in whatever they had done by Virtue of the Power committed to them by the Parliament. But the Soldiers thought it better to do themſelves Juſtice; and therefore at Saffron-Walden their head Quarters on May 15. they choſe a Committe of Troopers out of every Regiment, to conſider of their Grievances and the Remedy of them; and they referred it to another Committee of General Officers, who drew up a Draught of all Complaints, and delivered it to Skippon, deſiring him to preſent it to the Parliament. This ſo allarm'd the Commons, that on May 18. they voted, that all the Forces of this Kingdom not ſubſcribing for the Service of Ireland ſhall be disbanded, excepting thoſe for the Gariſons; and that the General be deſired forthwith to repair to the Army. And on May 21. they order'd, that the Soldiers Arrears ſhould be ſpeedily Audited, and viſible Security given them upon disbanding; and that proviſion ſhould be made for the maimed Soldiers, and for the Widows and Orphans of thoſe who had died in the Parliaments Service. On Friday May 21. General Fairfax came to the head Quarters at Walden, and put the Army into ſo much Joy and Quiet, that the Commons proceeded May 25. to the Time and Manner of disbanding; ordering that his Excellencies Regiment ſhould firſt be disbanded on Tueſd. next at Chelmsford, Colonel Hewſon's Regiment to be disbanded at Biſhop's-Stratford on June 3. and ſo on; the General to iſſue out his Orders to the ſeveral Regiments to be at the Times and Places appointed, and

The Army refuſe to be disbanded,

But ſtill the Army were unſatisfied with theſe Votes, and challeng'd a better Reward for their Pains and Hazards in the Cauſe of the Parliament and City. And in a Council of War May 29. it was reſolved, that the ſaid Votes were not ſatisfactory; and the common Soldiers ſeem'd all to declare, that they would not be disbanded till their Grievances were redreſs'd. Upon which, the Commons order'd the Money ſent down for disbanding, to be recall'd: and the Committee at Derby-houſe, who ſate upon this Affair, ſent Letters to General Fairfax, to inform him, that the Parliament expected Obedience in disbanding the Army, and ſending the Train immediately to London. In Anſwer to which, the General deſir'd to be excus'd; but promis'd he would do all that was poſſible to execute the Pleaſure of the Parliament. And on June 4. at the Rendezvous at Kentford, the General went to every Regiment, and aſſured the Soldiers, that the Parliament took notice of their civil and fair Carriage, and had taken a courſe for ſatisfying their Arrears; and doubted not but they would anſwer all their other Grievances; and therefore adviſ'd them to behave themſelves with Moderation and a due Submiſſion. But next Day there was put into his hands, A humble Repreſentation of the Diſſatisfactions of the Army, in relation to the late Reſolutions for ſo ſudden disbanding; ſhewing the Particulars of their former Grievances. Wherein they did remain unſatisfied, and the Reaſons thereof. Unanimouſly agreed upon, and ſubſcribed by the Officers and Soldiers of the ſeveral Regiments at the Rendezvous near New-Market on Friday and Saturday June the 4th and 5th. Preſented to the General, to be by him humbly repreſented to the Parliament. And the ſame Day they drew up and ſubſcribed a Solemn Engagement, That without Satisfaction and Security they would not willingly disband or divide, nor ſuffer themſelves to be disbanded or divided. Nay, and the common People of Eſſex were grown ſo much fonder of the Army than they were of the Parliament, that they preſented a Petition to the General, That he would in no caſe admit of disbanding, till the juſt and legal Requeſts of the Kingdom were embraced and ſatisfied by the Parliament. And the like Petitions were ſoon after preſented by the Inhabitants of Norfolk and Suffolk. On June 7. the Commons agreed, that new Commiſſioners ſhould be ſent down to the Army, to acquaint them what the Houſes had done farther in ſatisfaction of their Grievances, and to perſuade them to a Compliance with the Orders of the Parliament. And beginning now to be in ſome fears, that the Army would be for diſſolving the Parliament, as well as the Parliament for disbanding the Army, they accepted of a good Guard from the City, and were putting themſelves into a poſture of Defence; making an Ordinance Jun. 11. for enabling the Committee of the Militia of the City of London to make Searches, and raiſe Horſes. And hearing the Army was advancing toward London, they revived the Committee of Safety, and ſent a Committee of Parliament to ſit all Night with a Committee of the City Militia; and order'd Letters to his Excellency from both Houſes, that he ſhould by no means ſuffer the Army to come within twenty five Miles of the City: and then offer'd large Gratuities and Rewards to thoſe Officers and Soldiers who ſhould come off from the Army, and ſubmit to the Parliament. The General, in the mean time, made his Head-Quarters at St. Albans, and kept the Army in tolerable Order; where June 22. he received the Votes of the two Houſes for the Army's removing forty Miles from London: to which his Excellency only anſwered, That he would hold a Council of War, and then return a poſitive Anſwer. At which Council, held June 23. the Officers all ſign'd A humble Remonſtrance from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax and the Army under his Command, expreſſing the preſent ſtate of Affairs, in relation to themſelves and the Kingdom; with their Deſires and preſent Reſolutions thereupon. Preſented to the Commiſſioners at St. Albans, to be by them humbly repreſented to the Parliament. The General remov'd his Head-Quarters from St. Albans to Barkhamſtead, and ſent word to the Houſes, that the Army would there expect the Reſult of their Debates concerning their Deſires; and accordingly either remove, or approach nearer to London. Which gave ſuch a new Alarm, that June 25. the Militia of London were deſired to ſend four full Companies for the Guard of the Houſes to morrow. On which Day other Letters came from the General, with account of the Army's nearer Advance toward London, renewing their Deſires, that the eleven Members charged by them may be ſuſpended the Houſe. Upon which the ſaid Members craved liberty to abſent from the Houſe; and a Treaty with the Army was voted to be carried on with Expedition. And to ſilence and ſoften them the more, the Commons declared June 27. that they do own this Army as their Army, and will make Proviſion for their Maintenance. But the Army ſent up their Impeachment of the eleven Members, and inſiſted for Juſtice upon them; ſending up their particular Charge by a Committee of Officers, of whom Colonel Scroope deliver'd in the Charge to the Commons, with this Speech: That by the Appointment of the General, and Army under his Command, and in their Names, they came there to preſent a particular Charge or Impeachment againſt the eleven Members: Theſe were, Denzil Hollis Eſq; Sir Philip Stapleton, Sir William Waller, Sir John Maynard, Major-General Maſſy, John Glynne Eſq; Recorder of London, Walter Long Eſq; Colonel Edward Harley, Anthony Nicol Eſq; Sir William Lewis, Sir John Clotworthy; who on Jul. 19. put in their Anſwer in Demurrer to the ſaid Charge and Impeachment, and at their own Deſire had leave given them to be abſent from the Houſe for the ſpace of ſix Months. Soon after there was a ſolemn Engagement by Oath and Vow entred into by very many Citizens and others in and about London, for oppoſing and disbanding the Army, and for the King's preſent coming to the Parliament. This was heinouſly reſented by the General and chief Officers, and very many Papers of Expoſtulation and Excuſe paſſed between the Army and the two Houſes upon this matter. And Jealouſies mutually improving, the Army began to advance, and the Cities of London and Weſtminſter began to be fortified; and the two Speakers were ſo ſtruck with terrible Apprehenſions, that July 30. they both run away from their attendance on their ſeveral Houſes; and the Lords were forced to chooſe the Lord Willoughby of Paſham their Speaker, in room of the Earl of Manchester; and the Commons choſe Mr. Pelham, a Counſellor of Lincolns-Inn, to take the Chair in room of Mr. Lenthal: after which the Commons voted, 1. That the King ſhould come to London. 2. That the Militia of the City ſhould have full Power to raiſe ſuch Forces as they ſhall think fit for Defence thereof. And 3. That they make Choice of a Commander in chief to be approved by the Houſe. Then they reſolved to receive the eleven Members impeach'd by the Army, to ſit and vote in their Places. And both Houſes paſſed ſeveral Votes and Orders for bringing the King's Majeſty to ſome of his Houſes near London, to receive Propoſitions from both Kingdoms for Peace and Safety: and Auguſt 2. they ſent this Meſſage to the King.

Weſtm. Aug. 2. 1647. Your Majeſty's moſt humble and loyal Subjects,

Hunſdon, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro tempore.

H. Pellam, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

The Votes are as follow: viz.

" WHereas the King hath been ſeiz'd upon, and " carried away from Holmby without his " conſent, or the conſent of the Houſes of Parliament, by a Party, into the Army, where his Majeſty yet remaineth; the Lords and Commons in " Parliament aſſembled, do deſire that his Majeſty " will be pleaſed immediately to come to ſuch Places as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall appoint. And they do declare, " That he ſhall there be with " Honour, Freedom, and Safety; and that They, " with the Commiſſioners of the Kingdom of Scotland, will make their Addreſſes unto his Majeſty " for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace.

" Reſolved upon the Queſtion, by the Lords and " Commons aſſembled in Parliament; that London " be the Place whither the King ſhall be deſired to " come: where both Houſes of Parliament, and " the Commiſſioners of the Kingdom of Scotland, " may make their Addreſſes to him for a ſafe and " well-grounded Peace.

It is a matter of Wonder, that theſe great Jealouſies between the Parliament and Army could not be turn'd into any Advantage to the King's Intereſt or Liberty. On Auguſt 5. the whole Army advanced nearer London: the General removing his Head-Quarters from Thiſtleworth, came to Hammerſmith; and at the End of the Town was met by the Commiſſioners of the City, who aſſured him, that the City were well ſatisfied with his Excellency's Advance: and next Morning ſeveral Members of Parliament, driven away by Tumults from Weſtminſter, met the General at the Earl of Holland's Houſe at Kenſington, and ſubſcribed the Declaration of the Army, and a farther Declaration of their approving and joining with the Army in their laſt Proceedings, making null all Acts paſſed by the Members at Weſtminſter ſince July 26. Then the General march'd in great ſtate to the Houſe of Sir Abraham Williams in New-Palace-Yard; and both Houſes being ſate with their old Speakers, the Earl of Mancheſter and William Lenthal Eſq, they invited the General into each Houſe, and gave him ſolemn Thanks for his faithful Services to them and the Kingdom, and order'd Thurſday next for a Day of Thankſgiving, for the great Mercies of God in reſtoring the Members of both Houſes to their juſt Privileges without the Effuſion of Blood, and for the Settlement of Peace. On the ſame Day they conſtituted the General Conſtable of the Tower of London, and order'd the Gratuity of a Month's Pay to the Officers and private Soldiers. So fatally did things conſpire for a Peace and Union between all Parties except the King and his People.

But the Army was ſtronger than the Parliam.

The Scots began now to repent of Selling the King, and on Auguſt 13. publiſhed a Declaration and Remonſtrance of the preſent Engagement of the Kingdom of Scotland, with their Reſolutions and Intentions (according to their ſolemn League and Covenant) to redeem his Majeſty from the hands of Schiſmaticks, and to place him in his Parliament with Honour and Safety, to procure the Peace of the three Kingdoms, to vindicate the worthy Members of Parliament falſly impeached by the Army, with the true Privileges of Parliament and Liberty of the Subject: all which are not only endangered, but by likelihood ready to be deſtroyed by the Power of an over-awing, tyrannical Army, under the Conduct of Sir Thomas Fairfax. With an Oath taken by the Parliament of Scotland, and by them preſcribed to be taken by all his Majeſty's loyal Subjects. But this was now too late: Major-General Lambert collected all the Forces in the North, and was preparing to march to the Borders of Scotland; while the Scots, hearing of the Agreement between the Army, Parliament, and City, were aw'd into Silence and Quiet.

The Scots ſeem to Repent.

1647. 23 Car. I.

The two Houſes begin again to treat with his Majeſty.

The two Houſes began now to be at leiſure to reaſſume their Pretence of a well-grounded Peace between the King and his Subjects. And having made ſome few Amendments to the Propoſitions ſent to Newcaſtle, on Sept. 2. it was reſolved by the Lords and Commons, that a Day be appointed for the delivering of the Propoſitions of both Kingdoms to the King's Majeſty for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace: and that on Tueſday next the Commiſſioners of both Houſes ſhould attend his Majeſty to deliver the ſaid Propoſitions; with ſix Days to be limited for receiving his Majeſty's Anſwer. They delivered them accordingly, and were only told by his Majeſty, That he would return Anſwer with all conveniency. The Commiſſioners reported to the Houſes on Sept. 13. " That to ſeveral of the Propoſitions his Majeſty " is willing to aſſent: To ſettle Presbytery in this " Kingdom for three Years; and the Militia as he " before offer'd: That he cannot aſſent to ſome o- " thers, but deſires to put himſelf upon the Propo- " ſals of the Army, and that they may be taken in- " to conſideration by the Houſes, profeſſing his Re- " ſolution to whatſoever ſhall concern the ſettling " the Proteſtant Religion, with Liberty to tender " Conſciences, and the ſecuring the Laws, Liber- " ties, and Properties of all his Subjects, and juſt " Privileges of Parliament, for the future. On Sept. 14. his Majeſty's full Anſwer in Writing was read to both Houſes to that effect; That he could not conſent to all their Propoſitions, but deſires them to take into conſideration the Propoſals of the Army, and to have a perſonal Treaty upon them. His Majeſty therefore conjures his two Houſes of Parliament, by the Duty they owe to God, and his Majeſty their King, and by the bowels of compaſſion they have to their Fellow-Subjects, both for Relief of their preſent Sufferings and to prevent future Miſeries; that they will forthwith accept of his Majeſty's Offer, whereby the joyful News of Peace may be reſtored to this diſtreſſed Kingdom.

They ſend Propoſitions,

And have the King's Anſwer reported.

Sept. 21. the two Houſes reſumed the Debate of the King's Anſwer, and voted it to be a flat Denial: and on Septemb. 23. the Commons voted, That they would once more make application to his Majeſty for his Aſſent to ſuch things in the Propoſitions as they conceive will moſt make for the Good of this Kingdom: and then ordered ſeveral of the Propoſitions to be turned into Bills, and ſent to his Majeſty for his poſitive Aſſent. This took up long Debates, and occaſioned ſeveral Alterations, and many additional Propoſitions. But in a Conference of the two Houſes Nov. 8. the Scheme was diſpatch'd, with a Preface to perſuade his Majeſty to give his Royal Aſſent; declaring that he ought not to deny to paſs whatever is preſented to him from the two Houſes of Parliament.

The Houſes diſſatisfied.

The Army had ſtill their Head-Quarters at Putney; where a General Council of Officers, and then a Cabal of Agitators, were continually ſending Petitions, and Demands, and Caſes, to the Parliament. The King finding he could have no honourable Terms of Peace, and hoping that in his Abſence the Diſſentions between the Houſes and the Army might in time recall him to be the only Centre of Unity, reſolved to break from his Confinement at Hampton-Court: and ſo on Thurſday Night Nov. 11. between the hours of Eight and Nine, the King in Diſguiſe went from his privy Lodgings through a Door into the Park, and taking a Boat there laid for him, he croſſed over to Thames-Ditton, where Sir John Berkley, Mr. Aſhburnham, and Mr. Leg, were plac'd with Horſes ready for Eſcape. His Majeſty left a Letter

The King breaks from his Priſon of Hampton-Court, and leaves a Letter to the two Houſes.

1647. 23 Car. I. in his withdrawing Room for the Commissioners of Parliament, to be communicated to both Houses; dated Hampton-Court Novemb. 11. 1647. and beginning thus.

Liberty being that which in all times hath been, but especially now is the Condition, the Aim, and the Desire of all Men; common Reason shews, that Kings less than any should endure Captivity. Let I call God to witness, with what Patience I have endured a tedious Restraint, which so long as I had any hope that this sort of my Sufferings might conduce to the Peace of my Kingdoms, or the hindring more effusion of Blood, I did willingly undergo: but now finding by two certain Proofs, that this my continued Patience would not only turn to my personal Ruin, but likewise be of much more prejudice than furtherance to the publick Good; I thought I was bound, as well by natural as political Obligations, to seek my Safety by retiring myself for some time from the publick view both of my Friends and Enemies. And ending thus: To conclude, Let me be heard with Freedom, Honour, and Safety, and I shall instantly break through this cloud of Retirement, and shall shew my self ready to be Pater Patriæ.

Charles Rex.

The King, when escaped, knew not where to fly.

The King had seem'd rather sollicitous how to escape, than where to fly. We are told, that Mr. Ashburnham diswaded him from going to London, and led him into Hampshire, and then proposed the Isle of Wight, where he had a Confidence in Colonel Hammond the Governour. His Majesty said, He would not adventure himself, without Assurance under the Governour's hand for his Security; and therefore sent Mr. Ashburnham and Sir John Berkley into the Isle to treat with Hammond, staying himself with Colonel Leg at Tichfield-House; charging them not to let Hammond know where he was, without assurance under his hand of Protection and Freedom. But, contrary to these Directions, they came back, and brought Hammond with them: The King, in some amaze, ask'd them if they had a Promise under Hammond's Hand for his Security; they replying No, but they could trust him as a Man of Honour; the King said, Then you have betray'd me, and I am his Prisoner. Which sharp Resentment touch'd them so near, that they offer'd to kill Hammond, and take some other course for his Majesty's Safety. But the King utterly rejected the Proposal, and committing himself to Colonel Hammond, was on Nov. 13. carried cross to Cowes, and thence through Newport to Carisbrook-Castle, where he had for some Weeks the Attendance of his Servants, and the Liberty of the Island. The King immediately wrote a Letter to the two Houses, Novemb. 16. signifying, "That "he was confident before this time they had received the Message which he left behind at Hampton-Court the 11th of this Month; that he would still "have the same Endeavours for settling a safe and "well-grounded Peace. And because Religion would "be the greatest Foundation of Peace, he would "begin with that Particular: And tho' he could "not, as a Christian and a King, assent to abolishing Episcopacy; yet he would be content that "the Presbyterial Government, as now in practice, "should continue for three Years. As to the Militia, tho' by Right it was inseparably inherent to "the Crown by the Laws of the Nation; yet he "would agree, that during his whole Reign, it "should be order'd and disposed by the two Houses of Parliament. That he would concur in any "thing for Payment of the Army and other publick "Debts. And for the farther securing all Fears, he "will consent to an Act, That all the great Offices "of State, and Naming of Privy Counsellors for "his whole Reign, shall be disposed by the two "Houses of Parliament. And to wipe away the "Memory of all Distractions, there should be an "Act to suppress and annul all Declarations against "the Parliament; and an Act of Oblivion to extend to all Subjects. To which purposes, his "Majesty earnestly desires a personal Treaty at "London with his two Houses in Honour, Freedom, "and Safety, as the only Means to a firm and settled Peace.

Was, in effect, betrayed into the Isle of Wight.

Sends a Letter to the two Houses.

1647. 23 Car. I.

But the Power being now lodg'd in two several Bodies the Parliament and the Army, they were both so jealous of one another, that this obstructed the King's making any Terms with either of them. On Novemb. 27. the Commons concurr'd with the Lord's to admit of a Personal Treaty with his Majesty, upon his first consenting to these four Propositions.

Preliminary Propositions.

I. "That a Bill be drawn up by consent of both "Houses for his Majesty to pass into an Act for the "settling of the Militia of the Kingdom.

II. "That a Bill be passed for his Majesty's calling "in of all Declarations, Oaths and Proclamations, "against that Parliament and those who have adhered to him.

III. "For passing an Act that those Lords who "were made after the Great-Seal was carried to Oxford, may be made uncapable of sitting in the "House of Peers thereby.

IV. "That Power may be given to the two Houses "of Parliament to adjourn as the two Houses of "Parliament shall think fit.

The King had applied to Sir Tho. Fairfax as General, for the use of his Chaplains, and he sent over Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Holdsworth and Dr. Heywood, for which good respect the King thanked him by Letter Nov. 27. and on Decemb. 6. the King sent a Message to the two Houses, to lay before them with what Patience he had expected their leisure in acknowledging the receipt of his Message of Novemb. 16. that he cannot yet forbear the vehement Prosecution of a personal Treaty; and expostulates with them, whether he had not done his part by divesting himself of so much Power and Authority, and whether he had met with that Acknowledgment from his two Houses, which his great Grace and Favour justly deserved? The Houses took no notice at all of these Messages, but having passed the four Bills to be sent to his Majesty, and drawn their Instructions for the Commissioners who were to carry them; the Lords named the Earls of Northumberland, Kent, Rutland, Pembroke, Salisbury, Warwick and Mulgrave; the Commons Mr. Bulkeley, Mr. Lisle, Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Kemp, and these were order'd December 15. to go to the Isle of Wight with the said Bills and Propositions, and there for a certain time to attend his Majesty's Answer; Mr. Marshal and Mr. Nye being three Days after voted to go Chaplains with them.

The King passionately desires a Treaty.

Parliam. Commissioners.

The Scots Commissioners being not included in this Treaty, sent a large Declaration in very high Language to the Parliament, protesting against the sending of the four Bills, and pressing for a personal Treaty with his Majesty at London, upon such Propositions as shall be agreed upon by the Advice and Consent of the two Kingdoms. But the two Houses were to be frighted by nothing but the Army, and therefore they order'd the Printer of the Scots Declaration to be committed; and then returned them an Answer full enough of Contempt and Correction.

The Scots angry, but despis'd by the two Houses.

The Parliament Commissioners coming safe to the Isle of Wight, presented the Bills and the Proposition on them to his Majesty Decemb. 24. and he was pleased to say, that he was assured they could not expect a present Answer; but he would take the same into Consideration, and give his Answer within few Days. The Scots Commissioners came the next Day to the King, and put in their Protestation to this effect; "That "they had endeavour'd by all Ways and Means to "the Parliament of England for farthering a happy "Peace; having seen the Propositions and Bills "brought to his Majesty, which they apprehended "prejudicial to Religion, the Crown and the Union "between the Kingdoms, and therefore in the name "of the Kingdom of Scotland declare their dissent.

The King receives the Commissioners

Gene-

1647. 23 Car. I. Decemb. 21. General Fairfax wrote to the Houſe of Commons that there had been ſome meeting in the Iſle of Wight and a deſign to carry away the King, for which reaſon he had given order to Colonel Hammond to have a ſtricter Guard upon his Majeſty's Perſon. Upon which both Houſes agreed, that his Excellency be required to take ſpecial care for ſecuring the Perſon of his Majeſty in Carisbrook Caſtle, and that the Governour ſhould obey his farther Orders and Directions. On the ſame Day their Commiſſioners came back from the King, and brought but little Satisfaction with them, reporting, that his Majeſty ſhewed little Inclination to paſs the Bills, or to make a Compoſure in that way, but had barely offer'd a perſonal Treaty. Upon which, after long Debate Jan. 3. the Commons upon the Queſtion, Whether any Addreſſes ſhould be made hereafter to his Majeſty? Did reſolve, That no more Addreſſes be made from the Parliament to the King; nor any Letters or Meſſages received from him; and at the ſame time certified a good Agreement between the General and the Parliament. And immediately Orders were ſent to Colonel Hammond to diſmiſs the King's Servants, and to confine him cloſe within the Bounds of the Caſtle.

The King to be made a ſtricter Priſoner.

Mr. Harrington and Mr. Herbert were the only Perſons allowed to wait upon his Majeſty in his Bed-Chamber. The latter gives this account of the King's Studies in that Confinement: The ſacred Scripture was the Book he moſt delighted in. He read often in Biſhop Andrew's Sermons, Hooker's Eccleſiaſtical Policy, Dr. Hammond's Works, Villalpandus upon Ezekiel, Sandy's Paraphraſe upon King David's Pſalms, Herbert's Divine Poems, and alſo Godfrey of Boloign, writ in Italian by Torquato Taſſo, and done into Engliſh Heroick Verſe by Mr. Fairfax, a Poem his Majeſty much commended; as he did alſo Arioſto, by Sir John Harrington, a facetious Poet, much eſteemed of by Prince Henry his Maſter; Spencer's Fairy Queen, and the like, for alleviating his Spirits after ſerious Studies. And at this time it was (as is preſumed) he compoſed his Book called Suſpiria Regalia, publiſhed ſoon after his Death, and entitled The King's Pourtraicture in his Solitudes and Sufferings, which Manuſcript Mr. Herbert found amongſt thoſe Books his Majeſty was pleaſed to give him. And though he did not ſee the King write that Book, his Majeſty being always private when he writ, and thoſe his Servants never coming into the Bed-Chamber when the King was private until he called; yet comparing it with his hand writing in other things, found it ſo very like as induces his Belief that it was his own hand writing, having ſeen ſo much of the King's writing before: and to inſtance Particulars, in that his Majeſty's Tranſlation of Dr. Saunderſon, the late Biſhop of Lincoln's Book De Juramentis, or like Title, concerning Oaths; all of it Tranſlated into Engliſh, and writ with his own Hand, and which in his Bed-Chamber he was pleaſed to ſhew to his Servants Mr. Harrington and Mr. Herbert, and commanded them to examine it with the Original, they found it accurately Tranſlated.

How he ſpent his time.

As to this obſervation of Sir Tho. Herbert, in preſuming the King while a Priſoner in the Iſle of Wight compoſed his Book, it can be meant only of ſome part of it. For indeed it was not a compoſure under any one Confinement, or with any one train of Thoughts; but it was rather an occaſional common place of his Reflections and Meditations, as this and that Juncture and Seaſon did ſuggeſt. Some Chapters were finiſhed before the fatal Battle of Naſeby, as among many other Authorities is expreſly affirm'd by an Eye witneſs, Major Huntingdon, who gave this Account to Sir William Dugdale. —— "And as to ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ', he ſaith, "That after the "King was brought to Hampton-Court, his Majeſty "there acquainting him with the loſs of that Book "at Naſeby Fight, and deſiring him to uſe his Intereſt to regain it, he did apply himſelf to General "Fairfax, and by his means obtained it, it being "bound up in a white Vellum Cover, and (as he "well remembers) all the Chapters in it were writ-"ten by the Hand of Sir Edward Walker, but much "corrected with Interlineations by the King's own "Hand (the Prayers being all written with the "King's own Hand) which, he ſays, he very well "knew ſo to be.

Account the King's Book.

1647. 23 Car. I.

It is not the buſineſs of a Hiſtorian to collect Authorities for a matter of Fact thought to be evident and granted by Mankind, till there aroſe a Set of Men who delighted once more to Judge and Execute this Royal Martyr. And therefore to murder his Name, when they could reach no farther, they pretended his Εἰκων Βασιλικὴ was a ſham put upon the World in his Name by another Hand. But after all the confidence with which this Story has been told, it ſtands apparently convicted of Falſhood by a cloud of Witneſſes. And it really has its Self-conviction; for to ſay, that not King Charles but Dr. Gauden was the Author of it, carries along two of the moſt improbable things in the World; ſince the private Letters and other unconteſted Writings of the King ſhew the Capacity and the Vein of writing that Book; while the profeſt Works of Dr. Gauden are a demonſtration that he did not, that he could not write it. It may be confeſt, that Dr. Gauden might be employ'd to convey the Sheets to the Preſs; and it was not unlikely that ſuch a forward Man might ſuggeſt ſome things, and might preſume to add ſome others: But that he was the ſole or prime Author of it, can never be believed by the rational part of Mankind. The moſt unhappy Objections againſt the King's Honour in this Caſe, were the known prejudice of his two Sons, and the more remarkable Silence of the Earl of Clarendon.

No more Addreſſes.

To return to the ſevere Reſolution of no longer Addreſſing to the King, the Lords concurred with the Commons in their Votes to that unmerciful purpoſe, and drew up this Preamble which was order'd Jan. 17. to be publiſh'd with the Votes. The Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, after many Addreſſes to his Majeſty, for the preventing and ending this unnatural War raiſed by him againſt his Parliament and Kingdom, having lately ſent four Bills to his Majeſty, which did contain only matter of Safety and Security to the Parliament and Kingdom, reſerving the compoſure of all other Differences to a perſonal Treaty with his Majeſty, and having received an abſolute Negative, do hold themſelves obliged to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours ſpeedily to ſettle the preſent Government in ſuch a way as may bring the greateſt ſecurity to this Kingdom, in the enjoyment of the Laws and Liberties thereof; and in order thereunto, and that the Houſes may receive no Delays and Interruptions in ſo great and neceſſary a Work, they have taken theſe Reſolutions, &c.

Information to the Commons about the King.

Feb. 4. the Houſe of Commons was certified by Letters from the Iſle of Wight, "That the King was "in good Health in Carisbrook Caſtle, but is obſer-"ved to be more melancholy than uſual. His Ma-"jeſty had ſome diſcourſe lately with the Gover-"nour Col. Hammond about his Reſtraint, and the "ſtrict Guard upon him; and in ſhort his Majeſty "told the Governour, that that ſhould be the laſt "Argumentation he would hold with him about it, "and that he might yet e'er long be beholden to one "of his Sons for his Life. The Expreſſions ſeem as "ſtrange as the Reports now alſo ſpread, that Prince "Charles is gone into Holland, and that the King "hath made a Reſignation unto the Prince of the "Crown of Scotland, that he ſhould engage all In-"tereſts for reſtoring the King in this Kingdom. And by Expreſs dated Feb. 5. it was farther certified "That his Majeſty takes uſually every Morning a "walk about the Caſtle Wall, and the like in the "Afternoon if fair; much time ſpent every Day in "private; he ſpeaks moſt to us at Dinner, asks "News, particularly concerning Ireland, Scotland, "the City of London, and the Army; the Death of "Capt. Burley quarter'd at Winchester is little ſpoken "of. His Majeſty is as merry as formerly; all "quiet and fair between his Majeſty and Colonel "Hammond the Governour.

A bitter Declaration of the Parliament.

The Parliament, to ſatisfie the People and the Army why they had proceeded to ſuch ſtrange Reſolutions as to ſuffer no farther Addreſſes to the King; drew up a ſolemn Declaration for the Reaſons of it, publiſh'd on Febr. 15. wherein they load the King with every thing that was odious: "With making "all their Addreſſes fruitleſs; with Cruelties done "at Brentford, and a bloody Maſſacre intended up- "on London; with laying a Foundation of all Ty- "ranny, in ſaying he ow'd an Account of his Acti- "ons only to God; with a Guilt in the Death of "his Father King James; with betraying Rochel, "and the Engliſh Fleet, into the hands of the French "King; with a Deſign of bringing over German "Horſe to enſlave this Nation; with grinding his "People by Loans, Privy-ſeals, Coat and Conduct "Money, Patents, Monopolies, and that one Com- "pendium of Slavery, Ship-Money; with torturing "the Bodies of Men by Whipping, ſlitting Noſes, "cutting off Ears, branding Cheeks, Racks, Pillo- "ries, and cloſe Impriſonment, with Lording it o- "ver Souls by Oaths ex officio, Excommunications, "Ceremonies, Articles, new Canons, and Canon "Oaths; with a ſcandalous Declaration for Diſſol- "ving the Parliament in 1640; with a Cabal for "bringing up the Northern Army to awe the Par- "liament; with ſealing a Commiſſion to the Iriſh "Rebels; with an Unwillingneſs to disband the "Popiſh Iriſh Army; with writing Letters to the "Pope, and to the Duke of Lorrain; with charging "Members of Parliament with Treaſon, and co- "ming to the Houſe in that unparalell'd way, as a "deſigned Prologue to a bloody Tragedy; with the "Preparation of a Fleet from Denmark, and expe- "cting another from Holland; with ſigning the "moſt illegal Commiſſion of Array, a Commiſſion "for ten thouſand Rebels to conquer the Parliament "and London: And at laſt they conclude, that they could give many Reaſons more why they will make no more Addreſſes, but uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to ſettle the preſent Government, as may beſt ſtand with the Peace and Happineſs of this Kingdom. A Declaration ſo extremely virulent and falſe, that the Framers of it ſeem'd already to erect the High Court of Juſtice, and to draw up the very Form of Impeachment againſt the King.

The People thought the Parliament the greateſt Grievance

This Proceeding was of ſuch infinite Scandal to all indifferent People, who had yet a Reaſon and a Conſcience left within them; that Diſcontents and Murmurs grew very high, and many Pamphlets were now publiſh'd that ſhew'd the Parliament to be the great Grievance of the Nation; ſuch as, The Parliament's Ten Commandments, &c. another intitled, The New Teſtament of our Lords and Saviours the Houſe of Commons ſitting at Weſtminſter; and ſeveral others; the Parliament in vain burning the Books, and bidding Money for Diſcovery of the Authors of them.

Death of Lord Ferdinando Fairfax.

Monday March 13. Ferdinando Lord Fairfax, Father of Sir Thomas Fairfax General, died at York, upon a Sickneſs occaſioned by a Bruiſe on his Foot, where he had a Corn growing, which feſter'd and turn'd to a Gangreen; and with the pain of this he fell into a Fever that took away his Life. Upon Information of his Death, the Commons, on March 16. order'd, That his Excellency the now Lord Fairfax ſhould be Keeper of Pontefract Caſtle, Cuſtos Rotulorum for Yorkſhire, and chief Ranger, &c. the Places before held by his deceaſed Father.

State of Religion.

Religion was to be the Shew in all theſe Proceedings: and therefore April 9. the Commons ordered, that on Thurſday Fortnight they would debate the Buſineſs of the Church for fourteen Days together, and no private Buſineſs to intervene. And farther ordered, that ſuch Miniſters as are recommended from the Lords to be put into Livings, be referred to the Aſſembly to be examined concerning their Abilities for the Miniſtry. According to the foreſaid Order, on April 20. the Buſineſs of the Church was taken into conſideration; and the Obſtructions to the Government of the Church in Presbytery, and the Amendments to the Remedies thereof were reported to the Houſe, and aſſented to. They referred it to a Committee to draw up an Ordinance for the aboliſhing of all Feſtival and accuſtomed Holidays; and to appoint the ſecond Tueſday in every Month for a Day of Recreation to all Apprentices, Scholars, and Servants. Next Day they proceeded to order, that the Aſſembly ſhould be requeſted to return to the Houſe the Articles of the Church of England, and the ſeveral places of Scripture thereunto: and that a Declaration ſhould be drawn up to inform the People of the fond Superſtition of being Touch'd by the King for the Evil.

Proceedings of the Commons.

1647. 23 Car. I.

Of the Aſſembly of Divines.

April 29. the Aſſembly of Divines attended the Commons, and being call'd in acquainted the Houſe, That according to their Orders, they had attended them with their Advice upon the Thirty Nine Articles of the Church of England, and the Texts of Scripture thereunto; and upon the Confeſſion of Faith, with the Texts of Scripture likewiſe to it. Upon which the Houſe ordered ſix hundred Copies of the Aſſembly's Advice herein ſhould be Printed for the Services of the Houſes and the Aſſembly; and gave the Divines Thanks for their Pains therein.

A Provincial Aſſembly of London.

May 3. the Provincial Aſſembly of London met in the Convocation-houſe at St. Paul's Church, according to an Ordinance in Parliament of the 29th of April laſt paſt, for the farther ſettling Presbytery; and Dr. Gouge was choſen Prolocutor. The Ordinance directing that Aſſembly was to this purpoſe; That the Elders of the Claſſis of the Province of London ſhould hold this Provincial Aſſembly in the Convocation-houſe at Paul's Church in London, upon the firſt Monday in May next enſuing; and may adjourn their Meeting de die in diem, and conclude their Meeting with Adjournments unto the next Opportunity. And that no Act ſhall paſs or be valid in the ſaid Province of London, but what ſhall be done by the number of 36 preſent, or the major part of them, whereof 12 to be Miniſters, and 24 to be Ruling Elders. On this ſame Day an Ordinance paſſed both Houſes for regulating the Univerſity of Oxford by certain Viſitors, who ſhould examine upon Oath concerning Neglect of the Covenant, Directory, or Diſcipline, or ſuch as write falſe Doctrine, or have been Enemies to the Parliament.

Ordinance for the Viſitation of Oxford.

May 11. Mr. Byfield (by appointment of the Aſſembly of Divines) delivered the printed Books of the Confeſſion of Faith, with Scripture Notes, to the Members of the Houſes of Parliament. And no more being to be diſperſed, every Member ſubſcribed his Name to a Paper at the Receipt thereof. After the Members have well peruſed and examined them, the Houſes are to conſider, whether they ſhall approve the Publication of them. On May 19. the Commons debated the Confeſſion of Faith, and ſpent the whole Day therein, paſſing particularly from the firſt Paragraph to the eleventh of the firſt Chapter.

Confeſſion of Faith to be determin'd by the two Houſes.

Attempt of Accommodation between the Presbyterians and Independents.

The Faction between Presbyterians and Independents was now grown ſo near the Level, that June 29. a Committee was appointed in the Houſe of Commons to propoſe godly and able Perſons to conſider of the Matters of Accommodation in Religion, and to preſent their Names to the Houſe. And on July 1. they ordered, that the ſaid Committee of Accommodation ſhould meet, and report their Opinion with all convenient ſpeed.

Hereſies and Blaſphemies abound.

Theſe Diviſions gave Encreaſe to all ſorts of Hereſie, with which the Preſs and very Pulpits now ſwarm'd. Among others, Complaint was made to the Houſe of Commons Sept. 6. againſt a dangerous Pamphlet wrote by Mr. John Biddle, and called his Twelve Arguments upon the Deity; expreſly denying the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt, and running out into other abſurd and blaſphemous Tenets. Upon Debate it was ordered, That this Pamphlet ſhould be called in, and burnt by the Hangman; and the Author ſhould be referred to the Examination of the Committee for plunder'd Miniſters. And for a ſhew

1647. 23 Car. I.

ſhew of preventing the like Poiſon, an Ordinance paſſed both Houſes Sept. 27. for ſuppreſſing ſcandalous Papers and Pamphlets; and that no Writing be publiſhed, except the ſame be Licens'd by one or both Houſes of Parliament, or by ſome Perſon authorized by them.

Houſe of Commons much exerciſed in the Debates of Religion.

Octob. 2. the Commons in debating the Confeſſion of Faith preſented by the Aſſembly, had got as far as the fourth Chapter; and order'd that theſe Divinity Diſputations ſhould be brought on every Wedneſday. The Ordinance for ſettling the Government of the Church in a Presbyterial way was reported to the Houſe of Commons Octob. 6. and after the Debate upon it had took up the whole Day, it was order'd to be committed, and to be brought in again with a Clauſe for giving eaſe to tender Conſciences of ſuch as are godly and make a Conſcience of their ways.

Men to preach without Ordination.

On the ſame Day a ſtrong Petition was preſented to both Houſes, that able and gifted Men might have liberty to preach without Ordination, being approved by the Parliament. To which perfection of Enthuſiaſm, the Lords were forc'd to anſwer, that they took well this good Affection of the Petitioners to the advancement of the Goſpel. And the Commons thought fit to give them a yet greater encouragement, by thanking them for their good Affection to the Kingdom, and by aſſuring them that their Petition was referred to a Committee, to conſider of a way for examining ſuch as ſhould be ſo allowed. Thus the care of Religion was transferred from a Convocation to a new Aſſembly of Divines, from them to a Houſe of Commons, and thence to the Mob.

Presbytery to be eſtabliſh'd.

Octob. 13. both Houſes ſate upon the Buſineſs of Religion, the Lords were for an Act to be paſſed by the King for ſettling the Presbyterial Government for three Years; with liberty to Diſſenters for the Service and Worſhip of God in any other way, provided ſuch liberty ſhould not extend to any Toleration of the Popiſh Religion, nor to tolerating the practice of any thing contrary to the practice of the Chriſtian Religion, contained in the Apoſtle's Creed as expounded in the firſt fifteen Articles of the Church of England, according to the true ſenſe and meaning of them cleared and vindicated by the Aſſembly of Divines. The Commons agreed with them except in theſe Particulars; They would have the time of eſtabliſhing Presbytery to be until the end of the next Seſſions of Parliament after this, or the end of the ſecond Seſſions: And of doing nothing contrary to the firſt fifteen Articles, they would except the eighth which mentions the three Creeds, made, ſay they, many Years after the Apoſtles: And that the Indulgence to tender Conſciences ſhould not extend to the uſe of the Common-Prayer in any place whatſoever.

Aſſembly's Catechiſm

Octob. 20. the Prolocutor attended with many of the Aſſembly, came to the Houſe of Commons, and preſented to their Conſideration a Catechiſm, which they have drawn up according to the Order of that Houſe. The Commons it ſeems, thought this Catechiſm too prolix and ſuperfluous, and therefore ſent back their holy Work-men to bring it into a leſs compaſs. So they ſet themſelves to abridging of it, and upon Novemb. 25. the Houſe being informed that the Aſſembly of Divines were at the Door, they were called in and preſented a Catechiſm, which they called A ſhorter Catechiſm. The Houſe ordered that four hundred Copies of them ſhould be printed for the Service of the Houſe, with the ſeveral places of Scripture in the Margin. Then the Aſſembly were called in again, and Mr. Speaker by command of the Houſe gave them Thanks; and told them that Houſe did expect, that the Aſſembly ſhould give a ſpeedy Anſwer to the Queries formerly ſent unto them; and deſired them to go on in perfecting thoſe things which the Houſe had referred to them.

Abp. Uſher allow'd to preach.

Decemb. 20. a great Debate in the Houſe of Commons, Whether Dr. Uſher (Primate of Armagh) ſhould continue Preaching at Lincoln's-Inn, he having formerly adhered to the Enemy (the King) againſt the Parliament? The Houſe divided, and it was carried in the Affirmative, on condition he take the Negative Oath. But leaſt delinquent Miniſters ſhould be encouraged by this Vote, they order'd immediately, that it ſhould be referred to a Committee for plunder'd Miniſters, to ſend for and examine ſuch Miniſters as have adhered to the Enemy, and preach now in the Kingdom, and ſuch as have of late, or now do cauſe the Book of Common-Prayer to be read, and to take care for ſilencing of them. And Decemb. 24. the Houſe order'd that the Militia ſhould take ſtrict courſe to put out of the late Lines of Communication all Delinquent Miniſters.

Severity againſt malignant Miniſters.

And next Day, being Chriſtmas-Day, the Houſes ſitting (though without a Faſt) complaint was made to the Commons that ſome malignant Miniſters had preached that Morning in honour of the Day. Upon which it was order'd, that the Committee for plunder'd Miniſters have Power given them to examine and puniſh Church-wardens, Sequeſtrators and others, that do countenance delinquent Miniſters to Preach, and to commit them if they ſee cauſe; and upon which ſome were taken into Cuſtody.

Jan. 31. an Ordinance paſſed the two Houſes for the ſpeedy dividing and ſettling the ſeveral Counties of this Kingdom into diſtinct Claſſical Presbyteries and Congregational Elderſhips, according to a former Ordinance of Aug. 19. 1645. and that a Committee of Lords and Commons ſhall have power to bound the Provincial Aſſemblies in this Kingdom; and to conſtitute Triers within the Province of London where need ſhall require.

Feb. 8. the Commons ſpent much time in Debate of the Advice of the Aſſembly concerning the Confeſſion of Faith. The next Day an Ordinance paſſed both Houſes for Repair of Churches, and paying of Church Rates, to be approved by two Juſtices of Peace; Collectors to be choſen Monday and Tueſday in Eaſter-Week, to give in their Accounts within four Days after the Year is ended, the Goods of Defaulters to be diſtreſſed, and Oppoſers to be committed to the Jayl without Bail or Mainprize. This Ordinance to be read in all Churches and Chapels.

Ordinance for Repair of Churches.

March 1. the Commons taking into conſideration the Buſineſs of the Church, order'd, that a return ſhould be made for the Claſſes of the ſeveral Counties of the Kingdom by the firſt of May next; and that the ſaid Returns ſhould be printed, to the end they may the better know what Counties have failed of their Returns. On March 22. the Commons at a Conference preſented the Lords with the Confeſſion of Faith paſſed by them with ſome Alterations, viz. That they do agree with their Lordſhips, and ſo with the Aſſembly in the Doctrinal part, and deſire the ſame may be made publick, that this Kingdom and all the Reformed Churches of Chriſtendom may ſee the Parliament of England differ not in Doctrine. In ſome Particulars they would have ſome Phraſes alter'd, as in that of Tribute to the Magiſtrate, they would have it Dues; to the Degrees of Marriage they refer to the Law eſtabliſh'd; Particulars in Diſcipline they will have recommitted; and for the Title they would not have it A Confeſſion of Faith, becauſe not ſo running, I confeſs, at the beginning of every Section; but rather Articles of Faith agreed upon by both Houſes of Parliament, as moſt ſuitable to the former Title of the Thirty nine Articles.

On the firſt Day of this new Year March 25. 1648. Letters from the Iſle of Wight informed the Commons of a new Deſign to carry away the King, which had been diſcovered before it came to perfection. Upon which, ſome in Attendance upon his Majeſty were diſcharged. On April 13. other Letters from the Iſle gave account, that the King was in good Health and Pleaſant; had bowled ſeveral times upon the new Bowling-Ally with the Governour, Colonel Herbert, and others; and had talked merrily in relation to this Army and the Scots. Indeed the Scots began now to threaten a new War, for recovering the King out of thoſe Hands into which they had ſold him; and ſome Counties in England brought up ſuch bold Petitions to the Parliament, to condescend to the Royal Intimations of his Majesty for a Personal Treaty; that the House of Commons began to think it their Interest to recede from their former Resolutions of Non-Addressing: And on May 5. they fell to consider of making some farther Application to the King, and past a Declaration, "That they will be ready to join "with the Kingdom of Scotland in the Propositions "agreed upon by the two Kingdoms, and formerly "presented to his Majesty at Hampton-Court. On May 24. the Commons voted, that after his Majesty had signed the Bills to be tender'd to him by Parliament, for settling the Militia of the Kingdom, and the Presbyterian Government, and had recalled all his Declarations, Proclamations, &c. against both or either Houses of Parliament; that then a Treaty should be had with his Majesty upon the rest of the Propositions presented to his Majesty at Hampton-Court. On May 30. the three Bills to be presented to his Majesty in relation to a Treaty were assented to by the Commons, and sent to the Lords for their concurrence; and then to be forthwith sent to the Parliament of Scotland. This good disposition of the Members was owing to their Danger from several Insurrections in most Counties of England in great Bodies declaring for the King; especially in Kent and Essex. On June 23. the Commons were in long debate concerning his Majesty's Person, and put the Question, whether he should be removed from Carisbrook-Castle to Windsor-Castle, in order to a Personal Treaty upon such things as both Kingdoms shall conclude to be proper? But they could come to no Resolution. June 28. the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of London, presented an earnest Petition to both Houses, that a Personal Treaty might be obtained between his Majesty and the Parliament in the City of London, or some other convenient place. This was so much the Voice of the Nation, that in a Committee of both Houses June 30. it was agreed; first, That the Vote of the third of January 1647. forbidding any Addresses to be made to, or received from his Majesty, should be made null. Secondly, That the three Propositions sent into the Kingdom of Scotland, and to be presented to his Majesty before a Personal Treaty to be had, should not be insisted upon. And thirdly, That his Majesty be removed to some of his Houses within ten Miles of London. And yet on Monday July 3. thinking their Affairs more hopeful, they resolved, that the three Bills should be drawn up and sent as Propositions; to which his Majesty is to give his Approbation by subscribing his Hand before a Personal Treaty, and to give assurance to pass them into Acts, so soon as he shall come to London and sit in Parliament; but would not yet conclude on the Time or Place of Treaty. On the contrary, the Lords were for a Treaty without any preceding Terms; and July 8. desired a Conference with the Commons about the three Propositions, that they should not be insisted on before the Treaty; and gave their Reasons in the said Conference July 10. 1. That so there may be no delay in the thing, a speedy Personal Treaty being so much desired and petitioned for. 2. It's the desire of the Parliament of Scotland. 3. The Agreement upon the Treaty will be the more Authentick. 4. It is probable, having no Army in being, his Majesty will condescend to that which at Uxbridge and Oxford he refused. 5. It's not the way of Treaties to confirm any before all is agreed, especially those of most concernment, and that which chiefly will be insisted upon. But the Success of Cromwel in Wales, of Lambert in the North, and of the Forces before Colchester, gave new Spirits to the irreconcileable Members of the House of Commons, who declared July 15. that they would adhere to their former Vote, That his Majesty should sign the three Propositions before any Personal Treaty be had with his Majesty. And soon after made a Declaration of their calling to mind the great Victories that God hath pleased to give the Parliament's Forces within these few late Months over the Enemy, and how God had owned the great Cause of the Parliament and Army; appointing a Day of Thanksgiving for it. But after all, the Citizens of London were so importunate and positive for an immediate Treaty; and Duke Hamilton had made such Advances with an Army out of Scotland for the King, that the Commons were forced to give back and agree with the Lords for a Treaty without the King's signing any Propositions. And it was then resolv'd July 28. that his Majesty in Person should be treated with by Commissioners of both Houses of Parliament in the Isle of Wight, upon the whole matter of the Propositions at Hampton-Court, for settling the Peace of this Kingdom. And both Houses concurr'd in these Votes Aug. 2. First, "That a Message be "sent to the King to acquaint him that the Houses "desire a Treaty with his Majesty's Person, in "what place of the Isle of Wight he shall appoint, "upon the Propositions tender'd to his Majesty at "Hampton-Court, and concerning Wards and Liveries, and to treat with Honour and Freedom and "Safety to his Majesty's Person. Secondly, To receive such other Propositions to be treated on, as "shall be presented by his Majesty. Thirdly, That "Commissioners be dispatch'd away to his Majesty "by Friday next with the said Votes, and return "within ten Days.

The Parliament recal their Votes of Non-Addressing.

The Commons decline a personal Treaty.

The Lords press for it.

1648. 24 Car. I. The Commons forced to agree with the Lords.

These Commissioners were the Earl of Middlesex, Sir John Hippesley and Mr. Bulkley, who on Monday Aug. 7. had Access and Audience of the King at Carisbrook-Castle; at which time the Earl of Middlesex read the Votes of the Houses concerning a Personal Treaty, and delivered them to his Majesty, who received them with much cheerfulness, and spoke to this effect, that no Man desired Peace so much as he (look on him in his several Relations, as a King, a Husband, a Father, a Master) and that he would give ear to any Motion or Overture which might conduce to a good Accommodation. For (said he) whoever they be that gain by these Troubles, I must needs be a looser. His Majesty demanded of the Commissioners, How long they were to stay in the Island? To which it was answer'd by my Lord of Middlesex, that they were confined by the two Houses to ten Days from the time they set forth from London. His Majesty replied, "That the Time was short, and that he "had no Clerk to write for him; but he would "nevertheless dispatch them within the time limited.

Commissioners sent to the K.

And kindly received.

His Majesty sent back his Answer in this Letter to the two Houses. Carisbrook-Castle Castle Aug. 10. 1648. If the Peace of my Dominions were not much dearer to me than any particular Interest whatsoever, I had too much Reason to take notice of the several Votes which passed against me, and the sad Condition I have been in now above these seven Months. But since you, my two Houses of Parliament have opened, as it seems to me, a fair Beginning to a happy Peace, I shall heartily apply myself thereunto. And to that end I will as clearly and shortly as I may, set you down those things which I conceive necessary to this blessed Work: so that we together may remove all Impediments that may hinder a happy Conclusion of this Treaty, which with all chearfulness I do embrace. The King proceeds to demand first, That they will recall all such Votes and Orders by which People are frighted from Coming, Writing, or Speaking freely to him. Next, That Men of necessary use to him in this Treaty may be admitted to wait upon him. Then, That the Scots may be invited to send some Persons authorized by them to treat upon such Propositions as they shall make. As to the Place, He will name Newport in this Isle; though he cannot but think it a great loss of Time, to treat so far from the Body of the two Houses. Concluding, I have now no more to say, but to conjure you by all that is dear to Christians, honest Men, or good Patriots, that you will make all the Expedition possible to begin this happy Work, by hastening down your Commissioners fully Authorized and well Instructed; and by enabling me (as I have shew'd you) to Treat. Praying the God of Peace so to bless our Endeavours, that all my Dominions may enjoy a safe and well-grounded Peace.

King's Letter to the Parliament.

1648. 24 Car. I. Good Votes of the Lords.

Upon this Letter the Lords readily voted, " 1. That the Votes of both Houſes of Parliament " againſt no farther Addreſſes and Applications to " his Majeſty, be recalled. 2. That ſuch Perſons " as his Majeſty ſhall ſend for, as of neceſſary uſe " to him in the Treaty, be admitted to wait on him. " And that his Majeſty be in the ſame eſtate of " Freedom, as he was laſt in at Hampton-Court. " 3. That ſuch Servants as his Majeſty ſhall ap- " point be ſent to wait on him. 4. That the Place " for the Treaty be Newport in the Iſle of Wight. " 5. That the Scots be invited to treat with his Ma- " jeſty; and his Majeſty admitted to invite them. But Lieutenant-General Cromwel having obtained a great Victory againſt Duke Hamilton and the Scots Army near to Preſton in Lancaſhire; and Colcheſter being reduced by Fairfax to the utmoſt Extremity; the Commons would not concur in the Votes of the Lords without great Reſtrictions; that no Perſon lately in Arms againſt the Parliament, ſhould be of the number of thoſe to be admitted to the King; and, that he paſs his Royal Word not to go out of the Iſland during the Treaty, nor 28 Days after, without the Advice of both Houſes of Parliament.

The Commons more refractory.

Sir Peter Killigrew being ſent from the two Houſes, return'd with this Anſwer from his Majeſty, dated Aug. 28. My Lord and Mr. Speaker, I have received your Letter of the 25th of this Month, with the Votes that you ſent me; which though they are not ſo full as I could have wiſhed for the perfecting of a Treaty, yet becauſe I conceive by what you have done, that I am in ſome meaſure fit to begin one, ſuch is my inceſſant and earneſt Deſire to give a Peace to theſe my now diſtracted Dominions, as I accept the Treaty: And therefore deſire, that ſuch five Lords and ten Commons as ſhall be appointed, be ſpeedily ſent, fully authorized and inſtructed, to treat with me; not doubting but what is now wanting, will at our Meeting, upon Debate, be fully ſupplied, not only to the Furtherance of this Treaty but alſo to the Conſummation of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace. So I reſt your good Friend, Charles R.

King's Anſwer to the two Houſes.

Colcheſter ſurrender'd.

The ſame Day this Letter was read in the Houſes, Aug. 29. News came, that the Town of Colcheſter was ſurrender'd Yeſterday according to Articles, all the Priſoners at Mercy, the Town preſerved from Plunder paying Fourteen thouſand Pounds. That Afternoon a Council of War was called; at which it was reſolved, that Sir Charles Lucas, Sir George Liſle, and Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, ſhould be ſhot to Death. The two firſt were barbarouſly ſo executed, the latter, being the only Papiſt, was repriev'd and ſav'd by the General. The Characters of the two Gentlemen that ſuffer'd, are thus drawn by the Lord Clarendon: " The two who were thus murder'd, " were Men of great Name and Eſteem in the War; " the one being held as good a Commander of Horſe, " and the other of Foot, as the Nation had, but of " very different Tempers and Humours. Lucas " was the younger Brother of the Lord Lucas, and " his Heir both to the Honour and Eſtate, and had " a preſent Fortune of his own. He had been bred " in the Low-Countries, under the Prince of Orange, " and always amongſt the Horſe. He had little " Converſation in that Court, where great Civility " was practis'd and learn'd. He was very brave in " his Perſon, and, in a Day of Battle, a gallant " Man to look upon, and follow; but at all other " Times and Places, of a Nature ſcarce to be liv'd " with, of no good Underſtanding, of a rough and " proud Humour, and very moroſe Converſation; " yet they all deſir'd to accompany him in his " Death. Liſle was a Gentleman who had the ſame " Education with the other, and at the ſame time " an Officer of Foot; had all the Courage of the " other, and led his Men to a Battle with ſuch an " alacrity, that no Man was ever better followed; " his Soldiers never forſaking him; and the Party " which he commanded never left any thing undone " which he led them upon. But then to his Fierce- " neſs of Courage he had the ſofteſt and moſt gentle " Nature imaginable; was kind to all, and belov'd " by all, and without a Capacity to have an Ene- " my. The Manner of taking the Lives of theſe " worthy Men was new, and without Example, and " concluded by moſt Men to be very barbarous; and " was generally imputed to Ireton, who ſway'd the " General, and was upon all Occaſions of an un- " merciful and bloody Nature.

1648. 24 Car. I.

Sept. 7. Sir Peter Killigrew returned again from the Iſle of Wight, with an Anſwer from his Majeſty, That he deſires the Treaty may be haſtned; that he could have wiſhed all thoſe he deſires might have been admitted to him, but will not let that hinder the Treaty; and now deſires, that Dr. Duck and Dr. Reeves, two Civil Lawyers, may be admitted for his Service in the Treaty. Sir Peter farther reported, That his Majeſty ask'd a Gentleman, who wore Black Ribbon, and was there with him, Who he mourn'd for? He anſwer'd, for Sir Charles Lucas: and being told of his Death, his Majeſty wept. Letters came from the Iſland September 11. with Advice, that his Majeſty had his Liberty out of Carisbrook-Caſtle Wedneſday laſt: that after he had dined, the Gentlemen about him rid with him to Newport, and his Majeſty was now at Sir William Hodges's, the Place appointed for the Treaty: that ſome of his new Attendants were come, others expected; and the Book of Common Prayer was uſed again. September 14. Intelligence was given, that the Duke of Richmond, and moſt of the Lords, Miniſters, Lawyers, and Gentlemen, nominated in the Liſt to attend the King upon the Treaty, were now with him, and had kiſs'd his Hand; and that the King told them, He was glad they were admitted to be with him in the Treaty: That his Majeſty had given them Inſtructions, and daily expected the Commiſſioners from the Parliament. Other Letters from thence, read September 16. ſaid, the Parliament Commiſſioners were come, a good Correſpondence on both ſides, and the Treaty to begin on Monday Morning. Saturday Sept. 16. the Commiſſioners waited on the King, kiſs'd his Hand, and acquainted him with their Meſſage from the Parliament. His Majeſty made a ſhort Speech in Anſwer to them; That he was glad they were come to Treat with him, for the ſettling of his poor bleeding Kingdom in Peace; and deſired God to perfect this bleſſed Work; profeſſing, that he was in Charity with all of them, and not willing to ſeek Revenge againſt any, nor give occaſion of Delays: deſiring that there may be no procraſtinating of Time; but that being only a broken piece of a Day, and the laſt Day of the Week too, he deſired the Treaty might begin at Nine a Clock on Monday Morning; and from thence the Treaty to commence. Accordingly on Monday Sept. 18. the King and Commiſſioners met at the Houſe of Sir William Hodges, and began the Treaty. The Commiſſioners firſt preſented the three Bills, for Religion, the Militia, and the Recalling his Majeſty's Proclamations and Declarations againſt the Parliament. Then the two firſt Days were ſpent in laying down the Method that was to be obſerved: viz. That nothing ſhould be binding on either ſide, but what ſhould be expreſſed in Writing; and not that, till the Concluſion of the Treaty. His Majeſty deſired that the Preamble to the Propoſitions might be laid aſide, becauſe it charg'd all the Blood ſhed in the three Kingdoms upon himſelf and Thoſe who adher'd to him. The Commiſſioners inſiſted on the Preamble to be made part of the Act of Parliament, till the King, againſt Judgment, yielded to it. Upon which Conceſſion, the Commiſſioners wrote to the Parliament, that on September 25. the King had declared, he would conſent to paſs the Preamble as was deſired: which being done, great Hope is given to all Hearts, that this is the Forerunner of a happy Peace and Eſtabliſhment; the King having farther declared, That nothing of his particular Intereſt ſhall hinder the Progreſs of this Treaty.

The King haſtens on the Treaty

The Commiſſioners attend the King.

Opening of the Treaty.

King agrees to the hard Preamble.

October 2. a Letter from his Majeſty was brought to both Houſes by Captain Titus, with Propoſals, that Propoſals of the K.

1648. 24 Car. I. that as to Religion, his Majesty will consent, that the Calling and Sitting of the Assembly of Divines, and the Directory, and Presbyterian Government, shall be confirmed for three Years; provided his Majesty, and those of his Judgment, be not obliged to comply with the same. Concerning the Bishops Lands and Revenue, his Majesty will consent to an Act whereby legal Estates for Lives or for Years, not exceeding 99, shall be made for those Lands towards the Satisfaction of the Purchasers; provided the Propriety and Inheritance of those Lands may still remain to the Church His Majesty will give his Royal Assent for the better Observation of the Lord's-day; for suppressing of Innovations in Churches and Chapels; for Acts against Plurality and Non-Residence; for Regulating and Reforming Universities and Colleges; for the better Discovery and speedy Conviction of Popish Recusants; for the Education of their Children by Protestants; and for preventing the Hearing or Saying of Mass; and for putting the Militia into the Parliament's hands for ten Years, &c. But the Commons, upon Debate of this Message, voted the same to be unsatisfactory.

Voted not satisfactory.

October 7. Letters were sent to the Parliament from their own Party, that the great Business insisted on was the Proposition for settling Religion, which was like to take up some time: That his Majesty had given a Paper to the Commissioners, of the Reasons wherefore he could not condescend to take away Bishops, and the Government by Bishops, which he conceived to be of Apostolical Institution, and alleged several Scriptures to that purpose: He also propounded some Queries concerning Presbyterial Government, which were referred to the Parliament Ministers who waited on the Commissioners, Mr. Marshal, Mr. Vines, Mr. Caryll, and Mr. Seaman. A Day or two after, his Majesty had said, that He was bred and instructed in the way he stands for, by his Father the wisest King and best in the World, and therefore could not easily yield; and yet he had already yielded far, having denied in effect nothing but the absolute Sale of Bishops Lands, which he thought to be Sacrilege, and to be against his Coronation-Oath. That in a Debate about the Directory the King had asked, What fault they found in the Common Prayer Book? It was replied, That the Liturgy was taken out of the Mass-Book, only spoiled in the Translation; and that his Majesty's Father, King James, had so confess'd it to be: to which his Majesty had said, That if it were good in itself, that did not make it ill. As to the abolishing of Bishops, his Majesty would by no means consent to it; but had since made Offer of a limited and regulated Episcopacy. The Form of this Offer (which shall be recited among the Affairs of Religion) was read and debated in the House of Commons, who voted that his Majesty's Paper concerning Religion was not satisfactory. And then order'd their Commissioners not to proceed to the Debate of any new Proposition, till this concerning the Church were first signed by his Majesty. This was on October 11. on which very Day the King had given his Consent to the Proposition concerning Ireland; and presently after to another Proposition for taking away all Honours conferred since May 20. 1642. and to great part of the Proposition concerning Delinquents; subjecting them to any Penalties except the loss of Life. October 23. his Majesty farther consented to these other Propositions: 1. To that of the Nomination of the great Officers of the Kingdom, as desired. 2. To that concerning the City of London, as desired. 3. To that concerning the Great Seal, as desired. 4. And to that concerning the Court of Wards, as desired; a Recompence being assured to his Majesty of one hundred thousand Pounds per annum to him and his Heirs in lieu of it.

Debates of Religion.

Consent and Compliance of the King.

Cromwel's Victory exalts the Commons

But such now was the Misery of this vanquish'd Prince, and such the Insults of the conquering Party, that ninety and nine Concessions would not have satisfied, if any single one of a hundred had been denied. And therefore, upon the Returning of Cromwel with Victory out of Scotland, the Commons voted October 27. that his Majesty's Answer concerning the taking of the Covenant was Unsatisfactory; and that his other Answers concerning the taking away Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, &c. concerning the abolishing of Popery, and concerning the alienating of Bishops-Lands, were all Unsatisfactory: and within few Days after, that his Message as to Delinquents, his Answer concerning the Church, and concerning Ireland, were likewise Unsatisfactory. 1648. 24 Car. I.

Upon this, the Army, instructed by their Leaders, presented to the House of Commons a large Remonstrance; wherein they declare, that the Parliament hath abundant cause to lay aside any farther Proceeding in this Treaty, and to return to their Votes of Non-Addresses, that the King may come no more to Government, but be brought to Justice, as the capital Cause of all Evils. In this was the hand of Cromwel; who, being at the Leaguer before Pontefract in his Return from Scotland, induced all the Regiments under him to petition against the Treaty, and for Justice on the King. The Remonstrance not being immediately considered in the House of Commons, another Declaration of the General and his Council of Officers was agreed upon November 20. in farther prosecution of the Ends of their late Remonstrance, and to shew the Grounds of the Army's Advance toward London.

The Army breaks off the Treaty,

This Cabal in the Army resolved once more to seize upon the Person of the King, the manner of which is thus related by Colonel Edward Cook, who drew up the Narrative next Morning, by Assistance of the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Lindsey, at the King's Command. " Upon rumour of such an " Attempt upon the King —— the Duke of Rich- " mond and Earl of Lindsey, upon Advice of Colo- " nel Cook agreed for the King's attempting an im- " mediate Escape, as the readiest way to procure a " personal Treaty with the Parliament —— But " before they could proceed to debate the Manner " of this Escape, the King prevented it, arguing a- " gainst the Escape it self. First, he urged the " great Difficulty, if not Impossibility, of accom- " plishing it. Next, that in case he should mis- " carry in the Attempt, it would exasperate the " Army, and dishearten his Friends. And Lastly, " if the Army should seize him, they must preserve " him for their own sakes; he being convinced, " that no Party could secure their own Interest " without joining his to it, his Son being out of " their Reach. —— After some Consult, the King " commanded Colonel Cook to give his Advice; who " did it thus: Suppose I should not only tell your Maje- " sty that the Army design'd suddenly to seize your Ma- " jesty, but by concurring Circumstances should fully con- " vince you that it would be so: Also, that I have the " Word, and Horses ready at hand (they being not far " off in a readiness under the Penthouse;) That I had " also a Vessel attending me by the Cows, may hourly " expecting me; Myself likewise both ready and desirous " to attend your Majesty; and the Darkness of the Night " as it were suited to the purpose; so that I can foresee " no visible Difficulty in the thing; which I suppose in " all its Particulars to be the true state of this present " Case: The only now remaining Question is, If so, " what will your Majesty resolve to do? The King, af- " ter a small Pause, delivered this positive Answer, " They have promised Me, and I have promised Them, " and I will not break first. The Duke of Richmond " pressing the Colonel to speak, he craved Leave " to argue the Point with the King: His Majesty " replied, With all my heart. I presume Sir (then " said the Colonel) your Majesty intends by these " Words They and Them the Parliament, to whom " your Majesty made that Promise you mention. If so, " the Scene is now quite changed, the present Appre- " hension arising from the Army, who have already so " far violated the Votes and Promises of the Parlia- " ment, as to invade your Majesty's Freedom and Safety,

And seize upon the King.

" The King replied, However he would not do any " thing that ſhould look like a breaking of his Word; " and ſo bad him and the Earl of Lindſey good " Night, and that he would go and take his reſt too as " long as he could. Which, Sir (reply'd Col. Cook) " I fear will not be long. The King perceiving a great " Uneaſineſs and Diſturbance in Col. Cook, ſaid, " Ned what troubleth thee, tell me? Who anſwer'd, " Sir, to conſider the greatneſs of your Majeſty's Danger, " and your unwillingneſs to obviate it. To which the " King made this Reply, Never let that trouble you, " were it greater I would not break my Word to prevent " it. —— Next Morning, December 1. juſt at " break of Day, the King hearing a great knocking " at his outward Door, ſent the Duke of Richmond " to ask, What it meant? Who demanding who was " there? It was anſwer'd, my Name is Mildmay: " One of thoſe Servants the Parliament had put to " the King, and Brother to Sir Henry. The Duke " demanded, What he would have? Who anſwer'd, " There were ſome Gentlemen from the Army very deſirous " to ſpeak with the King. Which account the Duke " gave the King; but the knocking rather increa- " ſing, the King commanded the Duke to let them " into the Room. No ſooner was this done, but " before the King could get from his Bed, thoſe Of- " ficers ruſhed into his Bed-Chamber and abruptly " told the King, that they had Orders to remove him. " From whom, ſaid the King; they reply'd, from the " Army. The King then ask'd, to what Place? To " the Caſtle, ſaid they. The King demanded, To " what Caſtle? Again they anſwer'd, to the Caſtle. " The Caſtle, ſaid the King, is no Caſtle: And added, " he was well enough prepared for any Caſtle, requiring " them to name the Caſtle. After a ſhort whiſper " together, they ſaid, Hurſt-Caſtle. Indeed, ſaid the " King, you could not have named a worſe. Where- " upon the King called to the Duke of Richmond to " ſend for the Earl of Lindſey and Col. Cook. At " firſt they ſcrupled at the Earl of Lindſey's coming, " the King ſaid, Why not both, ſince both lye together? " Then having whiſper'd together, they promiſed to " ſend for both, but ſent for neither. And though " the Duke of Richmond had order'd the King's " Breakfaſt to be haſten'd, preſuming there was lit- " tle proviſion made in that deſolate Caſtle; never- " theleſs when his Majeſty was ſcarce ready, the " Horſes being come, they hurried him away, per- " mitting only the Duke of Richmond to attend him " two Miles, and then telling him he muſt go no " farther; where he ſadly took leave of his Majeſty, " ſcarce being permitted to kiſs his Majeſty's hand, " whoſe laſt Words to the Duke were, Remember me " to my Lord of Lindſey and to Colonel Cook, and " command Colonel Cook from me never to forget the " Paſſages of this Night.

The two Houſes made Priſoners as well as the King.

The next Day after this perfidious Exploit, the General Fairfax with ſeveral Regiments of Horſe and Foot marched to London, and took up their Quarters in White-hall, St. James's, the Mews, York-Houſe, and other parts of Weſtminſter and the adjacent Villages. By which means the Parliament who had ſo long kept their King a Priſoner, were themſelves made Priſoners of War to the Army; and had only leiſure to repent, that this Treaty was in this manner diſſolved, which they might have concluded with ſo much Honour and Intereſt at leaſt to themſelves. While all that the Commons could now do was to Vote Decemb. 4. That the ſeizing upon the Perſon of the King, and carrying him Priſoner to Hurſt Caſtle, was without the Advice or Conſent of the Houſe. A ſorry Confeſſion, that they would not prevent it, and could not now help it.

Excellent Sayings of the King.

And here, becauſe the private Converſation and occaſional Sayings of a Prince (eſpecially in times of Trial) repreſent him better than any other Marks and Characters whatever. Take this Account of ſome Paſſages given by an Ear-Witneſs, Sir Philip Warwick. " In the Treaty at Newport, two Replies " which the King made to two Gentlemen that Day " were obſervable; the one to a Gentlem. who is now " a Lord, who preſs'd ſomewhat upon him hardly: " A good Nature, Sir, (ſays he) would not offer this " you ſay, nor is it true Logick: And then made ano- " ther kind of ingenious Reply unto Mr. Buckly " (who was a Gentleman of that Iſland, and now " a Commiſſioner) when he prayed the King to " make right uſe of this Treaty. —— Conſider " (ſays he) Mr. Buckly, if you call this a Treaty, " whether it be not like the fray in the Comedy; where " the Man comes out and ſays there has been a fray and " *no fray: And being asked, how that could be? " is not unworthy the relating of him, that one E- " vening his Dog ſcraping at his Door, he comman- " ded me to let in Gipſey; whereupon I took the " boldneſs to ſay, Sir, I perceive you love a Greyhound " better than a Spaniel. Yes (ſays he) for they equally " love their Maſters, and do not flatter them ſo much.

We ought not to leave the Iſle of Wight without obſerving, that the King drew up a full account of the Treaty in a Letter to the Prince, which he began before the firſt forty Days were expired, and continued it as the Treaty was lengthen'd, even to the Hour it was concluded, and finiſhed it the 29th of Nov. after the Commiſſioners were departed, and with it ſent a very exact Copy of all the Papers which had paſſed in the Treaty; the perfect Copies whereof are lately printed in the Hiſtorical Diſcourſes of Sir Ed. Walker, who was the chief Clerk employ'd by his Majeſty during that Treaty. The Lord Clarendon relates, that the Letter to the Prince was all in the King's own hand, and contained above ſix Sheets of Paper; in which he made a very particular Relation of all the Motives and Reaſons which had prevailed with him, or over him, to make thoſe Conceſſions. The concluſion of the Letter, as it was dated the 25th of November (what was added to it after till the 29th, was but the additional Paſſages upon the enlargement of Time) deſerves to be preſerved in Letters of Gold, and gives the beſt Character of that excellent Prince, and was in theſe Words.

Your very loving Father,

Newport, Nov. 25. 1648. C. R.

To return to the King's Sufferings and Trial, on Dec. 6. ſeveral Members of the Houſe of Commons, who were thought leſs inclinable to the Wickedneſs in agitation were excluded, ſeiz'd upon, and kept in Cuſtody by ſpecial Order from the General and Council of Army. And when the Houſe was thus purged, Lieutenant Colonel Axtel came in, and preſented the Propoſals of the Army, ſetting forth, " That " they had for a long while ſadly beheld and taſted " in their Proceedings the miſerable Fruits of Coun- " ſels divided and corrupted by Faction and perſo- " nal Intereſt; that all faithful Members muſt ac- " quit themſelves by a Proteſtation of their not con- " curring in the late Proceedings; and muſt then " ſpeedily and vigorouſly proceed to take order for " the execution of Juſtice. Next Day Lieutenant General Cromwel came into the Houſe, and received their hearty Thanks for his great and faithful Services. On Dec. 13. the remnant of the Commons voted, that they will make no farther Addreſſes or Applications to the King; and that the late Treaty with him was highly diſhonourable and deſtructive to the good of the Kingdom. On Dec. 16. a Party of Horſe was ſent over to Hurſt-Caſtle to bring the King from thence to Windſor, where Cromwel was now ready to receive him: He lay at Farnham December 22. and was delivered up at Windſor Caſtle on Saturday Night Dec. 23. Colonel Thomlinſon commanding the Guards of Horſe and Foot about him. The Council of War order'd Dec. 27. that all Ceremonies of State uſed to the King ſhould be left off, and his Attendance ſhould be with fewer Perſons and at leſs Charges. Next Day a Committee of the Commons appointed to draw up a Charge againſt the King, reported an Ordinance for Attainting Charles Stuart of High-Treaſon, and for trying him by Commiſſioners to be nominated in the ſaid Ordinance, which was tumultuouſly agreed to, and carried up to the Lords Jan. 2. their Lordſhips with juſt Indignation threw out the Bill, and adjourned to Thurſday Seven-night. Upon which the Commons were made to declare, that they had a Power to proceed without the concurrence of the Lords, having in themſelves the ſupreme Authority of the Nation; and ſo paſs the Ordinance in the new name of the Commons of England only.

Members excluded.

The Army governs under Cromwel.

The King brought to Windſor.

Ordinance for Attainding the King.

Rejected by the Lords.

Jan. 10.

1648. 24 Car. I. Commiſſioners for Trial of their King.

Jan. 10. The Commiſſioners appointed to try the King met in the Painted Chamber, and nominated Serjeant Bradſhaw to be Preſident of their Court, Mr. Steel to be Attorney-General, Mr. Cook Solicitor, Dr. Doriſlau and Mr. Ask to be Pleaders againſt him. On Jan. 13. they agreed, that Weſtminſter-Hall ſhould be the Place of Trial; and that, in order thereto, the King ſhould be brought up from Windſor on Monday next. On Wedneſday Jan. 17. they order'd that the King ſhould be brought to the Houſe of Sir Robert Cotton, for the better Conveniency of his Trial in the Hall adjoining.

Call'd a High Court of Juſtice.

Jan. 20. This execrable High Court of Juſtice met in Weſtminſter-Hall; and after reading the Ordinance, the Names of the Commiſſioners, as Judges, were called over: Every Man anſwering to his Name as he was called, and the Preſident being firſt called and making Anſwer, the next who was called being the General, Lord Fairfax, and no Anſwer being made, the Officer call'd him the ſecond time, when there was a Voice heard that ſaid, He had more Wit than to be there, which put the Court into ſome Diſorder; and ſome body asking who it was? there was no other Anſwer but a little Murmuring. But preſently when the Impeachment was read, and that Expreſſion uſed, Of all the good People of England, the ſame Voice, in a louder Tone, anſwered, No, nor the hundredth part of them: upon which one of the Officers bid the Soldiers give Fire into that Box from whence thoſe preſumptuous Words were uttered. But it was quickly diſcern'd that it was the General's Wife, the Lady Fairfax, who had utter'd both thoſe ſharp Sayings, who was preſently perſuaded or forced to leave the Place to prevent any new Diſorder. Sixty ſeven Commiſſioners anſwered to their Names; and then the Court commanded the Serjeant at Arms to ſend for the Priſoner, who was brought up in the Face of the Court by Colonel Thomlinſon, under a ſtrong Guard, and deliver'd to the Serjeant at Arms, who conducted him to the Bar, where a Crimſon Velvet Chair was ſet before him. After a ſtern looking upon the Court, and the People in the Galleries on each ſide of him, he placed himſelf in the Chair, not at all moving his Hat; all the impudent Judges ſitting cover'd, and fixing their Eyes upon him without the leaſt Shew of Reſpect. The King preſently roſe up again, and turn'd about, looking downwards on the Guards and Multitude of Spectators. Being again placed in his Chair, and Silence proclaimed, the Preſident acquainted him, "That the Commons of England aſ-
"ſembled in Parliament being deeply ſenſible of
"the Evils and Calamities that had been brought
"upon this Nation, and of the innocent Blood that "had been ſpilt in it, which was fixed upon him as
"the principal Author, had reſolved to make Inqui-
"ſition for this Blood, and according to the Debt
"they did owe to God, to Juſtice, to the Kingdom,
"and Themſelves, and according to that funda-
"mental Power and Truſt repoſed in them by the "People, other means failing through his Default,
"had reſolved to bring him to Trial and Judg-
"ment, and had therefore conſtituted that Court
"of Juſtice before which he was then brought,
"where he was to hear his Charge, upon which the
"Court would proceed according to Juſtice. Upon which Mr. Cook, Sollicitor, offer'd to ſpeak: but the King having a Staff in his Hand, held it up, and ſoftly laid it upon Cook's Shoulder two or three times, bidding him Hold: But, at Command of the Preſident, Cook went on, and in the Name and on the Behalf of the People of England, exhibited a Charge of High Treaſon and other high Crimes, and did therewith accuſe the ſaid Charles Stuart King of England; praying that the ſaid Charge might be received and read, and due Proceedings had thereupon. The King interrupted the Reading of it; but the Clerk, at Command of the Court, read the Charge, concluding, That he the ſaid Charles Stuart hath been and is the Occaſioner, Author, and Continuer of the ſaid unnatural, cruel, and bloody Wars; and therein guilty of all the Treaſons, Murders, Rapines, Burnings, Spoils, Deſolations, Damages, and Miſchiefs to this Nation acted and committed in the ſaid Wars, or occaſioned thereby.

The King brought before this execrable Court.

1648. 24 Car. I.

Bradſhaw, after he had inſolently reprehended the King for not having ſhew'd more Reſpect to that high Tribunal, told him, "That the Parliament of "England had appointed that Court to Try him
"for the ſeveral Treaſons and Miſdemeanours
"which he had committed againſt the Kingdom
"during the evil Adminiſtration of his Govern-
"ment; and that, upon the Examination thereof,
"Juſtice might be done. And after a great Sawci-neſs and Impudence of Talk, he asked the King,
"What Anſwer he had to make to that Impeach-
"ment?

The King, without any Alteration in his Countenance by all that inſolent Provocation, told them, "He would firſt know of them, by what Authority
"they preſumed by Force to bring him before
"them, and who gave them Power to judge of his "Actions, for which he was accountable to none
"but God, though they had been always ſuch as
"he need not be aſham'd to own them before all
"the World. He told them, That He was their
"King, They his Subjects; who owed him Duty
"and Obedience: That no Parliament had Autho"rity to call him before them; but, that they were "not the Parliament, nor had any Authority from
"the Parliament to ſit in that manner: That of all
"the Perſons who ſat there, and took upon them
"to judge him, (except thoſe Perſons who being
"Officers of the Army, he could not but know
"whilſt he was forced to be amongſt them) there
"were only two Faces which he had ever ſeen be"fore, or whoſe Names were known to him. And after urging their Duty that was due to him, and his Superiority over them, by ſuch lively Reaſons and Arguments as were not capable of any Anſwer, he concluded, "That he would not ſo much betray
"himſelf, and his Royal Dignity, as to anſwer any "thing they objected againſt him, which were to "acknowledge their Authority; though he belie"ved that every one of themſelves, as well as the "Spectators, did in their own Conſciences abſolve
"him from all the material things which were ob-
"jected againſt him.

Bradſhaw adviſ'd him, in a very arrogant manner,
"Not to deceive himſelf with an Opinion that any "thing he had ſaid would do him any Good: That
"the Parliament knew their own Authority, and "would not ſuffer it to be call'd in queſtion or de-
"bated: therefore requir'd him, To think better of
"it againſt he ſhould be next brought thither, and "that he would anſwer directly to his Charge;
"otherwiſe, he could not be ſo ignorant as not to
"know what Judgment the Law pronounced againſt
"thoſe who ſtood mute, and obſtinately refuſed to
"plead. So the Guard carried his Majeſty back to St. James's, where they treated him as before.

Second Day.

Monday Jan. 22. The Court being ſat, and the Sollicitor requiring that the Priſoner might make a poſitive Anſwer to his Charge, the Lord Preſident ſaid,

Sir, You may remember, at the laſt Court you were told the Occaſion of your being brought hither, and you heard a Charge read againſt you, containing a Charge of High-Treaſon, and other high Crimes againſt this Realm of England: and inſtead of anſwering, you interrogated the Court's Authority and Juriſdiction. Sir, The Authority is the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, who require you to anſwer to the Charge, either by Confeſſing or Denying.

King. "When I was laſt here, 'tis very true I
"made that Queſtion; and truly, if it were only
"my own particular caſe, I would have ſatisfied
"Myſelf with the Proteſtation I made the laſt time

I was

1648. 24 Car. I. " I was here, againſt the Legality of this Court; " and that a King cannot be tried by any ſuperiour " Juriſdiction on Earth. But it is not my Caſe a- " lone; it is the Freedom and the Liberty of the " People of England; and, do you pretend what " you will, I ſtand more for their Liberties: For, " if Power without Law may make Laws, may al- " ter the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom; I do " not know what Subject he is in England that can " be ſure of his Life, or any thing he calls his own. " Therefore when that I came here, I did expect " particular Reaſons by what Law, what Authority " you did proceed againſt me here: and therefore " I am a little to ſeek what to ſay to you in this " Particular; becauſe the Affirmative is to be pro- " ved; the Negative often is very hard to do. But " ſince I cannot perſuade you to it, I ſhall tell you " my Reaſons as ſhort as I can. My Reaſons why, " in Conſcience and Duty I owe to God firſt, and " my People next, for the Preſervation of their " Lives, Liberties, and Eſtates. I conceive I can- " not anſwer this, till I be ſatisfied of the Legali- " ty of it. All Proceedings againſt any Man what- " ſoever ——

L. Preſident. Sir, I muſt interrupt you; which I would not do, but that what you do is not agree- able to the Proceedings of any Court of Juſtice. You are about to enter into Argument and Diſpute concerning the Authority of this Court; before whom you appear as a Priſoner, and are charged as a high Delinquent. If you take upon you to diſ- pute the Authority of the Court, we may not do it, nor will any Court give way unto it. You are to ſubmit to it: You are to give a punctual and direct Anſwer, whether you will anſwer your Charge or no, and what your Anſwer is.

King. " Sir, by your Favour, I do not know " the Forms of Law: I do know Law and Reaſon, " tho' I am no Lawyer profeſſed. But I know as " much Law as any Gentleman in England: and " therefore, under favour, I do plead for the Li- " berties of the People of England more than you " do: and therefore if I ſhould impoſe a Belief up- " on any without Reaſons given for it, it were un- " reaſonable. But I muſt tell you, that by that " Reaſon I have as thus informed, I cannot yield " unto it.

L. Preſident. Sir, I muſt interrupt you, you may not be permitted: You ſpeak of Law and Reaſon; it is fit there ſhould be Law and Reaſon, and there is both againſt you. Sir, the Vote of the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament, it is the Reaſon of the Kingdom; and they are theſe two that have given Being to that Law according to which you ſhould have Ruled and Reigned. Sir, You are not to diſpute our Authority; you are told it again by the Court. Sir, It will be taken notice of, that you ſtand in Contempt of the Court, and your Con- tempt will be recorded accordingly.

King. " I do not know how a King may be a " Delinquent, by any Law that ever I heard of. " All Men, (Delinquents or what you will) let me " tell you, they may put in Demurrers againſt any " Proceeding as Legal; and I do demand That, " and demand to be heard with my Reaſons. If you " deny That, you deny Reaſon.

L. Preſident. Sir, You have offer'd ſomething to the Court, I ſhall ſpeak ſomething to you the Senſe of the Court. Sir, Neither you nor any Man are permitted to diſpute that Point: You are concluded, you may not demur to the Juriſdiction of the Court. If you do, I muſt let you know they over-rule your Demurrer. They ſit here by the Authority of the Commons of England, and all your Predeceſſors, and you, are reſponſible to them.

King. " I deny that: ſhew me one Precedent.

L. Preſident. Sir, You ought not to interrupt while the Court is ſpeaking to you. This Point is not to be debated by you, neither will the Court permit you to do it. If you offer it by way of De- murr to the Juriſdiction of the Court, they have concluded of their Juriſdiction: They do affirm their own Juriſdiction. 1648. 24 Car. I.

King. " I ſay Sir, by your favour, that the Com- " mons of England was never a Court of Judicature: " I would know how they came to be ſo.

L. Preſident. Sir, You are not to be permitted to go on in that Speech, and theſe Diſcourſes.

[Then the Clerk of the Crown read as follows:]

Charles Stuart, King of England, you have been accuſed, on the behalf of the People of England, of High-Treaſon and other high Crimes; and the Court have determined, that you ought to anſwer the ſame.

King. " I will anſwer the ſame, ſo ſoon as I " know by what Authority you do this.

L. Preſident. If this be all that you will ſay, then Gentlemen, you that brought the Priſoner hither, take Charge of him back again.

King. " I do require, that I may give in my " Reaſons why I do not Anſwer, and give me time " for that.

L. Preſident. Sir, it is not for Priſoners to Re- quire.

King. " Priſoners! Sir, I am not an ordinary " Priſoner.

L. Preſident. The Court has conſidered of their Juriſdiction, and they have already affirmed their Juriſdiction: If you will not anſwer, we will give Order to record your Default.

King. " You never heard my Reaſons yet.

L. Preſident. Sir, your Reaſons are not to be heard againſt the higheſt Juriſdiction.

King. " Shew me that Juriſdiction where Reaſon " is not to be heard.

L. Preſident. Sir, We ſhew it you here, the Commons of England: And the next time you are brought you will know more of the Pleaſure of the Court, and it may be their final Determination.

King. " Shew me where ever the Houſe of Com- " mons were a Court of Judicature of that kind.

L. Preſident. Serjeant, Take away the Priſoner.

King. " Well Sir, remember that the King is not " ſuffer'd to give in his Reaſons for the Liberty " and Freedom of all his Subjects.

L. Preſident. " Sir, You are not to have Liberty " to uſe this Language. How great a Friend you " have been to the Laws and Liberties of the Peo- " ple, let all England and the World judge.

King. " Sir, under favour, it was the Liberty, " Freedom, and Laws of the Subject, that I ever " took to defend Myſelf with Arms: I never took " up Arms againſt the People, but for the Laws.

L. Preſident. The Command of the Court muſt be obey'd, no Anſwer will be given to the Charge.

King. " Well, Sir.

[And ſo he was guarded forth to Sir Robert Cotton's Houſe: and the Court adjourn'd till to Morrow.]

Tueſday Jan. 23. Mr. Sollicitor Cook moved the Court, that the Charge againſt the Priſoner may be taken pro confeſſo, and ſpeedy Judgment pronoun- ced againſt him. And the Lord Preſident requiring him to give a poſitive and final Anſwer in plain Engliſh; the King, after a little Pauſe, ſaid: Third Day of Trial.

King. " When I was here Yeſterday, I did de- " ſire to ſpeak for the Liberties of the People of " England; I was interrupted, and deſire to know " yet, whether I may ſpeak freely or no.

L. Preſident. —— Sir, I muſt let you know from the Court, as their Commands, that you are not permitted to iſſue out into any other Diſcourſes, till ſuch time as you have given a poſitive Anſwer concerning the Matter that is charg'd upon you.

King. " For the Charge I value it not of a Ruſh: " it is the Liberty of the People of England I ſtand " for. For me to acknowledge a new Court that " I never heard of before, I that am your King, that " ſhould be an example to all the People of England 1648. 24 Car. I. " to uphold Juſtice, to maintain the old Laws, indeed I do not know how to do it. You ſpoke " very well the firſt Day that I came here (on Saturday) of the Obligations that I had laid upon " me by God, to the maintenance of the Liberties " of my People: The ſame Obligation you ſpake of " I do acknowledge to God that I owe to him and " to my People, to defend, as much as in me lies, " the ancient Laws of the Kingdom. Therefore " until that I may know that this is not againſt the " fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, by your favour, I can put in no particular Anſwer. If you " will give me time, I will ſhew you my Reaſons, " why I cannot do it. And thus.——

" to

[Here being interrupted, he ſaid,]

"By your Favour, you ought not to interrupt me; " how I came here I know not; there is no Law for " it to make your King your Priſoner. I was in a " Treaty upon the publick Faith of the Kingdom, " that was the known —— two Houſes of Parliament, that was the Repreſentative of the " Kingdom. And when that I had almoſt made an " end of the Treaty, then I was hurried away and " brought hither: And therefore ——

Lord Preſident. Sir you muſt know the pleaſure of the Court.

King. " By your favour, Sir.

Lord Preſident. Nay, Sir, by your favour, you may not be permitted to fall into thoſe Diſcourſes. You appear as a Dilinquent; you have not acknowledged the Authority of the Court, the Court craves it not of you, but once more they command you to give your poſitive Anſwer. —— Clerk, do your Duty.

King. " Duty, Sir!

[The Clerk reads a Paper, requiring the King to give a poſitive and final Anſwer, by way of Confeſſion or Denial of the Charge.]

King. " Sir, I ſay again to you, ſo that I might " give ſatisfaction to the People of England of the " clearneſs of my Proceedings, not by way of Anſwer, not in this way; but to ſatisfie them that I " have done nothing againſt that Truſt that hath " been committed to me, I would do it: but to acknowledge a new Court againſt their Privilege, to " alter the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, Sir, " you muſt excuſe me.

Lord Preſident. Sir, this is the third time that you have publickly diſowned this Court, and put an Affront upon it. How far you have preſerved the Privileges of the People, your Actions have ſpoke it; and truly, Sir, Men's Intentions ought to be known by their Actions. You have written your meaning in bloody Characters throughout the whole Kingdom. But, Sir, you underſtand the pleaſure of the Court. ——Clerk, record the Default.—— And Gentlemen, you that took charge of the Priſoner take him back again.

King. " I will ſay this one Word more to you. " If it were my own particular, I would not ſay " any more, nor interrupt you.——

Lord Preſident. Sir, you have heard the pleaſure of the Court, and you are (notwithſtanding you will not underſtand it) to find that you are before a Court of Juſtice.

[Then the King was guarded back to Sir Robert Cotton's Houſe, where he lay laſt Night and this, and the Court adjourned till the next Day.

[Thurſday and Friday the Court ſate in private, to reſolve upon the Condemnation and Execution of the King.] Laſt Day.

Saturday Jan. 27. the Court being ſate, the King was brought into Weſtminſter-Hall, ſome of the Soldiers calling for Juſtice, Juſtice and Execution. Silence being commanded, his Majeſty began.

King. " I deſire to be heard a little, and I hope I " ſhall give no occaſion of Interruption.

Preſident. You may anſwer in your time, hear the Court firſt.

King. " If it pleaſe you, Sir, I deſire to be heard, " and I ſhall not give any occaſion of Interruption, and 'tis only in a Word; a ſudden Judgment. ——

Preſident. Sir, you ſhall be heard in due time, but you are to hear the Court firſt.

King. " Sir, I deſire it, it will be in order to what " I believe the Court will ſay; and therefore, Sir, " —— a haſty Judgment is not ſo ſoon recalled.

Preſident. Sir, you ſhall be heard before the Judgment be given, and in the mean time you may forbear.

King. " Well, Sir, ſhall I be heard before the " Judgment be given?

[Then the Preſident gave account how the Priſoner had been charged, and how he refuſed to anſwer; and told him he ſhould not be heard in any thing againſt the Juriſdiction of the Court; but if he had any thing to ſay in defence of himſelf, concerning the matter charged they would hear him.

King. " Since I ſee that you will not hear any " thing of Debate concerning that, which I confeſs " I thought moſt material for the Peace of the Kingdom, and Liberty of the Subject, I ſhall wave it; " I ſhall ſpeak nothing to it. But only I muſt tell " you, that this many a Day all things have been " taken away from me, but that that I call dearer " to me than my Life, which is my Conſcience and " my Honour. And if I had a reſpect to my Life " more than the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, certainly I ſhould have made " a particular defence for myſelf; for by that, at " leaſtwiſe, I might have delayed an ugly Sentence " which I believe will paſs upon me. Therefore, " certainly Sir, as a Man that hath ſome Underſtanding, ſome knowledge of the World, if that 1648. 24 Car. I. "my true Zeal to my Country had not overborn "the care that I have for my own Preſervation, I "ſhould have gone another way to work than that "I have done.

" my

"Now, Sir, I conceive then an haſty Sentence "once paſſed may ſooner be repented of than re- "called: And truly the ſelf-ſame deſire that I have "for the peace of the Kingdom and the Liberty of "the Subject, more than my own particular Ends, "makes me now at laſt deſire, that I have ſome- "thing to ſay that concerns both, before Sentence "be given, that I may be heard in the Painted- "Chamber before the Lords and Commons. This "delay cannot be prejudical to you, whatſoever I "ſay. If that I ſay be not Reaſon, thoſe that hear "me muſt be Judges; if it be Reaſon, and really "for the Welfare of the Kingdom, and the Liberty "of the Subject, I am ſure of it, it is very well worth "the hearing. Therefore I do conjure you, as you "love that that you pretend (I hope it is real) the "Liberty of the Subject, the Peace of the Kingdom, "that you will grant me this Hearing before any "Sentence be paſt. I only deſire this, that you will "take this into your conſideration; it may be you "have not heard of it before-hand. If you will, I "will retire, and you may think of it. But if I "cannot get this liberty, I do proteſt, that theſe "fair ſhews of Liberty and Peace are pure ſhews, "and that you will not hear your King.

[The Preſident made this to be a farther declining the Juriſdiction of the Court; but for a pretence, the Court withdrew for half an Hour into the Court of Wards, and then returning and calling for the Priſoner, the Preſident ſaid,

Sir, you were pleaſed to make a motion here to the Court, to offer a Deſire of yours, touching the propounding of ſomewhat to the Lords and Commons in the Painted-Chamber for the Peace of the Kingdom. Sir, you did in effect receive an Anſwer before the Court adjourned. Truly, Sir, their withdrawing and adjournment was pro forma tantum, for it did not ſeem to them that there was any difficulty in the thing. —— And notwithſtanding what you have offer'd, they are reſolved to proceed to Sentence and to Judgment, and that is their unanimous conſent.

King. "Sir, I know it is in vain for me to diſ- "pute; I am no Sceptick for to deny the Power that "you have, I know that you have Power enough. "Sir, I muſt confeſs, I think it would have been "for the Kingdom's Peace, if you would have ta- "ken the pains to have ſhewn the lawfulneſs of "your Power. For this Delay that I have deſired, "I confeſs it is a Delay, but it is a delay very im- "portant for the Peace of the Kingdom: For it is "not my Perſon that I look at alone, it is the King- "dom's welfare and the Kingdom's Peace.

"It is an old Sentence, that We ſhould think long "before we reſolve on great Matters ſuddenly. Therefore, "Sir, I do ſay again, that I do put at your Doors "all the Inconveniency of a haſty Sentence. —— "A little delay of a Day or two farther may give "Peace; whereas a haſty Judgment may bring on "that trouble and perpetual inconveniency to the "Kingdom, that the Child that is unborn may re- "pent it. And therefore again, out of the Duty I "owe to God and to my Country, I do deſire that "I may be heard by the Lords and Commons in the "Painted-Chamber, or any other Chamber that you "will appoint me.

Preſident. You have been already anſwer'd to what "you even now moved, being the ſame you moved "before, ſince the Reſolution and the Judgment of "the Court in it. And the Court now requires to "know, whether you have any more to ſay for your "ſelf than you have ſaid, before they proceed to Sen- "tence.

King. "I ſay this, Sir, that if you hear me, if "you will give me but this delay, I doubt not but "I ſhall give ſome ſatisfaction to you all here, and "to my People after that. And therefore I do re- "quire you, as you will anſwer it at the dreadful "Day of Judgment, that you will conſider it once "again. 1648. 24 Car. I.

Preſident. Sir, I have received Directions from the Court.

King. "Well, Sir!

Preſident. If this muſt be reinforced, or any thing of this Nature, your Anſwer muſt be the ſame, and they will proceed to Sentence, if you have nothing more to ſay.

King. "I have nothing more to ſay, but I ſhall "deſire that this may be enter'd what I have ſaid.

Preſident. The Court then, Sir, hath ſomething to ſay unto you, which I know will be very unacceptable, yet notwithſtanding they are willing and reſolved to diſcharge their Duty.

King. "I will deſire only one Word before you "give Sentence, and that is, that you would hear "me concerning thoſe great Imputations that you "have laid to my charge.

Preſident. Sir, you muſt give me now leave to go on: For I am not far from your Sentence, and your time is now paſt.

King. "But I ſhall deſire you will hear me a few "Words to you; for truly whatever Sentence you "will put upon me, in reſpect of thoſe heavy Im- "putations that I ſee by your Speech you have put "upon me. Sir, it is very true that. ——

[Then the Preſident interrupted him, and told him, he had not owned them as a Court, and therefore they would admit of no farther delay; concluding,]

Pref. We are not here Jus dare, but Jus dicere, to do that which the Law preſcribes; we cannot be unmindful of what the Scripture tells us; For to acquit the Guilty is of equal Abomination as to condemn the Innocent: We may not acquit the Guilty. What Sentence the Law affirms to a Traitor, Murderer and a publick Enemy to the Country, that Sentence you are now to hear read unto you.

[The Clerk read the Sentence, concluding,]

Clerk. For all which Treaſons and Crimes, this Court doth adjudge, that he the ſaid Charles Stuart as a Tyrant, Traitor, Murderer and a publick Enemy, ſhall be put to Death by the ſevering of his Head from his Body.

[The Preſident added,]

After Sentence, his Majeſty ſaid, Will you hear me a Word, Sir?

Preſident. Sir, You are not to be heard after the Sentence.

King. "No Sir!

Preſident. No Sir; by your Favour, Sir. Guard, withdraw your Priſoner.

King. "I may ſpeak after Sentence, by your Favour, Sir. I may ſpeak after Sentence ever. By "your Favour hold —— the Sentence Sir. —— I ſay "Sir, I do —— I am not ſuffer'd to ſpeak, expect "what Juſtice other People will have.

His Majeſty being taken away by the Guard, as he paſſed down the Stairs the Soldiers ſcoffed at him, blowing the Smoak of their Tobacco in his Face, and throwing their Pipes in his way; and even one ſpit in his Face, his Majeſty taking no more notice of that barbarous Indignity, than to wipe it off with his Handkerchief. As he paſſed along, hearing the Rabble of Soldiers crying out, Juſtice, Juſtice; he ſaid, Poor Souls! for a piece of Money they would do ſo for their Commanders.

In the Evening, a Member of the Army acquainted the Committee with his Majeſty's Deſire, That ſeeing they had paſs'd a Sentence of Death upon him, and his time might be nigh, he might ſee his Children: and Dr. Juxon Biſhop of London might be admitted to aſſiſt him in his private Devotions, and receiving the Sacrament. Both which at length were granted.

The King prepares for Death.

Sunday Jan. 28. the King was attended by a Guard from Whitehall to St. James's; where the Biſhop of London, after Prayers, Preach'd before him on theſe Words, Rom. 2. 16. In the Day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of all men by Jeſus Chriſt according to my Goſpel. Upon which he explain'd the Doctrine of a future Judgment, and made an Application ſuited to the ſaid Occaſion, and after that adminiſter'd the Sacrament. The King ſpent the Remainder of the Day in Prayer and Meditation, and pious Conference with the good Biſhop, avoiding all Interruption, and for that reaſon refuſing to admit the Prince Elector, the Duke of Richmond, Marquis of Hertford, Earls of Southampton and Lindſey, and ſome others, who came to offer their laſt Duties to him; but, ſaid the King, My Time is ſhort and precious, and I am deſirous to improve it the beſt I may in Preparation: I hope they will not take it ill that none have Acceſs to me but my Children: The beſt Office they can do now, is to pray for me.

King takes leave of his Children.

Monday Jan. 29. the King's Children being brought to take their Leave of him, he firſt gave his Bleſſing to the Lady Elizabeth, and bid her remember to tell her Brother James, whenever ſhe ſhould ſee him, that it was his Father's laſt Deſire, that he ſhould no more look upon Charles as his eldeſt Brother only, but be obedient unto him as his Soveraign; and that they ſhould love one another, and forgive their Father's Enemies. Then ſaid the King to her, Sweet-heart, you will forget this. No, ſaid ſhe, I ſhall never forget it whilſt I live. He wiſh'd her not to grieve and torment herſelf for him; for it would be a glorious Death that he ſhould die, it being for the Laws and Liberties of this Land, and for maintaining the true Proteſtant Religion. He bid her read Biſhop Andrews's Sermons, Hooker's Eccleſiaſtical Policy, and Biſhop Laud's Book againſt Fiſher, which would ground her againſt Popery. He told her, He had forgiven all his Enemies, and hoped God would forgive them. He bid her tell her Mother, that his Thoughts had never ſtrayed from her, and that his Love ſhould be the ſame to the laſt. 1648. 24 Car. I.

Then taking the Duke of Glouceſter on his Knees, he ſaid, Sweet-heart, now they will cut off thy Father's Head, (upon which Words the Child look'd very ſtedfaſtly upon him) Mark Child what I ſay; They will cut off my Head, and perhaps make thee a King: but mark what I ſay, You muſt not be a King ſo long as your Brothers Charles and James do live; for they will cut off your Brothers Heads (when they can catch them) and cut off thy Head too at laſt; and therefore I charge you do not be made a King by them. At which the Child ſighing, ſaid, I will be torn in pieces firſt: which falling ſo unexpectedly from one ſo young, it made the King rejoyce exceedingly. At parting, the King commanded them both to be obedient to their Mother, and bid the Lady Elizabeth ſend his Bleſſing to the reſt of her Brothers and Siſters, with Commendation to all his Friends.

The Prince, then in Holland, had convey'd a Letter to his Majeſty by Mr. Seamour, and by the States Ambaſſadours had interceded with the Parliament, and uſed all poſſible Means with the Army, to prevent, or at leaſt to defer, the Execution. But all in vain; for a Warrant was this Day ſign'd and ſeal'd by 59 of thoſe execrable Judges, directed to Colonel Francis Hacker, Colonel Huncks, and Lieutenant-Colonel Phray, and to every of them, Willing and requiring them to ſee the ſaid Sentence executed in the open Street before Whitehall, upon the Morrow, being the 30th Day of this inſtant Month of January, between the Hours of Ten in the Morning and Five in the Afternoon of the ſame Day, with full effect. Which original Warrant has been lately diſcovered, and now remains a Record of Infamy to this Nation.

A Warrant for Execution.

Day of Execution.

Tueſday Jan. 30. the King having ſlept ſoundly for about four Hours, awak'd near two Hours before Day; and calling to Mr. Herbert, who lay by his Bed-ſide, bid him riſe; For (ſays the King) I will get up, having a great Work to do this Day. Herbert, This is my ſecond Marriage-Day: I would be as trim to Day as may be, for before Night I hope to be eſpouſed to my bleſſed Jeſus. He then appointed what Cloaths he would wear; and, ſays he, Let me have a Shirt on more than ordinary, by reaſon the Seaſon is ſo ſharp as probably may make me ſhake: which ſome Obſervers will imagine proceeds from Fear: I would have no ſuch Imputation; I fear not Death; Death is not terrible to me: I bleſs my God, I am prepared. Soon after the King was dreſs'd, came Dr. Juxon Biſhop of London, preciſely at the time his Majeſty had the Night before appointed; and being firſt an Hour in private with him, call'd in Mr. Herbert, and pray'd in the Prayers of the Church, reading the 27th Chapter of St. Matthew, which relates the Paſſion of our Saviour. After Service, the King thank'd the Biſhop for making choice of that Chapter, being ſo applicable to his preſent Condition: The Biſhop reply'd, May it pleaſe your gracious Majeſty, it is the proper Leſſon for the Day, as appears by the Calender. At which the King was much affected, and thought it a providential Preparation for his Death.

About Ten a clock Colonel Hacker knock'd eaſily at the King's Chamber-door; and knocking louder a ſecond time, the King commanded Mr. Herbert to go to the Door, who demanding why he knock'd? Hacker ſaid, He would ſpeak with the King: The King ſaid, Let him come in. He came in trembling, and told his Majeſty, It was time to go to White-Hall, where he might have ſome farther time to reſt. Well (ſays the King) Go forth, I will come preſently. Soon after, the King took the Biſhop by the hand, and ſaid, Come, let us go; and ſpoke thus to Mr. Herbert, Open the Door, Hacker has given us a ſecond Warning. The King paſs'd through the Garden into the Park, where ſeveral Companies of Foot were drawn up, and made a Guard on each ſide, the Biſhop walking on the King's Right-hand, and Colonel nel Thomlinſon on his Left, both bare-headed: the King walk'd very faſt, and calling on them to walk faſter, ſaid, He now went before them to ſtrive for a heavenly Crown, with leſs ſolicitude than he had often encouraged his Soldiers to fight for an earthly Diadem. At the end of the Park the King went up the Stairs leading to the Long Gallery, and ſo into the Cabinet-Chamber, where, after ſeveral Prayers and pious Diſcourſe, about Twelve he eat a bit of Bread, and drank a Glaſs of Claret. Soon after Colonel Hacker came to the Chamber-door, and gave his laſt Signal. The Biſhop and Mr. Herbert weeping fell upon their Knees, and the King gave them his Hand to kiſs, and help'd up the aged Biſhop, and ſaid, Open the Door; and bidding Hacker go on, ſaid I'll follow. So he was conducted through the Banquetting-houſe to the Scaffold by a Paſſage made through a Window. Many Companies of Foot and Troops of Horſe were placed to keep off the Spectators, whereby his Majeſty was diſappointed of ſpeaking to the People: and therefore directing himſelf chiefly to Colonel Thomlinſon, he ſaid, King's laſt Speech.

"I Shall be very little heard of any body here, I "ſhall therefore ſpeak a Word unto you here. "Indeed I could hold my Peace very well, if I did "not think, that holding my Peace would make "ſome Men think, that I did ſubmit to the Guilt as "well as to the Puniſhment. But I think it is my "Duty to God firſt, and to my Country, for to "clear my ſelf, both as an honeſt Man, a good "King, and a good Chriſtian.

"I ſhall begin firſt with my Innocence. In troth, "I think it not very needful for me to inſiſt long "upon this; for, all the World knows, that I ne-"ver did begin a War firſt with the two Houſes of "Parliament: And I call God to witneſs, to whom "I muſt ſhortly make an Account, that I never did "intend for to encroach upon their Privileges: they "began upon me. It is the Militia they began up-"on: They confeſs'd that the Militia was mine, "but they thought it fit for to have it from me. "And, to be ſhort, if any body will look to the "Dates of Commiſſions, of their Commiſſions and "mine, and likewiſe to the Declarations, they will "ſee clearly, that they began theſe unhappy Trou-"bles, not I. So that as to the Guilt of theſe en-"ormous Crimes that are laid againſt me, I hope "in God that God will clear me of it. I will not, "I'm in Charity, God forbid that I ſhould lay it "on the two Houſes of Parliament; there is no "Neceſſity of either: I hope they are free of this "Guilt; for I do believe that ill Inſtruments be-"tween them and me have been the chief Cauſe of "all this Bloodſhed: ſo that by way of ſpeaking, "as I find my ſelf clear of this, I hope and pray "God that they may too. Yet for all this, God "forbid that I ſhould be ſo ill a Chriſtian, as not "to ſay, that God's Judgments are juſt upon me: "Many times he does pay Juſtice by an unjuſt "Sentence; that is ordinary. I only ſay this, that Meaning the Earl of Straffford.

"an unjuſt Sentence that I ſuffer'd to take effect, is "puniſh'd now by an unjuſt Sentence upon me. "That is —— So far I have ſaid to ſhew you "that I am an innocent Man.

Pointing to Biſhop Juxon.

"Now to ſhew you that I am a good Chriſtian, "I hope there is a good Man that will bear me "witneſs, that I have forgiven all the World; and "even thoſe in particular that have been the chief "Cauſes of my Death. Who they are, God knows; "I do not deſire to know: I pray God forgive "them. But this is not all; my Charity muſt go "farther: I wiſh that they may repent; for in-"deed they have committed a great Sin in that "Particular. I pray God, with St. Stephen, that "this be not laid to their Charge; nay, not only "ſo, but that they may take the right way to the "Peace of the Kingdom: For, my Charity com-"mands me not only to forgive particular Men, "but my Charity commands me to endeavour to "the laſt Gaſp the Peace of the Kingdom. So Sirs, "I do wiſh with all my Soul (and I do hope there "is ſome here will carry it farther) that they may "endeavour the Peace of the Kingdom.

1648. 24 Car. I.

Turning to ſome Gentlemen who wrote.

"Now, Sirs, I muſt ſhew you both how you are "out of the Way, and will put you in a way.

"Firſt, You are out of the Way: For certainly "all the Way you have ever had yet, as I could "find by any thing, is in the Way of Conqueſt. Cer-"tainly this is an ill way; for Conqueſt, Sirs, in "my Opinion is never juſt, except there be a good "juſt cauſe, either for matter of wrong or juſt Ti-"tle; and then if you go beyond it, the firſt quar-"rel you have to it, that makes it unjuſt at the "end, that was juſt at the firſt. But if it be only "matter of Conqueſt, then it is a great Robbery; "as a Pirate ſaid to Alexander the Great, that he was "the great Robber, himſelf was but a petty Robber. "And ſo, Sirs, I do think the way that you are "in is much out of the way.

"Now, Sirs, for to put you in the way, believe "it, you will never do right, nor will God ever "proſper you, until you give God his due, the King "his due (that is, my Succeſſors) and the Peo-"ple their due: I am as much for them as any of "you.

"You muſt give God his due by regulating right-"ly his Church (according to his Scripture) which "is now out of order. For to ſet you in a way "particularly, now I cannot, but only this, a Na-"tional Synod freely called, freely debating amongſt "themſelves muſt ſettle this, when that every Opi-"nion is freely and clearly heard.

"For the King, indeed I will not [then turning to a Gentleman who touch'd the Axe, he ſaid, Hurt not the Axe, that may hurt me.] "For the "King, the Laws of the Land will clearly inſtruct "you for that. Therefore becauſe it concerns my "own particular, I only give you a touch of it. "For the People: and truly I deſire their Liberty "and Freedom as much as any body whomſoever; "but I muſt tell you that their Liberty and Free-"dom conſiſts in having of Government, thoſe Laws "by which their Life and their Goods may be moſt "their own. It is not for having a ſhare in Govern-"ment, Sirs, that is nothing pertaining to them; "a Subject and a Soveraign are clear different things. "And therefore until they do that I mean, that you "do put the People in that Liberty as I ſay, cer-"tainly they will never enjoy themſelves. Sirs, it "was for this that now I am come here: If I would "have given way to an arbitrary way, for to have "all Laws changed according to the Power of the "Sword, I needed not to have come here: And "therefore I tell you (and I pray God it be not laid "to your charge) that I am the Martyr of the Peo-"ple.

"In troth, Sirs, I ſhall not hold you much lon-"ger, for I will only ſay this to you, that in truth "I could have deſired ſome little time longer, be-"cauſe that I would put this that I have ſaid in "little more Order, and a little better digeſted than "I have done, and therefore I hope you will excuſe "me. I have delivered my Conſcience, I pray God "that you do take thoſe courſes that are beſt for "the good of the Kingdom and your own Salva-"tion.

Then the Biſhop ſaid, Tho' it be very well known what your Majeſty's Affections are to the Proteſtant Religion, yet it may be expected, that you ſhould ſay ſomewhat for the World's ſatisfaction in that particular.

Whereupon the King reply'd, "I thank you hear-"tily, my Lord, for that, I had almoſt forgotten "it. In troth, Sirs, my Conſcience in Religion, "I think is very well known to all the World; and "therefore I do declare before you all, that I die "a Chriſtian, according to the Profeſſion of the "Church of England, as I found it left me by my Pointing to the Biſhop.

Then turning to the Officers, he ſaid, Sirs, excuſe me for this ſame, I have a good Cauſe, and I have a gracious God, I will ſay no more. Then to Colonel Hacker, he ſaid, Take care that they do not put me to Pain, and, Sir, this and pleaſe you.—— But here a Gentleman coming near the Axe, he ſaid, Take heed of the Axe, pray take heed of the Axe. Then he ſpoke to the Executioner, I ſhall ſay but very ſhort Prayers, and when I thruſt out my Hands.—— Then he called to the Biſhop for his Cap, and having put it on, he ask'd the Executioner, Does my Hair trouble you? Who deſired him to put it all under his Cap; and as he was doing this, by the help of the Biſhop and Executioner, he ſaid, turning to the Biſhop, I have a good Cauſe and a gracious God on my ſide. The Biſhop ſaid, " There is but one Stage more, which tho' turbulent " and troubleſome, yet it is a very ſhort one; you " may conſider, it will ſoon carry you a very great " way: It will carry you from Earth to Heaven, " and there you ſhall find to your great Joy the " Prize you haſten to, a Crown of Glory. The King adjoin'd, I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible Crown, where no diſturbance can be, no diſturbance in the World. The Biſhop added, " You are exchanged from " a temporal to an eternal Crown, a good exchange. Then the King ask'd the Executioner, Is my Hair well? And taking off his Cloak and George, he delivered his George to the Biſhop, ſaying, Remember. Then putting off his Doublet, and being in his Waſtcoat, he put on his Cloak again, and looking upon the Block, ſaid to the Executioner, You muſt ſet it faſt. The Executioner ſaying, it was faſt; the King ſaid, It might have been a little higher. Being told by him it could be now no higher, the King ſaid, When I put out my Hands this way, then.—— And ſaying a few Words to himſelf as he ſtood, with Hands and Eyes lift up, immediately ſtooping down, he laid his Neck upon the Block, and the Executioner again putting his Hair under his Cap, his Majeſty thinking he had been going to ſtrike, bad him ſtay for the ſign; to which the Executioner ſaid, " Yes I will " and it pleaſe your Majeſty. So after a ſhort pauſe, his Majeſty ſtretching forth his Hands, the Executioner (who was all the while in a Mask) at one blow ſevered his Head from his Body, which being held up and ſhewed to the aſtoniſh'd People, was with his Body put into a Coffin covered with black Velvet, and carried into his Lodging Chamber in Whitehall.

It muſt be dreadfully remember'd, that the then cruel Powers did ſuſpect, that the King would not ſubmit his Head to the Block; and therefore to bring him down by violence to it, they had prepared Hooks and Staples (made by a Smith in Aldgate) to hawl him as a Victim to the Slaughter. But by the Example of his Saviour, he reſiſted not, he diſappointed their Wit, and yielded to their Malice.

Apology for General Fairfax

There be grounds for the Charity of thinking, that General Fairfax was not conſenting to the King's Murder, but was amuſed by Cromwel to the very Day of Execution, and even then drawn by him into ſeeking God by Prayer, till the blow was over. Sir Thomas Herbert aſſures us, That while the Biſhop and he were going with the King's Body to be embalm'd, he ſtep'd into the Long-Gallery, and the General there meeting him, ask'd him, How the King did? Which he at firſt thought ſtrange; but he afterward perceiv'd, that the General knew not what had paſſed, being all that Morning uſing his Power and Intereſt to have the Execution deferred for ſome Days, forbearing to come among the Officers, and fully reſolving with his own Regiment to prevent the Blow, or to defer it till he could make a Party in the Army to ſecond his Deſign: but being with the Officers of the Army then at Prayer in Colonel Harriſon's Apartment, he came from thence without knowledge of the matter, and was much ſurprized when Mr. Herbert told him of it.

Application was made to the Men in Power, for leave to bury the Royal Corps in King Henry VII.'s Chaple; but the Requeſt was denied upon this Reaſon, that it might attract great Numbers of People to that place, which might be inconvenient and unſafe. And therefore upon a ſecond Addreſs to the Committee of Parliament, an Order was given dated Feb. 6. to authorize Mr. Herbert and Mr. Mildmay to bury the King's Body in the Royal Chapel of St. George within the Caſtle of Windſor. Hence the Body being embalm'd and laid in a Coffin of Lead, to be ſeen for ſome Days by the People, was on Feb. 7. carried from St. James's in a Hearſe covered with black Velvet, and drawn by ſix Horſes, with four Coaches following, and ſo brought to Windſor Caſtle, where the Order for Interment was ſhewn to the Governor Colonel Whichcot. Next Day came the Duke of Richmond, the Marquis of Hartford, the Earls of Southampton and Lindſey, and the Biſhop of London, with two Votes paſſed that Morning, whereby the ordering of the King's Burial was committed to the Duke, provided the Expences thereof exceeded not five hundred Pounds. Theſe Lords agreed, that the King's Body ſhould be interr'd in a Vault about the middle of the Choir, over againſt the eleventh Stall upon the Soveraign's ſide, in which Vault were laid the Bodies of King Henry VIII. and Queen Jane Seymour. This Vault being open'd, the King's Body was brought from his Bed-Chamber into St. George's-Hall, and thence with a ſlow and ſolemn Pace carried by Gentlemen, the Lords following, and ſet down in the Choir near the place of Burial, where the Biſhop of London ſtood ready with the Service-Book in his Hands to have performed that laſt Duty by the publick Form of Burial; but the rude Colonel would not ſuffer it to be done; and tho' the Lords earneſtly deſired it, and inſiſted on the Parliaments leave for it, yet ſtill he denied, and ſaid, it was improbable the Parliament would permit the uſe of what they had ſo ſolemnly aboliſhed, and therein deſtroy their own Act. So the Body was ſilently depoſited with this Circumſcription in capital Letters upon Lead 1648.

It has been made a Queſtion and a Wonder by ſome Perſons, why a Monument was not erected for him after the Reſtauration of his Son, when the Commons were well inclined to have given a Sum of Money for that grateful Purpoſe. We are afraid, the true Reaſon was, that the Royal Body could not be found; thoſe who murther'd it had diſturb'd it in the very Grave, and had carried it away to ſome other place, and God alone knows whether they gave it any ſecond Interment. The Lord Clarendon ſpeaks ſoftly of this matter, when he ſays, " Upon " the Return of King Charles II. with ſo much Con- " gratulation and univerſal Joy of the People, a- " bove ten Years after the Murther of his Father, " it was generally expected that the Body ſhould be " removed from that obſcure Burial, and with ſuch " Ceremony as ſhould be thought fit, ſhould be ſo- " lemnly depoſited with his Royal Anceſtors in King " Henry VII.'s Chapel in the Collegiate Church of " Weſtminſter. And the King himſelf intended no- " thing more, and ſpoke often of it, as if it were " only defer'd till ſome Circumſtances and Ceremo- " nies in the doing it might be adjuſted. But, by " degrees, the diſcourſe of it was diminiſhed, as if " it were totally laid aſide upon ſome Reaſons of " State, the ground whereof ſeveral Men gueſſed at " according to their Fancies; and thereupon caſt " thoſe Reproaches upon the States-men as they " thought reaſonable, when the Reaſons which were " ſuggeſted by their own Imaginations, did not ſa- " tisfie their underſtanding. For the ſatisfaction " and information of all Men, I chuſe in this place " to explain that matter, which, it may be, is not known to many, and at that time was not, for many Reasons thought fit to be published.

" known

"The Duke of Richmond was dead before the King return'd; the Marquis of Hertford died in a short time after, and was seldom out of his Lodging after his Majesty came to Whitehall; the Earl of Southampton and the Earl of Lindsey went to Windsor, and took with them such of their own Servants as had attended them in that Service, and as many others as they remember'd had been then present, and were still alive; who all amounted to a small number, there being at the time of the Interment great strictness used in admitting any to be present, whose Names were not included in the Order which the Lords had brought. In a Word, the confusion they had at that time observed to be in that Church, and the small Alterations which were begun to be made towards decency, so totally perplexed their Memories that they could not satisfie themselves in what place or part of the Church the Royal Body was interr'd; yet where any concurr'd upon this or that place, they caused the Ground to be open'd at a good distance, and upon such Enquiries found no cause to believe that they were near the place; and upon their giving this Account to the King, the thought of that remove was laid aside, and the Reason communicated to very few, for the better discountenancing farther Enquiry.

His Character is thus drawn by the masterly Hand of the Lord Clarendon. "It will not be unnecessary to add a short Character of his Person, that Posterity may know the inestimable loss which the Nation then underwent, in being deprived of a Prince whose Example would have had a greater influence upon the Manners and Piety of the Nation than the most strict Laws can have. To speak first of his private Qualifications as a Man, before the mention of his Princely and Royal Virtues; he was, if ever any, the most worthy of the title of an honest Man; so great a lover of Justice, that no Temptation could dispose him to a wrongful Action, except it was so disguised to him that he believed it to be just. He had a tenderness and compassion of Nature, which restrained him from ever doing a hard-hearted thing; and therefore he was so apt to grant Pardon to Malefactors, that the Judges of the Land represented to him the damage and insecurity to the Publick that flowed from such his Indulgence. And then he restrain'd himself from pardoning either Murders or High-way Robberies, and quickly discern'd the Fruits of his Severity by a wonderful Reformation of those Enormities. He was very punctual and regular in his Devotions; he was never known to enter upon his Recreations or Sports, though never so early in the Morning before he had been at publick Prayers; so that on hunting Days his Chaplains were bound to a very early Attendance. He was likewise very strict in observing the Hours of his private Cabinet Devotions; and was so severe an exacter of Gravity and Reverence in all mention of Religion, that he could never endure any light or profane Word, with what sharpness of Wit soever it was cover'd: And though he was well pleased and delighted with reading Verses made upon any occasion, no Man durst bring before him any thing that was profane or unclean; that kind of Wit had never any countenance then. He was so great an Example of Conjugal Affection, that they who did not imitate him in that particular durst not brag of their Liberty: And he did not only permit, but directed his Bishops, to prosecute those scandalous Vices in the Ecclesiastical Courts, against Persons of Eminence and near Relation to his Service.

"His Kingly Vertues had some mixture and allay that hinder'd them from shining in full Lustre, and from producing those Fruits they should have been attended with. He was not in his Nature very bountiful though he gave very much. This appeared more after the Duke of Buckingham's Death, after which those showers fell very rarely; and he pausèd too long in giving, which made those to whom he gave less sensible of the Benefit. He kept State to the full, which made his Court very orderly; no Man presuming to be seen in a Place where he had no pretence to be. He saw, and observed Men long before he received them about his Person; and did not love Strangers nor very confident Men. He was a patient hearer of Causes which he frequently accustom'd himself to at the Council-Board, and judg'd very well, and was dexterous in the mediating part; so that he often put an end to Causes by Perswasion which the stubbornes of Men's Humours made dilatory in Courts of Justice.

1648. 24 Car. I.

"He was very fearless in his Person; but, in his riper Years not very enterprizing. He had an excellent Understanding, but was not confident enough of it, which made him often times change his own Opinion for a worse, and follow the Advice of Men that did not judge so well as himself. This made him more irresolute than the conjuncture of his Affairs would admit: If he had been of a rougher and more imperious Nature, he would have found more Respect and Duty. And his not applying some severe Cures to approaching Evils proceeded from the Lenity of his Nature, and the Tenderness of his Conscience, which in all cases of Blood made him chuse the softer way, and not hearken to severe Counsels how reasonably soever urged. This only restrained him from pursuing his Advantage in the first Scotish Expedition, when humanly speaking, he might have reduced that Nation to the most entire Obedience that could have been wished. But no Man can say he had then many who advised him to it, but the contrary, by a wonderful indisposition all his Council had to the War or any other Fatigue. He was always a great lover of the Scotish Nation, having not only been born there but educated by that People, and besieged by them always, having few English about him till he was King, and the major number of his Servants being still of that Nation, who he thought could never fail him: And among these no Man had such an ascendant over him, by the humblest Insinuations as Duke Hamilton had.

"As he excelled in all other Virtues, so in Temperance he was so strict that he abhorr'd all Debauchery to that Degree, that, at a great Festival Solemnity where he once was, when very many of the Nobility of the English and Scots were entertain'd, being told by one who withdrew from thence, what vast draughts of Wine they drank, and That there was one Earl who had drank most of the rest down, and was not himself moved or alter'd, the King said, That he deserved to be hanged; and that Earl coming shortly after into the Room where his Majesty was, in some gaiety, to shew how unhurt he was from that Battle, the King sent one to bid him withdraw from his Majesty's Presence; nor did he in some Days after appear before him.

"So many miraculous Circumstances contributed to his Ruin, that Men might well think that Heaven and Earth conspir'd it. Though he was from the first declension of his Power so much betray'd by his own Servants, that there were very few who remained faithful to him; yet that treachery proceeded not always from any treasonable purpose to do him any harm, but from particular and personal Animosities against other Men. And, afterwards the terror all Men were under of the Parliament, and the guilt they were conscious of themselves, made them watch all opportunities to make themselves gracious to those who could do them good; and so they became Spies upon their 1648. 24 Car. I. "Maſter, and from one piece of Knavery were harden'd and confirm'd to undertake another, till at laſt they had no hope of Preſervation, but by the Deſtruction of their Maſter. And after all this, when a Man might reaſonably believe that leſs than a univerſal Defection of three Nations could not have reduced a great King to ſo ugly a Fate; it is moſt certain, that, in that very hour when he was thus wickedly murther'd in the ſight of the Sun, he had as great a ſhare in the Hearts and Affections of his Subjects in general, was as much belov'd, eſteem'd, and long'd for by the People in general of the three Nations, as any of his Predeceſſors had ever been. To conclude, He was the worthieſt Gentleman, the beſt Maſter, the beſt Friend, the beſt Husband, the beſt Father, and the beſt Chriſtian, that the Age in which he liv'd produced. And if he were not the greateſt King, if he were without ſome Parts and Qualities which have made ſome Kings great and happy, no other Prince was ever unhappy who was poſſeſſed of half his Virtues and Endowments, and ſo much without any kind of Vice.

"Master,

Religion a Reproach to the Saints.

It ſeems a Scandal to think of the Name of Religion in this Land within the Year wherein a moſt lawful, moſt religious, moſt condeſcending King was murder'd in ſtate by his own Subjects before his own Palace. But to keep on the Method of ſeparating Eccleſiaſtical Affairs from Civil, we muſt give ſome ſhort Account of them; which Account will hardly be capable of any Order or Method; for indeed Fanaticiſm was in this one Year at the very height of Perfection or Confuſion: it improv'd from the Beginning of the Civil Wars to the Effuſion of the King's Blood; and then, as if it had attain'd its utmoſt Glory, it declin'd by ſenſible degrees, till being weaker and weaker, it did at laſt ſuffer the Reſtoration of Monarchy and an eſtabliſh'd Church.

Aſſemblys Catechiſm

Apr. 14. ſome of the Aſſembly of Divines waiting at the Door of the Houſe of Commons, were called in, and did acquaint the Houſe, that they had perfected the Catechiſm, according to the former Order of the Houſes, and had inſerted the Places of Scripture in the Margin. Upon which the Houſe order'd, that ſix hundred Copies of the ſaid Catechiſm ſhould be Printed for the Service of the Members of both Houſes, and no more; and gave Thanks to the Aſſembly for their Pains and Endeavours in perfecting this Catechiſm.

Reformation of Oxford.

Such a Spirit of Loyalty and Uniformity was ſtill left in the Univerſity of Oxford, that it was found neceſſary to ſend down the Chancellour, the Earl of Pembroke, to execute the Viſitation, or rather the Inquiſition, that had been lately made in that Place. He came thither Apr. 11. and by Power of Parliament and Arms put Mr. Reynolds into Poſſeſſion of the Deanry of Chriſt-Church in the room of Dr. Fell ejected. Dr. Palmer into the Wardenſhip of All-ſouls, in room of Dr. Shelden. Mr. Harris into the Preſidentſhip of Trinity College, in room of Dr. Potter. Dr. John Wilkinſon into the Preſidentſhip of Magdalen College, in room of Dr. Oliver. Mr. John Wilkins into the Wardenſhip of Wadham, in room of Dr. Pitts. Mr. Cheynell into the Preſidentſhip of St. John's, in room of Dr. Bayly. Mr. Greenwood into the Principality of Brazen-Noſe College, in room of Mr. Radcliff. And ſeveral others were thruſt into the Places of ejected Heads and Members. For which, on April 21. the Commons gave the Thanks of their Houſe to the Right Honorable the Earl of Pembroke, Chancellour, for his great Care and Pains in ſettling and reforming the Univerſity of Oxford.

May 1. the Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration the Buſineſs of the Church, for ſettling the Government and Diſcipline thereof; and voted that all Ordinances referred to Committees concerning Church-Government and Diſcipline, be brought in and determined; and that the Ordinance againſt Blaſphemy and Hereſy be immediately brought in and debated.

June 7. the Houſe of Commons being informed that many of the Aſſembly were at the Door, they were called in, and preſented to the Houſe the Draught of a Letter to be ſent from the Aſſembly here to the Aſſembly in Scotland, in order to ſtrengthen the Amity and Union of both Kingdoms; and deſired the Approbation of the Houſe thereunto. The Houſe debated on the Letter, and approv'd it. 1648. 24 Car. I. Letter of the Engliſh to the Scotch Aſſembly.

June 21. the Ordinance for the more effectual ſettling the Presbyterian Government throughout the Kingdom, was read the ſecond time by the Commons, and committed. After which, the Articles of Faith and Texts of Scripture to them, brought in by the Aſſembly, were order'd to be Printed, with this Title; Articles of Chriſtian Religion approved and paſſed by both Houſes of Parliament, after Advice had with the Aſſembly of Divines, by Authority of Parliament ſitting at Weſtminſter, June 27. 1648. New Articles of Faith.

On July 24. the Commons ſpent much time upon a Paragraph of the large Catechiſm, which was committed, and the Aſſembly were deſired to explain ſome Words therein.

At opening the Treaty of the Iſle of Wight, the King kept a Faſt on Saturday Septemb. 16. with his Houſhold and Attendance, for a Bleſſing on that Treaty, and had a particular Prayer, drawn by his own ſpecial Direction and Dictates, to be uſed with the Form of Common Prayer. By the Papers now remaining which paſſed between his Majeſty and the Divines which attended the Commiſſioners of the two Houſes concerning Epiſcopacy and Church-Government, the Learning, Judgment, and Conſcience of this Prince appeared great, beyond the Denial or Doubt of his Enemies. It was near this time that Mr. Alexander Henderſon, principal Miniſter of the Word of God at Edinburgh, and chief Commiſſioner from the Kirk of Scotland to the Parliament and Synod of England, made a ſolemn Declaration upon his Death-bed, grounded on the Experience he had in converſing and diſputing in Matters of Religion with the King; wherein he prays for the good King's being reſtored to his juſt Rights: and, among other things, ſays thus: "I do declare before God and the World, that ſince I had the Honour and Happineſs to converſe and confer with his Majeſty, with all ſorts of Freedom, eſpecially in Matters of Religion, whether in relation to the Kirk or State, that I found him the moſt intelligent Man that ever I ſpoke with; as far beyond my Expreſſion as Expectation. I profeſs, that I was oft-times aſtoniſh'd with the Solidity and Quickneſs of his Reaſons and Replies, wonder'd how he, ſpending his time ſo much in Sports and Recreations, could have attained to ſo great Knowledge; and muſt confeſs ingenuouſly, that I was convinc'd in Conſcience, and knew not how to give him any reaſonable Satisfaction; yet the Sweetneſs of his Diſpoſition is ſuch, that whatſoever I ſaid was well taken. I muſt ſay, that I never met with any Diſputant of that mild and calm Temper; which convinc'd me the more, and made me think, that ſuch Wiſdom and Moderation could not be without an extraordinary meaſure of Divine Grace. I had heard much of his Carriage towards the Prieſts in Spain, and that King James told the Duke of Buckingham, upon his going thither, that he durſt venture his Son Charles with all the Jeſuits in the World, he knew him to be ſo well grounded in the Proteſtant Religion; but could never believe it before. I obſerved all his Actions, more particularly thoſe of Devotion, which I muſt truly ſay are more than ordinary. —— If I ſhould ſpeak of his Juſtice, Magnanimity, Charity, Sobriety, Chaſtity, Patience, Humility, and of all his both Chriſtian and moral Virtues, I ſhould run myſelf into a Panegyrick, and ſeem to flatter him to ſuch as do not know; if the preſent Condition that I lie in did not exempt me from any Suſpicion of worldly End, when I expect every hour to be cal-

And with this Character of King Charles, given by a Scot, a Presbyterian, an Opponent, we might conclude this fatal Year, unwilling to reveal the farther Iniquities of it. Though in Juſtice to the greater part of the Presbyterian Miniſters, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that when they ſaw too late the ſad Iſſues of Separation and Rebellion, they did then repent of them; and they did then labour to prevent the execrable Fact of putting the King to Death: They drew up and publiſh'd, A ſerious and faithful Repreſentation of the Judgments of the Miniſters of the Goſpel within the Province of London, in a Letter to the General and Council of War, Jan. 18. 1648. delivered by ſome of the Subſcribers. But alas (which was more, we hope, than they knew) it was all to no purpoſe.

Remonſtrance of the Preſbyterian Miniſters againſt the King's Murder.

On the Day of the Father's Murder, an Act was paſs'd to diſinherit the Son; ordaining, That no Perſon whatſoever do preſume to proclaim, declare, publiſh, or any ways to promote Charles Stuart, Son of the ſaid Charles late King of England, commonly called Prince of Wales, or any other Perſon, to be King or chief Magiſtrate of England or Ireland, or of any Dominions belonging to them, under pain of being adjudged a Traitor. Soon after a Committee was appointed to reſtrain the Preaching and Printing any thing againſt the Proceedings of the Houſe, and of the High Court of Juſtice. They preſently after voted, That the Houſe of Peers in Parliament was uſeleſs and dangerous, and ought to be aboliſhed, and that an Act ſhould be brought in to that purpoſe. Then they reſolved upon the Queſtion, " That it hath been " found by Experience, and this Houſe doth declare, " That the Office of a King in this Nation, and to " have the Power thereof in any ſingle Perſon, is " unneceſſary, burthenſome, and dangerous to the " Liberty, Safety, and Publick Intereſt of the Peo-" ple of this Nation, and therefore ought to be abo-" liſhed; and that an Act be brought in to that " purpoſe. Then the Form of Government was declared to be a Commonwealth, and the executive Power was put into the hands of a Council of State, conſiſting of thirty eight Perſons, to act with full Powers for one Year: The Qualification of every Member of this Council of State, or Committee of Eſtates, was, to ſubſcribe unto approving the King's Execution. After this, another High Court of Juſtice was erected for Trial of Delinquents; before whom the Marquis of Hamilton, under the Title of Earl of Cambridge, the Earl of Holland, the Lord Capel, the Lord Goring, and Sir John Owen, were condemn'd to Death for adhering to the King. After Sentence, their Reprieve, or their Execution, was put to the Vote of the Commons, who voted, by great Majority, that the Earl of Cambridge and the Ld. Capel ſhould not be Reprieved, and Sir John Owen ſhould be Reprieved: and on the like Queſtion of Life or Death to the Earl of Holland and the Lord Goring, the firſt was ſacrific'd, and this latter ſaved by one ſingle Vote, which was that of the Speaker. Upon which, the Earl of Cambridge, the Earl of Holland, and the Lord Capel, were all Beheaded in the Palace-Yard at Weſtminſter Mar. 9.

Another High Court of Juſtice.

The Characters and Sufferings of theſe three Noblemen, are thus deliver'd by the Lord Clarendon.

" A Scaffold was erected before Weſtminſter-Hall, " and all the Priſoners condemn'd were brought " from St. James's (as well the two who were Re-" prieved, as the three who were to ſuffer) upon " the 9th of March that was at the end of the Year " 1648. a little more than a Month after the Mur-" der of the King, to Sir Thomas Cotton's Houſe, at " the upper end of Weſtminſter-Hall; where they " were ſuffer'd to repoſe themſelves about the ſpace " of an hour, and then were led ſucceſſively through " the Hall to the Scaffold, Duke Hamilton being " firſt, who ſeem'd yet to have ſome hope of a Re-" prieve, and made ſome ſtay in the Hall, till the " Earl of Denbigh came to him; and after a ſhort " Whiſper, in which he found there was no hope, " he aſcended the Scaffold. He complain'd much " of the Injuſtice that was done him; and that he " was put to Death for obeying the Laws of his " Country; which if he had not done, he muſt have " been put to Death there. He acknowledged the " Obligations he had to the King, and ſeem'd not " ſorry for the Gratitude he had expreſſed, how dear " ſoever it coſt him. His natural Darkneſs and " Reſervation in his Diſcourſe, made him to be " thought a Wiſe-man; and his having been in " Command under the King of Sweden, and his con-" tinual Diſcourſes of Battles and Fortifications, " made him be thought a great Soldier: and both " theſe Miſtakes were the Cauſe that made him be " looked upon as a worſe and a more dangerous " Man than in truth he deſerv'd to be.

1649. 1 Car. II.

" The Earl of Holland was brought next, who, by " his long Sickneſs, was ſo ſpent, that his Spirits " ſerv'd not to entertain the People with long Diſ-" courſe. He ſpoke of his Religion, as a matter " unqueſtionable, by the Education he had had in " the religious Family of which he was a Branch: " which was thought a ſtrange Diſcourſe for a dy-" ing Man; who, tho' a Son, knew enough of the " Iniquity of his Father's Houſe; which ſhould " rather have been buried in ſilence, than by ſuch " an unſeaſonable Teſtimony have been revived in " the Memory and Diſcourſe of Men. He took " more care to be thought a good Friend to Parlia-" ments, than a good Servant to his Maſter, and " was thought to ſay too little of his having failed " ſo much in his Duty to him, which moſt good " Men believed to be the Source from whence his " preſent Calamity ſprung. He was a very well-" bred Man, and a fine Gentleman in good times; " but too much deſired to enjoy Eaſe and Plenty " when the King could have neither; and did think " Poverty the moſt inſupportable Evil that could " befall any Man in this World. He was then ſo " weak, that he could not have liv'd long; and " when his Head was cut off, very little Blood fol-" low'd.

" The Lord Capel was then called; who walked " through Weſtminſter-Hall, ſaluting ſuch of his " Friends and Acquaintance as he ſaw there, with " a very ſerene Countenance, accompanied with his " Friend Dr. Morley, who had been with him from " the time of his Sentence; but at the Foot of the " Scaffold the Soldiers ſtopping the Doctor, his " Lordſhip took his Leave of him, and embracing " him thank'd him, and ſaid he ſhould go no far-" ther, having ſome Apprehenſion that he might " receive ſome Affront by that rude People after his " Death, the Chaplains who attended the two other " Lords being Men of the Time, and the Doctor " being well known to be moſt contrary.

" As ſoon as his Lordſhip had aſcended the Scaf-" fold, he look'd very vigorouſly about, and ask'd, " Whether the other Lords had ſpoken to the Peo-" ple with their Hats on? And being told that they " were bare, he gave his Hat to his Servant, and " then with a clear and ſtrong Voice he ſaid, That " he was brought thither to die for doing that " which he could not repent of: That he had been " born and bred under the Government of a King " whom he was bound in Conſcience to obey; un-" der Laws, to which he had been always obedient; " and in the Boſom of a Church, which he thought " the beſt in the World: That he had never vio-" lated his Faith to either of thoſe, and was now " condemn'd to die againſt all the Laws of the " Land; to which Sentence he did ſubmit.

" He enlarged himſelf in commending the great " Virtue and Piety of the King, whom they had " put

" put to Death; who was ſo juſt and ſo merciful a " Prince; and pray'd to God to forgive the Nation " that innocent Blood. Then he recommended to " 'em the preſent King; who he told them, was their " true and lawful Soveraign, and was worthy to be " ſo: That he had the Honour to have been ſome " Years near his Perſon, and therefore he could not " but know him well; and aſſured them, that he " was a Prince of great Underſtanding, of an excel- " lent Nature, of great Courage, an entire lover of " Juſtice, and of exemplary Piety; that he was not " to be ſhaken in his Religion, and had all thoſe " Princely Virtues which could make a Nation hap- " py; and therefore adviſed them to ſubmit to his " Government, as the only means to preſerve them- " ſelves, their Poſterity and the Proteſtant Religion. " And having with great vehemence recommended " it to them, after ſome Prayers very devoutly pro- " nounced upon his Knees, he ſubmitted himſelf " with an unparallel'd Chriſtian Courage to the fa- " tal ſtroke, which deprived the Nation of the no- " bleſt Champion it had.

" He was a Man in whom the Malice of his E- " nemies could diſcover very few Faults, and " whom his Friends could not wiſh better accom- " pliſh'd, whom Cromwel's own Character well de- " ſcribed, and who indeed would never have been " contented to have lived under that Government. " His Memory all Men lov'd and reverenced, tho' " few followed his Example. He had always lived " in a ſtate of great Plenty and general Eſtimation, " having a very noble Fortune of his own by deſcent, " and a fair addition to it by his Marriage with an " excellent Wife, a Lady of very worthy Extraction, " of great Virtue and Beauty, by whom he had a " numerous Iſſue of both Sexes, in which he took " great Joy and Comfort: So that no Man was " more happy in all his Domeſtick Affairs; and he " was ſo much the more happy, in that he thought " himſelf more bleſſed in them.

" And yet the King's Honour was no ſooner vio- " lated, and his juſt Power invaded, than he threw " all thoſe Bleſſings behind him; and having no o- " ther Obligations to the Crown than thoſe which " his own Honour and Conſcience ſuggeſted to him, " he frankly engaged his Perſon and his Fortune " from the beginning of the Troubles, as many o- " thers did, in all Actions and Enterprizes of the " greateſt hazard and danger; and continued to the " end without ever making one falſe ſtep, as few o- " thers did, though he had once, by the Iniquity of " a Faction that then prevail'd, an Indignity put up- " on him that might have excuſed him for ſome re- " miſſion of his former warmth: But it made no o- " ther impreſſion upon him than to be quiet and " contented whilſt they would let him alone, and " with the ſame chearfulneſs to obey the firſt Sum- " mons when he was called out, which was quickly " after. In a Word, he was a Man that whoever " ſhall after him deſerve beſt of the Engliſh Nation, " he can never think himſelf undervalued, when he " ſhall hear that his Courage, Virtue and Fidelity " is laid in the Ballance with and compared to that " of the Lord Capel.

After this an Act was made, declaring and conſtituting the People of England to be a Commonwealth and Free-ſtate; and an Oath was enjoin'd, called an Engagement to be faithful to the Commonwealth without King or Houſe of Lords.

Lieutenant-General Cromwel was now appointed to be Commander in chief of all the Forces in Ireland, and the Lord Fairfax was continued General of all the Forces in England; Whitlock and Liſle were made Commiſſioners of the new Republican Broad-Seal. An Act was made to remove all malignant and diſaffected Magiſtrates, and to make them incapable of bearing any Office in the Common-wealth.

Lords conſent to be Commons.

The Houſe of Lords being diſſolv'd and aboliſh'd, the Earl of Pembroke humbly ſubmitted to be choſen Knight of the Shire for Berks, and was admitted an inglorious Member of the Houſe of Commons; and the Lord Howard of Eſcrick ſoon after choſen and admitted to be Burgeſs for Carliſle; and the Earl of Salisbury did likewiſe deſcend to the like Honour. New Money was ordered to be coined, on one ſide the Arms of England between a Laurel and a Palm with this Inſcription, The Common-wealth of England; on the other ſide the Arms of England and Ireland, with this Inſcription, God with us. Dr. Doriſlaus being ſent a publick Miniſter from the Powers of England to the States of Holland, was ſtabb'd at Supper in the Hague, by ſeveral of the old deſperate Cavaliers, one of them ſaying, Thus dies one of the King's Judges. Murmurs and Complaints were ſo very high that the Powers in being made an Act May 14. to declare it Treaſon to affirm the preſent Government to be Tyrannical, Uſurp'd or Unlawful, or to endeavour to alter the ſaid Government, or to kill any Member of Parliament or Judge in their Duty.

New Judges.

June 1. Upon a Report of fit and truſty Perſons to be Judges in Weſtminſter-Hall, it was voted by the Commons, that Serjeant Nicholas and Mr. Ask be Judges of the Upper-Bench, that Serjeant Puleſton and Peter Warburton, Eſq; be Judges of the Common-Pleas, that Serjeant Thorp and Mr. Rigby be Barons of the Exchequer. To make a firm Union between the three Principles of Power, the Parliament, the Army and the City of London, it was contrived that the Speaker with the Houſe of Commons, the General with the chief Officers, and the Council of State, ſhould after hearing two Sermons, be feaſted at Grocer's-Hall without drinking of Healths, by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council on June 7. this ſealed up ſuch a friendſhip, that the Houſe referred it to a Committee, to conſider what mark of Honour and Favour the Parliament ſhould beſtow upon the City for their great Affection. And the City preſented to the Lord General a large Baſon and Ewer of beaten Gold, and to Lieutenant General Cromwel Plate to the value of 300 l. and 200 pieces in Gold.

Army and City combine.

Cromwel aſcends.

By this and other Arts of Policy and Popularity, Cromwel began to make the firſt Figure in the Nation, having more and more obliged the Houſe by reduducing of the Levellers, by accepting the difficult Poſt of Ireland, and by ſuppreſſing the Mutinies of the Soldiers who refuſed to go upon that Service, ſo that June 22. he had a pompous Commiſſion in Latin and Engliſh to command all Forces to be ſent into Ireland, and to have all the Civil and Military Power of that Kingdom for three Years; and July 10. he went out of Town with a very noble Equipage and Life-guard; and on the morrow, being a Day of publick Humiliation, he himſelf and ſome of his chief Officers fell upon the work of the Day, and prayed and expounded the Scriptures.

Goes into Ireland.

Before Cromwel could land his Forces in Ireland, the buſineſs was in effect over: For Colonel Jones who had kept poſſeſſion of Dublin till it was in a manner block'd up by the Marquis of Ormond, ſallied out and fell upon Ormond's Army with that advantage that he put them to an entire Rout, and the Marquis himſelf very narrowly eſcaped. So that Cromwel landed and enter'd Dublin without any oppoſition, with a mighty concourſe of People, to whom he made a long Speech with his Hat in his Hand, and they all cryed out that they would live and die with him. He immediately publiſhed a Proclamation for Thankſgiving for the late Defeat given to the Rebels, and commanded the Magiſtrates to execute the Laws againſt Swearing and Drunkenneſs, the Sins that he would have to be thought peculiar to his Enemies. Soon after with his Army of fifteen thouſand Horſe and Foot, he marched toward Tredagh, the ſtrongeſt Gariſon of the Enemy, and after a ſhort Siege took the Town by Storm, and for terror put all the Men of Arms to the Sword, near three thouſand with Sir Arthur Aſhton Governour. After theſe ſtreams of Blood Cromwel march'd towards Wexford, and took in many Gariſons by the way, giving ving a conſtant account of his Proceedings to the Parliament and Council of State, with the Art of aſſuming greater Glory to himſelf, by exhorting them in all his Letters to give the Glory unto God. And he carried all things now with that abſolute command, that there was printed and diſpers'd a Book entitled The Character of King Cromwel, which tho' ſuppreſt for a Libel, was even received as a kind of Prophecy.

Alarms in Scotland.

In January the Parliament alarm'd with the Preparations for the King in Scotland, reſolved to ſend an Army thither to divert the War from England, and offer'd the Command to General Fairfax, but he declined the Service, and was the more ſuſpected becauſe his Lady was a zealous Presbyterian, and a Friend to the Kirk. Upon this juncture the Parliament and Council of State found it neceſſary to employ Cromwel in this other Expedition, and gave him the Honour of reducing Scotland as well as Ireland. The Ambition of doing ſuch double Service inflamed Cromwel into a quicker diſpatch; ſo that before the end of March he had made the Lord Inchequin deſert his remains of an Army, and had forced the Marquis of Ormond to fly into France, and had little to do but to ſail home in triumph; yet he had one ſore Mortification in the death of his Son-in-Law Ireton, who died at the Siege of Limerick in a peſtilential Feaver; and (ſays Sir Philip Warwick) being a Man of Blood (for he had deeply dy'd himſelf in the King's) expired with that Word in his Mouth (for in his raving as I was told by one that was then there, he cried out) I will have more Blood, Blood, Blood.

Death of Ireton.

Condition of King Charles II.

Prince Charles at the Death of his Father juſtly took his Titles, and alas nothing but his Titles, on him; yet he kept up a ſort of Court at the Hague, and received Commiſſioners from Scotland, who were ſent from the Kirk not to ſubmit to him as their King, but to treat with him as an Enemy coming into Alliance with them. The Swediſh Ambaſſador addreſt him as a crown'd Head, and he and the Daniſh Miniſter invited the States to join with them in aſſiſting his Britannick Majeſty to regain his Birth-right. But the States were for no rupture with their young Siſter the Common-wealth of England. The diſtreſſed King had no proſpect but toward Scotland; and yet the Commiſſioners were ſo impoſing in their Terms, that he was forced to Remonſtrate againſt them, and to give Reaſons why he could not comply with their high Demands. However with the little Supplies he had from a few of his faithful Subjects, and from ſome few generous Princes, he made ſome Preparations for an Army in Scotland, and ſent Montroſs before with ſome Men and Money, intending to follow in his Royal Perſon; but the States refuſed him neceſſary ſhipping, and Montroſs was ſo hated and perſecuted by the Kirk, that his Majeſty thought fit to decline the Expedition; and inſtead of going to Scotland he was content to take ſome Refuge in the Iſle of Jerſey, where he was invited and loyally received by the Governor George Carteret. In his way hither he had been nobly entertained by the Arch-duke and the Magiſtrates at Antwerp, and thence to the Court of France, where the Queen his Mother ſent to him Jermyn and Piercy, to let him know, It was the Advice of the Council of France and Hers, that he agree with the Scots upon any terms. Which Advice indeed was falſe and fatal; for the longer the King had reſerv'd himſelf, the more Honour and Intereſt it would have been to him. The Hearts of the People of England ſeemed to be kept from him by nothing but the Sword. At Preſton in Lancaſhire he was proclaimed Charles the ſecond, King of England, &c. at the Market-Croſs, without the offer of any oppoſition. And the Levellers, who made up formidable Bodies in ſeveral Counties, though their demands for taking away Tithes, and Engliſhing Proceedings at Law, &c. were extravagant, yet their laſt Article was alway this, That Prince Charles ſhould be brought in.

Invited to Scotland upon hard terms.

Takes refuge in Jerſey.

The King came into Jerſey with a Retinue of not above three hundred, and when he left the Court of France had brought away no more than three hundred Piſtoles to defray the Expences of his Journey and Voyage. The truth is, Cardinal Mazarine ſeems alway to have thought, that the extirpation of Monarchy in England would raiſe the Grandeur of it in France; and therefore he always obſtructed and retarded the King's Reſtauration; and when his Royal Brother the Duke of York was at this time ſolliciting and humbly beſeeching the King, Queen and Cardinal, to have compaſſion upon the King his Brother, and to give him all Aſſiſtance poſſible for the regaining of his Eſtate and Kingdom, the Cardinal coldly anſwer'd, that they might be hereafter in a capacity to ſerve him, but it could not now be.

1649. 1 Car. II.

Cardinal Mazarine obſtructed the King's Reſtoration.

As ſoon as it was known in Scotland that the King was arrived at Jerſey, Mr. Windram Layds of Libberton was diſpatch'd away with a Meſſage to him; who being admitted to the King's Preſence, preſented theſe Deſires and Offers of the States of Scotland, 1. "That he would ſign the Covenant, and paſs "an Act for all Perſons to take it. 2. That he "would paſs the Acts of Parliament in Scotland, "which were ratified by their two laſt Seſſions. "3. That he would withdraw his Commiſſion to "Montroſs. 4. That he would put away all Pa"piſts from about him. 5. That he would appoint "ſome place in Holland to treat with Commiſſioners "from the Eſtates of Scotland. And 6thly. That "he would give a ſpeedy Anſwer. Some of the King's Council were for rejecting theſe Propoſitions as hard and diſhonourable; others were for accepting of them as in a caſe of Neceſſity; of this latter Opinion was the Queen Mother, who by her Letters urged a compliance to the preſent exigency of Affairs; and even Montroſs adviſed the King to yield to their Deſires, and to make his perpetual Baniſhment one Condition of Agreement. But the King at preſent had too great a ſenſe of Honour, however his Neceſſities did afterward extort a more unreaſonable Submiſſion. In the mean time, the King ſent his Ambaſſadors to the Emperor, the Duke of Muſcovy, the States of Venice, the Grand Signior, and the King of Spain, who all returned Anſwer much to the ſame effect, "That they were ſorry for his Fathers ill ſucceſs, and condoled his "Death; but as to the Differences between him and "the People of England, they were Matters out of "their cogniſance, and they ſhould not meddle in "them. About the ſame time the King ſent over Sir John Berkley and Colonel Slingsby to ſollicite his Cauſe in the Weſt of England; but they had there the misfortune to be apprehended, and ſent up Priſoners to the Tower. And the Powers in being had prepared a Fleet againſt the Iſle of Jerſey, ſo that it was thought proper for the King to leave that place, and return thro' France to Breda, where he fell into new Treaties with the Scot's Commiſſioners, who ſtill inſiſted upon the moſt rigorous Terms, That he ſhould diſclaim all Perſons Excommunicated by the Kirk, meaning Montroſs, and other his moſt Loyal Subjects; that he ſhould take, and enforce the taking of the national Covenant, and ratifie all Acts concerning Presbyterian Government, and conſent to all matters Civil, as determined by the preſent and ſubſequent Parliaments; and to all matters Eccleſiaſtical as order'd by the General-Aſſembly of the Kirk.

The Scots ſend inſolent Demands.

Foreign Princes & States were afraid to aſſiſt him.

The King forced to leave Jerſey.

In matters of Religion, the Commons who now called themſelves the Parliament of England, were ſo jealous of the Pulpits, that they order'd, no Miniſters ſhould teach in their Sermons any thing relating to State Affairs, but only to preach Chriſt in Sincerity, and ordained Penalties to thoſe who ſhould preſume to do otherwiſe: Suppreſſing the liberty of the Pulpits as ſoon as this Liberty to an infinite Scandal had ſerved their ſeditious Purpoſes. Then April 3. they made a Declaration that Tythes should be taken away, but not till another Maintenance be provided for the Ministry as large and as honourable as that by Tythes; that the Presbyterian Government should be established; and a way provided for admission of all such Churches as tend to Godliness, and to advance the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. In their following Debates for a sufficient maintenance of Ministers, it was proposed to be by an Assessment of twelve pence in the Pound upon Lands, and some allowance out of Deans and Chapters Lands and Impropriations; but they never formed their Project into an Act.

Augmentation of Livings.

April 20. it was enacted to abolish and take away the Name and Office of Dean, Subdean, Dean and Chapter, Archdeacon, Chancellor, Chantor, Treasurer, Canon, Prebend, Choirister, and all other Titles and Offices belonging to any College or Collegiate Church or Chapel, excepting the Universities, the Deanary of Christ Church in Oxford, and the Foundations of Westminster, Winchester and Eaton, and to settle the Lands and Hereditaments of them in the hands of Trustees called Contractors, to sell and dispose of them for the Benefit of the Publick. To make this Alienation more plausible, they enacted June 8. that out of the Tythes Impropriate belonging to the late Estates of Archbishops, Bishops, Deans and Chapters, there should be Augmentations made to the Incumbents of small Livings, so as to make up the Maintenance of every Minister to be one hundred Pounds a Year.

Society for propagating the Gospel.

For another specious shew of Zeal, they enacted in July following, that there should be a Corporation for the promoting and propagating the Gospel of Jesus Christ in New England, to be called by the name of The President and Society for the propagation of the Gospel in New-England; and for their stock of Charity, a Collection should be made in all the Parish Churches of England, and they should be enabled to receive or purchase any Estate to the value of two thousand Pounds per Ann.

Independent Army too hard for the Presbyterian Government.

But the State of Religion was to be new modell'd by the Army rather than by any other Power; and therefore in August the General and his Council of Officers petition'd the House, that all Penal Statutes, formerly made, and late Ordinances, whereby many conscientious People were molested, and the propagation of the Gospel hinder'd might be removed; to which the House were bound to assent, and to order the bringing the Matter of the Petition into an Act for ease of tender Consciences; which was but a stratagem of the Independents to overthrow the Presbyterian Government and Discipline. There was little more of Religion in Acts or Votes till March 12. when it was resolved, that a late Book asserting the Observation of the Jewish Sabbath, and condemning the observation of the Lord's-Day as the Christian Sabbath, was Erroneous, Scandalous and Profane, contrary to the practice of the Apostles and all the Christian Churches, and should be therefore burnt, and the Author and Printer punished. And it was indeed high time to think of repressing Heresies and Blasphemies, which now swelled up against Heaven to a most prodigious height. One Salmon a Preacher in Coventry taught his People to Swear and Curse and commit Whoredom upon this profest Principle, That it was God which did swear in them; and that it was their Liberty to keep Company with Women to satisfie their natural Appetites. And one Wyke set up for breathing the Spirit of God into Men, by kissing them three times.

Prodigious Growth of Heresies and Blasphemies.

Some few Examples were made of punishing those blasphemous Wretches; among others, one Bouthelmey a Quarter-Master was tried by a Council of War for Blasphemy, and sentenc'd to have his Tongue bored through with a hot Iron, his Sword broke over his Head, and to be cashier'd the Army. These Spiritual Wickednesses gave the greater hopes to the Papists, who were never more numerous and busie; and Letters from Rome received Feb. 1. advised, that they had there an Agent from England, and that the English Priests there were very confident, that within few Years their Religion would be established in England. Most certainly the Priests and Jesuits well knew that a confusion in Church and State would be their Seed-time and Harvest; for which reason they help'd to destroy Abp. Laud and the King himself. What was deliver'd upon knowledge by Dr. Peter du Moulin since the Restauration, and promised to be made good by a publick Charge and Challenge, deserves to be here inserted. This certain Intelligence shall be justified whensoever Authority will require it, that the Year before the King's Death, a select number of English Jesuits were sent from their whole Party in England, first to Paris to consult with the Faculty of Sorbon, then altogether Jesuited, to whom they put this Question in writing, "That seeing the State of England was in a "likely posture to change Government, whether it "was lawful for the Catholicks to work that Change "for the advancing and securing of the Catholick "Cause in England, by making the King away, "whom there was no hope to reclaim from his He"resy? This was answer'd Affirmatively. After which, the same Persons went to Rome, where the same Question being propounded and debated, it was concluded by the Pope and his Counsel, that it was both Lawful and Expedient for the Catholicks to promote that alteration of State. What followed that Consultation and Sentence all the World knoweth; and how the Jesuites went to work God knoweth, and Time the bringer forth of Truth will let us know.

Cromwel desires to recall'd from Ireland.

Cromwel had now a great mind to leave Ireland, but wanted a more publick Call from it. He had received many private Intimations of the Parliament's pleasure for his coming over and Copies of their Votes; but he desired the Honour of a more solemn Invitation; and therefore in a Letter dated from Carrick Apr. 2. he begg'd a more clear Expression of their Command and Pleasure. Professing, as before the Lord, that I am most ready to obey your Commands herein with all alacrity; rejoycing only to be about that Work which I am called to, by those whom God hath set over me, which I acknowledge to be you, and fearing only in obeying you to disobey you. When he had farther enlarged his Conquests, and left his Army under true Discipline, he came over into England, and at the end of May was met on Hounslow-Heath by the prime Members of Parliament and Officers of the Army; at Hide-Park he was saluted with the great Guns, and with a Volly of Shot from Colonel Barkstead's Regiment, and so conducted like a King to Whitehal, where he next Day received the Visits and Complements of all the People in Authority, who are said to congratulate his safe Arrival, after so many Dangers both by Sea and Land, wherein God had preserved him; and the wonderful Successes which the great God had given to him.

The King at Breda.

The King was at Breda in a new Treaty with the Scot's Commissioners, where the Prince of Orange was to assist in the Councils and in the Expedition. But the Kirk, who were the treating Party, kept up a Bigotry for Covenant and Discipline, and retarded all the measures that might have been otherwise easily concerted. Montross had his Majesty's Commission to prepare a little Army for him; but because he would not submit to the Sentences of the Kirk, they pursued him as a common Enemy; and getting him into their mercileſs Hands, they brought him before the Parliament, and accused him of nothing but Covenant breaking; he made a stout Defence, and told them, his Cause was good; he had not only a Commission but particular Orders for what he did from his Majesty, to whom he was engaged to be a Loyal Subject, and they themselves profest to be so. That if they would take away his Life for doing his Duty, the World knew he did not regard it. It was a Debt that must once be paid; and now in good season, when he should rejoice to go the same way his Royal Master had lately done. And for his present Majesty, it would be another Joy of his Heart, not only to do but to suffer for him. But at the instigation of the Aſſembly Men, the Parliament gave Sentence beyond all Precedent, that he ſhould be hanged upon a Gibbet of ſix Ells and a half high, and when dead his Head to be ſever'd from his Body, and ſet upon the Tolbooth at Edinburgh; his Right-hand to be cut off and ſent to Glaſcow, his left to Aberdeen, his Right-foot to St. Johnſtown, and his left to Dundee: All which Barbarities he ſuffered with an unmoved Meekneſs and Courage. His Character is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. " Thus died " the gallant Marquis of Montroſe, after he had gi- " ven as great a Teſtimony of Loyalty and Courage " as a Subject can do, and performed as wonder- " ful Actions in ſeveral Battles, upon as great ine- " quality of Numbers, and as great diſadvantages " in reſpect of Arms, and other preparations for " War, as have been performed in this Age. He " was a Gentleman of a very ancient Extraction, " many of whoſe Anceſtors had exerciſed the high- " eſt Charges under the King in that Kingdom, and " had been allied to the Crown it ſelf. He was of " very good Parts, which were improv'd by a good " Education: he had always a great emulation, or " rather a great contempt of the Marquis of Argyle " (as he was too apt to contemn thoſe he did not " love) who wanted nothing but Honeſty and Cou- " rage to be a very extraordinary Man, having all " other good Talents in a very great degree. Mont- " roſs was in his Nature fearleſs of Danger, and ne- " ver declined any Enterprize for the difficulty of " going through with it; but exceedingly affected " thoſe which ſeem'd deſperate to other Men, and " did believe ſomewhat to be in himſelf above o- " ther Men, which made him live more eaſily to- " wards thoſe who were, or were willing to be in- " ferior to him (towards whom he exerciſed won- " derful Civility and Generoſity) than with his ſu- " periors or equals. He was naturally jealous, and " ſuſpected thoſe who did not concur with him in " the way, not to mean ſo well as he. He was not " without Vanity, but his Virtues were much " ſuperior, and he well deſerved to have his Me- " mory preſerved and celebrated amongſt the " moſt illuſtrious Perſons of the Age in which he " lived.

And barbarouſly executed.

Some others were executed only for joining with Montroſs: Theſe Indignities and Cruelties might have juſtly provoked the King to break off the Treaty and deſert a People given up to Bigotry and Blood; yet ſuch were his Majeſty's Neceſſities, and ſo great the Importunities of his Relations and Friends to comply at any rate, that he was forced to connive at all this Inſolence, and to write to Edinburgh in no harder Words than theſe, That he was very ſorry at a Report he heard, that there was ſome Blood of his good Subjects ſhed of late; but not knowing how it is, he deſires to underſtand the Buſineſs more fully. To which the Parliament took a liberty to anſwer, that they hoped for a happy Agreement with his Majeſty, and deſired him not to be diſcouraged at ſome ſeeming Obſtacles, ſuch as the Death of Montroſs and ſome few others, they doing nothing therein but to accompliſh his Intereſt. And his Majeſty was bound to ſeem as if he did believe 'em, tho' they were ſo conſcious of their own guilt as to queſtion the King's forgiveneſs of it; ſo that after long Negotiations, in the Month of June they put it to the Vote in Parliament, Whether they ſhould make any more Addreſſes to the King? But with ſome difficulty it was carried, " That they ſhould deſire the " King's ſpeedy coming thither, and would promiſe " to endeavour to ſet him on his Throne; and would " paſs by many things contrary to his Agreement in " the caſe of Montroſs, provided he would now come " in and comply with them. And he did ſo comply with their Conſcience and honour.

The Scots importune the King to come among 'em.

Reſolutions in England to invade Scotland.

A Junćto of the Council of State in England having Intelligence of theſe dangers, were adviſed by Cromwel not to wait the coming of them, nor to truſt to any after-game, but rather to prevent their Invaſion of England by carrying the War directly into Scotland. Some Men of ſcruple did object, That to begin a War upon Scotland would be contrary to the Covenant; but it was anſwer'd, that the Scots had already broken the Covenant, and that therefore it was not now binding on the one ſide after it had been diſſolved on the other. So it was reſolv'd, That having a formed Army, well provided and experienced, they would march it forthwith into Scotland, to prevent the Scots marching into England, and the Miſeries which might thence enſue. The Lord General Fairfax was taught by the Presbyterian Miniſters, and his own Lady a great Patroneſs of them (and perhaps by Cromwel himſelf) to object, that he was unſatisfied, whether there was a juſt ground for the Parliament of England to ſend their Army to invade Scotland: But in caſe the Scots ſhould firſt enter England, he was then ready to oppoſe and engage them in defence of his own Country. The Council of State were ſo far troubled about theſe ſcruples in the General, that they appointed a Committee to give him ſatisfaction, Cromwel, Whitlock, Lambert, Harriſon and Saint John, the Debates of this Conference are publiſhed by one of the Committee, the General concluding thus, What would you have me do? As far as my Conſcience will give way, I am willing to join with you ſtill in the Service of the Parliament; but where the Conſcience is not ſatisfied, none of you, I am ſure, will engage in any Service, and that is my condition in this, and therefore I muſt deſire to be excuſed. So the General laid down his Commiſſion; and by good contrivance an Act was immediately paſſed, for conſtituting and appointing Oliver Cromwel, Eſq; to be Captain-General in chief of all the Forces raiſed and to be raiſed by Authority of Parliament within the Common-wealth of England; and on June 29. this new General march'd his Army Northward, to the great alarm of the Scots, who in vain alledg'd, that by the Covenant and Articles of Pacification, they ought not to be invaded without three Months warning.

Gen. Fairfax excuſes himſelf and ſo lays down his Commiſſion.

Cromwel made General.

The King landed in Scotland June 16. after a demand from the Council, That he would ſign the Covenant himſelf before he ſet his Foot on Shore. He ſtaid many Days at Dundee, attended with one Committee from the Parliament and another from the Kirk, who were preſſing his Majeſty to ſign ſeveral Propoſitions, and before his doing ſo would not agree for his coming to Edinburgh in order to his Coronation. His Majeſty ſubmitted to all their Demands, and was proclaim'd King but not yet crown'd. Toward the end of July Cromwel with his Army enter'd Scotland, and without oppoſition advanced to Haddington within 12 Miles of Edinburgh, not above ſix Miles from the Scot's Army now encreaſed to above thirty thouſand. Cromwel reſolutely marched on, and drew up his whole Army before Edinburgh, and beat the Enemy from King Arthur's Hill, but could not force them out of their Trenches, till by fall of Rains and want of Victuals, he was forced to retreat to Muſclsborough, and had only ſome Skirmiſhes that were commonly to the diſadvantage of the Scots. When the Army was refreſh'd, Cromwel marched back to the view of Edinburgh, and pitch'd his Tents on Pencland Hills, being well furniſh'd with Proviſions by the Parliament's Ships that attended his motion. In the mean time, upon ſafe Conduct, ſeveral of the Scots Officers came to a Conference with the Engliſh, and perfidiouſly ſaid, that they were deluded by the Malignants, and that the King refuſed to ſign the diſowning of his Father's Actions, and to adhere to the Covenant, and repent for the Blood ſhed by his Father himſelf, and that they had thoughts of relinquiſhing him. And indeed the poor King had as much difficulty to deal with his Lieutenant-General, and his other Officers, as he had with the powerful Engliſh Army.

The Scots ſending out a Party to take in Muſcleborough, Cromwel to prevent it decamped from the Weſt ſide of Edinburgh on Saturday Auguſt 31. and came next Day to Dunbar, cloſely followed by the Scot's Army; the fight began early on Tueſday Morning Sept. 3. wherein the divided Scots ſoon threw down their Arms and ran away, looſing in the Battle and Purſuit above four thouſand ſlain, and ten thouſand taken-Priſoners. Cromwel himſelf drew up a Narrative of this great Victory, and ſent it by a Courier to the Council of State, who order'd it to be read in all the Churches of London with ſolemn Thankſgiving.

The Lord Clarendon ſays, " Their Horſe did not " ſuſtain one Charge, but fled and were purſued " with a great Execution. The Foot depended " much upon their Miniſters, who preached and " prayed, and aſſured them of the Victory, till the " Engliſh were upon them, and ſome of the Preachers " were knock'd in the Head whilſt they were pro- " miſing the Victory. —— Never Victory was " attended with leſs Lamentations; for as Cromwel " had great Argument of Triumph in the total de- " feat and deſtruction of the only Army that was in " Scotland, which defeat had put a great part of that " Kingdom, and the chief City of it under his Obe- " dience; ſo the King, who was then at St. Johnſton's, " was glad of it, as the greateſt Happineſs that " could befal him, in the loſs of ſo ſtrong a Body of " his Enemies; who, if they ſhould have prevailed, " his Majeſty did believe that they would have ſhut " him up in Priſon the next Day.

The Engliſh Army the ſame Day poſſeſs'd themſelves of Edinburgh and Leith, the King, whom the Scots would not ſuffer to be in the Battle, retiring to St. Johnſtown, and the Lieutenant-General Leven endeavouring to rally his Forces about Sterling, the Scots Presbyters preaching it up, that their late Overthrow was owing to their too much complying with the King, whoſe ill treatment made him incline to eſcape privately from St. Johnſtown, for which purpoſe he had ſent to Orkney for ſhipping; and the Earl of Cleveland and many of his beſt Friends for refuſing the Covenant were forc'd to run away from him. And the King himſelf, with the Duke of Buckingham and ſome few Servants, was in the way of Eſcape, but being diſcovered was brought back again, and to atone for many Indignities was crowned at Schone. But ſoon after the Commiſſioners of the Kirk preſented a Remonſtrance to him, preſſing him to humble himſelf, and to repent of his own and his Father's Sins, that he might be thereby able to quit the Nation of their Enemies now in the Bowels of the Kingdom; and ſet forth an Exhortation to their Brethren not to communicate with any who deſerted the Kirk. And the King coming to Aberdeen about the end of February to haſten his Levies, the Presbytery there openly oppoſed his Proceedings, and would not ſuffer him to receive the Marquis of Huntley, nor to erect the Office of a Lord Chancellor. Under which ſtate of Perſecution we leave his Majeſty for this Year.

The King's Ambaſſadors commanded by the K. of Spain to depart.

Only we may obſerve, that the hopeleſs condition of the King did incline the Court of Spain to favour the Engliſh Parliament; and therefore a Meſſage was delivered to the King's Ambaſſadors to deſire them to be gone; and when they preſſed for a longer ſtay, they had ſevere Orders to depart immediately. Sir Edward Hide went away to Antwerp in Flanders, and obtained ſo good recommendations to the Magiſtrates of that City, that he kept up the Name of an Ambaſſador, and enjoyed the Privilege of his Chapel, and all the Engliſh, who were numerous then in that City, repaired thither with all freedom for their Devotion and the Exerciſe of their Religion, which Liberty had never been before granted to any Man there; and which the Engliſh and Iriſh Prieſts, and the Roman Catholicks of thoſe Nations exceedingly murmured at, and uſed all the Endeavours they could to have taken away, tho' in vain. The other Ambaſſador, the Lord Cottington, who relapſed to Popery, petition'd and obtained leave to abide in Spain as a private Perſon, and ſo retired to Valledolid,

" He was a very wiſe Man by the great and long " Experience he had in buſineſs of all kinds, and by " his natural Temper, which was not liable to any " tranſport of Anger or any other Paſſion; but could " bear Contradiction, and even Reproach, without " being moved or put out of his way: For he was " very ſteady in purſuing what he propoſed to him- " ſelf, and had a Courage not to be frighted with " any oppoſition. It is true he was illiterate as to " the Grammer of any Language, or the principles of " any Science, but by his perfectly underſtanding " the Spaniſh (which he ſpoke as a Spaniard) the " French and Italian Languages, and having read " very much in all, he could not be ſaid to be ig- " norant in any part of Learning, Divinity only " excepted. He had a very fine and extraordinary " underſtanding in the Nature of Beaſts and Birds, " and above all in all kind of Plantations and Arts " of Husbandry. He was born a Gentleman both " both by Father and Mother, his Father having a " pretty entire Seat near Bruton in Somerſetſhire, " worth about two hundred Pounds a Year, which " had deſcended from Father to Son for many hun- " dred Years, and is ſtill in the poſſeſſion of his El- " der Brother's Children, the Family having been " always Roman Catholicks. His Mother was a " Stafford, nearly allied to Sir Edward Stafford, who " was Vice-Chamberlain to Queen Elizabeth, and " had been Ambaſſadour in France; by whom this " Gentleman was brought up, and was Gentleman " of his Horſe, and left one of his Executors of his " Will, and by him recommended to Sir Robert Ce- " cil then Principal Secretary of State, who preferr'd " him to Sir Charles Cornwallis when he went Ambaſ- " ſador into Spain, in the beginning of the Reign " of King James, where he remained for the ſpace " of eleven or twelve Years in the Condition of Se- " cretary or Agent, without ever returning into " England in all that time. He raiſed by his own " Virtue and Induſtry a very fair Eſtate, of which, " tho' the Revenue did not exceed above four thou- " ſand Pounds by the Year, yet he had four very good " Houſes and three Parks, the Value whereof was " not reckon'd into that Computation. He liv'd very " nobly, well ſerv'd and attended in his Houſe; " had a better Stable of Horſes, better Proviſion for " Sports (eſpecially of Hawks, in which he took " great Delight) than moſt of his Quality, and li- " ved always with great Splendor; for tho' he lov'd " Money very well, and did not warily enough con- " ſider the Circumſtances of getting it, he ſpent it " well always but in giving, which he did not af- " fect. He was of an excellent Humour and very " eaſie to live with; and under a grave Countenance " cover'd the moſt of Mirth, and cauſed more, than " any Man of the moſt pleaſant Diſpoſition. He ne- " ver uſed any Body ill, but uſed many very well " for whom he had no regard: His greateſt fault " was that he could diſſemble, and make them be- " lieve that he loved them very well, when he cared " not for them. He had not very tender Affections, " nor Bowels apt to yearn at all Objects which de- " ſerved Compaſſion. He was heartily weary of the " World, and no Man was more willing to die; " which is an Argument that he had peace of Con- " ſcience. He left behind him a greater eſteem of " his Parts than love to his Perſon.

The Parliament (as a Houſe of Commons muſt be now called) were not wanting in the Politicks of ſecuring the City of London to a faſt Friendſhip with them. And for a Token of Love they preſented New-Park, a fair Lot of the Crown-Lands to the City and Chamber of London for ever in their Term of Conveyance, with ſeveral Houſes and Appertenances, and one thouſand Pounds for diſtribution to the Poor. For which the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council were taught to come to the Parliament Doors April 2. with their Addreſſes of Thanks, Declaring and Reſolving (through God's aſſiſtance) with the hazard of their Lives and Eſtates, to ſtand and fall with the Parliament Ordinances of Parliament againſt profaneneſs.

To gain the Reputation of Godlineſs and preciſe Juſtice, the Parliament paſſed an Act May 10. againſt Inceſt, Adultery and Fornication; making the two firſt to be Felony without benefit of the Clergy, and the latter to be puniſhed with Impriſonment for the firſt Offence, and Death for the ſecond. This Bill was ſmartly oppoſed by Mr. Henry Martin, who argued, That the ſeverity of the Puniſhment would cauſe the Sins to be the more frequently committed, becauſe People would learn to be the more ſly and cautious in the commiſſion of them, and the Parties ſo obliged to mutual Secrecy, that a Conviction would be impracticable. They paſſed another Act June 28. againſt Swearing and Curſing, with a Penalty of 30*s.* on a Lord, 20*s.* on a Baronet or Knight, 10*s.* on an Eſquire, 6*s.* 8*d.* on a Gentleman, and 3*s.* 4*d.* on every other Perſon for the firſt Offence, and for the ſecond the penalty doubled.

Project for altering the Laws.

The matter that occaſioned moſt Debates in the Houſe, was the Project of altering the Forms of Law, and making all Writs and Proceedings to run only in the Engliſh Tongue. This was the Subject of ſeveral Petitions from the Soldiers and the Country Farmers, who indeed had reaſon to think themſelves impoſed upon by Languages which they did not underſtand. Hence it was at laſt enacted Nov. 22. that all Report Books of the Reſolutions of Judges, and other Books of the Law of England, ſhall be tranſlated into the Engliſh Tongue, and all Writs, Proceſs and Returns thereof, Pleadings, Rules, Orders, Indictments, Inquiſitions, Certificates, Patents, and all Acts, Deeds and Proceedings whatſoever, ſhall be only in the Engliſh Tongue, in the ordinary uſual Hand, and not in Court-Hand.

New Council of State.

The Council of State, who had the Executive Power, under direction of the Parliament and Army, was on Feb. 11. voted to be alter'd for the Year enſuing, twenty one of the old Members to continue, and twenty new Members to be choſen. The old Members continued in were Cromwel, Bradſhaw, Rolles, Saint John, Skippon, &c. the new Members taken in were Major-General Harriſon, Lieutenant-General Fleetwood, Sir Thomas Widdrington, Prideaux, Strickland, &c.

The King had ſent the Lord Cottington and Sir Edward Hide as his Ambaſſadors into Spain, where they found ſometimes a kind and ſometimes a cold Reception. The Parliament ſent likewiſe their Agent or Envoy Mr. Aſcham a Scholar, who had been concerned in drawing up the King's Trial, and had written a Book to determine in what time, and after how many Years, the Allegiance which is due from Subjects to their Soveraign comes to be determined after a Conqueſt, and that from that time it ought to be paid to thoſe who had ſubdued them. This new Agent was no ſooner come to Madrid, but the next Morning ſome Engliſh Officers and Soldiers who had ſerved in the Spaniſh Armies, went to his Lodgings, and without asking any Queſtions walk'd directly up the Stairs into his Chamber, drew their Swords, and beſides their Intentions in diſorder killed the Friar as well as the Agent, and ſo return'd to their Companions with their Swords naked and bloody, and ſome fooliſh Expreſſions of Triumph, as if they had performed a very gallant and juſtifiable Service. The King's two Ambaſſadors abhor'd this Action, but had the misfortune to have one of their own Servants Henry Progers in it. In great trouble of Mind they immediately writ a Letter to the prime Miniſter Don Lewis de Haro, to expreſs the ſenſe they had of this unfortunate raſh Action, of which, they hoped, he did believe, if they had had any Notice or Suſpicion, they would have prevented it. Don Lewis return'd them at that time a dry and a ſevere Anſwer. But when ſome Weeks were paſſed, the Ambaſſadors went to confer with Don Lewis upon ſome other Occurrence, with no purpoſe of mentioning any thing of that matter: but Don Lewis then ſpoke of it in a manner they did not expect; one Expreſſion was, Yo lengo invidia de eſtos Cuvaleros, &c. I envy thoſe Gentlemen for having done ſo noble an Action, how Penal ſoever it may prove to them, to revenge the Blood of their King: Whereas he ſaid, The King his Maſter wanted ſuch Reſolute Subjects; otherwiſe he would never have loſt a Kingdom, as he had done Portugal, for want of one brave Man, who by taking away the Life of the Uſurper, might at any time, during the firſt two Years, have put an end to that Rebellion. The Perſons concerned in this bloody Fact might have diſperſed themſelves and been ſecure, but in confuſion they went into a little Chapel for Sanctuary, from whence in a Day or two they were taken by a principal Officer after Examination, and ſent to the Priſon, and were condemned to die, but then were delivered back into the ſame Chapel, and were kept there till they had all opportunity to make their eſcape; only one was apprehended and ſuffered Death. Mr. Progers had ſeparated from the reſt upon the firſt commiſſion of the Fact, and had got ſafely into France.

State of Religion.

In matters of Religion, the Parliament made an additional Act for Truſtees to pay out of the Rents of Appropriations formerly belonging to Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, all ſuch Augmentations and Allowances as ſhould be made and ſettled by Parliament, for the Maintenance of preaching Miniſters, the Advancement of Learning, and other pious Uſes. For which there had been many other Acts and Orders, and an Office eſtabliſh'd for the execution of them, and yet with little effect but that of Suits and Delays. Another holy Act was made for the due obſervation and ſanctification of the Lord's-Day, and the Days of publick Humiliation and Thankſgiving; wherein the Penalties for profaning the Parliamentary Faſts and Thankſgivings were equal with thoſe for the profanation of the Lord's-Day, and made ſo by thoſe Men who had abrogated the Church Feſtivals and Faſts, on a pretence that thoſe Days aſſum'd a ſanctity due only to the Sabbath.

Blaſphemies and Witchcrafts.

Blaſphemies, Hereſies, Enthuſiaſms and Witchcrafts were in a full Tide. At Boſton in Lincolnſhire one Man and two Women were condemn'd; of whom the Man confeſt, that he had a Familiar ſuck'd him at ſome Paps which he then ſhewed; that he had ſigned a Writing to the Devil to deny God and Jeſus Chriſt; and that the Familiar drew Blood from thoſe Paps, and appeared to him in the ſhape of a white Chicken; that he ſigned the Devils Covenant with a piece of a Stick, with the ſame mark he now made at the bottom of his Examination; and both the Women confeſs'd the like. Four Men out of Somerſetſhire pretending to have an immediate Call from God to go and preach the Goſpel in Galilee, ſold their Eſtates and came to London in order to embark for their own Miſſion. The Hereſies and Blaſphemies of the time are ſum'd up in the Act made to reſtrain them. "Every Per-

All and every Perſon or Perſons ſo avowedly profeſſing — and thereof convicted, ſhall be committed to Priſon for ſix Months — And if after, they maintain or publiſh any of the ſaid Atheiſtical or blaſphemous Opinions, they ſhall be baniſhed this Commonwealth, and upon Return ſhall be adjudged Felons, and ſuffer as in caſe of Felony. All theſe Suggeſtions of Horror and Hell do ſhew the diſtracted and deplorable Condition of theſe Times; and that the Fear of God was now as little as the Honour of the King.

The Spirit of Presbytery ſhew'd it ſelf to Perfection in Scotland; where, as the Lord Clarendon obſerves, upon the King's Arrival, " The firſt Welcome he received was a new Demand, that He would ſign the Covenant himſelf, before he ſet his foot on ſhore; which all about him preſs'd him to do: and he now found, that he had made haſte thither upon very unskilful Imaginations and Preſumptions; yet he conſented unto what they ſo imperiouſly required. — They removed his Engliſh Servants, and placed others about the King's Perſon, but principally relied upon their Clergy, who were in ſuch a continual Attendance about him, that he was never free from their Importunities, under pretence of inſtructing him in Religion; and ſo they obliged him to their conſtant hours of their long Prayers, and made him obſerve the Sundays with more Rigour than the Jews accuſtomed to do their Sabbath, and reprehended him very ſharply if he ſmiled on thoſe Days, and if his Looks and Geſtures did not pleaſe them, whilſt all their Prayers and Sermons, at which he was compelled to be preſent, were Libels and bitter Invectives againſt all the Actions of his Father, the Idolatry of his Mother, and his own Malignity. — Yet after their Defeat at Dunbar, they all look'd upon the King as one they might ſtand in need of; they permitted his Servants, who had been ſequeſtred from him from his Arrival in the Kingdom, to attend and wait upon him, and began to talk of calling a Parliament, and of a Time for the King's Coronation; which had not hitherto been ſpoken of. Some Miniſters began to preach Obedience to the King; the Officers who had been caſhier'd for their Malignity, talking aloud of the Miſcarriages in the Government, and that the Kingdom was betray'd to the Enemy for want of Confidence in the King, who alone could preſerve the Nation. So that the King did, in a good degree, enjoy the Fruit of this Victory, as well as Cromwel. — Yet again when the King was marching at the Head of an Army into England, and had ſent Maſſey with ſome Troops to march before; then was it fatal to all Scotiſh Armies, to have always in them a Committee of Miniſters, who ruin'd all; and tho' there had been now all the Care taken that could be, to chuſe ſuch Men for that Service as had the Reputation of being the moſt ſober and moderate of that whole Body, and who had ſhewed more Affection, and advanced the King's Service more than the reſt; yet this moderate People no ſooner heard that Maſſey was ſent before to call upon their Friends, and obſerved that from the Entrance into England, thoſe about the King ſeem'd to have leſs regard for the Covenant than formerly, but they ſent an Expreſs to him, without communicating it in the leaſt degree with the King, with Letters and a Declaration, wherein they required him to publiſh that Declaration, which ſignified the King's and the whole Army's Zeal for the Covenant, and their Reſolutions to proſecute the Intereſt of it; and forbid him to receive or entertain any Soldiers in his Troops, but thoſe who would ſubſcribe that Obligation. The King had ſoon notice of this, and loſt no time in ſending to Maſſey not to publiſh any ſuch Declaration, and to behave himſelf with equal Civility towards all Men who were forward to ſerve his Majeſty. But before this Inhibition was receiv'd, the Matter had taken Air in all Places, and was ſpread over the Kingdom: All Men fled from their Houſes, or conceal'd themſelves, who wiſh'd the King very well. 1650. 2 Car. II.

1651. Proceedings of the K. in Scotland.

The King was at the Head of a conſiderable Army in Scotland, but had not the proper Command of them; for a ſelect Committee of Sixty was appointed to manage the Affairs of the War with the Conſent of the Kirk. Cromwel had order'd a Rendezvous of all his Horſe at Muſcleborough, and march'd thence to Glaſcow, and again return'd to Edinborough, where he lay ſo very ill of an Ague, that on May 27. the Parliament ſent two Phyſicians, Dr. Wright and Dr. Bates, to attend upon him; and deſired him to retire for his Health to ſome convenient Place in England for freſh Air, and to intruſt the Army in the mean time in ſuch hands as he ſhould think fit. But he ſoon recovered, and gain'd ſeveral Advantages over the Scots Army, much divided by the Factions of Hamilton and Argyle; and eſpecially in the Battle of Fife, where two thouſand of the Scots were ſlain, and fourteen hundred taken Priſoners. By which Cromwel got between the King and the North Parts of Scotland; and ſo cutting off all Communication, forced the King upon the Neceſſity of marching into England. Cromwel ſent away Letters to the Parliament, that the Scots Army, in Fear and Deſperation, and out of inevitable Neceſſity, were run away into England; and doubts not but the Deſperateneſs and Folly of this Counſel of theirs would ſoon appear, for that he had ſent after them Major General Lambert, with a conſiderable Body of Horſe, to attend the Rear of the Enemy; and that he himſelf was haſting after them; and that he ſhould leave behind him a ſufficient Force under Lieutenant-General Monk to keep Scotland in awe.

Cromwel gains Advantages.

The King deſerted by many of the Scotch Nobility and great numbers of common Soldiers, made rather a flying Retreat than a regular March to Preſton in Lancaſhire, hoping his Engliſh Subjects would have come in to his aſſiſtance; but all thoſe Parts had either ſuch an averſion to the Scots, or ſuch a reſtraint and terror from the cloſe purſuit that Cromwel and Lambert and Harriſon made after the King, that no Succour at all came in to him; which diſappointment the King took with patience, and marched his poor Army of twelve thouſand without committing any Violence, or doing any Injury to the Country. The brave Earl of Derby was the only Engliſh-man who made any attempt to ſupport the King; he got toge-

The King comes to Worceſter. The King brought his Army much fatigu'd to Worceſter, where ſome Parliament Forces were got in and made a ſharp reſiſtance; but the worthy Citizens laying down their Arms, and even firing out of their Windows upon the Parliament Soldiers, the King obtain'd a quiet Poſſeſſion. Hence the King ſent a Letter to the City of London, but it was burnt by the common Hangman; and a Declaration of the Parliament was publiſh'd by Beat of Drum and Sound of Trumpet through all the Streets, proclaiming all thoſe to be Traitors and Rebels that do or ſhall adhere to the King and his Party. The King ſent out a Summons to all the adjacent Country, that all his loving Subjects, within the Age of 16 and 60, ſhould come in to him to Worceſter; but none came: ſo that finding himſelf not able to take the Field, he fortified the Town as well as the Time would allow, and kept up a ſtrict Diſcipline; and when any Engliſh Priſoners were brought to him, he treated them courteouſly, gave them his Hand to kiſs, and ſo diſcharg'd them.

Cromwel marches up to Worceſter, Before the end of Auguſt, Cromwel was got up with his Foot and Baggage, and had his Head-Quarters within two Miles of Worceſter; and upon Septemb. 3. the ſame day Twelve-month that he obtain'd the Victory at Dunbar, ſtorm'd the City, entred it, and gave the Scots an abſolute Defeat: and ſent this Account of it in a Letter to the Parliament.

And gets a ſignal Victory.

Account of it in his own Letter.

I Am not able yet to give you an exact Account of the great things the Lord hath done for this Commonwealth and for his People; and yet I am unwilling to be ſilent, but, according to my Duty, ſhall repreſent it to you as it comes to hand. This Battle was fought with various Succeſs for ſome hours, but ſtill hopeful on your part, and in the end became an abſolute Victory, and ſo full an one, as proved a total Defeat and Ruin of the Enemy's Army, and Poſſeſſion of the Town: Our Men entring at the Enemies heels, and fighting with them in the Streets, with very great Courage took all their Baggage and Artillery. What the Slain are I can give you no Account, becauſe we have not taken an exact View; but they are very many, and muſt needs be ſo, becauſe the Diſpute was long, and very near at hand, and often at puſh of Pike, and from one Defence to another. There are about ſix or ſeven thouſand Priſoners taken here, and many Officers and Noblemen of Quality: Duke Hamilton, the Earl of Rothes, and divers other Noblemen; I hear the Earl of Lauderdale, many Officers of great Quality, and ſome that will be fit Subjects of your Juſtice. ——— The Dimenſions of this Mercy are above my Thoughts; it is, for ought I know, a crowning Mercy; ſurely if it be not, ſuch a one we ſhall have, if this provoke thoſe that are concerned in it to Thankfulneſs, and the Parliament to do the Will of him who hath done his Will for it, and for the Nation; whoſe Good-pleaſure is to eſtabliſh the Nation, and Change of the Government, by making the People ſo willing to the Defence thereof, and ſo ſignally to bleſs the Endeavours of your Servants in this late great Work. I am bold humbly to beg, that all Thoughts may tend to the promoting his Honour who hath wrought ſo great Salvation, and that the Fatneſs of theſe continued Mercies may not occaſion Pride and Wantonneſs, as formerly the like hath done to a choſen People; but that the Fear of the Lord even for his Mercies may keep an Authority and a People ſo proſper'd and bleſſed, and witneſſed to humble and faithful, that Juſtice and Righteouſneſs, Mercy and Truth, may flow from you, as a thankful Return to our glorious God. This ſhall be the Prayer of

Your moſt humble and obedient Servant,

Worceſt. Sept. 4. 1651. O. Cromwel.

The firſt ill Omen of the King's Misfortunes, was the News of the Defeat of the Earl of Derby at Wigan in Lancaſhire, and the total Deſtruction of thoſe gallant Perſons who accompanied him. The Earl, after his Horſe had been ſhot under him, made a ſhift to mount again; and ſo, with a ſmall Party of Horſe, through many Difficulties and Dangers, eſcap'd wounded to the King to Worceſter. The Lord Withrington, after he had received many Wounds, and given as many, and merited his Death by the Vengeance he took upon thoſe who aſſaulted him, was kill'd upon the Place. Of whom my Lord Clarendon gives this Character. "He was one of the moſt goodly Perſons of that Age, being near the Head higher than moſt tall Men, and a Gentleman of the beſt and moſt ancient Extraction of the County of Northumberland, and of a very fair Fortune, and one of the four which the laſt King made choice of to be about the Perſon of his Son the Prince as Gentleman of his Privy Chamber, when he firſt ſettled his Family. His Affection to the King was always remarkable; and ſerving in the Houſe of Commons, as Knight of the Shire for the County of Northumberland, he quickly got the Reputation of being amongſt the moſt Malignant. As ſoon as the War broke out, he was of the firſt who raiſed both Horſe and Foot at his own Charge, and ſerv'd eminently with them under the Marquis of Newcaſtle, with whom he had a very particular and entire Friendſhip. He was very nearly allied to the Marquis; and by his Teſtimony that he had performed many ſignal Services, he was, about the middle of the War, made a Peer of the Kingdom. He was a Man of great Courage, but of ſome Paſſion, by which he incurr'd the Ill-will of many, who imputed it to an Inſolence of Nature, which no Man was farther from; no Man of a Nature more civil, and candid towards all, in Buſineſs or Converſation. But having ſat long in the Houſe of Commons, and obſerv'd the Diſingenuity of the Proceedings there, and the groſs Cheats, by which they deceived and cozened the People, he had contracted ſo hearty an Indignation againſt them, and all who were cozen'd by them, and againſt all who had not his Zeal to oppoſe and deſtroy them, that he often ſaid things to flow and flegmatick Men which offended them, and it may be injur'd them; which his Good-nature often obliged him to acknowledge, and ask Pardon of thoſe who would not queſtion him for it. He tranſported himſelf into the Parts beyond the Sea at the ſame time with the Marquis of Newcaſtle, to accompany him, and remain'd ſtill with him till the King went into Scotland, and then waited upon his Majeſty, and endured the ſame Affronts which others did during the time of his Reſidence there: And, it may be, the Obſervation of their Behaviour, the Knowledge of their Principles, and the Diſdain of their Treatment, produced that Averſion from their Converſation, that prevailed upon his Impatience to part too ſoon from their Company, in hope that the Earl of Derby, under whom he was very willing to ſerve, and he Himſelf, might quickly draw together ſuch a Body of the Royal Party, as might give ſome Check to the unbounded Imaginations of that Nation. It was reported by the Enemy, that, in reſpect of his brave Perſon and Behaviour, they did offer him Quarter, which he refuſed; and that they were thereby compelled, in their own Defence, to kill him: which is probable enough; for he knew well the Animoſity the Parliament had againſt him, and it cannot be doubted but that if he had fallen into their hands, they would not have uſed him better than they did the Earl of Derby, who had not more Enemies.

The King could provide for no Safety but that of his own Perſon; nor could he have done this without a wonderful Providence. He went out of St. Mar-

1651. 3 Car. II. St. Martin's Gate about Seven at Night in the Dusk, with the Earl of Derby; by whose Direction he got to an obscure House called Whiteladies, twenty five Miles from Worcester, betwixt Three and Four the next Morning, and there committed himself to the Fidelity of the Penderils, two Brothers, who put him immediately into the Habit of a Wood-cutter, and sent him to work in an adjoining Coppice all Day Sept. 4. and in the Night following Richard Penderil carried him to the House of Mr. Wolfe of Madeley, and there lodg'd him in a Barn, and thence guided him to Boscobel, where he hid himself in an Oak in the Day-time, and stole into the House at Nights. Hence John Penderil, sent hither by the Lord Wilmot, brought him, in the Habit and on the Horse of a Miller, to Mr. Whitgrave's House at Moseley, and so, by the Lord Wilmot's Advice, to Bentley, where Colonel Lane contrived that the King should ride as a Servant before his Sister Mrs. Jane Lane, to Bristol. Upon the Road the King was very near Discovery upon shooing his Horse at a Forge, but happen'd to pass free to Evesham and Cirencester, and so to the House of Mr. Norton at Leigh within three Miles of Bristol, where he was discovered by the Butler John Pope (a Soldier formerly in his Majesty's Army) who kept the Secret. The King was conducted hence by the Lord Wilmot to the House of Colonel Windham at Trent in Dorsetshire, where he continued three Weeks, not without the Privity of six or seven Persons in the Family, in Expectation of a Passage from Lime; but being disappointed of these Hopes, he was forc'd to wander on to Bridport, where an Ostler claiming Knowledge of him, he hasted away to Broad-Windsor, and hurried back again to Colonel Windham's; thence to the House of Mr. Hide at Heal, and after strange Escapes came to Brighthamstead in Sussex, where Colonel Gunter and Mr. Maunsel had hired a Ship to carry him over to France. The Master, one Tetersbal, discover'd the King, having seen him in the Downs, where he had obtained a Release of his Vessel bound from Newcastle; but encourag'd with Money, and Prospect of Honour, he promised to transport his Royal Passenger: but going home for a Bottle of Strong-water, his Wife became Partaker of the Secret; yet for Loyalty or Lucre she encourag'd her Husband to perform the Contract, and the King landed safely at Diep in France on Octob. 21. A signal Mercy of God in the miraculous Protection of his Anointed.

In the Fight at Worcester, Duke Hamilton, who had charged the Enemy with great Vigour, had his Leg broke with a Shot; and falling into the Enemy's hands, he died the next Day of his Wounds, and thereby prevented the being made a Spectacle as his Brother had been; which the Pride and Animosity of his Enemies would, no doubt, have caused to be, having the same Pretence for it, being a Peer of England, as the other was. The Lord Clarendon gives him this Character: "He was in all respects "to be much preferred before the other; a much "wiser, tho' it may be a less cunning Man: for he "did not affect Dissimulation, which was the o-"ther's Master-piece. He had unquestionable Cou-"rage; he was in truth a very accomplish'd Per-"son, of an excellent Judgment, and clear and "ready Expressions; and tho' he had been driven "into some unwarrantable Actions, he made it ve-"ry evident he had not been led by any Inclinati-"ons of his own, and passionately and heartily "run to all Opportunities of redeeming it: And, "in the very Article of his Death, he expressed a "marvellous Cheerfulness, That he had the Honour "to lose his Life in the King's Service, and thereby to "wipe out the Memory of his former Transgressions, "which he always professed were odious to himself.

Death and Character of Duke Hamilton.

Cromwel returning to London triumphs, order'd the Walls of Worcester to be levell'd with the Ground, and the Dikes fill'd up; and then march'd up to London, driving his Prisoners like Sheep before him, and making Presents of them, on occasion, as of so many Slaves; and selling the rest for that purpose into the Plantations. He was met beyond Aylesbury by four Members of Parliament, sent from the House to pay him all the Marks of Favour and Honour. When he came to Acton, he was met by the Speaker and Members, and within the City-Liberties by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen: and on Septemb. 16. he took his Place in Parliament, and had excessive Compliments from the Speaker in the Name of the House, and was the same Day feasted in the City of London with all possible State and Plenty. And two Acts were drawn up in Honour of him; one for a solemn Thanksgiving-Day, and another for a yearly Observation of the third Day of September in all the three Kingdoms, with a Narrative of the grounds thereof.

1651. 3 Car. II.

In Scotland, the rigid Presbyterians had the Conscience to impute the Defeat of their Brethren in England to their want of insisting upon stricter Terms with the King: And divers Scots Ministers had the Grace to desire a Permission from General Monk to meet in Edinburgh to keep a Day of Humiliation for this Sin, their too much Compliance with the King. Whatever they thought their Sin, they had certainly a grievous Punishment; for Monk, left there by Cromwel with a piece of an Army, soon took Sterlin their chief Strength; and not long after surprized a Convention of the Scotch Nobility, old General Lesley among them, and went on to the absolute Reduction of that Kingdom, which Cromwel kept in Subjection as a conquer'd Province.

Scots perfidious and still rebellious.

Humbled by Monk.

Soon after Worcester Fight, the Isle of Man generously defended by the Countess of Derby, and the Isle of Jersey bravely maintained by Sir George Carteret, were both reduced under the Power of the Parliament: so as the new Commonwealth extended now as far as the late Monarchy.

It must be observed, that after Worcester Fight Order was taken for the Trial of the Earl of Derby, and such other notorious Prisoners as they had voted to Destruction. The Lord Clarendon gives this Character and this Account of his Execution. "The "Earl of Derby was a Man of unquestionable Loy-"alty to the late King, and gave clear Testimony "of it before he receiv'd any Obligations from the "Court, and when he thought himself disobliged "by it. This King, in his first Year, sent him the "Garter, which in many Respects he had expected "from the last: And the sense of that Honour "made him so readily comply with the King's Com-"mand in attending him, when he had no Confi-"dence in the Undertaking, nor any Inclination "to the Scots; who, he thought, had too much "Guilt upon them, in having depressed the Crown, "to be made Instruments of repairing and restoring "it. He was a Man of great Honour and clear "Courage; and all his Defects and Misfortunes, "proceeded from his having liv'd so little time a-"mong his Equals, that he knew not how to treat "his Inferiors; which was the Source of all the Ill "that befell him, having thereby drawn such Pre-"judice against him from Persons of inferior Qua-"lity, who yet thought themselves too good to be "contemn'd, that they pursu'd him to Death."

Character of the E. of Derby.

The King's Army was no sooner defeated at Worcester, but the Parliament renewed their old method of Murdering in cold Blood; and sent a Commission to erect a High Court of Justice to Persons of ordinary Quality, many not being Gentlemen, and all notoriously his Enemies, to try the Earl of Derby for his Treason and Rebellion; which they easily found him guilty of, and put him to Death in a Town of his own, against which he had expressed a severe Displeasure for their obstinate Rebellion against the King, with all the Circumstances of Rudeness and Barbarity they could invent. The same Night, one of those who was amongst his Judges sent a Trumpet to the Isle of Man, with a Letter directed to the Countess of Derby, by which he required her, To deliver up the Castle and Island to the Parliament: Nor did their Malice abate, till they had reduced that Lady (a Woman of very high and Princely Extraction, being the Daughter of the D. of de Trimouille in France, and of the moſt exemplary Virtue and Piety of her time) and that whole moſt noble Family, to the loweſt Penury and Want, by diſpoſing, giving, and ſelling all the Fortune and Eſtate that ſhould ſupport it.

Cromwel ppoſes tReign.

The Care of Cromwel was to improve his Victories to his own Intereſt: and for this purpoſe he deſired a Meeting with divers Members of Parliament and ſome chief Officers of the Army, at the Speaker's Houſe. Where (as Whitlock, one of the Number, tells us) he propoſed to them, That now the old King being dead, and his Son being defeated, he held it neceſſary to come to a Settlement of the Nation: and in order thereto he had requeſted this Meeting, that They together might conſider and adviſe what was fit to be done, and to be preſented to the Parliament. When the Speaker and Colonel Harriſon had delivered themſelves in general Words; Whitlock, who knew Cromwel's mind, offer'd a Queſtion, Whether the Settlement deſired ſhould be by way of an abſolute Republick, or with any mixture of Monarchy? Then Cromwel took the Hint, and anſwered, My Lord Commiſſioner Whitlock hath put us upon the right Point; and indeed it is my Meaning, that we ſhould conſider whether a Republick or a mixt Monarchical Government will be beſt to be ſettled; and if any thing Monarchical, then in Whom that Power ſhall be placed. When he had heard Colonel Deſborough and Whaley declaring for a ſtrict Republick, and Sir Thomas Widdrington pleading for a mixt Monarchical Government, to be placed upon Terms in one of the King's Sons; Cromwel replied, That will be a Buſineſs of more than ordinary Difficulty: but really I think, if it may be done with Safety, and Preſervation of our Rights, both as Engliſhmen and as Chriſtians, that a Settlement with ſomewhat of Monarchical Power in it would be very effectual. In Concluſion, after a long Debate, the Company parted without coming to any Reſult at all; only Cromwel diſcovered by this Meeting the Inclinations of the Perſons that ſpake, for which he fiſh'd, and made uſe of what he then diſcerned.

Cromwel wary of th Parliament.

Cromwel made one other Step toward his Deſigns, by bringing the Houſe into a Vote Nov. 18. That the time for Continuance of this Parliament, beyond which they reſolve not to ſit, ſhall be the third Day of November 1654. Which help'd much to draw off the Eyes and Hearts of the People from a Parliament near unto Extinction; and fix'd them upon the General and his Army, that were not likely to be diſſolv'd. So that from this time all Petitions and other Applications were to the General and his Officers, not to the Speaker and the Commons; who did little in the remainder of this Year, but appoint a Committee to conſider of the Inconveniences and Delays in the Proceedings of Law: wherein one of the Council to this Committee tells us, "That none of "them was more active in this Buſineſs than Mr. "Hugh Peters the Miniſter, who underſtood little "of the Law, but was very opinionative, and "would frequently mention ſome Proceedings of "Law in Holland, wherein he was altogether mi-"ſtaken. This Committee for regulating the Law preſented to a Committee of Parliament, to be reported to the Houſe, the Draughts of ſeveral Acts: 1. For taking away Fines upon Bills, Declarations, and Original Writs. 2. Againſt cuſtomary Oaths of Fealty and Homage to Lords of Mannors. 3. For taking away common Recoveries, and the unneceſſary Charge of Fines, and to paſs and charge Lands entailed, as Lands in Fee-ſimple. 4. For aſcertaining arbitrary Fines upon Deſcent and Alienation of Copyholds of Inheritance. 5. For the more ſpeedy Recovery of Rents. 6. Touching Pleaders, and their Fees. 7. For the more ſpeedy regulating and eaſie Diſcovery of Debts and Damages, not exceeding 4 l. and under. 8. For Marriages to be made before Juſtices of the Peace.

Nothing obſervable in the State of Religion, but the Decay and approaching Downfall of Presbytery. The Engliſh Presbyterians had been ſtartled at the Murder of the King, and more diſturbed at the Prevalence of an Independent Faction in the Army. Under theſe Grievances and Jealouſies, they leaned much toward Hopes and Help from their Scotch Brethren, and for their ſakes were inclined for the Reſtoration of the King as in Covenant with them. This Zeal for their own Cauſe carried many of the Presbyterian Miniſters in London into a Correſpondence with the Kirk, and ſo into a Plot for the King, diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of the Presbyterian Plot. This was ſoon diſcovered by the Vigilancy of the Government, and by the Forwardneſs of the Men concern'd: So Mr. Love, Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Drake, very eminent Presbyterian Divines, were ſeized by Order of the Council of State, and in order to their Trial, were on May 7. brought before the High Court of Juſtice; and Mr. Love was firſt charged with High Treaſon againſt the State and Commonwealth of England, for holding Correſpondence with the King and his Party, and ſupplying them with Arms and Money, contrary to an Act of Parliament in that Caſe provided. He at firſt diſputed the Authority of the Court, and then inſiſted upon his own Merits in promoting the Cauſe of the Parliament; and terrified Mr. Jackſon a Miniſter from giving in Evidence againſt him; for which obſtinate Refuſal he was fined by the Court 500 l. and committed to the Fleet. At another Appearance June 25. he did at laſt confeſs, That the Conſpirators met at his Houſe for furthering the Scots Deſigns; and that Letters were received, and Anſwers were ſent from thence; but equivocated in Excuſes, that he did not do it Himſelf, and that he did not Perſonally act any thing, &c. In ſhort, tho' he had Mr. Matthew Hale for an Advocate, and the whole Party for Sollicitors, on July 5. he received Sentence to be Beheaded; and the Day of Execution was appointed on the 15th. Before the Day, very fervent Petitions were preſented from himſelf and his Friends, to the Parliament, for Pardon of his Life; which, on long Debate, paſs'd in the Negative. And on the very Day appointed for Execution, ſeveral Miniſters in and about London came with a moſt importunate Petition to the Houſe, praying earneſtly, and in the Bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, who when we were Sinners died for us, if not totally to ſpare the Life of our dear Brother; that yet you would ſay of him, as Solomon of Abiathar, that at this time he ſhall not be put to Death. Upon which the Parliament granted him a Reprieve for one Month. Within this time, all poſſible Sollicitations were uſed to the Men in Power; and particular Application was made to Cromwel, then in Scotland, who ſent back a Letter of his free Conſent to the Pardon of him: but the Poſt-Boy being ſeized by ſome Cavaliers, they ſearch'd his Pacquet, and with ſpecial Indignation tore the Letter relating to Mr. Love, as thinking him not worthy to live who had been ſuch a Firebrand in the Treaty at Uxbridge.

1651. 3 Car. II. State of Religion.

Presbyterians outwitted and overpower'd by the Independents.

Mr. Love's Plot.

The Council of State and Leaders in the Parliament hearing nothing from Cromwel, and not finding the ingenuous diſcovery and humble Submiſſion which they expected from Mr. Love (after the Condemnation of two other of his Accomplices Mr. Potter and Mr. Gibbons) they vacated his Reprieve, and recommitted him to the High Court of Juſtice, by whoſe Order he was executed on Tower-Hill with Mr. Gibbons on Aug. 22. The Lord Clarendon gives this Character. "This poor Man Love, who had "been guilty of as much Treaſon againſt the King "from the beginning of the Rebellion as the Pulpit "could contain, was ſo much without remorſe for "any wickedneſs of that kind that he had commit-"ted, that he was jealous of nothing ſo much as of "being ſuſpected to repent, or that he was brought "to ſuffer for his Affection to the King. And there-"fore when he was upon the Scaffold, where he ap-

Love and Gibbons executed.

1651. 3 Car. II. " peared with a maverllous undauntedneſs, he ſeem-
" ed ſo much delighted with the Memory of all that " he had done againſt the late King, and againſt the
" Biſhops, that he could not even then forbear to
" ſpeak with Animoſity and Bitterneſs againſt both,
" and expreſſed great ſatisfaction in Mind for what
" he had done againſt them, and was as much tranſ-
" ported with the inward Joy of Mind, that he felt
" in being brought thither to die as a Martyr, and
" to give Teſtimony for the Covenant, whatſoever
" he had done being in the purſuit of the Ends, he
" ſaid, of that ſanctified Obligation to which he was
" in, and by his Conſcience engaged. And in this
" raving fit, without ſo much as praying for the " King, otherwiſe than that he might propagate the " Covenant, he laid his Head upon the Block with
" as much Courage as the braveſt and honeſteſt Man
" could do in the moſt pious occaſion.

This blow help'd to widen the Breach between the Presbyterians and the prevailing Powers: For from this time the Presbyterians were alway ſuſpected of Loyalty to the King, and the Parliament and Army were alway jealous of them. Aug. 31. was appointed a Day of Thankſgiving for the Succeſs of the Parliament's Forces in Scotland and againſt the Earl of Derby; and we are told, That the Miniſters who were not of the rigid Presbyterian Judgment, were zealous in the Duties of the Day; but ſome of the more rigid Perſons did not think fit to obſerve that Order, but dropt it in publick, and had their private Meetings to pray to God to bleſs their Brethren of the Presbytery and the Cauſe they were engaged in. And Oct. 24. being kept for a ſolemn Rejoycing over the King's defeat at Worceſter, was ſo much ſlighted and ſlovenly obſerved by ſome of them, that they hardly eſcaped a publick Cenſure. Tho' it was the Policy of the governing People to make them eaſy, by granting a Pardon upon humble Acknowledgment and Submiſſion to Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Caſe, Mr. Drake and others, who had confeſt themſelves guilty of Mr. Love's Conſpiracy. The Petition of Mr. Jenkins for his Life went high, and expreſly owned the Authority of the prevailing Powers to be from God; for which reaſon it is ſaid to have been printed here, and reprinted in Holland by Order and Procurement of the Houſe of Parliament, to ſtop the Mouths of all other Presbyterians, and gain the reputation of a Divine Right to them and their Cauſe.

The poor Church of England being baniſhed from its home, met with another Perſecution abroad, of which this Account is well given by a witneſs of it, the Lord Clarendon. " There was another inſtance
" of the King's extreme low condition, and of the " higheſt diſreſpect the Court of France could expreſs
" towards him, and of which all the Proteſtant Par-
" ty of the Queen's Family complained very vehe-
" mently. From the time of the Queen's being in " France, the late King had appointed a Chaplain
" of his own, Dr. Coſins, who was afterwards Bi-
" ſhop of Durham, to attend upon her Majeſty. for
" the conſtant Service of that part of her Houſhold,
" the number of her Proteſtant Servants being much
" ſuperior to thoſe who were Roman Catholicks:
" And the Queen had always punctually comply'd
" with the King's directions, and uſed the Chaplain
" very graciouſly, and aſſigned him a competent
" Support with the reſt of her Servants. An under
" Room in the Louvre, out of any common Paſſage,
" had been aſſigned for their Morning and Evening
" Devotions, the Key whereof was committed to
" the Chaplain, who cauſed the Room to be decent-
" ly furniſhed and kept, being made uſe of to no
" other purpoſe. Here, when the Prince came thi-
" ther, and afterwards whilſt he ſtaid, he perform'd
" his Devotions all the Week, but went Sundays ſtill
" to the Reſident's Houſe to hear Sermons. All this " time an Order was ſent from the Queen Regent,
" that that Room ſhould be no more apply'd to
" that purpoſe, and the French King would not per" mit the Exerciſe of any other Religion in any of " his Houſes than the Roman Catholick; and the " Queen gave notice to the Chaplain, that ſhe was " no longer able to continue the payment of the " Exhibition ſhe had formerly aſſign'd to him.
" The Proteſtants, whereof many were of the beſt
" Quality, lamented this alteration to the Chancel-
" lor of the Exchequer, and deſired him to intercede
" with the Queen, which he had the more Title to
" do, becauſe at his going into Spain ſhe had vouch-
" ſafed to promiſe him (upon ſome Rumours of " which he took notice) that the ſame Privilege
" which had been ſhould ſtill be continued, and en-
" joy'd by the Proteſtants of her Houſhold; and
" that ſhe would provide for the Chaplain's ſubſi-
" ſtence. He preſum'd therefore to ſpeak with her
" Majeſty upon it; and beſought her to conſider
" what ill impreſſion this new Order would make
" upon the Proteſtants of all the King's Dominions,
" upon whom he was chiefly to depend for his Re-
" ſtauration; and how much prejudice it might be
" to her ſelf, to be look'd upon to be as a greater
" Enemy to Proteſtants than ſhe had been taken no-
" tice of to be; and likewiſe, whether this Order,
" which had been given ſince the departure of the " Duke of York, might not be made uſe of as an
" excuſe for his not returning, or indeed for his go-
" ing away at firſt, ſince the preciſe time when it
" iſſued would not be generally underſtood. The " Queen heard him very graciouſly, and acknow" ledged, That what he ſaid had Reaſon in it; but
" proteſted that ſhe knew not what Remedy to ap-
" ply to it; that ſhe had been herſelf ſurprized with
" that Order, and was troubled at it; but that the " Queen Regent was poſitive in it, and blamed her
" for want of Zeal in her Religion; and that ſhe
" cared not to advance it, or to convert any of her
" Children. She wiſhed him to confer with Mr.
" Mountague upon it; and imply'd, that his bigotry
" in his new Religion, had contributed much to the " procuring that Order. He had newly taken Or" ders, and was become Prieſt in that Church, and
" had greater Power with the Queen Regent, as well
" for his Animoſity againſt that Religion he had pro-
" feſt, as for his vehement Zeal for the Church of " which he now was. Upon this occaſion, her Ma-
" jeſty expreſſed a great ſenſe of the loſs ſhe had
" ſuſtained by the Death of her old Confeſſor, Fa-
" ther Philips, who ſhe ſaid, was a prudent and diſ-
" creet Man, and would never ſuffer her to be preſ-
" ſed to any paſſionate Undertakings under pre-
" tence of doing good for Catholicks; and always " told her, that as ſhe ought to continue firm and
" conſtant to her own Religion, ſo ſhe was to live

" deed the common Diſcourſe there, that the " Proteſtants of the Church of England could ne- " ver do the King Service, but that all his hopes " muſt be in the Roman Catholicks and the Presby- " terians; and that he ought to give all ſatisfaction " to both Parties.

The Conqueſt of Scotland makes a Union of it with England.

The Scots finding their Army in England ſwallowed up, and their own Country ravag'd and reduc'd to a Conqueſt by the Engliſh Arms, the Deputies of their Shires and Boroughs drew up their Form of Conſent, required from them by the Engliſh Commiſſioners, to a Union with England in one Commonwealth, without a King or Houſe of Lords, and to live peaceably in Submiſſion to the Authority of the Parliament of England. And an Act was ſoon after prepar'd at Weſtminſter, for Incorporating Scotland into one Commonwealth and Free State with England, and for aboliſhing the Kingly Office in Scotland.

Policy of Cromwel.

Cromwel had laid a Scheme, that was now to be artfully carried on. Hence May 11. a Committee was reviv'd for ſetting a Period to this Parliament, and providing for the due Qualification of future Repreſentatives. This amus'd the Houſe, and opened the Inclination of the reſpective Members.

Death of Ireton.

Cromwel had loſt much of his Influence on the Affairs of Ireland, by the Death of his Son-in-Law Lieutenant-General Ireton, who died of the Plague in Limerick Nov. 27. 1651. ſucceeded in the Government of that Army by Edmund Ludlow, Eſq; who would have thereby aſſumed the Regency of that Kingdom, at leaſt till the coming over of Major-General Lambert, who was named by the Parliament to be Lord Lieutenant. But a Vote of Parliament was obtained June 16. that the Act of Parliament conſtituting Oliver Cromwel Captain-General and Commander in chief of the Armies and Forces raiſed by their Authority within England, ſhall extend to the Forces in Ireland, as if Ireland had been therein particularly named. And that the Lord-General be required to appoint ſuch Perſon as he ſhall think fit to command the Forces in Ireland, and to Commiſſionate him accordingly. Whereby to the great offence of Lambert and Ludlow, Lieutenant-General Fleetwood had the Command in chief of the Forces in Ireland, to hold under the Lord-General Cromwel; and under his Conduct that Kingdom was ſoon brought into perfect ſubjection.

Fleetwood placed in Ireland.

This Character is given of Ireton by the Lord Clarendon. " He was of a melancholick, reſerv'd, " dark Nature, who communicated his Thoughts to " very few; ſo that for the moſt part he reſolv'd a- " lone, but was never diverted from any Reſoluti- " on he had taken; and he was thought often by " his obſtinacy to prevail over Cromwel himſelf, " and to extort his Concurrence contrary to his own " Inclinations. But that proceeded only from his " diſſembling leſs; for he was never reſerved in the " owning and communicating his worſt and moſt " barbarous Purpoſes, which the other always con- " cealed and diſavow'd. Hitherto their Concur- " rence had been very natural, ſince they had the " ſame Ends and Deſigns. It was generally con- " ceiv'd by thoſe who had the opportunity to know " them both very well, that Ireton was a Man ſo ra- " dically averſe from Monarchy, and ſo fix'd to a " Republick Government, that if he had lived, he " would either by his Council and Credit have pre- " vented thoſe exceſſes in Cromwel, or publickly op- " poſed and declared againſt them, and carried the " greateſt part of the Army with him; and that " Cromwel, who beſt knew his Nature and his Tem- " per, had therefore carried him into Ireland and " left him there, that he might be without his Coun- " ſels or Importunities, when he ſhould find it ne- " ceſſary to put off his Mask, and to act that part " which he foreſaw it would be requiſite to do. O- " thers thought his Parts lay more towards Civil " Affairs, and were fitter for the modelling that Go- " vernment which his Heart was ſet upon (being a " Scholar, converſant in the Law, and in all thoſe " Authors who had expreſſed the greateſt Animoſity " and Malice againſt the Regal Government) than " for the Conduct of an Army to ſupport it; his " Perſonal Courage being never reckon'd among his " other Abilities.

1652. 4 Car. II.

And to render the new Common-wealth more glorious, or rather to make Cromwel more abſolute, the Engliſh Navy under Admiral Blake, Vice-Admiral Pen, and Sir George Aſcue, was this Year proſper'd with very great and repeated Succeſſes againſt the Dutch Fleet commanded firſt by Van Trump, and afterward by De Wit. So that Victories and Conqueſts waiting upon the preſent Powers by Sea and Land, the only Queſtion that ſeem'd now remaining, was how to make this Proſperity ſettle into Peace and eſtabliſhed Government.

Cromwel affects to be King.

Upon this Juncture Cromwel adviſes with Commiſſioner Whitlock how to maintain all things in Order and Obedience; and after general Talk puts this ſhort Queſtion; What if a Man ſhould take upon him to be King? Whitlock, " I think that Remedy would " be worſe than the Diſeaſe. Cromwel. Why do you think ſo? Whitlock. " As to your own Perſon the " Title of King would be of no Advantage, becauſe " you have the full Kingly Power in you already " concerning the Militia, as you are General. As " to the nomination of Civil Officers, thoſe whom " you think fitteſt are ſeldom refuſed: and altho' " you have no negative Vote in the paſſing of Laws, " yet what you diſlike will not eaſily be carried; " and the Taxes are already ſettled and in your Po- " wer to diſpoſe the Money raiſed. And as to Fo- " reign Affairs, tho' the ceremonial Application be " made to the Parliament, yet the expectation of " good or bad Succeſs in it is from your Excellency; " and particular Sollicitations of Foreign Miniſters " are made to you only. So that I apprehend in- " deed leſs Envy and Danger and Pomp, but not " leſs Power and real opportunities of doing good " in your being General, than would be if you had " aſſumed the Title of King. Cromwel went on to argue, that Whoever was actually King by Election, the Acts done by him were as lawful and juſtifiable as if done by a King who had the Crown by Inheritance; and that by an Act of Parliament in Henry VII.'s time, it was ſafer for the People to act under a King (let his Title be what it will) than under any other Power. Whitlock agreed to the Legality, but queſtioned the Expediency of it; and being ask'd what danger he apprehended, anſwered thus, " The danger I think would " be this, one of the main Points of Controverſy be- " tween us and our Adverſaries is whether the Go- " vernment of this Nation ſhall be eſtabliſhed in Mo- " narchy or in a free State or a Common-wealth; " and moſt of our Friends have engaged with us " upon the hopes of having the Government ſettled " in a free State; and to effect that, have under- " gone all their Hazards and Difficulties. They be- " ing perſwaded (tho' I think much miſtaken) that " under the Government of a Common-wealth they " ſhall enjoy more Liberty and Right, both as to " their Spiritual and Civil Concernments than they " ſhall under Monarchy, the preſſures and diſlikes " whereof are ſo freſh in their Memories and Suffer- " ings. Now if your Excellency ſhall take upon " you the Title of King, this State of your Cauſe " will be thereby wholly determined, and Monar- " chy eſtabliſhed in your Perſon, and the Queſtion " will be no more, Whether our Government ſhall " be by a Monarch or by a Free-State, but whe- " ther Cromwel or Stuart ſhall be our King and Mo- " narch? And that Queſtion wherein before ſo great " Parties of the Nation were engaged, and which " was univerſal, will by this means become in effect " a private Controverſy only. Before it was na- " tional, What kind of Government we ſhould have? " Now it will become particular, Who ſhall be our " Governour? Whether of the Family of the Stuarts " or of the Family of the Cromwels? Thus the ſtate " of our Controverſy being totally changed, all thoſe

Is diſſuaded by Whitlock.

1652. 4 Car. II. " who were for a Commonwealth (and they are a " very great and conſiderable Party) having their " Hopes therein fruſtrate, will deſert you: your " Hands will be weakned, your Intereſt ſtraitned, " and your Cauſe in apparent Danger to be ruin'd. Cromwel confeſs'd he ſpoke Reaſon, and deſired to know if he could find any other Expedient. Whitlock, after ſuggeſting the Dangers he was in from his own Officers and from the Parliament, who were plotting to bring him down, or to clip his Wings, proceeded thus. " Pardon me, Sir, in the " next place, a little to conſider the Condition of " the King of Scots. This Prince being now by your " Valour, and the Succeſs which God hath given to " the Parliament, and to the Army under your " Command, reduced to a very low Condition, both " he and all about him cannot but be very inclina- " ble to hearken to any Terms, whereby their laſt " Hopes may be revived of his being reſtored to the " Crown, and they to their Fortunes and native " Country. By a private Treaty with him, you " may ſecure your ſelf and your Friends, and their " Fortunes: You may make your ſelf and Poſterity " as great and permanent, to all humane Probabi- " lity, as ever any Subject was, and provide for " your Friends: You may put ſuch Limits to Mo- " narchical Power, as will ſecure our ſpiritual and " civil Liberties: and, You may ſecure the Cauſe " in which we are All engaged." And this may be " effectually done, by having the Power of the Mi- " litia continued in your ſelf, and whom you ſhall " agree upon after you.

Cromwel adjourn'd the Diſcourſe to ſome farther time, and went off with a Countenance and Carriage of Diſpleaſure. And Whitlock ſays, " That Crom- " wel's Carriage toward him from that time was " alter'd, and his Adviſing with him not ſo fre- " quent and intimate as before; and, that it was " not long after, he found an occaſion, by an ho- " nourable Employment, to ſend him out of the " way, that he might be no Obſtacle or Impedi- " ment to his ambitious Deſigns. For certainly Cromwel, in his Thoughts and Intentions, was for bringing the Crown upon his own Head; and it was a great Providence that his Friends would not permit him to have his own way. However, to carry it as far as it would bear, he and his Officers were alway complaining of the Grievance of the Long Parliament, and were zealous and loud in recommending to the People the common Pretences of Right and Juſtice, and publick Liberty, to put a Period to their Seſſion; and if they would not ſhortly do it themſelves, the Army and the People muſt do it for them.

K. Charles in the Court of France.

The King was a Refugee in the Court of France, and was to live there upon Words and Air, tho' he was truly inſtrumental in compoſing the Differences between the French King and the Princes of the Blood; and the Duke of York was actually in the French Service under the Mareſchal de Turenne, who gave him a high Character for his Behaviour in the Battle of Eſtampes. For which Obligations the King of France was in himſelf diſpoſed to aſſiſt, and, if poſſible, to reſtore the Royal Family of England: but his commanding Miniſter, the Cardinal Mazarine, was alway averſe to it: So that all that our diſtreſſed Prince could do, was to ſend abroad his Envoys and Agents to ſollicit, in vain, for Juſtice and Relief. He ſent into England the noble Marquis of Worceſter, for private Intelligence and Supplies; but he was taken up Priſoner in London, and committed to the Tower in September, where he was threatned with a ſpeedy Trial, and worſe puniſh'd with a long Confinement. The Lord Hopton, a Man of admirable Valour, lay in Proſecution of the Royal Cauſe at Bruges in Flanders, where he died in Affliction about the end of September. The Ld. Wentworth was employ'd to the King of Denmark, the Ld. Colepeper to Moſco, Mr. Crofts to Poland, Mr. Taylor to the Imperial Court, and the Ld. Wilmot (made E. of Rocheſter) to the Dyet at Ratisbone: But all their Negotiations for a righteous Cauſe, without Men and Money, were made cold and ineffectual. The States of Holland, in War with the People of England, were indeed the more kind and friendly to the King: they granted him the Freedom of Ports for harbouring his Men of War, and ſelling the Prizes they ſhould take; and invited Prince Rupert to Command a Squadron; and talk'd much of committing their whole Fleet to the Command of the King in Perſon, as their ſuperior Admiral; which Honour he had offer'd to them: nay, he propoſed to have gone Aboard as a private Perſon, to invite and receive the Engliſh Ships that ſhould come over to him. But the States were afraid, and all their good Inclinations were owing to their Enmity to the new Commonwealth, more than to any Love or Reſpect to the King; and therefore went off, in order to prepare and purchaſe a Peace with the Engliſh Republick. 1652. 4 Car. II.

The King tempted to leave the Communion of the Ch. of England.

But the greateſt Trial to which the King was now brought, was, how to ſecure himſelf from the continual Sollicitations to pervert him from the good old Communion of the Church of England. The Relation of this Difficulty is beſt given by a Witneſs of it, the Lord Clarendon, who writes thus: " The Lord Jermyn, who in his own Judgment was " very indifferent in all matters relating to Reli- " gion, was always of ſome Faction that regarded " it. He had been much addicted to the Presbyte- " rians from the time that there had been any Trea- " ties with the Scots, in which he had too much " Privity: And now, upon the King's Return into " France, he had a great Deſign to perſwade his " Majeſty to go to the Congregation at Charenton, " to the end that he might keep up his Intereſt in " the Presbyterian Party; which he had no reaſon " to believe would ever be able to do the King Ser- " vice, or willing if they were able, without ſuch " odious Conditions as they had hitherto inſiſted " upon in all their Overtures. The Queen did not, " in the leaſt degree, oppoſe this; but rather ſeem'd " to countenance it, as the beſt Expedient that might " incline him, by degrees, to prefer the Religion " of the Church of Rome. For tho' the Queen had " never to this time, by herſelf, or by others with " her Advice, uſed the leaſt means to perſwade the " King to change his Religion, as well out of Ob- " ſervation of the Injunction laid upon her by the " deceaſed King, as out of the Conformity of her " own Judgment, which could not but perſwade " her that the Change of his Religion would infal- " libly make all his hopes of recovering England de- " ſperate; yet it is as true, that from the King's " Return from Worceſter, ſhe did really deſpair of " his being Reſtor'd by the Affections of his own " Subjects, and believ'd that it could never be " brought to paſs without a Conjunction of Catho- " lick Princes on his Behalf, and by an united Force " to reſtore him; and that ſuch a Conjunction " would never be enter'd into, except the King him- " ſelf became Roman Catholick. Therefore from " this time ſhe was very well content that any At- " tempts ſhould be made upon him to that purpoſe; " and, in that regard, wiſh'd that he would go to " Charenton, which ſhe well knew was not the Re- " ligion he affected, but would be a little Diſcoun- " tenance to the Church in which he had been bred, " and from which as ſoon as he could be perſwaded " in any degree to ſwerve, he would be more expo- " ſed to any other Temptation. The King had not " poſitively refuſed to gratify the Miniſters of that " Congregation, who, with great Profeſſions of Du- " ty, had brought him to do them that Honour, " before the Chancellour of the Exchequer came to " him; in which it was believ'd that they were " the more like to prevail by the Death of Doctor " Steward, for whoſe Judgment in Matters of Reli- " gion the King had Reverence, by the earneſt Re- " commendation of his Father: and he died after

" the

" the King's Return within fourteen Days, with " ſome Trouble upon the Importunity and Artifice " he ſaw uſed to prevail with the King to go to " Charenton, tho' he ſaw no Diſpoſition in his Ma- " jeſty to yield to it.

" The Lord Jermyn ſtill preſſed it, as a thing " that ought in Policy and Diſcretion to be done, " to reconcile that People which was a great Body " in France to the King's Service, which would " draw to him all the foreign Churches, and there- " by he might receive conſiderable Aſſiſtance. He " wonder'd, he ſaid, why it ſhould be oppoſed by " any Man, ſince he did not wiſh that his Majeſty " would diſcontinue his own Devotions according " to the Courſe he had always obſerv'd, nor pro- " poſe that he ſhould often repair thither, but on- " ly ſometimes, at leaſt once, to ſhew that he did " look upon them as of the ſame Religion with " him, which the Church of England had always " acknowledg'd; and that it had been an Inſtructi- " on to the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, that they ſhould " keep a good Correſpondence with thoſe of the " Religion, and frequently reſort to Divine Service " at Charenton, where they had always a Pew kept " for them.

" The Chancellour of the Exchequer diſſwaded " his Majeſty from going thither with equal Ear- " neſtneſs: told him, That whatever Countenance " or Favour the Crown or Church of England had " heretofore ſhew'd to thoſe Congregations, it was " in a time when they carried themſelves with Mo- " deſty and Duty towards both, and when they " profeſſed great Duty to the King, and much Re- " verence to that Church; lamenting themſelves, " that it was not in their Power, by the Oppoſition " of the State, to make their Reformation ſo perfect " as it was in England. And by this kind of Beha- " viour they had indeed receiv'd the Protection and " Countenance from England as if they were of the " ſame Religion, tho', it may be, the Original of " that Countenance and Protection proceeded from " another leſs warrantable Foundation; which he " was ſure would never find Credit from His Ma- " jeſty. But, whatever it was, that People now " had undeſerv'd it from the King; for, as ſoon as " the Troubles began, the Huguenots of France had " generally expreſſed great Malice to the late King, " and very many of their Preachers and Miniſters " had publickly and induſtriouſly juſtified the Re- " bellion, and pray'd for the good Succeſs of it: " and their Synod it ſelf had in ſuch a manner in- " veigh'd againſt the Church of England, that they, " upon the matter, profeſſed themſelves to be of " another Religion; and inveigh'd againſt Epiſco- " pacy, as if it were inconſiſtent with the Prote- " ſtant Religion: That one of their great Profeſ- " ſors at their Univerſity of Saumur, who was look- " ed upon as a Man of the moſt moderate Spirit " amongſt their Miniſters, had publiſh'd an Apo- " logy for the general Inclination of that Party to " the Proceedings of the Parliament of England, " leſt it might give ſome Jealouſie to their own " King, of their Inclination to Rebellion, and of " their Opinion that it was lawful for Subjects to " take up Arms againſt their Prince; which, he " ſaid, could not be done in France without mani- " feſt Rebellion, and incurring the Diſpleaſure of " God for the manifeſt Breach of his Command- " ments, becauſe the King of France is an abſolute " King, independent upon any other Authority: " but that the Conſtitution of the Kingdom of Eng- " land was of another Nature; becauſe the King " there is ſubordinate to the Parliament, which hath " Authority to raiſe Arms for the Reformation of " Religion, or for the executing the publick Juſtice " of the Kingdom againſt all thoſe who violate the " Laws of the Nation: ſo that the War might be " juſt there, which in no caſe could be warranted " in France.

" The Chancellor told the King, That after ſuch " an Indignity offer'd to him, and to his Crown, " and ſince they had now made ſuch a Diſtinction " between the Epiſcopal and the Presbyterian Go- " vernment, that they thought the Profeſſors were " not of the ſame Religion, his going to Charenton " could not be without this effect; that it would be " concluded every where, that his Majeſty thought " the one or the other Profeſſion to be indifferent: " which would be one of the moſt deadly Wounds " to the Church of England that it had ever yet ſuf- " fer'd. Theſe Reaſons prevail'd ſo far with the " King's own natural Averſion from what had been " propoſed, that he declared poſitively, He would " never go to Charenton: which Determination ea- " ſed him from any farther Application of that " People. The Reproach of this Reſolution was " wholly charged upon the Chancellour of the Ex- " chequer, as the implacable Enemy of all Presby- " terians, and as the only Man who diverted the " King from having a good Opinion of them; " whereas, in truth, the daily Information he re- " ceiv'd from the King himſelf of their barbarous " Behaviour in Scotland towards him, and of their " inſupportable Pride and Pedantry in their Man- " ners, did confirm him in the Judgment he had " always made of their Profeſſion: and he was the " more grievous to thoſe of that Profeſſion, becauſe " they could not, as they uſed to do all thoſe who " oppoſed and croſſed them in that manner, accuſe " him of being Popiſhly affected, and govern'd by " the Papiſts, to whom they knew he was equally " odious: and the Queen knowing him to be moſt " diſaffected to her Religion, made her willing to " appear moſt diſpleaſed for his hindering the King " from going to Charenton.

1652. 4 Car. II.

Sad State of Religion.

The Affairs of Religion (if Faction and multiplied Separation may be ſo called) are not worthy a diſtinct View. Socinianiſm began to make a Sect among the common People; and for that purpoſe the Cracovian Catechiſm was done into the Vulgar-Tongue, for the Inſtruction of Men, Women, and Children. This being repreſented to the Parliament, they could do no leſs than Vote on April 6. that the ſaid Catechiſm did contain Matters that are blaſphemous, erroneous, and ſcandalous; and therefore order, that all the printed Copies of that Book be burned by the common Hangman.

Socinianiſm prevailing.

Tithes to be aboliſhed,

The Payment of Tithes was thought a continual Grievance to the Country People, and made the Subject of repeated Petitions to the Parliament, who were forced often to promiſe a Redreſs, even againſt the Judgment and Intention of the majority of Members. And ſo for a Pretence of Eaſe and Quiet, they referred it May 4. to a Committee, to conſider how a competent Maintenance for godly Miniſters may be ſettled in lieu of Tithes. And in theſe Debates, there was this Good ariſing out of Evil: The Lay Impropriators in the Houſe would never conſent to extinguiſh their own Intereſt, how indifferent ſoever, for the Inheritance of the Church and Maintenance of the Clergy. As in the Beginnings of our Reformation, Popery was kept out as much by the Tenure of Church-Lands, as by any better Principle.

But ſaved by the Lay Impropriators.

Presbytery declining.

The Presbyterian Worſhip and Diſcipline, tho' by preſent Law eſtabliſh'd, began to ſink more and more in the Hearts of the People, and in the Voice of the Parliament, and eſpecially in the Affections of Cromwel and his Army: nay even in Scotland, the Kirk, that had exalted herſelf againſt Princes, could not ſtand againſt the People, but grew into Contempt and Ridicule. They made their little Efforts of Juriſdiction to end in nothing but Jeſt or Riot. The Synod of Edinburgh drew up a Paper, ſtiled, A Teſtimony againſt the preſent incroaching of the Civil Power upon the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction. And the Synod of Fife made a ſolemn Proteſtation againſt all the Reſolutions and Proceedings of the Civil Power, that were contrary to the Liberties and Authority of the Kirk.

Scotch Zeal and Folly.

And

1653. 5 Car. II. And at Perth the Synod sent out their Letters of Citation to the several Presbyters and People who had shewn their Contempt, or expressed their Dislike of the Holy Discipline: But on the Day of Appearance, the Men wilfully absented, and their Wives came to answer for them; who, to the Number of above 120 came with Broom-sticks and Spits, and other Utensils, and besieged the Church where the reverend Assembly sat; who, on this Alarm, sent out one of the gravest Presbyters to treat with the Women: But he taking the wrong way, in threatning to Excommunicate all of them, they first beat him severely, and then bound him their close Prisoner, and fell upon the rest of the Brethren, bruising their Bodies, and taking away all their Books and Baggage, and making the Synod-Clerk forswear his Office. And the only Satisfaction, as we are told, was this, That 13 of the Presbyters rallied about 4 Miles from the Place, and voted, That this Village should never more have a Synod kept in it, but be accursed; and, That altho' in the Year 1638 and 1639 the Godly Women were called up for stoning the Bishops, yet the whole Sex should be now esteemed wicked. Thus the Stool thrown by a Woman's Hand, in the Church of Edinburgh, at the Dean and the Common-Prayer, was now improved into Clubs and Staffs, in the same hands, against Presbyters and Synods.

The Women beat the Presbyters.

1653. Cromwel for dissolving the Parliament. On April 19. Cromwel invited to his Lodgings in Whitehal the choicest of his Friends in the Parliament and Army, and proposed the Subject of Debate, to find out some expedient for the better carrying on the Government of the Common-wealth, and how to put a Period to the present Parliament. Some few (among whom were Sir Thomas Widdrington and Commissioner Whitlock) represented the dangers of dissolving the Parliament, and the difficulties of setting up any other Form of Government. But the General and his Officers, and several of the Members let into the Secret, declared their Opinion, that it was necessary to take some new Measures; and that it was not fit the present Assembly of Parliament should be permitted to prolong their own Power. No conclusion being made, the Junto was adjourn'd to next Morning, when most of them met again in the same place, and the Question in Debate was, Whether forty Persons, or about that number of Parliament Men and Officers of the Army, should be nominated by the Parliament, and impower'd for the managing the Affairs of the Common-wealth, till a new Parliament should meet, and so the present Parliament be forthwith dissolved? Cromwel had sent his Intimations to the House then sitting, that during this Debate at his Lodgings, they should put a Period to themselves, which would be the most honourable Dissolution for them. Colonel Ingoldsby was the chief Member sent by Cromwel to the House, to suggest to them this Project of a voluntary Dissolution: But he came back to Whitehal and informed his General, that the House instead of coming to any Resolutions of dissolving, were in the Debates of other Business which must be adjourned to farther Meetings, and occasion their much longer sitting. Cromwel was so enraged at this Demur, that he presently commanded some of the Officers of the Army to fetch a Party of Soldiers, with which he marched directly to Westminster, and placing his Men of Arms some at the Door and some in the Lobby, and others on the Stairs, he led one File of Musketiers into the House with him, and there looking round with great Fury, he commanded the Speaker to leave his Chair, and told the House, that they had sate long enough unless they had done more good; that some of them were Whoremasters (looking with insult upon Harry Martin and Sir Peter Wentworth) that others of them were Drunkards, and some Corrupt and Unjust Men, and Scandalous to the profession of the Gospel, charging Sir Harry Vane with his breach of Faith and Corruption; and telling them all positively, that it was not fit they should sit as a Parliament any longer, and therefore he must desire them to go away. The Speaker presuming to sit still, Colonel Harrison took him by the Arm and forced him to leave the Chair. Some of the Members rose up to answer Cromwel's Speech, but he would suffer none to speak but himself; which he did with so much Arrogance and so great Reproach to his Fellow-Members, that some of his own Creatures were ashamed of it. Amongst all the Parliament Men, of whom many wore Swords, and would often boast high of their Valour in defence of Liberty and Property, not one Man offered to draw his Sword, or to make the least resistance, but all of them tamely departed the House. Cromwel bid one of the Soldiers take away the Fool's Bauble the Mace, and staid himself to see all the Members out of the House, himself the last of them, and then caused the Doors of the House to be shut up. When the Members thus ejected and exploded came with confusion to their own homes, they had leisure to consider many things, what an outcry they made, when their lawful Soveraign came singly and peaceably into that House, to demand the legal Appearance of a few Members to a Charge of Treason against them: And yet now a fellow Subject, a fellow Member, enters their House with armed Men in a Hostile manner, and without any special Accusation, calls them all Rogues and Sots and Fools, and with the utmost Indignity turns them by the Arms and Elbows out of Doors. How zealous they had been for their own indissoluble Being, how they had extorted from the King his lawful Prerogative of putting an end to them without their own consent; and yet now without a Question ask'd, or a Vote put, at a Word and a Blow they are bid to march off by an Officer, who had his Commission from them, and was in proper Subjection to them. How forward they were to have the sole Sovereignty and Legislature, a Parliament of the Commons of England without King or Lords, that they might have no controul nor competition from any other Power; when yet a Commoner of England commission'd to be their Servant becomes a most absolute Master of them, bids them go at a Word and they are gone, in the most ignominious manner.

Debates in the matter

The Parliament not willing to dissolve themselves.

Cromwel dissolves them by force of Arms.

1653. 5 Car. II. They tamely submit and depart.

And had leisure to reflect.

The Members all silent.

The most amazing thing is this, that after the Members were thus with the last Contempt and Infamy expell'd, they never offer'd to meet in a Body, nor so much as in separate Clubs, to think how to reunite themselves, but crumbled away to their respective homes, with a silence that confest their Guilt and the just Punishment of it: Nay, and the common People never once interposed by any Tumult, or so much as by any Petition, but let them drop without a Word or a Wish to save them. So as they who had commanded the Mob in Routs and Libels, against the King, Bishops and Nobility, were now deserted by them in their extream Agonies, and suffered to expire without one Sigh or Groan.

Declaration of Cromwel and his Officers.

Cromwel and his Council of Officers did not so much want a Vindication of what they had done as a quieting Declaration of what they did intend to do. Hence they publish'd an Account of their Proceeding and Intention, beginning with sufficient intimation, that the whole Government was devolv'd upon the General and his Army by right of Conquest; then casting very abundant Reflections upon the Members who had designed to perpetuate their own Power; and so justifying the necessity of putting an end to such a self-seeking Parliament, promising to put the Government into the Hands of Persons of approved Fidelity and Honesty; and in the mean time declaring that all Magistrates and Officers whatsoever shall proceed in their respective Places and Offices, and Obedience shall be paid to them as fully as when the Parliament was sitting. Signed in the Name and by the Appointment of his Excellency the Lord-General and his Council of Officers, Whitehall Ap. 22. 1653.

A new form of Parliament.

Cromwel tho' incouraged by many Congratulations for dissolving the Parliament, and by many Addresses from the Fleet and Army and People to stand by him and his Council of Officers, yet thought it not time enough to assume the Government to his own Person.

1653. 5 Car. II. Perſon. But he and his Officers reſolved to ſummon ſelect Perſons to be nominated by themſelves out of every County, to make up a new Repreſentative of the whole Nation. And when they had agreed upon their choice Creatures, the ſingular Form of Summons was directed thus to each Perſon.

New form of Summons.

" FOraſmuch as upon diſſolution of the late Parliament, it became neceſſary that the Peace, " Safety and good Government of this Common-wealth ſhould be provided for; and in order thereunto divers Perſons fearing God, and of approv'd " Fidelity and Honeſty, are by myſelf, with the " advice of my Council of Officers nominated, to " whom the great Charge and Truſt of ſo weighty " Affairs is to be committed. And having good aſſurance of your Love to, and Courage for God " and the Intereſt of this Cauſe, and of the good " People of this Common-wealth, I Oliver Cromwel, " Captain-General and Commander in chief of all " the Armies and Forces raiſed, and to be raiſed, " within this Common-wealth, do hereby ſummon " and require you —— (being one of the Perſons " nominated) perſonally to appear at the Council-Chamber at Whitehal, within the City of Weſtminſter, upon the fourth Day of July next enſuing the " date hereof, then and there to take upon you the " ſaid Truſt, unto which you are hereby called and " appointed to ſerve as a Member of the County " of —— and hereof you are not to fail. Given under my hand this 8*th* Day of June 1653.

O. Cromwel.

The Parliament ſo called meets.

Accordingto this novel Edict on July 4. the ſeveral obſcure Perſons thus ſummon'd, did appear in the Council-Chamber at Whitehal, to the number of about 120, and being ſet round the Table, Cromwel ſtanding with his Officers made a Speech to them, ſhewing the cauſe of their Summons, and telling 'em, Cromwel's Speech. they had a clear Call to take on 'em the Supreme Authority of the Common-wealth, quoting abundance of Scripture to admoniſh them to do their Duties. And then he produced an Inſtrument in Writing, under his own Hand and Seal, to conſtitute and acknowledge them, or any forty of them, to be the ſupreme Authority of this Nation. Then he and his Officers withdrew and the Perſons ſo commiſſion'd to be a Parliament, adjourn'd themſelves to the next Day to meet in the Parliament-Houſe; where they reſolv'd That Mr. Rous ſhould be their Speaker for one Month, and Mr. Mr. Rous Speaker. Scobel be their Clerk; and in ſubmiſſion to their Lords and Maſters, they gave a nomination to thoſe who had nominated them, ordering that General Cromwel and his chief Officers Lambert, Harriſon, Desborough and Tomlinſon, ſhould ſit in the Houſe as Members. The Lord Clarendon gives this Character of the Speaker. " He was an old Gentleman of Devonſhire, " who had been a Member of the former Parliament, " and in that time been preferr'd and made Provoſt of " the College of Eaton, which Office he then enjoy'd, " with an opinion of having ſome knowledge in the " Latin and Greek Tongues, but of a very mean underſtanding, but throughly engag'd in the guilt of " the Times.

And thus under the name of a Parliament, they kept a Day of Humiliation and Prayer in the Houſe, and publiſhed a Declaration to ſtir up the godly of the Nation to ſeek God for a Bleſſing upon their Proceedings. But not able to compoſe a diſtracted Nation, and not willing to come up to the ambitious Hopes of Cromwel, it was moved in the Houſe Decemb. 13. That the ſitting of this Parliament any longer would not be for the good of the Common-wealth; and that it would be more fit for them to reſign up their Powers to the Lord-General. The Houſe riſing without a full Reſolution what to do, the Speaker with his Mace, attended by ſome Members, went to Whitehal on Decemb. 12. and gave up their Inſtrument of Commiſſion, and preſented to his Excellency a Reſignation under their Hands of all the Parliamentary Powers lately repoſed in them. 1653. 5 Car. II. This Parliament was afterward called, Praiſe God Barebone's Parliament, from a Leatherſeller of that Name in Fleet-ſtreet, who was an eminent Speaker in it. They were generally a pack of weak ſenſeleſs Fellows, fit only to bring the Name and Reputation of Parliaments lower than it was yet.

Cromwel conſults for a new Government.

In this new vacancy Cromwel called again his Council of Officers, and adviſed with them, How this great burthen of governing England, Scotland and Ireland, with the Armies therein, and the Navies at Sea ſhould be born, and by whom? They ſpent ſeveral Days in ſeeking of God, as the Phraſe then was, and did at laſt reſolve, That a Council of godly, able and diſcreet Perſons ſhould be named, conſiſting of twenty one; and that the Lord-General ſhould be choſen Lord Protector of the three Nations.

Reſolution to make a Lord Protector.

Upon this arbitrary Reſult an Inſtrument was drawn up entituled, The Government of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland; declaring, that the ſupreme legiſlative Authority of the ſaid Common-wealth and the Dominions thereto belonging, ſhall be and reſide in one Perſon and the People aſſembled in Parliament, the Style of which Perſon ſhall be Lord Protector of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland. Then putting the Militia and executive Power into the Hands of the Protector, and providing for a new Parliament to meet on Sept. 3. 1654. and ſucceſſive Parliaments every third Year; the Members to be choſen according to the proportions and numbers hereafter expreſt, that is to ſay, for the County of Bedford ſix, viz. for the Town of Bedford one, for the County of Bedford five, &c. Then conſtituting a ſelect Council of State, and ordaining that the Office of the Lord-Protector ſhall be Elective and not Hereditary, and concluding with a forty ſecond Article in theſe Words, That each Perſon of the Council ſhall before they enter upon their Truſt, take and ſubſcribe an Oath, that they will be true and faithful in their Truſt, according to the beſt of their Knowledge: And that in the Election of every ſucceſſive Lord-Protector, they ſhall proceed therein impartially, and do nothing therein for any Promiſe, Fear, Favour or Reward.

New Model of Parliaments.

Inſtrument of Government.

Cromwel made Protector.

By this Compact on Decemb. 16. Cromwel was conducted in great Pomp to the Court of Chancery, where a Chair of State was placed for him, and he ſtood by it till the Inſtrument was read, and the Oath adminiſter'd to him, and ſubſcribed by him. Then he put on his Hat as the only enſign of Authority, and took poſſeſſion of the Chair; then the Commiſſioners deliver'd up the Great-Seal to him, and the Lord Mayor his Sword and Cap, which were immediately returned to him; then he went back to Whitehal, the Lord-Mayor himſelf uncover'd carrying the Sword before him. And all other Ceremonies and Reſpects were paid to him as to a Soveraign Prince. With ſo much eaſe did a People become enſlav'd to a Fellow-Subject Uſurper, when they had ſpent ſo much Treaſure and Blood in ſhaking off the Yoke of a lawful King.

Grandeur of Cromwel.

Cromwel was encouraged to be more Abſolute by Addreſſes from all parts of the three Kingdoms; by a magnificent Entertainment in the City of London upon Aſh-Wedneſday, when he Knighted the Lord-Mayor with as much Grace as if he had been the King; and by the Application of Foreign States and Kingdoms in as ample manner as if he had been a crown'd Head. His Authority was indeed greater, for in this interval of Parliament he and his Council made their Ordinances as if they had been the Acts of a Legiſlature.

K. Charles unhappy.

The King in Exile at Paris was ſo unfortunate as to be able to take no Advantage of all theſe Convulſions in the Government of England, tho' he had great hopes from the States of Holland and the King of Denmark, then in War with the Engliſh Commonwealth; but the Dutch Fleet was ſo miſerably beat in ſeveral Engagements, that before the end of the Year they were glad to ſue for Peace. The Lord Rocheſter at the Diet of Ratisbon had procured a conſiderable Sum 1653. 5 Car. II. Sum of Money from the German Princes, and a Promiſe from the Emperour to aſſiſt the King as ſoon as his Affairs would permit. The French King was very kind and hoſpitable; but the Policies of Cardinal Mazarine were to be jealous of Monarchy reſtored in England, and for that reaſon inclined to an Amity with all the uſurping Powers; upon which the Intrigues between him and Cromwel grew ſo familiar, that the King, inſtead of hoping for Supplies, could no longer hope for Protection in the French Court. There were ſome little Efforts of Loyalty made in the Highlands of Scotland, where the Earls of Glencarne, Seaforth, and Athol, and others with Commiſſions and Inſtructions from the King, were raiſing Parties for him; and were recruited by Major General Middleton, who came over from Holland, and join'd with them. But they could form nothing but a flying Camp, and raiſe the vigilant Jealouſies of Cromwel; who, to prevent their Advances, took off Monk from the Navy, and ſent him again his Lieutenant General into Scotland, as he now did his own Son Henry Cromwel into Ireland.

The Victories at Sea this Year were not only to the Grandeur of Cromwel, but to the Honour of the Engliſh Nation. The Protector made this only good Uſe of Arbitrary Power, That without the Aid of Parliament, he did, without waiting for Money or Advice, cauſe a ſtrong Fleet to be provided againſt this Spring, and committed it to the joint Command of three Admirals, Blake, Monk, and Dean. This Fleet, in the beginning of June, engag'd the Dutch under Van-Trump, about the middle Seas over between Dover and Zealand; and by not diſcharging their Guns till at a very ſmall diſtance, they broke their Squadrons, and forc'd them to fly, and make all the Sail they could to their own Coaſts, leaving eleven of their Ships taken, and ſix ſunk. The Loſs of the Engliſh was only in Admiral Dean, who was kill'd with a Canon Shot: Their Ships were all ſafe, and all able to purſue the Dutch, and block them up in their own Harbours. Yet Admiral Trump, who with ſome of the ſhatter'd Fleet had got into the Wierings, did with great Induſtry ſo far repair and recruit his Loſſes, that by the end of July he came out with a Fleet of 95 Men of War; and being join'd with 25 more from the Texel, he gave the Engliſh another Battle, which continued very hot from Six in the Morning to One in the Afternoon, when Admiral Van-Trump, ſignally performing the Office of a brave and bold Commander, was ſhot with a Muſket-bullet into the Heart, of which he fell dead, without ſpeaking a Word. This Blow made the Dutch fly toward the Texel, having loſt between 20 and 30 of their Ships fir'd or ſunk, and above 1000 Priſoners taken. By theſe two ſignal Victories, Cromwel brought the Dutch to accept of ſuch Conditions of Peace as he thought fit to give them; among which, one was, That they ſhould not ſuffer any of the King's Party, or any Enemy to the Commonwealth of England, to reſide within their Dominions: and another, which was contained in a ſecret Article, to which the Great Seal of the States was affix'd, was, Never to admit the Prince of Orange to be their Stadt-Holder, General, or Admiral: and likewiſe, To deliver up the Iſland of Polerone in the Eaſt-Indies (which they had taken from the Engliſh in the time of King James, and uſurp'd it ever ſince) into the Hands of the Eaſt-India Engliſh Company again; and, To pay a good Sum of Money for the old barbarous Violence exerciſed upon the Engliſh at Amboyna; for which the two laſt Kings could never obtain any Satisfaction. And by the like Terrors of a Conquerour, he forced Portugal to ſend an Ambaſſadour to beg Peace, and to purchaſe it by the Payment of a great Sum of Money; and brought the two Crowns of France and Spain to ſue for his Alliance. Nay, and while the Portugal Ambaſſadour was ſolliciting the Terms of Peace, his own Brother Don Pontaleon Sa, a Knight of Malta, and a Man eminent in many great Actions, making a Riot upon the Exchange, wherein a Man was kill'd, was made to ſubmit (in- 1653. 5 Car. II. ſpight of the Pretences of Privilege and Protection) to a Trial, and an Execution on a Scaffold upon Tower-Hill.

The Spirit and the very Face of Religion were cover'd, and in a manner extinguiſh'd: No Mean, but all Enthuſiaſm or Profaneneſs, and both in perfection. April 5. it was order'd by the Houſe, that a certain number of Miniſters and others be appointed to ſit in every County, to Examine, Judge, and Approve all ſuch Perſons as ſhall be called to Preach the Goſpel. This Court of Triers was more formally eſtabliſh'd by an Ordinance of the Lord Protector, with Conſent of his Council, March 20. wherein the firſt Teſt for Approbation was, to adjudge whether the Grace of God was in the Perſon: Hence this holy Inquiſition was turn'd into a Snare to catch the Men of Probity and Senſe, and found Divinity; and to let none eſcape but the Ignorant, Bold, Canting Fellows. For theſe Triers ask'd few or no Queſtions in Knowledge and Learning, but only about Converſion and Grace in the Heart; to which, the readieſt Anſwers would ariſe from Infatuation in ſome, and the Trade of Hypocriſie in others. By which means, the Right of Patronage was at their arbitrary Pleaſure, and the Character and Ability of Divines was whatever they pleas'd to make 'em; and Churches were filled all with little Creatures of the State.

Black Face of Religion.

Court of Triers.

In that illegal and moſt irregular Aſſembly, ſummon'd by Cromwel, and commonly call'd Barebone's Parliament, a Spirit of Confuſion had been working to take away the Maintenance and the very Office of the Miniſtry. Tithes were now at laſt reſolved to be Antichriſtian, and fit to be aboliſhed: in order to which, on July 15. they learnedly debated the Propriety of Tithes, whether the Title and ſtrict Property of 'em was in the State, or in particular Perſons? But that which gave them the greateſt Difficulty was, to find an Expedient for ſatisfying Impropriators, i. e. for ſaving themſelves, and for providing ſome Maintenance for the Miniſtry; i. e. for their own Creatures, who muſt have otherwiſe come upon their own Pariſhes. And on July 22. they referred it to a Committee to conſider of the Laws that hinder the Progreſs of the Goſpel, and to repeal them; i. e. to take away all the few remaining Rules of Decency and Order. The City of London were ſo ſenſible of this Tide, that they endeavoured to ſtem it; and Sept. 2. a Petition was preſented to the Houſe in the Name of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, praying, That the precious Truths of the Goſpel may be preſerved in Purity; and the Diſpenſers thereof being approved to be Learned, Godly, and void of Offence, may be ſent forth to preach the Goſpel: That their ſettled Maintenance by Law may be confirmed, and their juſt Properties preſerved; and that the Univerſities may be zealouſly countenanc'd and encourag'd. By whoſe good Example, another Petition was preſented in the Name of the Freeholders and others of Hampſhire, praying for a Support and Encouragement of the Miniſtry, and for the Continuance of Tithes, being above five hundred Years growth, and confirmed by Magna Charta, &c. And ſo at laſt the only Objection againſt Tithes did become the Preſervation of them, i. e. the Intereſt of Impropriators, and the Voice of the People.

Proceedings againſt Tithes.

The City againſt the Abolition of them.

This Parliament (for ſo it muſt be called) was made up moſt of the Independent Faction, to whom the Congregational Churches were humble Suitors for Liberty and Protection againſt the Presbyterians; and did obtain a Vote, that there ſhould be a Declaration for giving fit Liberty to all that fear God, and for preventing the Abuſes againſt Magiſtrates, and for Preſervation of ſuch as fear God among themſelves, without impoſing the one upon the other; and for diſcountenancing Blaſphemies, damnable Hereſies, and licentious Practices. And yet nothing could have been more damnable and licentious than what we are told was under their Deliberation, "That no Courts of Equi- "ty or Juſtice, in the common Courſe, ſhould re-

Liberty of Conſcience.

"main,

1653. 5 Car. II. " main, but the Moſaick Law ſhould take place; " and that both the Magiſtracy and the Miniſtry " ſhould be henceforth aboliſhed, and all Dominion " ſhould go according unto Grace, that the Saints " of the Earth might rule in all things, &c.

Cromwel's Religion was to Reign.

How little Religion was the Concern or ſo much as any longer the Pretence of Cromwel and his Council of Officers, does appear from this, that in the large Inſtrument of the Government of the Commonwealth committed to the Protector, which was the very Magna Charta of the new Conſtitution, in forty two Chapters there is not a Word of Churches or Synods or Miniſters, nor any thing but the Chriſtian Religion in general, with Liberty to all differing in Judgment from the Doctrine, Worſhip or Diſcipline publickly held forth.

Kirk of Scotland contemptible.

Nay and the Kirk of Scotland was as low and contemptible as the Presbytery in England; for when the General-Aſſembly met at Edinburgh July 25. as ſoon as the Sermon was done, and the Presbyters and Elders gone to the Aſſembly-Houſe, and enter'd upon their Buſineſs, Lieut. Col. Cotterel in his Military Figure went in to them, and ſtanding up on a Bench, told them, that no Judicatory ought to ſit that had not Authority from the Parliament of England, and without giving them leave to plead their Divine Right, he turned them forth into the Street, and then led them Priſoners with a Troop of Horſe and Company of Foot out of the City at the Weſt Gate. He then brought them all into a cloſe Ring, and ſo environing them with his armed Men, he rebuked them ſeverely for their bold Meeting, took in their Commiſſions, charg'd them to quit the City before eight a clock, and repair every one to his own home, and never to meet again ſo much as three of them in a Company. Thus righteouſly were Schiſm and Rebellion chaſtiſed, thoſe Presbyters who would aſſemble and rule in ſpite of their Biſhops and their King, were now diſſolved by an inferior Layman and Soldier.

Synod diſolv'd by a Soldier.

1654. Cromwel makes the firſt univerſal Parliament of England, Scotland and Ireland.

The Lord-Protector to confirm himſelf in his new Government, reſolved to unite the three Kingdoms into one Common-wealth, to be the more eaſily manag'd by him the ſole Head. So with conſent of his Council he made an Ordinance April 12. ſetting forth " How he had took into conſideration, that the " People of Scotland ought to be united with the Peo- " ple of England into one Common-wealth, and un- " der one Government; and had found that in De- " cember 1651. the Parliament then ſitting had ſent " Commiſſioners into Scotland to invite the People of " that Nation unto ſuch an happy Union, who pro- " ceeded ſo far therein, that the Shires and Boroughs " did accept of the ſaid Union, and aſſent there un- " to; for the compleating and perfecting which U- " nion, he now ordained, that all the People of Scot- " land, and of all the Dominions and Territories " thereto belonging, ſhould be incorporated into one " Common-wealth with England: And in every Par- " liament to be held ſucceſſively for the ſaid Com- " mon-wealth, thirty Perſons ſhould be called from, " and ſerve for Scotland, &c. And a like Ordinance was ſoon after made for a like diſtribution of thirty Members from Ireland, to ſerve in the Parliament at Weſtminſter. So much greater was the Power of a Uſurper than that of lawful Princes.

He frights all foreign Kingdoms and States.

And to ſtrenghten himſelf the more at home, he made a Peace with Holland, and let Denmark be taken into the Treaty, upon the good Terms of making the States reſponſible for one hundred and forty thouſand Pounds, to repair the damage done by the Danes to the Engliſh. Then by the Negotiations of Ambaſſador Whitlock, he made a firm Alliance with Sweden, and brought the French Court to ſend over a Lord Ambaſſador to propoſe and even to ſue for his Alliance; and terrified the Portugal Ambaſſador into a ready ſigning the Articles of Peace between his Maſter and this Common-wealth and Protector, even on that very Day when his own Brother was Beheaded for a Riot and Murder upon Tower-hill. He had no Enemy abroad but Spain, againſt whom he prepared a Fleet and Army to attack their Weſt-Indies, which gave ſuch an alarm, that the Spaniſh Ambaſſador till then at London applied himſelf to his Excellency, to know whether he had any juſt ground of Complaint againſt the King his Maſter, and if ſo, he was ready to give him all poſſible Satisfaction. Cromwel, as if he were now to give Laws to the old and the new World, demanded no leſs than a Liberty of trading freely to all parts of the Weſt-Indies, and the Court of Inquiſition to be aboliſhed thro' all the Spaniſh Territories. To which the Ambaſſador replied, that his Maſter had but two Eyes, and he muſt not ſuffer them to be both put out at once. So the Expedition went on, the Fleet commanded by Vice-Admiral Pen, and the Army by Colonel Venables; their Deſcent on Hiſpaniola having no Succeſs nor Honour, they took the Iſland of Jamaica; but the General and Admiral had been ſo divided in their Counſels, that after their return they were both put under Confinement by their abſolute Maſter. 1654. 6 Car. II.

Cromwel in effect chuſes his own Parliament.

The Protector's greateſt Game was to manage the approaching Parliament, to this purpoſe he expreſly fixt upon the ſet of Members to be ſent out of Scotland and Ireland, where the ſhew of Election was made to concur with his expreſs Nomination. And even in England where Liberty was to be a little more pretended, he had ſuch an influence upon the People, and ſuch an awe upon the Sheriffs and Magiſtrates, that very few were returned Diſagrecable to his own Deſires. And then to purge out thoſe few, he brought the Trial of Elections into a Committee of his own Council before the opening of the Parliament. So that by the time of ſitting they were all to appearance right and true, except the Lord Grey of Grooby, Mr. John Wildman, Mr. Highland and one or two other inflexible Republicans, whom therefore by his own Will and Pleaſure he excluded from the Houſe.

Opening of this Parliament.

Sept. 3. (tho' it fell upon a Sunday) Cromwel, who thought it his fortunate Day, would have to be the opening of the Parliament, and made the Members after hearing a Sermon in the Abby, wait upon him in the Painted-Chamber, where he made a Speech to them of the cauſe of their Summons, and ſo ſent them to their Houſe to adjourn to the next Day. On which he had a ſecond opening in the moſt ſolemn Monarchical manner; he was drawn in a Coach of State (in which his Son Henry and Lambert ſate with him bare) many hundreds of Gentlemen and Officers walking uncover'd, and next before the Coach his Pages and Lackeys in ſplendid Liveries on each ſide of the Coach, Strickland and Howard Captains of his Guards; after the Coach Claypole Maſter of the Horſe with a led Horſe richly trapp'd, then the Commiſſioners of the Seal and of the Treaſury, and all the principal Men of his Council and Army. He alighted at the Abby Door, and had the Purſe carried before him by Whitlock and the Sword by Lambert, and was placed in a Seat raiſed before the Pulpit, the Members of Parliament being diſpoſed on each ſide of him. After a Sermon preach'd by Mr. Thomas Goodwyn, his Highneſs went in the ſame Equipage to the Painted-Chamber, where being ſeated on a Chair of State, with the Members ſitting round upon Benches all bare, he roſe up and made a long Speech to them, telling them firſt of the Danger of the levelling Principles, and of the Fifth Monarchy Opinions, and of the form of Godlineſs, and the two bad pretenſions, Liberty of the Subject and Liberty of Conſcience. Then he reminded them of the great Judgments that had fell upon the Nation by the Civil Wars, and by the late Forign Wars, and gave them to underſtand, that the Remedy and Deliverance was owing to him. Then he reckon'd up his own Merits, how he had reformed the Laws, and put good Men into Seats of Juſtice, and regulated the Chancery, and ſettled a way for the approbation of able Miniſters, and had been inſtrumental to call a free Parliament; had made Peace with Sweden, with the Danes, with the Dutch, with Portugal, and was now in a Treaty with France. Then he bid them take notice of the great Expence of the Forces and the Fleet; Pomp of Cromwel. His Speech 1654. 6 Car. II. and ended thus, I shall conclude with my perswasion to you, to have a sweet, gracious and holy Understanding one of another; and put you in mind of the Counsel you heard this Day in order thereunto. And I desire you to believe, that I speak not to you, as one that would be a Lord over you, but as one that is resolved to be a fellow Servant with you to the Interest of this great Affair.

Lenthal chosen Speaker.

After he had done, the Members went to their House and chose the old Speaker Mr. Lenthal Master of the Rolls, and appointed a Day of Humiliation for the credit of beginning with Religion. The Ld Clarendon observes, "That their Agreement in chusing Lenthal to be their Speaker was upon very "disagreeing Principles. Cromwel having design'd "him for lucks-sake, and being well acquainted "with his Temper, concluded that he would be "made a Property in this as well as he had been in "the Long-Parliament, when he always complied "with that Party that was most powerful. And the "other Persons who meant nothing that Cromwel did, "were well pleased out of hope, that the same Man's "being in the Chair might facilitate the renewing "and reviving the former House, which they look'd "upon as the true legitimate Parliament, strangled "by the Tyranny of Cromwel, and yet that it had "Life enough left in it.

Their next business was to take into consideration the New Articles of Government; but the Protector finding that instead of immediate Confirmation they fell into Debating and Reasoning about them, he sent for them to the Painted-Chamber Sept. 12. and told them, "That at their first meeting he had much "more Comfort and Hopes of them than he had "now: He was very sorry to find them falling into "Heats and Divisions; but they must remember, "that the same Government which made them a "Parliament made him Protector; and there were "some things in the Government Fundamental, "which could not be alter'd by them: they were "1. The Government in one Person and a Parliament. 2. Parliaments not to be perpetual. 3. "The Militia in the Protector as well as in the Parliament. 4. A Liberty of Conscience in matters "of Religion. That therefore they must not meddle with any of these fundamental things: And "to prevent their doing so, he was necessitated to "appoint them a Test or Recognition of the Government in a Protector and a Common-wealth, which "they should all sign before they went any more "into the House.

A new Test imposed on every Member.

The Form of the Recognition was this: I A. B. do hereby freely promise and engage myself, to be True and Faithful to the Lord Protector and the Common-wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland, and shall not (according to the Tenour of the Indenture whereby I am return'd to serve in this present Parliament) propose or give any consent to alter the Government, as it is settled in one single Person and a Parliament. This being ingross'd in Parchment, was laid on a Table for the Members to sign, before they should be qualified to sit. And of those who refused, they were not only excluded the House, but were some of them taken into Custody, among whom was the Protector's late greatest Creature, Major General Harrison, now in Custody of a Party of Horse. This terrified them into this unanimous Vote Sept. 19. That the supreme Legislative Authority shall reside in a Lord Protector and the People assembled in Parliament; and that the present Lord Protector shall continue during Life; and brought them to a long Debate, Whether the Office of Protector should be Elective or Hereditary? But resolving it should be Elective, and placing the nomination in a Parliament, and voting, that no Law should be alter'd or repeal'd, nor new Laws made, nor any Tax imposed, but by assent of Parliament: These and other Claims of Liberty made the Protector weary of them; so he required them to attend him in the Painted-Chamber January 22. and dissolv'd them with a most tedious and intricate Speech, beginning thus.

Gentlemen,

1654. 6 Car. II.

His Speech at dissolving.

I Perceive you are here as the House of Parliament, by your Speaker, whom I see here, and by your Faces, which are in a great measure known to me.—— There be some Trees that will not grow under the shadow of other Trees; there be some that chuse (a Man may say so by way of Allusion) to thrive under the shadow of other Trees. I will tell you what hath thriven, I will not say what you have cherished under your shadow, that were too hard. Instead of the Peace and Settlement, instead of Mercy and Truth being brought together, Righteousness and Peace kissing each other, by reconciling the honest People of these Nations, and settling the woful Distempers that are amongst us (which had been glorious things, and worthy of Christians to have proposed) Weeds and Nettles, Briars and Thorns have thriven under your shadow, Dissettlement and Division, Discontentment and Dissatisfaction, together with real Dangers to the whole, has been more multiplied within these five Months of your sitting than in some Years before. Foundations have been also laid for the future renewing the Troubles of these Nations by all the Enemies of it abroad and at home. Let not these Words seem too sharp, for they are true, as any Mathematical Demonstrations are or can be.—— I have troubled you with a long Speech, and I believe it may not have the same Resentment with all that it hath with some; but because that is unknown to me, I shall leave it to God, and conclude with that, that I think myself bound in my Duty to God, and the People of these Nations, to their Safety and Good in every respect; I think it my Duty to tell you, that it is not for the profit of these Nations, nor for common and publick Good, for you to continue here any longer: and therefore I do declare unto you, that I do dissolve this Parliament.

This upbraiding and insulting way of Dissolution was so very unpopular, that the Protector could never have betrayed himself into it, if his Pride and Passion had not sunk his Judgment and Experience of the People of England. It gave encouragement to the Royalists and Indignation to the Republicans: So that both Parties for King and Common-wealth were in Rage and Plots and Arms against him. Major John Wildman, whom he had expelled the House at first opening of the Session, as much an Enemy to the King as to this Usurper, was seized with a Paper dictated by him, entituled, The Declaration of the Free and Well-affected People of England, now in Arms against the Tyrant Oliver Cromwel, Esq; "Being satisfied in our Judgment and Consciences of the "present necessity to take up Arms for the defence of "our Native Rights and Freedoms, which are wholly invaded and swallowed up in the Pride and "Ambition of Oliver Cromwel, who calls himself "Lord Protector of England, and hath render'd all "English-men no better than his Vassals, &c.

Wildman's Declaration.

The Character of John Wildman and the Account of this Intrigue is thus given by the Lord Clarendon. "He had been bred a Scholar in the University of "Cambridge, and being young and of a pregnant "Wit, in the beginning of the Rebellion meant to "make his Fortune in the War, and chose to depend upon Cromwel's Countenance and Advice, "when he was not above the degree of a Captain of "a Troop of Horse himself, and was much esteem'd "and valued by him, and made an Officer, and "was so active in contriving and fomenting Jealousies and Discontents, and so dexterous in composing or improving any disgusts, and so inspired "with the Spirit of Praying and Preaching, when "those Gifts came into request, and became thriving "Arts, that about the time when the King was taken from Holmby, and it was necessary that the "Army should enter into Contests with the Parliament, John Wildman grew to be one of the principal Agitators, and was most relied upon by "Cromwel to infuse those things into the Minds of "the Soldiers, and to conduct them in the management of their Discontents, as might most advance "those Designs he then had; and quickly got the Repu-

1654. 5 Car. II. " Reputation of a Man of Parts; and having a " ſmooth Pen, drew many of the Papers which " firſt kindled the Fire between the Parliament and " the Army, that was not afterwards extinguiſhed " but in the Ruin of both. His Reputation in thoſe " Faculties made him quit the Army, where he was " become a Major, and where he kept ſtill a great " Intereſt, and betake himſelf to Civil Affairs, in " the Sollicitation of Suits depending in the Parlia- " ment, or before Committees, where he had much " Credit with thoſe who had moſt Power to do " Right or Wrong, and ſo made himſelf neceſſary " to thoſe who had need of ſuch Protection from " the Tyranny of the time. By theſe Arts he thri- " ved, and got much more than he could have done " in the Army, and kept and encreaſed his Credit " there, by the Intereſt he had in other places. " When Cromwel declined the Ways of eſtabliſhing " the Commonwealth, Wildman, amongſt the reſt, " forſook him; and enter'd, warily, into any Coun- " ſels which were like to deſtroy him: And upon " the Diſſolution of this laſt Parliament, having " leſs of Flegm, and ſo leſs Patience than other " Men, to expect another Opportunity, and in the " mean time to leave him to eſtabliſh his Greatneſs, " he did believe he ſhould be able to make ſuch a " Schiſm in the Army, as would give an Oppor- " tunity to other enraged Perſons to take Venge- " ance upon him.

Cromwel's Arts to ſave himſelf.

But from a univerſal Odium Cromwel ſaved himſelf, by paying well the Fleet and Army, and diſcharging all Officers whoſe Fidelity he could ſuſpect; by carrying it very fair with the City of London, giving them the Power of their own Militia, under their own old Leader Major Skippon; treating them, and accepting of Treats from them; by eaſing the common People from ſome cuſtomary Burdens, and ſome part of their Taxes; and by an indefatigable Induſtry and unbounded Expence in procuring Intelligence, and early cruſhing all Deſigns againſt him. So that tho' his Mother (who died this Year) was continually afraid of her Son's Life, and when ſhe heard the Noiſe of any Gun, would cry out that her Son was ſhot; and could not be ſatisfied without ſeeing him to be alive once or twice a Day: and tho' a thouſand of his Enemies did in Conſcience believe, that Killing him would be no Murder: yet he eſcaped all Dangers, and even that which a mad Frolick of his own expos'd him to; For going to take the Air in his Coach, drawn by a fine Set of ſix gray Frizeland Horſes preſented him by the Duke of Holſtein, he muſt needs get up in the Box to drive the Horſes, which he did ſo furiouſly, that they run away, and could not be ſtop'd till they had thrown him out of the Box, with a grievous Fall, in which the Piſtol in his Pocket fired and flew off, and yet his Perſon had no harm: Only it provoked to a thouſand Wiſhes that he had broke his Neck, and this little Lampoon was ſtuck up in his Sight next Day:

In continual Dangers.

Thrown from a Coach-box.

Ev'ry Day and Hour
Hath ſhewn us his Power,
But now he hath ſhewn us his Art:
His firſt Reproach
Is a Fall from a Coach,
His next will be from a Cart.

The K.'s Condition.

King Charles was yet in France attending on the Solemnity of the French King's Coronation at Rheims, and had ſome Overtures for a Match with the Duke of Lorrain's Daughter, with whom he was to have received four Millions in Money, and the Duke's Aſſiſtance for his Reſtoration. But Mazarine falling in with Cromwel to ſet him upon humbling the Spaniards, made the King to be no longer Welcome or Safe in the French Court. Nor could he hope for any Refuge in Holland; for the States, in a ſervile Submiſſion to Cromwel, had agreed to give Him no Reception; and had, for the ſake of preventing any Aid to him, made an Order, That neither the Prince of Orange, nor any deſcending from the late King of England, ſhould be Admiral of Holland, or have Power over the Militia. He had ſome Encouragement to adventure once more into Scotland, by the encreaſe of his Forces under Glencarne and Middleton; and the common Senſe of Slavery, that the People now lay under. But he had ſo little Love of the Country, and ſo much Experience of the Kirk, that he left the Armies there to complain of his not coming to the Head of them, till they were entirely defeated and ſuppreſs'd by General Monk. In theſe Streights the K. went to Cologne, rather for a Journey and a Viſit to the Spaw, than for any formed Deſign, unleſs that of ſeeing his Aunt the Queen of Bohemia, and his Siſter the Princeſs of Orange: He waited upon the latter in her Return to Holland, as far as Duſſeldorp, and was there kindly entertained by the Duke of Newburgh. When his Majeſty came back to Cologn, the Marquis of Ormond brought to him his younger Brother the Duke of Glouceſter, whom he had honourably taken out from the Jeſuits College at Paris, where his Queen Mother would have train'd him in the Bigotry of the Romiſh Religion. All that his Majeſty could do was, to hold a Correſpondence (which he thought ſecret) with his Friends in England: but one of his own Court and Confidents, Mr. Manning, was corrupted by Cromwel to bertay his Maſter; ſo as the Deſigns were broke before they were perfected. The good Project laid was, to have ſeveral Parties riſe together in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom in the beginning of March, and ſo to make their way into a common Rendezvous; while the King was waiting on the Coaſt of Flanders to come over and command them. But Letters were intercepted, and Perſons apprehended: Sir Henry Slingsby in Yorkſhire, and Captain Penruddock who headed the moſt conſiderable Party at Salisbury, and proclaimed the King at Blandford, was taken at South-Molton in Devonſhire by Captain Unton Croke, and with Colonel Grove ſoon after Beheaded at Exeter; with a multitude of other Royaliſts hanged, impriſoned, fined, and tranſported: For tho' Cromwel, in purſuit of his ſole Adminiſtration, had ſhewn ſome ſpecial Favours to the Royal Party, yet now he never ſpared them, becauſe their Oppoſition was no longer to the Commonwealth, but to his ſingle Perſon. 1654. 6 Car. II.

State of Religion at the Protector his Pleaſure.

Religion was what the Protector pleaſed to make it, or to call it: The Pretenſion of it was to ſerve his Purpoſe. When he concluded a Peace with Holland, he appointed a Day of publick Thankſgiving for it. He made ſeveral Ordinances, with Advice of his Council, for the ſeeming End of Reformation of Manners: One to inhibit all Meetings upon Matches made for Cock-fighting, adjudging them to be Riots and unlawful Aſſemblies: Another, to reſtrain all Challenges and Duels, upon the ſevereſt Penalties of long Impriſonment for giving or accepting any Challenge, and of Baniſhment and Death in caſe of Fighting and of Blood enſuing. A third for the more effectual ſuppreſſing of Drunkenneſs, Swearing, and Curſing. A fourth for the ſpeedy Ejectment of Miniſters and Schoolmaſters, for their Ignorance, Inſufficiency, or Scandal in their Lives and Converſations. A fifth for the better Maintenance of Preaching-Miniſters, and uniting of ſmall Pariſhes. A ſixth for the better Propagation of the Goſpel in Wales. In all which the Political Reaſons were eaſie to be diſtinguiſh'd from the Glory of God and the good Lives of Men. As to Aſſemblies and Diſcipline, He kept the Engliſh Presbyterians in a perfect Submiſſion to his Will, and deſpiſed and ſilenced all their Claims of Divine Right. Thoſe indeed of the Scotch Kirk laboured ſomewhat longer to keep their Pretenſions up; and on October 11. refuſed to obſerve the Faſt-day then ordered by the Protector and his Parliament; declaring it to be a Principle of their Faith and Worſhip, Not to receive any Directions for the keeping of Faſts from the Civil Magiſtrate. But a little military Execution ſeems to His Policy his only Piety.

He humbles the Presbyterians.

1654. 4 Car. II.

have brought them off from this part of their Holy Diſcipline.

The Parliament little concern'd for Religion.

The Parliament, under the Protector's Guidance, made a general Vote December 11. that the true reformed Proteſtant Chriſtian Religion ſhall be publickly profeſſed and maintained: and, That to Bills touching Liberty of Conſcience, the Protector ſhould have a Negative Voice: and, That without Conſent of the Lord Protector and Parliament, no Laws ſhould be made for the reſtraining of ſuch tender Conſciences as ſhall differ in Doctrine, Worſhip, and Diſcipline, from the publick Profeſſion. And yet a Liberty of Conſcience to be given to thoſe only who ſhall not maintain Atheiſm, Popery, Prelacy, Profaneneſs, or any Hereſie to be enumerated by the Parliament. And yet the Protector, in his parting Speech to them, charged them with a Neglect of giving juſt Liberty to godly Men of different Judgments, Men of the ſame Faith with them that you call the Orthodox Miniſtry in England, as it is well known the Independents are, and many under the Form of Baptiſm, who are found in the Faith, only may perhaps be different in Judgment in ſome leſſer matters, yet as true Chriſtians both looking at Salvation only by Faith in the Blood of Chriſt, then profeſſing the Fear of God, having recourſe to the Name of God as to a ſtrong tower. On Decemb. 12. the Parliament, upon a juſt Complaint, voted two Books, written by John Biddle, to contain many impious and blaſphemous Opinions againſt the Deity of the Holy Ghoſt; and condemn'd the ſaid Books to be burnt by the Hand of the common Hangman: and bringing the Author to the Bar of their Houſe, committed him to Priſon. Thomas Firmin applied to the Protector for his Releaſe, but met with a blunt Reproof, to this effect; Would you have me diſpleaſe the People for ſuch a louſie ſilly Fellow? There let him lie.

John Biddle.

King Charles in the Court of France, under the Roof of his Mother, had ſome Trial of his Conſcience and Courage, in reſiſting the little Arguments or rather the Importunities of Popery; while, at the ſame time, the Presbyterians, and eſpecially the Scots, were ſolliciting his Majeſty to come into their Communion. Theſe two irreconciliable Factions did unite in a Contrivance of removing Sir Edward Hide from the King, becauſe both Sides thought him the chief Enemy who oppos'd and prevented their Deſigns. The Lord Balcarris, with Dr. Frazier and other Scots, ſet forth in a Petition, "That "the Presbyterian Party had great Affections to "ſerve his Majeſty, and much Power to do it; "and, that they had many Propoſitions and Advi- "ces to offer, but that they were diſcourag'd and "hinder'd by reaſon that his Majeſty entruſted his "whole Affairs to the Chancellour of the Exche- "quer, who was an old known and declared Ene- "my to all their Party: and therefore they beſought "his Majeſty that he might be removed, &c.

Another Petition was prepared in the Name of his Roman Catholick Subjects, which ſaid, "That "all his Majeſty's Party which had adhered to him "were now totally ſuppreſs'd, and had for the "moſt part compounded with his Enemies, and "ſubmitted to their Government: That the Church "Lands were all ſold, and the Biſhops dead, ex- "cept very few who durſt not exerciſe their Fun- "ction; ſo that he could expect no more Aid from "any who were concern'd to ſupport the Govern- "ment of the Church as it had been formerly eſta- "bliſhed: That by the Defeat of Duke Hamilton's "Party firſt, and then by his Majeſty's ill Succeſs "at Worceſter, and the total Reduction of the King- "dom of Scotland afterwards by Cromwel, his Ma- "jeſty might conclude what greater Aid he was "to expect from the Presbyterian Party. Nothing "therefore remain'd to him of Hope for his Reſto- "ration, but from the Affection of his Roman Ca- "tholick Subjects, to whoſe Power and Aſſiſtance "only he muſt, under the Bleſſing of God, owe his "Reſtitution. But they had great reaſon to fear, "that all theſe Hopes would be obſtructed, unleſs "the Chancellour of the Exchequer, a known Ene- "my to the Catholicks, might be removed from his "Majeſty, &c.

1654. 6 Car. II.

And above all, the two Queen-Mothers of England and France were more eſpecially diſpleaſed with the ſame Perſon, for the ſame reaſon of prejudicing (as they thought) the King againſt the Catholick Religion. They were continually tempting him upon the Motives of Intereſt, and a more ſpeedy Reſtoration; whereas, had his Majeſty turn'd Papiſt, it would never have promoted thoſe Hopes; as was frankly own'd by a very Cardinal of that Church. The Cardinal de Retz had always expreſs'd great Civilities towards the King, and a Deſire to ſerve him; and upon ſome occaſional Conference between them, the Cardinal ask'd the King, Whether he had made any Attempt to draw any Aſſiſtance from the Pope? and whether he thought that nothing might be done that way to his Advantage? The King told him, Nothing had been attempted that way; and, that He was better able to judge, whether the Pope was like to do any thing for a Man of his Faith: The Cardinal ſmiling ſaid, He had no Thought of ſpeaking of his Faith: Yet in ſhort, he ſpoke to him like a wiſe and honeſt Man, that if any Overtures were made him of the Change of his Religion, he muſt tell his Majeſty, it becomes him as a Cardinal to wiſh his Majeſty a Catholick for the ſaving his Soul: but he muſt declare too, That if he did change his Religion, he would never be reſtored to his Kingdoms.

1655. Fleets at Sea.

In the Beginning of this Year, Cromwel ſent two very great Fleets to Sea: the one under Admiral Penn, with a Land Army commanded by General Venables; the other under Blake, without any Land Forces. The firſt Fleet was by Commiſſion, open'd at Sea, bound directly to the Barbadoes, where they took in new Men for the Land Army, and ſail'd to Hiſpaniola, coming about the middle of April to Santo Domingo, the chief Port of that Iſland: General Venables landed his Men in an ill Place, different from the Orders that Cromwel had given, and march'd them through ſuch Woods and uneaſie Paſſages, that the Spaniards, with a very unequal Number, beat them back. They advanc'd again toward the Town, taking Negroes for their Guides, who betray'd them into an Ambuſcade, and they were again ſhamefully repuls'd to the Bay where they landed, with the Loſs of their Major General, and above ſix hundred Men. They were ſoon compell'd to reimbark themſelves; and then, to recover the Diſgrace, they made another Deſcent on Jamaica, and obtain'd an eaſie Conqueſt of it: and leaving a good Body of Foot to keep Poſſeſſion, they return'd to England. Cromwel was never ſo much diſcompoſed as at this Miſcarriage at Hiſpaniola; and as ſoon as they came on ſhore he committed both Penn and Venables to the Tower, and could never be perſwaded to truſt either of them again; and could not, in a long time, ſpeak temperately of that Affair. The other Fleet, under the Command of Blake, ſailing into the Mediterranean, had better Succeſs, in forcing Algiers to the Terms of Submiſſion and Peace, in entring the Harbour of Tunis, and burning all the Piratical Ships; Actions of the higheſt Conduct and Courage, which made the Name of the Engliſh very terrible and formidable in thoſe Seas. In their Return, a Squadron of our Ships fell in with the Spaniſh Weſt-India Fleet, took the Rear-Admiral, and another Ship very richly laden, fired the Vice-Admiral, and run the Admiral on Shore: And ſo coming back to Portſmouth, the Bullion was there landed, and carried in Carts to London, as a Trophy and Triumph of War.

The Lords Commiſſioners for the Great Seal of England.

The Commiſſioners for the Great Seal were, Sir Thomas Widdrington, Whitlock, Lenthal, and Liſle; of which, the three former made their Exceptions againſt executing an Ordinance of his Highneſs and his Counſel for the better regulating and limiting the Juriſdiction of the High Court of Chancery. Upon which the Protector not ſuffering his Authority or his

1655. 7 Car. II.

His Acts to be disputed, sent for them to the Council-Chamber June 6. and there commanded them to lay down the Seal and withdraw; the Protector kept it for some Days in his own possession, and on June 15. delivered it to Major Lisle (one of the old Commissioners obsequious to his Master's Will) and Colonel Fiennes; and it was indeed proper enough for Military Men to be Chancellors, while Law and Equity were both at the point of the Sword. However to please the ejected Commissioners, the Protector made Widdrington and Whitlock Commissioners of the Treasury, and continued Lenthal in his Favour for old Services.

He turns them out.

Puts the Seal into Military hands.

State Libels or Reflections on the Tyranny of the Protector and his Ministers were so bold and common, that it was now found expedient to restrain that Liberty of the Press, which began to turn upon the greatest Advocates for it: So an Ordinance was made at Whitehal in October, that no Person presume to publish in Print any matter of publick News or Intelligence, without leave and approbation of the Secretary of State: And another Order to enforce the Restraint of Printing unlicensed and scandalous Books and Pamphlets, and for regulating of Printing.

Libels on the new Government bring on a restraint of the Press.

The Protector wanted a pretence to increase his Standing Army, and therefore improved the Rumours of Plots and Conspiracies against him by the King's Party: So he raised more Forces for the double Service of a Terror to restrain them, and a Burthen to oppress them: For in November he published his Declaration of the Reasons for raising additional Standing Forces of Horse in every County, to preserve the Peace of the Nation from the new Plots and Attempts of the Enemies of the Common-wealth, upon whom he resolv'd to put the Charge of these additional Forces which they themselves have occasioned, and not upon the honest Party who have already so much suffered. This Proceeding is severely censur'd by one of his own late Creatures and a fellow Judge, Edmund Ludlow, Esq; "Tho' (says he) "he had lately so meanly stoop'd to court the Cavalier Party, and thereby highly provoked his "ancient Friends to a just Jealousie and Indignation, "he resolved now to fall upon them, and to break "thro' all their Compositions, even the Act of oblivion it self, in the obtaining and passing of which "he had so great a hand. To this end he commanded a tenth part of their Estates to be levied, "in order, as he pretended, to maintain those extraordinary Forces, which their turbulent and seditious Practises obliged him to keep up. In defence of which oppression I could never yet hear "one Argument offer'd that carried any weight, either with respect to Justice or Policy: For having "by his Treachery and Usurpation disobliged those "with whom he first engaged, he seemed to have no "other way left to support himself, but by ballancing his new with his old Enemies, whom by this "fresh Act of Injustice, he render'd desperate and "irreconcilable, they being not able to call any "thing their own, whilst by the same Rule that he "seiz'd one Tenth, he might also take away the other Nine parts at his pleasure. And to put this "detestable Project in execution, he divided England "into Cantons, over each of which he placed a Bashaw under the Title of Major General, who was "to have the inspection and government of inferiour Commissioners in every County, with Orders "to seize the Persons, and distrain the Estates of "such as should be refractory, and to put in execution such farther directions as they should receive "from him.—— Things run every Day more and more into confusion, the Cavaliers being enraged to see the Throne usurp'd, and those who had hazarded all for their Country finding themselves cheated; Custom and Excise raised without Authority of Parliament, and Taxes imposed to no other end than to support the Pride and Insolence of a single Person. Some there were that openly opposed these Oppressions, and amongst some others Mr. George Cony a Merchant, who having refused to pay Custom, it was violently taken from him, and he thereupon sued the Collector at the Common Law. But Cromwel resolving to put a stop to such dangerous Precedents, caused the Council for Mr. Cony, who were Serjeant Maynard, Serjeant Twisden, and Mr. Wadham Windham, to be sent to the Tower, where they had not been above three or four Days, when they unworthily petitioned to be set at Liberty, acknowledging their Fault, and promising to do so no more, chusing rather to sacrifice the Cause of their Client, wherein that of their Country was also eminently concerned, than to endure a little Restraint with the loss of the Fees of a few Days. By this means, when the Cause came to the next Hearing, Mr. Cony was necessitated to Plead for himself, which he did in as short a manner as he could, referring it wholly to the Judge, whether that Tax, being not authorized by Parliament, ought to be paid by the Law of the Land; and declaring that he would abide by his Judgment therein, Serjeant Rolls, then Chief Justice of the Upper-Bench, tho' a Conscientious Man, and a lover of Civil Liberty, yet not daring to determine it for him, said That something must be allowed to Cases of Necessity. To which Mr. Cony replied, That it was never wont to be a good Plea in Law, for a Man to make Necessities and then to plead them. But the Judge wanting Courage would not give Judgment against the Usurper, and being too much an honest Man to give it for him, he took time till the next ensuing Term, to consider what Rule he should give in the Case. In the mean time upon consideration, that his continuance in that Station was like to ensnare him more and more, he desired by a Letter to Cromwel to have his Quietus, and Serjeant Glyn was appointed to succeed him—— who before he came to sit on the Bench took care to have this Business accommodated with Cony, who lost his Reputation by withdrawing himself from a Cause wherein the Publick was so much concern'd. Sir Peter Wentworth a Member of the Long Parliament caused also a Collector in the Country to be arrested and prosecuted at his Suit, tho' he could hardly procure an Attorney to appear, or Council to plead for him. Cromwel having received notice of this Prosecution, sent a Messenger with an Order to bring him before the Council; where being examined concerning the ground of his Proceeding, he told them, that he was moved to it by his constant Principle, that by the Law of England no Money ought to be levied upon the People without their consent in Parliament. Cromwel then ask'd him, Whether he would withdraw his Action or no? To which he replied, If you will command me I must submit; and thereupon Cromwel having commanded it, he withdrew his Action.—— Not contenting himself with the Death of many of those who had raised Arms against him, and seizure of the Goods of that Party, he transported whole droves of them at a time into Foreign Parts, without any legal Tryal, &c.

Cromwel increases a Standing Army.

All people weary of Arbitrary Government.

The King, with no prospect of Return, continued his Residence at Cologne; and went thence with the Princess Royal and the Duke of Glocester, for the Diversion of seeing the Mart at Frankfort: In their Passage through every Prince's Country, the chief Officers of State were sent to complement them, and they were saluted with the great Guns, and other Marks of Honour. The Elector of Mentz entertain'd them for three Days with great Magnificence. The King hearing that Queen Christina of Sweden was coming that way in her Journey to Italy, sent one of his Lords to salute her in his Name, and to express his Desire to wait upon her Majesty at what place she would appoint. She named Coningsteni, where they met and had private Conference together.

Condition of the K.

His Majesty return'd to Cologne about the end of October, where (as the Lord Clarendon observes) the Magistrates of the City renewed their Civilities and Professions of Respect to the King, which they always made good: Nor could his Majesty have choſen a more convenient Retreat in any place: And he being well refreſh'd with the Divertiſements he had enjoyed, betook himſelf with great Chearfulneſs to compoſe his Mind to his Fortune; and with a marvellous Contentedneſs, preſcribed ſo many Hours in the Day to his Retirement in his Cloſet, which he employed in Reading and Studying both the Italian and French Languages; and at other times walked much upon the Walls of the Town (for he had no Coach, nor would ſuffer his Siſter to leave him one) and ſometimes rid into the Fields; and, in the whole, ſpent his time very well. The Nuncio of the Pope reſided in that City, and perform'd all Reſpects to his Majeſty: He was a proper and grave Man, an Italian Biſhop, who never made the leaſt Scruple at his Majeſty's enjoying the Liberty of his Chapel, and the Exerciſe of his Religion, tho' it was very publick.

The Royaliſts perſecuted.

Upon Suppreſſion of the Riſing at Salisbury, at the end of the preceding Year, ſo many of the Royaliſts were Beheaded, Hanged, and Tranſported, that no farther Motions of Loyalty could be now made. Of the King's Friends, the noble James Duke of Richmond died of a Quartan Ague, having never had his Health nor his Spirits ſince the deplorable Murder of his beloved Maſter: The Lord Willoughby of Parham, and the Lord Newport, upon Suſpicion of Treaſon, were committed to the Tower; while the Lord Lauderdale and his Brother, by Interceſſion of the King of Sweden, were releaſed from their Impriſonment in Windſor-Caſtle.

Religion order'd for the ſole Intereſt of Cromwel.

Religion was now allow'd to be every thing that did not diſturb the Poſſeſſion of Cromwel. Sectaries were licentious and innumerable; and under that Advantage, Popery made the more conſiderable progreſs. The Protector indeed, for Reaſons of State, did in May publiſh his Proclamation for the better Execution of the Laws againſt Jeſuits and Prieſts, and for Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants. But one of his principal Judges, Commiſſioner Whitlock, declared his Opinion to be for no way of penal Proceeding againſt them; becauſe, ſays he, there was not a fixed Settlement, and ſo great Pretences of Liberty of Conſcience. And well might the Papiſts hope for Indemnity, when the Jews were treating for purchaſe of the ſame Privilege. Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael made his ſtated Propoſals, and had a Conference upon them, for admitting the Jewiſh Nation to exerciſe Trade and Worſhip in England. The Protector, to ſhew a Regard to Chriſtianity, ſent for divers Miniſters of the Goſpel, and laid thoſe Propoſals before them, and referred the Matter, as a Caſe of Conſcience, to their Conſideration.

Papiſts and Jews encouraged.

Death of Biſhop Goodman.

At the latter end of this Year died Dr. Godfrey Goodman, Biſhop of Glouceſter, and with great Scandal declared himſelf, in his laſt Will, to die in the Faith and Communion of the Mother Church of Rome. He had before given many Cauſes of Suſpicion; for on the fifth Sunday in Lent 1626. in a Sermon before the King, he aſſerted the Real Preſence in ſuch a groſs way, as gave very great Offence to all the judicious Auditors: and on March 29. it occaſion'd a juſt Complaint and Debate in the Convocation. The King referred it to a Committee of Archbiſhops and Biſhops, who made a very tender Report; "That "ſome things were therein ſpoken leſs cautiouſly, "but nothing falſly; nor was any thing innovated "by him in the Doctrine of the Church of England: "however, it was beſt the Biſhop ſhould preach "the Sermon again at ſome time to be choſen by "himſelf, and ſhould then ſhew how and wherein "he was miſunderſtood by his Auditors. Whatever Salvo this was to cover up Scandal, yet wiſer People thought him then preparing his Faith for Tranſubſtantiation. He again betray'd himſelf in the Convocation of 1640. when he was the only Member who refuſed to Subſcribe the Canons; for which ſingle Diſſent, the Archbiſhop told him, He muſt be either a Papiſt, or Socinian, or Puritan: He did at laſt comply, but with ſo much Reluctancy, that he confirmed himſelf in the Character of a reputed Papiſt. It is not no Scandal to the Church of England, that this Man was the only Biſhop who made his Addreſſes to Cromwel, and dedicated a Book to his Excellence, (A Diſcourſe concerning the Trinity and Incarnation, Lond. 1653. quarto) with Flattery, and a ſervile Petition for hearing his Cauſe, and for doing Juſtice to him. It is farther remarkable, that as this was the only Apoſtate Biſhop of our Church ſince the Reformation, ſo he was the only one who left Children to beg their Bread: I ſaw the Example at my own Doors; where an old Woman, a common travelling Beggar, uſed this Argument to incite my Charity, that ſhe was the Daughter of Biſhop Goodman: and tho' at firſt I ſuſpected the Truth, yet upon Enquiry from her after the Perſon, Fortune, and even Writings of Biſhop Goodman, I found ſhe might well bear that near Relation to him.

1655. 7 Car. II.

The Endeavours of the Queen-Mother to pervert the Duke of Glouceſter, were a great Trouble to the King in the midſt of his other Sufferings. This young Prince, with his Siſter Elizabeth, had been committed in 1648. to the Counteſs of Leiceſter, and entertain'd by her with little Ceremony at Penſhurſt in Kent; but for fear of a Reſpect paid to them, they were ſoon after ſent away into the Iſle of Wight to Carisbrook-Caſtle, to be under the Cuſtody of Captain Mildmay, who was ſtrictly commanded, that no Perſon ſhould be permitted to kiſs their Hands, and that they ſhould not be otherwiſe treated than as the Children of a Gentleman: which Mildmay obſerved very exactly; and the Duke of Glouceſter was not called by any other Stile than Maſter Harry. The Princeſs died in this place; and at laſt Mr. Lovel, the Duke's Tutor, procured from Cromwel an Order and Warrant to Tranſport the Duke into any Parts beyond the Seas. By which means the Duke was brought ſafe to his Siſter the Princeſs of Orange in Holland, at the latter end of 1652. The Queen very earneſtly deſired he might be preſently ſent for to Paris, ſhe having not ſeen him ſince he was about a Year old. The King could not refuſe to ſatisfie his Mother in ſo reaſonable a Deſire; tho' he did ſuſpect that there might be a farther Purpoſe in that Deſign of ſeeing him than was then own'd. When the King left Paris in June 1654. to retire into Germany, the Queen ask'd, with great importunity, that he would leave the Duke of Glouceſter with her, and offer'd ſuch Arguments as would have eaſily prevailed, had it not been for the fear that the Purpoſe was to pervert him in his Religion; which when the Queen had aſſured the King was not in her Thought, and that ſhe would not permit any ſuch Attempt to be made, his Majeſty conſented to it. But for all this Faith given, the Queen's Zeal did exceed and diſpenſe with the Obligation of it: For (as the Lord Clarendon relates) "Within a ſhort time after his Ma- "jeſty's Return to Cologne, he received News that "exceedingly afflicted him, and the more, that he "knew not what Remedy to apply to the Miſchief "which he ſaw was likely to befall him upon it. "From Paris, his Majeſty heard that the Queen "had put away the Tutor he had left to attend "his Brother the Duke of Glouceſter; who remain'd "at Paris upon her Majeſty's Deſire, that he might "learn his Exerciſes. The Queen had conferr'd "with him upon the Deſperateneſs of his Condi- "tion, in reſpect of the King his Brother's For- "tune, and the little Hope that appeared that his "Majeſty could ever be reſtor'd, at leaſt if he did "not himſelf become Roman Catholick, whereby "the Pope, and other Princes of that Religion, "might be united in his Quarrel; which they "would never undertake upon any other Obliga- "tion: That it was therefore fit that the Duke, who "had nothing to ſupport him, nor could expect any "thing from the King, ſhould be inſtructed in the "Roman Catholick Religion; that ſo, becoming a "good Catholick, he might be capable of thoſe "Advantages which her Majeſty ſhould be able to "procure

1655. Car. II.

" procure for him: That the Queen of France " would hereupon confer Abbies and Benefices up- " on him to ſuch a Value as would maintain him in " that Splendor as was ſuitable to his Birth: That " in a little time the Pope would make him a Car- " dinal; by which he might be able to do the King " his Brother much Service, and contribute to his " Recovery; whereas, without this, he muſt be ex- " poſed to great Neceſſity and Miſery, for that ſhe " was not able any longer to give him Maintenance. She found the Duke more reſolute than ſhe expected from his Age: He was ſo well inſtructed in his Religion, that he diſputed againſt the Change, urg'd the Precepts he had receiv'd from the King his Father, and his dying in the Faith he had preſcribed to him; put her Majeſty in mind of the Promiſe ſhe had made to the King his Brother at parting; and acknowledg'd that he had obliged himſelf to his Majeſty, that he would never change his Religion; and therefore beſought her Majeſty that ſhe would not further preſs him, at leaſt till he ſhould inform the King of it. The Queen well enough knew the King's Mind, and thought it more excuſable to proceed in that Affair without imparting it to him; and therefore took upon her the Authority of a Mother, and remov'd his Tutor from him, and committed the Duke to the Care of Abbot Mountague, her Almoner; who having the pleaſant Abby of Pontoiſe, entertain'd his Highneſs there, ſequeſtred him from all Reſort of ſuch Perſons as might confirm him in his Averſneſs from being converted.

1656. Cromwel was more in Power and Dread, abroad and at home, than perhaps ever any Engliſh Monarch was: He wanted nothing but a Name; and he was ſenſible he could not have the Name of a King without a Parliament. He wanted no Forces to be raiſed; for he had augmented them at his own Pleaſure. Nor did he want Money to ſupply his great Occaſions; for he had Ways and Means alway in his own Hands. Nor had he any Love to ſee a Parliament ſitting; for he had parted with two former Aſſemblies in the moſt rough and odious manner. So that really he could have no Inclinations and no Occaſions for a new Seſſion, but only to make a Party for a Crown. To this purpoſe, he was to get an Awe and a Rule upon Elections: So beſide his ſtanding Force of Major Generals in every County and chief Corporation, he ſet up a new Office of Purgatory, called a Committee for Inſpection of Charters; of which Mr. Gabriel Beck, Sollicitor to his Highneſs, was Chairman; and their Conſults were all to be reported to the Protector and his Council: By which means the Boroughs and Corporations were influenced or modell'd as his Highneſs and his Court pleaſed. This Menage for a new Parliament is thus deliver'd by an old Aſſociate of Cromwel's. " The Uſurper having governed, as he " thought, long enough by Virtue of the Inſtrument " of Government, which tho' drawn up by himſelf " and his Creatures, was now thought to lay too " great a Reſtraint upon his ambitious Spirit; and " reſolving to reſt ſatisfied with nothing leſs than " the Succeſſion of his Family to the Crown, he " attempted to make himſelf King. To this end, " he thought it neceſſary to call a Parliament: and " that he might engage the Army to aſſiſt him in " all Parts to procure ſuch Men to be choſen as " would be fit for his purpoſe; he pretended that " this Aſſembly was called only in order to raiſe " Money for the Payment of the Army and Fleet, " to confirm the Authority of the Major Generals, " and that of the Inſtrument of Government. By " this means he obtained his Deſires in a great " meaſure, eſpecially in Scotland and Ireland, where " all kinds of Artifice, and in many Places the " moſt irregular Courſes, were taken, to get ſuch " Men returned as were propoſed by the Court. But " knowing the People of England not to be of ſo " mercenary a Spirit, and that as they were better " inſtructed in the Principles of Civil Liberty, ſo " they were not wanting in Courage to aſſert it; 1656. " he uſed his utmoſt Endeavours to diſable and in- 8 Car. II. " capacitate ſuch Men from being choſen, whom " he thought moſt likely to obſtruct his Deſigns. " In order to this, he ſummon'd the Lord Preſident " Bradſhaw, Sir Henry Vane, Colonel Rich, and my " ſelf (Colonel Ludlow) to appear before him in " Council. —— Colonel Rich was ſent Priſoner to " Windſor-Caſtle. —— Colonel Ludlow was order'd to " be taken into Cuſtody. —— Sir Henry Vane was " ſent Priſoner to Carisbrook-Caſtle. —— And Brad- " ſhaw, tho' ſuffer'd to go his Circuit as Chief Ju- " ſtice of Cheſter, had Letters ſent after him to de- " terr People from giving their Voices for him.

On Sept. 16. this Party of a Parliament met the Lord Protector in the Abby-Church at Weſtminſter, where they heard a Sermon preach'd by a prime Creature and very Confeſſor of Cromwel, Dr. John Owen, Dean of Chriſt-Church and Vice-Chancellour of Oxford, on Iſa. 14. 32. What ſhall one then anſwer the Meſſengers of the Nation? That the Lord hath founded Zion, and the Poor of his People ſhall truſt in it. A Sermon calculated for the new Monarchy projected. After this, his Highneſs and the Members went into the Painted Chamber, where he made a dark Speech to them, and ſent them away to their Houſe for Admiſſion or Excluſion, according as He and his Council had thought meet: for, at the Doors of the Houſe they found a Guard, and an Officer ſtanding with a Liſt in his Hand, and demanding the Names of every Perſon: Such as were mark'd for Non-admittance were turn'd back, and ſuch as had been approved for right truſty Men, took a Ticket to introduce them, in this form; Theſe are to certifie, that A. B. is returned by Indenture one of the —— to ſerve in this preſent Parliament for the ſaid ——. and is approved by his Highneſs's Council. Nath. Tayler Clerk of the Commonwealth in Chancery. 17 Sept. 1656. Old Ludlow repreſents the Matter right: " The Court finding by the Liſts they had received, " that notwithſtanding all their Menaces, Promiſes, " and other Artifices, divers Perſons were choſen " whom they knew to be no Favourers of the Uſur- " pation, reſolved to clear their Hands of them at " once. And to that end, under colour of a Clauſe " in the Inſtrument of Government, that none ſhould " be admitted to Places of Power and Truſt, but " ſuch as were Men of Sincerity and Integrity, they " gave an Excluſion to Sir Arthur Haſlerig and Mr. " Scot, with as many more as they thought fit. By " this means, and the Refuſal of others to take out " their Permiſſions to ſit from Cromwel and his " Council, as was required, leſt they ſhould ſeem " to countenance ſuch a deteſtable Impoſition, and " open Breach of Privilege; it came to paſs, that " about a hundred of thoſe who were elected by " the Country, were excluded from the Diſcharge " of their Truſt; whilſt thoſe for Ireland and Scot- " land, who were choſen by and for the Sword, were " admitted without any Scruple. Thoſe that were " excluded preſented a Petition to the ſitting Mem- " bers, acquainting them, that being choſen by the " Country to ſerve with them, they were ready to " diſcharge their Duty, but were prevented from " doing the ſame by the Power of the Sword, and " refuſed Admittance into the Houſe by a Guard " of Soldiers. After the Petition had been read, a " Committee was ſent to enquire of Cromwel and " his Council concerning the Reaſons of that Pro- " ceeding; who returned with this Anſwer, That " if the Perſons complaining would addreſs them- " ſelves to them, they ſhould be relieved if there " was cauſe. With this Anſwer, theſe Men who " would be accounted an Engliſh Parliament acqui- " eſced, leaving their Privileges unvindicated, and " the Merit of Elections to Parliament to be ad- " judged by Men without Doors. The Lord Cla- rendon repreſents it thus: " When upon the Re- " turns Cromwel found, that tho' in ſome places he " had ſucceeded according to his Wiſh, it was in 1656. 8 Car. II. " others quite the contrary, and that very many " Members were return'd, who were Men of the " moſt notorious Malignity againſt him; he there- " fore reſorted to his old Security, to keep all man- " ner of Perſons from entering into the Houſe, who " did not firſt ſubſcribe, that they would act nothing " prejudicial to the Government, as it was eſtabliſhed " under a Protector; which being tender'd, many " Members utterly refuſed, and returned into their " Countries, where they were not for the moſt part " the worſe welcome for inſiſting upon their Pri- " vileges and Freedom of Parliament.

" others

The Excluded Members ſeing no Redreſs appeal'd to the People in a Remonſtrance or Proteſtation, ſet- ting forth that " The Lord Protector had by force " of Arms invaded their fundamental Right and " Liberty, and violently prevented the meeting of " the People choſen Deputies in Parliament; and " concluding with an Appeal unto God and all the " good People of England for Aſſiſtance and Prote- " ction in their Service, —— and pouring out their " ſad Complaints before the Lord againſt our power- " ful Oppreſſors, humbly hoping that he will come " forth ſpeedily, to redeem his People out of the " hands of wicked and deceitful Men. But all this to no effect, becauſe moſt of the Subſcribers, Haſle- rig, Scot, Jones, Goodwyn, &c. had been violent Re- bels to the juſt Prerogatives of the King, and were the more fit and worthy to fall a juſt Sacrifice to an Arbitrary Power in an Accomplice and late Equal of their own.

The ſitting Members with Sir Thomas Widdrington their Speaker, being all diſpoſed to follow Inſtruc- tions, began the firſt Day of Buſineſs Sept. 18. with re- ſolving upon a Declaration for a general Faſt through- out the three Nations; and with reading a Bill for renouncing and diſanulling the pretended Title of Charles Stuart. This was to make the Throne more expreſly vacant for the reception of Cromwel, who was to car- ry his Point chiefly by his Major Generals and other Military Officers; but when he ſaw them fall ſhort in their Intereſt or Zeal, he dropp'd them and Sacri- ficed them in the moſt ungrateful manner. " It " was ſuppoſed that Cromwel who had erected their " Authority, and engaged them in thoſe Actions, " for which they were now become odious, would " ſupport them againſt all Attempts, becauſe there " appeared now no way ſo probable to maintain his " own Power, as by keeping the Army firmly united " to him. But Ambition had corrupted his Under- " ſtanding to that degree, that he made no ſcruple " to ſacrifice theſe Men, who, to ſay no worſe, had " enlarged their Conſciences to an extraordinary ſize " in the execution of his Orders, to thoſe who in re- " quital of the Favour had promiſed to make him " King Hitherto he had given good Words to the " Major Generals; but when their Power came to " be debated, Mr. Cleypole his Son-in-Law firſt ſtood " up, which was unuſual for him to do at all, and " told the Houſe, that he could but ſtart the Game, " and leave thoſe who had more Experience to fol- " low the Chaſe; and therefore ſhould only ſay, " that he had formerly thought it neceſſary, in reſ- " pect to the Condition in which the Nation had " been, that the Major Generals ſhould be entruſted " with the Authority which they had exerciſed; but " in the preſent ſtate of Affairs, he conceived it in- " conſiſtent with the Laws of England, and Liberties " of the People, to continue their Power any lon- " ger. This Motion was a clear Direction to the " Sycophants of the Court, who being fully perſua- " ded that Cleypole had delivered the Senſe, if not " the very Words of Cromwel in this Matter, joined " as one Man in oppoſing the Major Generals, and " ſo their Authority was abrogated. Soon after Colonel William Jephſon, one of the Members that ſerved for Ireland, moved in the Houſe, That Crom- wel might be made King; but matters not being throughly concerted, it had no other effect than to ſound the Inclinations of the Aſſembly.

Proceed- ings of this Parli- ament.

Motion for Cromwel to be King.

The Parliament did every thing elſe to gratifie the Protector. They reſolv'd October 1. that the War againſt the Spaniard was undertaken upon juſt and ne- ceſſary Grounds, and for the good of the People of this Common-wealth, and that the Parliament doth approve thereof, and will by God's bleſſing aſſiſt his Highneſs therein. And immediately after this Vote, came the News of Captain Stayner's Engagement with the Weſt- India Spaniſh Fleet, and taking two Millions of Sil- ver, which were brought home and delivered into the Mint, and a Day of ſolemn Thankſgiving appoin- ted for this Joy to Cromwel, who ſeemed now to bor- row from one Crown a ſufficient Fund to purchaſe another. 1656 8 Car. I.

Novem. 27. the Protector came in State to the Pain- ted-Chamber, and like a Sovereign paſſed theſe Bills. 1. An Act that paſſing of Bills ſhall not determine this preſent Seſſion of Parliament. 2. An Act for renouncing and diſanulling the pretended Title of Charles Stuart. 3. An Act for the ſecurity of his Highneſs the Lord Protector his Perſon, and conti- nuance of the Nation in Peace and Safety. 4. An Act for taking away the Court of Wards and Live- ries. 5. An Act for the Exportation of ſeveral Com- modities of the Breed, Growth and Manufacture of this Common-wealth. Acts paſs by Crom wel.

A Plot againſt the Life of Cromwel was another good advantage to him: Miles Syndercomb a Leveller, caſhier'd in Scotland, combined with one Cecil and one Troop of Cromwel's Life-guard (who betray'd him) to kill the Protector by ſome one of ſeveral ways pro- poſed. Syndercomb denied the Plot, but was con- demned upon the Stat. 25 E. 3. which the Chief Ju- ſtice Glynne declared to be Treaſon in caſe of a Pro- tector as much as of a King, ſince by the Word King any chief Magiſtrate was underſtood. The Priſoner was found dead in the Morning appointed for his Execution; ſo his Body was tied with his Head forward to a Horſes Tail, and dragg'd naked to the Scaffold on Tower-Hill, and under that Buried with a Stake driven thro' him, cover'd with Iron at the top, to ſtand the more durable Mark of Infamy. And Feb. 20. was appointed for a Day of publick Thankſgiving for this great Mercy and Deliverance; when after a Sermon at St. Margaret's, the Protector treated the Speaker and all the Members in the Ban- quetting-Houſe at Whitehal, with ſo much Endear- ment, that on the very next Day Alderman Pack moved again in the Houſe, that to prevent the like Dangers, and to compoſe the Minds of Men, the Pro- tector might be deſired to aſſume the Title and Authority of King, as the moſt known and moſt agreeable Go- vernment. But the Major Generals and Military Members, who now thought themſelves deſerted and highly affronted, out of Revenge on the Protector fell in with the Common-wealth Party, " And turn'd " (ſays Ludlow) ſo furiouſly upon Pack, for his " great Preſumption in bringing a buſineſs of that " Nature into the Houſe in ſuch an unparliamenta- " way, that they bore him down from the Speaker's " Chair to the Bar of the Houſe of Commons. But " this Heat being ſoon over, the Lord Broghil, Ser- " jeant Glyn and others, who were acquainted with " Cromwel's Deſign, endeavour'd to perſwade the " Houſe to debate the new Form, telling them, that " being Maſters of their own Reſolutions, they " might retain as much of it as was good, and re- " ject what was not ſo. By this means they brought " it to be debated; and tho' they received ſome op- " poſition therein, yet when it came to be put to the " Queſtion, they carried all before them, and grew " ſo hardy to move, that the Blank left for the In- " ſertion of the Title of the Chief Magiſtrate might " be filled up with the name of King. This motion " though earneſtly oppoſed by Lieutenant-General " Fleetwood, was carried alſo, and the Name voted, " together with the filling up the two Blanks left " for the two Houſes, with the Words Houſe of " Commons and other Houſe. Syndercomb's Plot

1656. 8 Car. II.

The King kept his Court at Bruges in Flanders, and had many Conſultations with the Governor Don John how to make the Spaniſh Intereſt and his own ſubſervient to each other. But all his Majeſty was enabled to do, was to Liſt ſome Regiments of his own Native Subjects into Service and Pay, to be quarter'd in Flanders for ſome opportune Expedition which did not yet offer.

ate of eligion.

The Church was nothing but the Remnant of Preſbytery old and weak, with no Power in Effect but what came from the Protector and the Parliament; who now would allow no Aſſembly of Divines, nor indeed any Doctrine or Diſcipline but what ſhould occaſionally depend on their Votes and Orders. Under many effuſions of Religious Phrenſie, the Quakers were extremely Mad, one diſturbed the Preacher in White-Chapel Church with ſuch an impulſe, that a Complaint was made to the Protector, who order'd him to be carried to a Juſtice of Peace, and proceeded againſt according to Law. Another pretending to an immediate Meſſage from God, went about the ſtreets denouncing his Judgments againſt the Protector and his Council. A third infatuated Quaker in Colcheſter ſtarved himſelf to Death, upon claim of a Commiſſion from the Spirit that he muſt faſt forty Days. But the moſt impudent of all Mortals was James Naylor, a late Soldier under Lambert, who propoſing to out-do Ignatius Loyola, ſet up to be Jeſus himſelf in Perſon, and ſo with Garb, Hair and Looks exactly in reſemblance of the Pictures of our Bleſſed Saviour, he went about with Diſciples and Women miniſtring unto him: And ſo enter'd Briſtol with Women and Mob crying Hoſanna, Bleſſed, &c. and giving no other Anſwer to any Queſtion but thou haſt ſaid it. The Magiſtrates of that City ſent him up to Weſtminſter, where the Houſe reſolv'd Decemb. 8. that James Naylor was guilty of horrid Blaſphemy, and was a grand Impoſtor, and a great Seducer of the People; and order'd the Speaker to pronounce this Judgment againſt him; To ſtand in the Pillory two Hours at Weſtminſter; to be whipp'd by the Hangman through the Streets from Weſtminſter to the Old Exchange, and there to ſtand in the Pillory two Hours more: his Tongue bored thro' with a hot Iron, and his Forehead ſtigmatiz'd with the Letter B; to be afterward ſent to Briſtol, and convey'd thro' the City on a Horſe bare back'd, and his Face backward, and his Body whipp'd in the Market-place. Thence to be brought back to London, and committed to Priſon in Bridewel, and there to be reſtrained from all Company, and to have no Relief but what he earns from hard Labour; and being debarred from the uſe of Pen, Ink and Paper, ſhall be kept to continual work, till he ſhall be releaſed by the Parliament. It was ſome reproach to Humane Nature, that this wretched Fellow under all his Sufferings had ſome of his Followers to admire him and to adore him; to lick his Wounds, to kiſs his Feet, to lean in his Boſom, to do all that was prodigiouſly Impious and Silly. When he came firſt to Bridewel, to act on the Impoſture, he faſted three Days; but then Fleſh and Blood beginning to quarrel with the Spirit, he begg'd for Victuals, and fell to Work: At the return of the Rump he obtained his Liberty, and died ſoon after with no Fruits, nor ſo much as Signs, of Repentance.

Upon diſcourſe of the Polyglot Bibles now ready to be publiſh'd in ſix Volumes Folio, by the immenſe Labour of Dr. Brian Walton, and a great Treaſure raiſed for the Expence by the Contributions of the Nobility and Gentry, moſt of 'em Members of the perſecuted Church; a Propoſal was made to the Parliament for a new Tranſlation of the Scriptures into the Engliſh Tongue: Upon this, at the grand Committee for Religion Jan. 16. it was order'd, that it be referred to a ſubcommittee, to ſend for and adviſe with Dr. Walton, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Caſtle, Mr. Clerk, Mr. Poulk, Dr. Cudworth, and ſuch others as they ſhall think fit, and to conſider of the Tranſlations and Impreſſions of the Bible, and to offer their Opinions therein to this Committee, and that it be eſpecially commended to the Ld Commiſſioner Whitlock to take care of this Buſineſs. "This Committee (as Whitlock ſays) often met in his Houſe at "Chelſea, and they had the moſt learned Men in "the Oriental Tongues to conſult with in this great "Buſineſs; and divers excellent and learned Obſer- "vations were made of ſome Miſtakes in the Tran- "ſlations of the Bible in Engliſh, which yet was a- "greed to be the beſt of any Tranſlation in the "World. Great Pains was taken in it, but it be- "came fruitleſs by the Parliaments diſſolution.

1656. 8 Car. II.

The Queſtion of the Times was, Whether Cromwel ſhould aſſume the Title and Office of King? The difficulty upon himſelf was, that he did paſſionately deſire it, and yet muſt artfully decline it. The majority of the Members were by this time drawn into the Plot, and preſented him a Writing which they ſtiled, The Humble Petition and Advice of the Parliament of England, Scotland and Ireland to his Highneſs, with a Speech from Sir Thomas Widdrington their Speaker, recommending the Title and Office of a King as ſettled here with Chriſtianity it ſelf, approved and retained by our Anceſtors, and every way fitted to the Laws and Temper of the People of England. Had the Protector immediately comply'd with their Zeal and his own Hearts deſire, he might have gone to Crown and Scepter without any other oppoſition. But whether it was to diſſemble greater Modeſty and be at laſt made a King by the very force of the People; or whether it was to obviate all Dangers by more deliberating on the matter, Cromwel inſtead of a ready Aſſent, devoutly demurr'd and told them, "That it was a weighty matter, and therefore de- "ſired ſpace to ſeek God; for the Charge laid up- "on him was too great to bear without the Divine "Aſſiſtance; that the Engliſh were the beſt People "in the World, and required therefore all Tender- "neſs and Conſideration of their Liberties; he muſt "therefore deſire that a Committee might be ap- "pointed to confer with him, and to offer him bet- "ter knowledge and ſatisfaction in this great Cauſe. Such a Committee did accordingly attend his Highneſs, where the Chairman Whitlock and all the chief Members were to argue for Monarchy in Cromwel, and he who reached at it was to be the only Man that ſhould ſpeak againſt it.

The grand Queſtion whether Cromwel ſhould be King.

He demurs upon it.

Amongſt others the Lord Broghil much preſs'd that Paſſage brought by the Apoſtle in the Diſpute concerning the Abolition of the Jewiſh Worſhip, by the new and living way reveal'd in Jeſus Chriſt, illuſtrated by the Wife that was put away, who yet might be retaken by her former Husband, if ſhe was not married to another; applying this Similitude to the preſent occaſion, as if there was no other way to keep out Charles Stuart, but by filling his place with another King. Mr. Lenthall's Argument was very Parliamentary and Rational had it been rightly applied: For he preſs'd him to accept of it, becauſe it was propoſed to him by the Parliament, as he was pleaſed to call it, whom, he ſaid, he ought not to deny.

SIR,

Whitlock's Speech.

"I Have very little to trouble your Highneſs with: "So much hath been already ſpoken and ſo well, "that it will be hard for me, or any other to under- "take to add to it; only the Duty of my Employ- "ment, and ſomething due to your Highneſs occaſi- "ons me to ſpeak a few Words, to acknowledge "with very humble Thanks the Honour and "Right which you have done this Committee, by "the clear and free Diſcourſes and Conferences which "they have had with your Highneſs, and for your "frequent Expreſſions and Teſtimonies of Affection "and Reſpect to the Parliament, whoſe ſenſe in "This I may preſume to ſpeak, that never any Per- "ſons met their ſupreme Magiſtrate with more "Love, Duty, and Honour, than the Parliament

" have met your Highneſs with in their preſent " Addreſſes; which Argument of Love deſerves the " Eſteem and Force which I doubt not but your " Highneſs will put upon it. I am fearful to be too " tedious at any time, eſpecially at ſo late an hour, " and therefore ſhall ſpeak but ſhort, to ſome things " which I remember not to have been mentioned. " Your Highneſs was pleaſed, at the laſt Meeting, " to ſay, That the original Inſtitution of the Title " King was by common Conſent, and that the ſame " common Conſent might inſtitute any other Title, " and make it as effectual as that of King. This " muſt be acknowledged; but withall you may be " pleaſed to obſerve, that the Title of King is not " only by an original common Conſent, but that " Conſent alſo approved and confirmed, and the " Law fitted thereunto, and that fitted to the Laws, " by the Experience and Induſtry of many Ages, " and many hundreds of Years together: whereas " any other Title will be only by preſent common " Conſent, without that Experience and Approba- " tion. For that Experience which your Highneſs " mentioned to have been of other Titles, and the " due Adminiſtration of Juſtice under them; this " Experience is far ſhort of the other: and for the " Courſe of Juſtice, we have cauſe to thank that " Care which placed ſo good Judges and Officers " over us. Yet give me Leave to ſay, that in pri- " vate Cauſes between Party and Party, and in pub- " lick Matters in nominal Cauſes, it was not eaſie " to find Juſtice to be done by ſome Jurors; and " many Queſtions have ariſen upon occaſion of theſe " new Titles, concerning that tender point of good " Mens Satisfaction. I think it requires a very " great Regard from us, and I doubt not but thoſe " good People will be fully ſatisfied, if they conſi- " der the Covenants, Promiſes, and Precepts, which " in the Scriptures are annex'd to the Name of " King: and although ſome have alledged, that they " belong to any chief Magiſtrate as well as to King, " yet no Man did ever read the original Word tran- " ſlated otherwiſe than King: neither do I find the " preſent Title once mentioned in the Holy Text.

" If the preſent Authority be a lawful Authority, " which I hope none of us will deny; ſurely thoſe " good Men who are ſo well principled in Godlineſs " will not forget that Precept of Submiſſion to Au- " thority, and to be ſatisfied with that which law- " ful Authority ſhall ordain. Their Rights and " Liberties are the ſame with ours, and the Parlia- " ment cannot adviſe any thing for the Preſervati- " on of the People's Rights, but theſe good Men " are included; which I hope will be no Diſſatiſ- " faction to them. In all the Changes which we " have ſeen, there hath been a Diſſatisfaction to " ſome; yet ſtill the Bleſſing of God hath gone a- " long through all theſe Changes, with thoſe who " carried on his Intereſt: and the Cauſe being the " ſame, the ſame Mercies have been continued. " And I doubt not, if the intended Change, or ra- " ther Reſtitution be made (as I hope it will) the " ſame God will continue his Bleſſings to that good " Old Cauſe wherein we are engaged; and that " good Men will receive Satisfaction by it.

" Your Highneſs hath been told, that the Title " of King is upon the Foundation of Law, and that " a new Title muſt have a Conſtitution to make " the Laws relate unto it, and that to the Laws. " I ſhall add only this, That a Title by Relation " is not ſo certain and ſafe as a Title upon the old " Foundation of the Law; and that a Title upon a " preſent ſingle Conſtitution (as any new Title " muſt be) cannot be ſo firm as a Title both upon " the preſent Conſtitution, and upon the old Foun- " dation of the Law likewiſe, which the Title of " King will be. If any Inconvenience ſhould enſue " upon your Acceptance of this Title which the " Parliament adviſeth; your Highneſs's Satisfacti- " on will be, that they did adviſe it.

" On the contrary part, if any Inconvenience " ſhould ariſe upon your Highneſs's Refuſal of this " Title, which the Parliament hath adviſed, your " Burden will be the greater: And therefore what- " ſoever may fall out, will be better anſwer'd by " your Highneſs's complying with your Parliament " than otherwiſe. 1657. 9 Car. II.

" This Queſtion is not altogether new, ſome In- " ſtances have been given of the like; to which I " ſhall add two or three. The Title of the Kings " of England in the Realm of Ireland, was Lord of " Ireland; and the Parliament in 33 Hen. VIII. re- " citing that Inconveniences did ariſe there by rea- " ſon of that Title, did enact, That Hen. VIII. " ſhould aſſume the Stile and Title of King of Ire- " land; which, in the Judgment of this Parliament, " was preferred before the other.

" In the State of Rome, new Titles proved fatal " to their Liberties. Their Caſe was not much un- " like ours: They were wearied with a Civil War, " and coming to a Settlement, Cuncta diſcordiis civi- " libus feſſa, ſub nomine Principis Imperium accepit. " Some would not admit the Title Rex to be uſed, " but were contented to give the Titles of Cæſar, " Perpetuus Dictator, Princeps, Senatus, Imperator. " Non ſum Rex ſed Cæſar came at laſt to this; Vo- " luntas Cæſaris pro Lege habebatur.

" The Northern People were more happy among " themſelves: A private Gentleman of a noble Fa- " mily took up Arms with his Country-men againſt " a Tyrant, and by the Bleſſing of God reſcued " their native Liberties, and Rights of their Coun- " try, from the Oppreſſion of that Tyrant. This " Gentleman had the Title of Marſhal given to him, " which continued for ſome Years: Afterwards " their Parliament (judging it beſt to reſume the " old Title) elected this Gentleman King, and with " him was brought in the Liberty of the Proteſtant " Religion, and the Eſtabliſhment of the Civil " Rights of that People; which have continued in " a proſperous Condition ever ſince unto this Day.

" Sir, I ſhall make no other Application but in " my Prayers to God, to direct your Highneſs and " the Parliament (as I hope he will) to do that " which will be moſt for his Honour and the Good of his " People.

Thus ended the Speech of Whitlock: and it gives ſome Reputation to the Form of Engliſh Monarchy, to ſee that thoſe very Men who had perſecuted and murder'd one King, and had baniſh'd and renounc'd another, and aboliſh'd all Kingly Government, and ſworn themſelves into a Commonwealth, without King or Lords; that thoſe Men ſhould at laſt turn back to the good old Conſtitution, and find no Reſt or Peace but under a new Monarch. If they did this from their Opinion of the Excellence and Neceſſity of a Sovereign Power in one ſingle Perſon; it was a ſingular Teſtimony given unto that Government which they had wickedly deſtroy'd, and would now induſtriouſly reſtore: But if all this was againſt their own Conſcience, and they were terrified into the Deſire of a King, when they ſtill hated the Name and the Office in their Heart; this was ſuch a Token of an abject Spirit, as could have nothing leſs than Divine Vengeance in it; that they who rebell'd for Liberty under a lawful and merciful Prince, ſhould be now ſo dead to all ſenſe of Liberty, as to proſtitute their Judgment and their Necks to a Yoke more ſervile and more heavy than what they had before ſhaken off, on a Pretence that they were not then able to bear it. And if this were the Caſe of giving themſelves up to Captivity in ſpight of their own Conſcience; it was the finer Riddle, that thoſe who abhorred a Monarchy were forc'd to petition and to plead for it, while he who vehemently was ambitious of it was likewiſe forced to decline and to deny it. For whatever this Junto of a kind of Parliament pretended, this Project was entirely againſt the Senſe of the main Body of the Nation, and (what was of more conſideration to Cromwel)

1657. 9 Car. II.

Cromwel) it was againſt the Humours of the Army, and the chief Officers of it. One who knew the Intrigues of the Court and the Camp, gives this Account of them.

Ludlow's Account of theſe Matters.

"Cromwel endeavour'd, by all poſſible means, to "prevail with the Officers of the Army to approve "his Deſign; and knowing that Lieutenant Gene- "ral Fleetwood and Colonel Desborough were parti- "cularly averſe to it, he invited himſelf to dine "perſonally with the Colonel, and carried the "Lieutenant General with him, where he began to "droll with them about Monarchy; and ſpeaking "ſlightingly of it, ſaid, It was but a Feather in a "Man's Cap, and therefore wonder'd that Men "would not pleaſe the Children, and permit them "to enjoy their Rattle. But he receiv'd from them, "as Colonel Desborough ſince told me, ſuch an An- "ſwer, as was not at all ſuitable to his Expectati- "ons or Deſires: for they aſſured him, there was "more in this matter than he perceived; that thoſe "who put him upon it were no Enemies to Charles "Stuart; and that if he accepted of it, he would "infallibly draw Ruin on Himſelf and Friends. "The next Day he ſent a Meſſage to the Houſe, to "require their Attendance in the Painted Chamber "the next Morning, deſigning, as all Men believ'd, "there to declare his Acceptation of the Crown. "But in the mean time meeting with Colonel Deſ- "borough in the great Walk of the Park, and ac- "quainting him with his Reſolution, the Colonel "made Anſwer, that he then gave the Cauſe and "Cromwel's Family alſo for loſt. After ſome other "Diſcourſe, Desborough went home, and there found "Colonel Pride, whom Cromwel had Knighted with "a Faggot-ſtick: And having imparted to him the "Deſign of Cromwel to accept the Crown, Pride ſaid "He ſhall not. Why, ſaid the Colonel, how wilt thou "hinder it? To which Pride replied, Get me a Peti- "tion drawn, and I will prevent it. Whereupon they "both went to Dr. Owen, and having acquainted "him with what had happen'd, they perſwaded "him to draw a Petition according to their Deſires. "Whilſt this was doing, Cromwel having reflected "on his Diſcourſe with Colonel Desborough, and "being informed that Lambert and divers other Of- "ficers were diſſatisfied with his Deſign, ſent a "Meſſage to put off the Meeting in the Painted "Chamber, and to deſire that the Houſe would "ſend a Committee to confer with him about the "great Buſineſs that was then depending, intend- "ing thereby to gain time in which he might be "fitting the Officers for his Deſign. —— One Mor- "ning the Houſe being in great Expectation of a "Meſſage to appoint the Time and Place for the "Acceptance of what they had prepared; ſome Of- "ficers of the Army coming to the Parliament- "doors, ſent in a Meſſage to Colonel Desborough, to "acquaint him, that they had a Petition, which "they deſired him to preſent to the Houſe. But "he knowing the Contents of it, and conceiving it "unfit for him to take publick notice of it before "it was preſented, acquainted the Houſe, that cer- "tain Officers of the Army had a Petition to pre- "ſent to them. Which having done, and every "one ſuppoſing that the Deſires of the Officers were "conformable to their own, Cromwel's Party con- "cluding that no Part of the Army durſt appear for "the croſſing his Deſign, it was generally agreed "that they ſhould be called in, and have Leave to "preſent it with their own Hands. Lieutenant "Colonel Maſon was choſen by the reſt of the Of- "ficers to deliver the Petition; which when he had "done, and the Officers withdrawn, it was read. "The Contents of it were to this purpoſe: That Petition of the Army againſt Cromwel's being King.

"they had hazarded their Lives againſt Monarchy, and "were ſtill ready ſo to do in Defence of the Liberties of "the Nation. That having obſerved in ſome Men great "Endeavours to bring the Nation again under their old "Servitude, by preſſing their General to take upon him "the Title and Government of a King, in order to de- "ſtroy him, and weaken the Hands of thoſe who were "faithful to the Publick. They therefore humbly deſi- "red, that they would diſcountenance all ſuch Perſons "and Endeavours, and continue ſtedfaſt to the Old "Cauſe; for the Preſervation of which, they, for their "parts, were moſt ready to lay down their Lives. This "Petition was Subſcribed by two Colonels, ſeven "Lieutenant Colonels, eight Majors, and ſixteen "Captains, the Majority of the Army then quar- "ter'd about the Town. It's difficult to determine "whether the Houſe or Cromwel was more ſurpri- "ſed at this unexpected Addreſs: but certainly both "were infinitely diſturbed at it. As ſoon as the "Notice of it was brought to Cromwel, he ſent for "Lieutenant General Fleetwood, and told him, that "he wonder'd he would ſuffer ſuch a Petition to "proceed ſo far, which he might have hinder'd, "ſince he knew it to be his Reſolution, not to ac- "cept the Crown without the Conſent of the Army: "and therefore deſired him to haſten to the Houſe, "and to put them off from doing any thing farther "therein. The Lieutenant General immediately "went thither, and told them, that the Petition "ought not to be debated, much leſs to be anſwer- "ed at this time, the Contents of it being to deſire "him not to preſs the Protector to be King, where- "as the preſent Buſineſs was, to receive his An- "ſwer to what had been formerly offer'd to him; "and therefore deſired that the Debate of it might "be put off till they had received his Anſwer. "To this the Houſe having conſented, they recei- "ved a Meſſage from Cromwel, that inſtead of meet- "ing him in the Painted Chamber, which was the "Place where he uſed to give his Conſent; they "would meet him in the Banqueting Houſe. So "the Members came to Whitehall, and Cromwel with "great Oſtentation of his Self-denial, refuſed the "Title of King.

Cromwel's self-denying Speech.

This Refuſal was made on May 8. in a Speech to the Parliament Members; concluding thus: I have truly thought, and do ſtill think, that if I ſhould (at the beſt) do any thing on this Account to anſwer your Expectation, it would be at the beſt Doubtingly; and certainly what is ſo is not of Faith; and whatſoever is not of Faith is Sin to him that doth it; whether it be with relation to the Subſtance of the Action about which the Conſideration is converſant, or whether to Circumſtances about it, which make all indifferent Actions good or evil to him that doth it. I lying under this Conſideration, think it my Duty; only I could have wiſh'd I had done it ſooner, for the ſake of the Houſe, who have laid ſo infinite Obligations on me: I wiſh alſo I had done it ſooner for your ſake, for ſaving Time and Trouble; and indeed for the Committee's ſake, to whom I muſt acknowledge publickly, I have been unſeaſonably troubleſome: I ſay, I could have wiſhed I had given it ſooner; but truly this is my Anſwer, That although I think the Government doth conſiſt of very excellent Parts in all but in that one thing, the Title; as to me, I ſhould not be an honeſt Man, if I ſhould not tell you, that I cannot accept of the Government, nor undertake the Trouble and Charge of it, which I have a little more experimented than every Man, as to what Troubles and Difficulties do befall Men under ſuch Truſts, and in ſuch Undertakings. I ſay, I am perſwaded to return this Anſwer to you, that I cannot undertake this Government with this Title of a King: And that is mine Anſwer to this great and weighty Buſineſs.

He renounc'd the Name only of a King.

It is plain enough by this Anſwer, that he would renounce nothing but the Name and Stile of King; as to Soveraign Power in a ſingle Perſon he reſolv'd to exerciſe it in more ample manner, than had been yet done by any one of the preceding Monarchs: So he would have his old Title of Protector confirmed to him in a new Inſtrument of Government called, The Humble Petition and Advice of the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes now aſſembled in the Parliament of this Commonwealth, preſented to him May 25. and deſiring in Duty, 1. That his Highneſs will be pleaſed by, and under the Name and Stile of Lord Pro-

1657. 9 Car. II. tector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland and Ireland, to hold and exercise the Office of Chief Magistrate of these three Nations. 2. That his Highness will for the future be pleased to call Parliaments consisting of two Houses: And so investing him in a Power more than Regal; he acting as a Supream Sovereign in the acceptance of that Trust, ordering his Answer to be read by the Clerk of the Parliament in these Words, The Lord Protector doth consent. And soon after taking occasion to pass some Bills, he did it in the Royal manner, with a Speech of Thanks for their Supplies. " I perceive that a-" mong these many Acts of Parliament, there hath " been a very great care had by the Parliament, to " provide for the just and necessary support of the " Commonwealth, by these Bills for levying Mo-" ney now brought to me, which I have given my " consent unto; and understanding it hath been the " practice of those who have been chief Governors, " to acknowledge with Thanks to the Commons, " their Care and Regard of the Publick, I do very " heartily and thankfully acknowledge their Kind-" ness herein. And to compleat his Grandeur, he had a solemn Inauguration in Westminster-Hall under a Cloth of State and a glorious Chair, where the Speaker put upon him a Robe of Purple Velvet lin'd with Ermine, telling him, It was an Emblem of Magistracy, and imported Righteousness and Justice. Then he delivered him a Bible richly Gilt and Bossed with Gold, and told him, It was a Book that contained the Holy Scriptures, in which he had the happiness to be well versst. Then he put in his Hand a Sceptre of massy Gold, saying, Here is a Sceptre not unlike a Staff: for you are to be a Staff to the Poor. Lastly, he gave him a very rich Sword, with this Comment, The last thing is a Sword, not a Military but a Civil Sword; it is a Sword rather of Defence than Offence, not to defend your self only but your People also. If I might presume to fix a Motto upon this Sword, as the valiant Lord Talbot had upon his, it should be this, Ergo sum Domini Protectoris ad protegendum Populum meum, I am the Protector's to protect my People.

Speech at his passing Bills.

Inauguration of Ld Protector.

After all possible Ceremonies and Ensigns of Authority (nothing wanting but Oil and Crown) Mr. Manton prayed, and the People shouted, and the Trumpets sounded, and the Parliament rose after many Acts were pass'd, among which one for the Adjournment of this present Parliament from the 26th of June 1657. unto the 20th of January next ensuing.

Rising of the Parliament.

All things went prosperous abroad to promote and confirm the Advancements of Cromwel. Admiral Blake on April 20. set upon the Spanish West-India Fleet, in the Bay of Santta Cruz on the Island of Teneriff, and with invincible Courage broke thro' the Barricado, beat the Enemy out of all their Forts and Castles, sunk two Ships, and fired all the rest, to the insufferable Loss and Shame of the Spaniards. And to disturb them at Land as well as at Sea, the Protector sent over six thousand Men under command of Colonel John Reynolds and Major General Morgan to assist the French in their Attempts upon Flanders; and to do them the Service of helping them to take St. Venant and Mardike: And yet the Commanders in both these fortunate Expeditions lost their own Lives; Colonel Reynolds being recalled upon suspicion for having a Conference with the Duke of York, was cast away on the Goodwin Sands Decemb. 12. And Admiral Blake returning home in Glory, died on Ship-board in Plimouth Sound at the beginning of August: a Man of admirable Courage and equal Success.

Success at Sea.

Before the meeting of the Parliament, there was to be a new Constitution of it, by adding another House, to bring back the Form of a King, Lords and Commons. The Protector sent out his Writs in the same Form with those formerly sent to summon the Peers to Parliament; their number was sixty, of which the two first, like Princes of the Blood, were his own Sons, the Lord Richard and Lord Henry Cromwel, then Nathaniel Fiennes and John Lisle Lords Commissioners of the Great-Seal, Henry Lawrence Ld President of his Highnesses Council, the Lord Charles Fleetwood, Robert Earl of Warwick, Edmund Earl of Mulgrave, and other Noblemen, and chief Officers Military and Civil; who in Rights and Privileges should differ nothing from a House of Peers, only as the Head must not have the Name of a King so these Members were to have the new Title of the other House of Parliament.

Another House.

1655. 7 Car. II.

On Jan. 20. both these Houses met, and the Protector came as Sovereign to the House of Lords, and sent for the Speaker and House of Commons by the Black-Rod, and then spoke in short to them, beginning his Speech in the old Stile, My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of the House of Commons, and then discourfed some Particulars which he recommended to them; thank'd them for their fair Correspondence the last Session, and assured them, if they would continue to prosecute his Designs, they should be called the blessed of the Lord, and Generations to come should bless them: And so he left his Lord Keeper Fiennes to make a large Speech to them, with all the state of our ancient Monarchs. When the two Houses fell upon Business, they could by no means agree; the Commons had Envy and Indignation to see a House pretending to be superior to them without the claim of Birthright, or any old legal Creation; and the other House knew it was their Commission to be a House of Peers in every thing but Name, and therefore insisted upon all the ancient Rights and Privileges belonging to the place where they sate. The Protector seeing their Disputes growing higher every Day, resolved upon their Dissolution; the manner of which is thus delivered by a Witness of it.

Meeting of a new Parliament consisting of two Houses.

Discord between the two Houses.

" Cromwel was not a little startled at these Proceed-" dings, suspecting that part of the Army, especial-" ly those that were Quarter'd about St. James's were " engaged therein; therefore to prevent that which " he feared, and which his Conscience told him he " had deserved, he took the inspection of the Watch " at Whitehal for several Nights successively in his " own Person. And the Alarm from abroad encrea-" sing daily, he resolved upon the Dissolution of this " Assembly, intending as soon as they were dismis-" sed, and the Power devolv'd upon him again, to " curb that Spirit of Liberty that had lately appear'd, " and to remove such Officers from their Commands " in the Army, whom he suspected to have any " hand in their late Counsels. Whilst he was deli-" berating about the best means of effecting this de-" sign, fresh informations were brought him con-" cerning the diligence of his Adversaries in all " Parts, which quicken'd him to that degree, that " he would not stay for one of his own Coaches, but " taking the first that was at hand, with Guards as " he could presently get together, he hurried to the " other House; whither being come, he imparted " his Intentions to dissolve that Assembly to Lieu-" tenant General Fleetwood, who earnestly endea-" vouring to dissuade him from it, he clapp'd his " Hand upon his Breast, and swore by the Living " God he would do it. Then he sent for the Judges; " and they being come, dispatched another Message " to the Assembly to attend him presently. Many " of them declined to come, and those that appear-" ed were very ill treated by him for obstructing " that Work, which he said was so well begun in " order to the settlement of the Nation. On the " other hand, he assured those whom he had called " to his other House, that notwithstanding all the " practises that had been used against them, they " should continue to be Lords, and so dismissed both " the Assemblies to follow their own private Af-" fairs.

He is said in his Speech to have declared several urgent and weighty Reasons, that made it necessary for him, in order to the publick Peace and Safety, to proceed to an immediate Dissolution of this Parliament; and to have concluded with these or such Words, 1657. 9 Car. II. Words, By the Living God I do and must dissolve you. This impetuous act of Cromwel was censur'd and condemn'd by his best Friends; yet it was indeed a Masterstroke of Policy: For a Faction between the two Houses would have broke all his Interests asunder; and if he had made himself a Party on either side, it had but more inflam'd the Quarrel.

Hopes of the King. The King had reasons to hope that these distractions in the English State, would by degrees bring a People to cast back their Eyes and Hearts upon their lawful Prince. This encourag'd the Spaniards to protect his Person and accept his Arms in Flanders, where his loyal Subjects the Marquis of Ormond, the Lord Rochester, the Lords Gerrard and Wentworth, the Lord Taaf and General Middleton had their several Regiments quarter'd along the Sea-Coasts, under Command of the Dukes of York and Glocester; wisely to serve a double Design, to assist the King of Spain against his Enemies the French, who were supported by Cromwel, and to be in a readiness to transport themselves into England, if any favourable Juncture should invite them. For the Royalists in England, tho' weak and poor, were continually forming some Hopes and Designs for recalling the King: But their most secret Counsels were betray'd, and therefore their wisest Projects could seldom grow so far as an Attempt to give Life and Success to them. However, a general Insurrection was at this time designed; and for a preparation to it, there was now published and industriously dispersed a very smart and surprizing Paper, under the title of Killing no Murder, wherein it was proved to be not only lawful, but honourable, to kill the Tyrant as a common Enemy of his Country. This waked the Protector into a dreadful fright, and made him very vigilant to apprehend the Author, who was happily then concealed, not only in his Person but in the very suspicion of his Name, tho' since commonly taken to be Colonel Titus, a Man of great figure in many of the Parliaments after the King's Return. After this alarm given, (which serv'd not so much to put the King's Party into a Preparation as it did to put Cromwel upon his Guard) the Marquis of Ormond slip'd over from Flanders and lay privately in London, to ripen the Design, and to send for his Troops to push on the execution of it. But Cromwel, who well knew that Money could be at any time the Price of a Traitor, had corrupted Sir Richard Willis, and one Corker an ejected Minister, who then practised Physick; and by their perfidious Intelligence, he set out a Proclamation for the Plotters before they could get into a Body; many of them were seiz'd, and some furiously Executed; the Marquis of Ormond luckily escaped into Sussex, and there by disguise and Shifts preserved himself, till by the Assistance of Mr. Graves a worthy Gentleman of that County, he got away in a small Boat, and was by Providence kept for better times.

Marquis of Ormond sent into England.

Hardly escapes.

Death of Admiral Blake. This Year, as before hinted, died the Valiant and Victorious Admiral Blake, who wanted nothing but a better Master and a better Cause to have made him the Glory of England, and the Wonder of the World. And yet he did not so much espouse the Interest of the Long Parliament, or the new Service of Cromwel, as he did the Honour of his Country, and the English Dominion of the Seas. It was his Argument for Peace and Unity among his Seamen, that they should not listen to any News from Land, nor mind the Changes in the Government; but remember that the Fleet was English, and that their Enemies were Foreigners and Strangers, and therefore they must fight for the Honour of the English Nation. By this Principle he had been alway Safe and Successful; and had in this very Summer insulted the Spanish Coasts, and sailed thence to intercept their West-India Fleet, which got into the Bay of Santta Cruz, in one of the Canary Islands, where Don Diego Diagues the Spanish Admiral had so well barricado'd the Entrance, and so well fortified and planted the Castle and Forts upon the Shore, that he sent Word by a Dutch Merchant, Let Blake come if he dares. But Blake wanted no Challenge; he sent a Squadron under Command of Captain Steiner, in the Speaker Frigor, who forced their passage into the Mouth of the Bay, and were presently supported by the whole English Fleet, and an absolute Victory was by degrees obtained; and yet it was impracticable to carry off the Prizes, and therefore they were to a single Vessel burnt and sunk on Monday April 20. for which noble Service the Parliament (at Cromwel's imparting the News) order'd a Day of Thanksgiving, and voted 500 l. for a Jewel to be presented to the Admiral, as a Testimony of his Countries Gratitude and Respect to him. After this great Exploit he sailed back to the Coasts of Spain, and having triumphantly kept all their Ships and Ports in awe, he was bringing home the Fleet, while falling sick of the Marine Distemper a Scorbutick Feaver, he died just as the Fleet was entering into Plymouth-Sound, where he passionately enquired for the Land, but found his own Element to be the more proper Bed of Honour. He had a publick Funeral solemnly and justly bestowed upon him, with the Honour of Interment in the Chapel of Henry VII. of whom the Lord Clarendon gives this Character. "He "was a Man of a private Extraction, yet had enough "left him by his Father to give him a good Educa- "tion; which his own Inclination disposed him to "receive in the University of Oxford, where he took "the Degree of a Master of Arts; and was enough "versed in Books for a Man who intended not to be "of any Profession, having sufficient of his own to "maintain him in the Plenty he affected, and having "then no appearance of Ambition to be a greater "Man than he was. He was of a melancholick and "a sullen Nature, and spent his time most with "Good-Fellows, who lik'd his Morosenes and Free- "dom he used in inveighing against the Licence of "the Time and the Power of the Court. They who "knew him inwardly discover'd that he had an An- "ti-Monarchical Spirit, when few Men thought the "Government in any Danger. When the Troubles "began he quickly declared himself against the King; "and having some Command in Bristol, when it was "first taken by Prince Rupert and the Marquis of "Hertford, being trusted with the Command of a "little Fort upon the Line, he refused to give it up, "after the Governour had signed the Articles of Sur- "render, and kept it some Hours after the Prince "was in the Town, and killed some of the Soldiers; "for which the Prince resolv'd to hang him, if some "Friends had not interposed for him, upon his want "of Experience in War, and prevailed with him to "quit the Place by very great Importunity and with "much Difficulty. After this, having done emi- "nent Service to the Parliament, especially at Taun- "ton, at Land, he then betook himself wholly to the "Sea, and quickly made himself signal there. He "was the first Man that declined the old Track, "and made it manifest that the Science might be "attained in less time than was imagin'd; and des- "pised those Rules which had been long in pra- "ctise, to keep his Ship and his Men out of Dan- "ger; which had been held in former times a point "of great Ability and Circumspection; as if the "principal Art requisite in the Captain of a Ship had "been to come home safe again. He was the first "Man that brought the Ships to contemn Castles "on Shore, which had been thought ever very for- "midable, and were discovered by him to make a "noise only, and to fright those who could rarely "be hurt by them. He was the first that infused "that proportion of Courage into the Seamen, by "making them see by Experience what mighty things "they could do if they were resolv'd; and taught "them to fight in Fire as well as upon the Water: "and though he had been very well imitated and "followed, he was the first that gave the Example "of that kind of Naval Courage and bold and reso- "lute Atchievements.

State of Religion. The unhappy State of Religion in this Year is not worth mentioning. The Plan was to reverse Presby-

Presbytery, as adapted only to a Commonwealth, and to form a new Syſtem of Doctrine and Diſcipline more agreeable to the new Model of Government in a ſingle Perſon. But that the Alteration might be rather kept in Reſerve, than be too ſuddenly introduc'd; it was only provided in the Inſtrument of Conſtituting a Protector, Article XI.

Article in the Inſtrument of Government.

" That the true Proteſtant Chriſtian Religion, as it " is contained in the Holy Scriptures of the Old and " New Teſtament, and no other, be held forth and " aſſerted for the publick Profeſſion of theſe Nati- " ons: And that a Confeſſion of Faith to be agreed " by your Highneſs and the Parliament, according " to the Rule and Warrant of the Scriptures, be " aſſerted, held forth, and recommended to the " People of theſe Nations: That none may be ſuf- " fer'd or permitted, by opprobrious Words, or " writing maliciouſly or contemptuouſly, to revile " or reproach the Confeſſion of Faith to be agreed " on as aforeſaid. Presbytery, with a Toleration to deſtroy it.

The meaning of all this Proviſion, was only to diſpenſe for a while with continuing the Eſtabliſhment of Presbytery, and yet to give an abſolute Toleration and a capacity of Preferment to the Independents; and ſo to hold the Scales between each Party till the Protector and his Council ſhould determine any other way.

It is not improbable, that if Cromwel had been King he would have been for reſtoring Epiſcopacy, tho' not upon a Principle of Conſcience. The Lord Clarendon ſays, " He uſed to ſpeak much, that it " was pity the Nobility ſhould be totally ſuppreſt, " and that the Government would be better if it " paſſed another Conſultation beſides that of the " Houſe of Commons. In matter of Religion, he would often ſpeak, that there was much of Good in the Order of Biſhops, if the Droſs were ſcoured off. But indeed Enthuſiaſm was the Protector's Talent, which he was glad to hide from the uſe of any others; and if he had reign'd long, would have made it his own Prerogative: For by getting among the People, it put him and his Government into perpetual Trouble and Danger. But of all the Spirits, that of the Fifth-Monarchy Men was the moſt turbulent, and the moſt likely to deſtroy his new Empire. Major General Harriſon had put himſelf into the Counſels and Deſigns of theſe furious Men, and the Plot was laid for an Inſurrection (in their Cant) to ſet up King Jeſus. Their chief Cabal was held in a Houſe in Shoreditch, where Secretary Thurlo (who ſpared no Pains or Money for his Maſter's Safety) had a Spy among them, and diſcover'd the Intrigues time enough to prevent the Execution of them: He ſeized their Arms and Ammunition, with a Standard of a Lion Couchant (as of the Tribe of Judah) with this Motto, Who ſhall rouze him up? and ſeveral Copies of a printed Declaration, with this Title, The Principle of the Remnant, &c. The Conſpirators taken were Thomas Venner, Gray, Gowler, Hopkins, Aſhton, and others, who were ſpared to create Diſturbance and their own Deſtruction at another time.

Plot of the Fifth-Monarchy Men.

It is certain, the Protector was not himſelf of any one Religion, and therefore was for Liberty and utmoſt Latitude to all Parties, ſo far as conſiſted with the Peace and Safety of his Perſon and Government. And therefore he was never jealous of any Cauſe or Sect, on the Account of Hereſie or Fallhood; but on his wiſer accounts of political Peace and Quiet. As he mortally hated the Fifth-Monarchy Men, becauſe by their Notion he was to be dethron'd; and had no Charity for the Anabaptiſts becauſe of their ſingular Opinions about the Civil Magiſtrate; ſo he had alway a ſuſpicious Eye upon the Presbyterians, becauſe he thought their Principles to be Republican: and even the Prejudice he had to the Epiſcopal Party, was more for their being Royaliſts, than for being of the good Old Church; as appeared upon the Occaſion of their keeping up the Solemnity of Chriſtmas this Year. On Decemb. 25. ſeveral Aſſemblies met to obſerve the Day, and eſpecially Dr. Gunning's Congregation at Exeter-Houſe in the Strand: Notice of theſe Meetings was immediately carried to the Protector, and by ſome Zealots he was earneſtly moved to ſend Soldiers and ſuppreſs them: He at firſt denied the Motion, and argued againſt it, ſaying, that to diſturb them, was contrary to the Liberty of Conſcience which he and his Friends had alway acknowledged and pleaded for. But when it was objected, that the keeping of Chriſtmas was a Contempt of the publick Acts and Ordinances; and that under that Pretence there might be a Concourſe of People to Riſe, or at leaſt to conſpire for the King: then he ſent away a Detachment of Soldiers, who broke into Dr. Gunning's Meeting, plunder'd and ſtript ſome of the People, and carried off others to Impriſonment and Fine. And as the Lord Clarendon obſerves, " All Priſons, as well in the " Country as the City, were fill'd with thoſe who " had been of the King's Party, or he believ'd would " be; and he thought this a neceſſary Seaſon to " terrify his Enemies, of all Conditions, within " the Kingdom, with Spectacles which might mor- " tify them.

Cromwel for Liberty of Conſcience as he pleas'd.

He hated Parties as his Enemies only.

Meetings of the Old Church Men.

1658.

This Year began with proſecuting the Diſcovery of a reaſonable Plot of the Royaliſts to reſtore their Maſter and their own Rights. Cromwel had Advice of all their Steps and Meaſures, both by Intelligence from abroad, and by correſponding with ſome of the very Actors here at home. He knew well how to turn the Diſcovery into an Act of Popularity and Gain: And therefore (for want of a Parliament) he ſent for the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, and in a very aggravating Strain informed them of the whole Story; and then profeſſing a greater Paſſion for their Safety than for his own, he deſired their

Plot of the Royaliſts diſcover'd by Cromwel,

1658. 10 Car. II. their Care to put the City into a posture of Defence. They took the Bait, and went home with great Indignation against the Royalists, for attempting to plunder their Houses, and cut their Throats; and took mighty care of the Gates and of Guards; and drew up a humble Representation and Address to his Highness, promising the Faith of the City and the Purse of it, in faithfully adhering to him against all his Enemies. A like Hint was given to the Army, and Addresses of the same strain were sent up from several Regiments, and brought over from the English Forces in Flanders; the Protector begging the Complement by imparting to them, that the Designs and Preparations of the Enemy were very formidable, that Commissioners were sent over hither from the King of Scots, and that he had four thousand Men in Flanders ready to be embarked to join with his Party here, and Ships ready to transport them; and therefore it behoved all honest Men to provide for a Defence, and to join heartily together. When he had thus fortified his Interest, he resolved to proceed against the Conspirators whom he had laid fast in Prison: But in what Method to proceed he could not so easily determine: His Council advised him to the antient way of Indicting them in the Upper Bench for Treason, and so going on in the ordinary Course of Trials at the Common Law: But he did not care for trusting to the ordinary Practice of Judges and Juries, tho' they might have been all Creatures of his own making. His Head and Heart lay rather for a High Court of Justice: he had had Experience of it, as the shortest way with Offenders; and therefore he had such a new Court erected, and under the Seal nominated the Commissioners of the Seal and of the Treasury, the Judges, and some other Confidents, to be in this Commission; though some of them would have been glad to have wash'd their hands of Blood: and Whitlock does in particular confess, that though He was one of them, yet he never sate with them, it being against his Judgment. This High Court of Justice was founded on a Law of the late Parliament for Security of his Highness's Person, and had Power to try all such (and such only) as should be named to them by him or his Council. Before this Court were first brought Sir Henry Slingsby, an Officer for the King at Worcester Fight, there taken Prisoner, and sent to the Garison of Hull; where some of the Officers, Major Waterhouse, Captain Overton, and Lieutenant Thompson, wheedled him into procuring a Commission from the King, and then betrayed him, and sent him up Prisoner to the Tower. At his Trial he pleaded, that all the Discourses he had held with those Persons who trepan'd him, were all in Jest, and for Discourse sake; and that the Fact was impossible, that he, being a single Person and a Prisoner, could have any Hopes of putting that Garrison into the King's Hands: but he was adjudg'd to Death by a Plurality of Voices. Dr. John Hewit, Preacher of St. Gregory's near Paul's, was brought at the same time, and charg'd with the like horrible Conspiracy. He stoutly denied the Jurisdiction of the Court, and pleaded several Cases against the Legality of it; and so for Contempt was adjudg'd guilty of the Charge: and when he did afterward offer to Plead, he was told, It was now too late. These two were Beheaded on Tower-Hill on June 8. one dying with the Bravery of a Christian Soldier, the other with the Devoutness of a Christian Divine; and both proving that the Goodness of a Cause is the only Argument to dare to die. Their Characters are thus given by the inimitable Pen of the Lord Clarendon.

Turn'd to his own Advantage.

And Dr. Hewit.

Their Death and Characters.

" Sir Henry Slingsby was in the first Rank of the " Gentlemen of Yorkshire, and was return'd to serve " as a Member in the Parliament that continued so " many Years, where he sate till the Troubles be- " gan; and having no Relation to, or Dependance " upon the Court, he was swayed only by his Con- " science to detest the violent and undutiful Beha- " viour of that Parliament. He was a Gentleman " of a good Understanding, but of a very melan- 1658. 10 Car. II.
" cholick Nature, and of very few Words: and " when he could stay no longer with a good Con- " science in their Councils, in which he never con- " curr'd, he went into his Country, and join'd with " the first who took up Arms for the King. And " when the War was ended, he remain'd still in his " own House, prepared and disposed to run the " Fortune of the Crown in any other Attempt. And " having a good Fortune and a general Reputation, " had a greater Influence upon the People than they " who talked more and louder, and was known to " be irreconcilable to the new Government, and " therefore was cut off, notwithstanding very great " Intercession to preserve him: For he was Uncle " to the Lord Falconbridge, who engaged his Wife " and all his new Allies to intercede for him, with- " out effect. When he was brought to die, he spent " very little time in Discourse; but told them, He " was to die for being an honest Man, of which he was " very glad. Dr. Hewet was born a Gentleman, and " bred a Scholar, and was a Divine before the Be- " ginning of the Troubles. He lived in Oxford, " and in the Army till the End of the War, and " continued afterwards to preach with great Ap- " plause in a little Church in London; where, by " the Affection of the Parish he was admitted, since " he was enough known to lie notoriously under " the Brand of Malignity. When the Lord Falcon- " bridge married Cromwel's Daughter (who had used " secretly to frequent his Church) after the Cere- " mony of the Time, he was made choice of to " marry them according to the Order of the Church; " which engaged both that Lord and Lady to use " their utmost Credit with the Protector to preserve " his Life: but he was inexorable, and desirous " that the Church-men, upon whom he look'd as " his mortal Enemies, should see what they were " to trust to, if they stood in need of his Mercy.

Trial of Mr. John Mordant.

Mr. John Mordant, one of the principal Actors, was brought next to the Bar, who first put in a Demurrer to the Court, and then pleaded his Cause with great Readiness and Caution, taking Notes of the Witnesses Evidence, and replying with so much presence of Mind, that he was by the Majority of one single Voice acquitted. Mr. Mallory having made his Escape, is supposed to have made his Peace, and then to have surrender d himself; for upon his Trial he pleaded Guilty, and had a Pardon. Sir Humphry Bennet had great Friends to make Application for him to the Commissioners, who saved his Life. Mr. Carent a Citizen (in whose Warehouse Arms were found) was delivered by the Generosity of Mr. Pits, who was produc'd to give the expected Evidence against him; but he utterly refused, and chose rather to suffer Imprisonment, and a Fine of 500 l. to be laid upon him. Mr. Stacy, Mr. Bettsy, Mr. Ashton, Mr. Alten, Mr. Summers, and Mr. Fryar, were all condemn'd; and the three former Executed on July 6.

The Cruelty of Cromwel incens'd his Enemies and his very Friends.

This drawing of cool Blood made the Royalists more exasperated, and the Protector more odious; especially because he refused his Mercy upon the greatest Importunity from his nearest Friends and Relations. The Lord Falconbridge, who on Nov. 18. 1657. had married Mary his third Daughter, and was now sent his Ambassadour to France, made earnest Suit for the Life of his Uncle Sir Henry Slingsby; but all his own Interest, and his Wife's, could not obtain that Favour. His beloved Daughter, the Lady Elizabeth Cleypole, interceded for the pious Dr. Hewit, and yet in that only Instance had a Denial from her fond Father; which she so grievously resented, that this is said to have been the Occasion of her last Sickness, wherein she raved against Cruelty and Blood, and died at Hampton-Court on the 6th of August, leaving her Father to follow her within a Month from the very same place. Her Body was carried by Water to Westminster; and being laid in State in the Painted-Chamber, was solemnly lemnly interr'd in the Chapel of Henry VII. The old Earl of Warwick (ſoon after the marrying his Grand-Son Mr. Rich to Frances youngeſt Daughter of Cromwel) died April 18. and the Earl of Mulgrave, one of his Highneſſes Council died on the Road to London Aug. 28. John Maynard, Eſq; was by Patent made the Protector's Serjeant at Law on May 1. and Sir Thomas Widdrington made Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer June 26.

The Siege of Dunkirk.

The great Action abroad was the Siege and Battle of Dunkirk. The French King in Perſon, and the Cardinal his prime Miniſter, had a good Army on the edge of Flanders; and being joined by a great Body of the Engliſh, under the Command of General Lockhart, it was concluded to beſiege Dunkirk, and if taken to put it into the Hands of the Engliſh. The Spaniſh General Don John of Auſtria well knowing the importance of that Place, reſolv'd to raiſe the Siege, and advancing with 15000 Men, offer'd to relieve it, but in a deſperate Fight was entirely routed, and the Town ſoon after ſurrender'd. There was ſomething in this Management that very much ſhews the Perfidiouſneſs of the French, and the Policy and Power of Cromwel. There was an Article in the Treaty between France and the Protector, that if Dunkirk came to be taken, it ſhould be immediately delivered up to the Engliſh, and his Ambaſſador and General Lockhart had Orders to take poſſeſſion of it. When the French Army being join'd with the Engliſh Auxiliaries, was in its March to inveſt the Town, Cromwel ſent one Morning for the French Ambaſſador to Whitehal, and upbraided him publickly for his Maſters deſign'd breach of Promiſe, in giving ſecret Orders to the French General to keep Poſſeſſion of Dunkirk, in caſe it was taken, contrary to the Treaty between them. The Ambaſſador proteſted he knew nothing of the matter, as indeed he did not, and begg'd leave to aſſure him, that there was no ſuch thing thought of. Upon which, Cromwel pulling a Paper out of his Pocket, Here, ſays he, is the Copy of the Cardinal's Order; and I deſire you to diſpatch immediately an Expreſs, to let him know, that I am not to be impoſed upon; and that if he deliver not up the Keys of the Town of Dunkirk to Lockhart within an Hour after it ſhall be taken, tell him, I'll come in Perſon, and demand them at the Gates of Paris. There were but four Perſons ſaid to be privy to this Order, the Queen-Mother, the Cardinal, the Mareſchal de Turenne, and a Secretary. The Cardinal for a long time blamed the Queen, as if ſhe might poſſibly have blabb'd it out to ſome of her Women: Whereas it was found after the Secretary's Death, that he had kept a ſecret Correſpondence with Cromwel for ſeveral Years, and therefore it was not doubted but he had ſent him the Copy of the Order above mention'd. The Meſſage had its due effect; for Dunkirk was put into the Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh: And to palliate the Matter, the Duke and Mareſchal of Crequy was diſpatch'd into England Ambaſſador Extraordinary to complement Cromwel, attended with a numerous and ſplendid Train of Perſons of Quality; among whom was a Prince of the Blood, and Moncini Mazarine's Nephew, who brought a Letter from his Unkle to the Protector, full of the higheſt Expreſſions of Reſpect; and aſſuring his Highneſs, that being within view of the Engliſh Shore, nothing but the King's Indiſpoſition (who lay then ill of the Small-Pox at Calais) could have hinder'd him from coming over to England, that he might enjoy the Honour of waiting upon one of the greateſt Men that ever was; and whom next to his Maſter, his greateſt Ambition was to ſerve. But being deprived of ſo great a Happineſs, he had ſent the Perſon that was neareſt to him in Blood, to aſſure him of the profound Veneration he had for his Perſon, and how much he was reſolved to the utmoſt of his Power to cultivate a perpetual Amity and Friendſhip betwixt his Maſter and him.

French perfidiouſneſs yields to Cromwel's Glory.

Dunkirk put into poſſeſſion of the Engliſh.

A good inſtance of the Grandeur of Cromwel.

Few Princes ever bore their Character higher upon all Occaſions than Oliver Cromwel, eſpecially in his Treaties with crown'd Heads. And its a thing without Example, that is mention'd by one of the beſt inform'd Hiſtorians of the Age, Puffendorf, in the Life of the late Elector of Brandenburgh, that in Cromwel's League with France againſt Spain, he would not allow the French King to call himſelf King of France, but of the French; whereas he took to himſelf not only the Title of Protector of England, but likewiſe of France. And which is yet more ſurprizing, and can hardly be believed, but for Authority of the Author, whoſe own * Words are in the Margin, in the Inſtrument of the Treaty, the Protector's Name was put before the French King's. It is true, France was then under a Minority, and was not arrived at that Greatneſs to which it has ſince attained: Towards which Cromwel contributed not a little by that League with France againſt Spain; being the falſeſt ſtep he ever made, with reſpect to the tranquility of Europe.

It ought to be here obſerv'd, that in the publick Inſtruments of Correſpondence between States and Kingdoms, little Words and Phraſes are of great Importance, ſo far as they relate to Claims and Titles, whoſe loſs or preſervation may hereafter in great meaſure depend upon the ways of former Expreſſion of 'em. This diſtinction of the King of France and of the French King, thus nicely made by Cromwel, ought to be ſtudiouſly kept up to aſſert the Dignity and Stile of our Engliſh Princes: And I remember it obſerv'd by an accurate Perſon, that in our Engliſh Gazettes, that Monarch was continually called the French King, till the writing of thoſe publick Papers falling into the hands of Perſons unskilful or inadvertent, he had been now of late ſometimes called the King of France.

The French King not the King of France.

But to return, King Charles was ready on the Sea-Coaſts of Flanders to have relieved the Expectation of his Friends in England, by bringing over an Army under the Conduct of the Count of Marſini, General to the Prince of Conde, newly diſtinguiſh'd with the Garter, to engage him with more Spirit and Honour in the Service of the King. But the diſcovery of that Deſign in England, and the execution of ſeveral Agents in it, and the clapping up moſt of the King's Friends, and the defeat of the Spaniſh before Dunkirk, where the Dukes of York and Glouceſter were engaged and forc'd to fly; and the ſurrendry of Dunkirk, and a ſtrong Gariſon put into it by Cromwel, and a Fleet and Harbour for a Guard on all thoſe Coaſts; it was impoſſible for the King to do any thing but to acquieſce under the Baſeneſs of France and the Grandeur of Cromwel.

K. Charles diſappointed of all hopes.

And yet a Revolution was now coming, that ſeem'd to promiſe the moſt favourable Juncture in the World for reſtoring the King, that was the Death of the Uſurper: The Relation of it is thus given by one of his Fellow Regicides. " After the Death of " Mrs. Cleypole, it was obſerv'd that Cromwel grew " Melancholly, and alſo diſtemper'd with divers " Infirmities, particularly a malignant Humour in " his Foot, which hindring him from the Exerciſes " of walking or riding abroad: He obliged his Phy- " ſicians to endeavour to diſperſe it, which they en- " deavouring to do, drove it upwards to his Heart. " By this means he became deſperately Sick; and as " ſome about him had for a long time deceived o- " thers, ſo they now endeavour'd to impoſe upon " God himſelf: For Dr. Goodwin his Creature and " Trencher Chaplain, uſed this Expreſſion in his " Prayer, during the time of his Sickneſs: Lord, we " beg not for his Recovery, for that thou haſt already " granted and aſſured us of, but for his ſpeedy Recove- " ry.—— At Whitehal they were unwilling to have " it known that he was ſo dangerouſly ill; yet by " reaſon of a Clauſe in the Humble Petition and Ad-

In this temper of Mind he de- " parted this Life about two in the Afternoon; and " the News of his Death being brought to thoſe " who were met together to pray for him, Mr. Ste- " ry ſtood up and deſired them not to be troubled: " For (ſaid he) this is good News; becauſe if he was " of great uſe to the People of God, when he was amongſt " us, now he will be much more ſo, being aſcended to " Heaven, to ſit at the Right-hand of Jeſus Chriſt, there " to intercede for us, and to be mindful of us on all oc- " caſions.

Sir Philip Warwick's Account.

Sir Philip Warwick tells us, " That ſome time be- " fore his Death he ſeem'd diſpirited; and by the " Acquaintance (ſays he) I had with an old Gen- " tlewoman, who made his Broths and Jellies, and " other ſuch cockering Meats, I learnt, that for one " while he frequently uſed theſe, and for another " he took large draughts of Wine; and he ſeldom " awaked, even in the Night, but with one or other " of theſe he muſt be repleniſh'd: So as at laſt fal- " ling into a Feaver, he ſoon fell into a Delirium; " and one of his Phyſicians, whom I was intimate- " ly acquainted with, aſſured me, that during all " his Sickneſs, he was never Maſter of ſo much Rea- " ſon as to determine any thing of his Succeſſor or " matters of State: And yet his fulſome flattering " Divines and Friends all gave themſelves aſſurance " of his Recovery; inſomuch, as Thomas Goodwin " in his fancy Expoſtulations with God in Prayer, " would tell God, that they ask'd not for his Life; " for they were aſſured he had too great Things for this " Man to do to remove him yet; but they prayed for his " ſpeedy Recovery, becauſe his Life and Preſence were ſo " neceſſary to divers things then of great Moment to be " diſpatched. But all this while this poor Gentleman " lay diſturb'd in his Head, and as it was thought, " reflecting upon a then meeting of the Independent " Miniſters, that were aſſembled at the Savoy, to " ſet forth their Articles of Faith: For the moſt " that he ſaid was, They muſt be ſatisfied, they muſt be " ſatisfied, or elſe we all run into Blood again. And " tho' it was pretended at that time by Thurlo the " Secretary and Goodwin the Miniſter, that he gave " particular Directions to them, that his Son Richard " ſhould be his Succeſſor, and they brought in others " afterward to teſtifie the ſame; yet his Phyſician " aſſured me, he never was in any ſuch condition " as diſtinctly to know what he did. And thus on " his beloved and victorious Day, Sept. 3. 1658. he " expired ficcâ morte, ten Years after he had ſpilt " the innocent Blood of the King; and tho' he had " run thro' ſo many dangers, and had ſo many Plots " againſt his Life, and committed ſo many wicked " and flagitious Acts, yet he breathed out his laſt " in his Bed. But as if the Elements as well as Men had waited for this Day; " It was very memorable " (ſays a late Hiſtorian) for the greateſt Storm of " Wind that had been ever known, for ſome Hours " before and after his Death, which overthrew Trees, " Houſes and made great Wrecks at Sea: And the " Tempeſt was ſo univerſal that the effects of it were " terrible both in France and Flanders, where all " People trembled at it; for beſides the Wrecks all " along the Sea-Coaſts, many Boats were caſt away " in the very Rivers; and within few Days after " the Circumſtance of his Death that accompanied " the Storm was univerſally known.

Rejoicing at his Death.

His Death was generally the moſt welcome News in the World at home and abroad, being every where fear'd and hated. The Royal Party had moſt reaſon to be forward in their Joys: for amidſt the diſtraction of Intereſts ariſing from the ſucceſs of the great Rebellion, nothing could have hinder'd the Return of a lawful Prince, but ſuch a ſingle Uſurper ſetting up himſelf, and re-eſtabliſhing Monarchy without the King: And they had reaſon to hope, that this great Obſtructor being now taken away he could not leave a Succeſſor of equal Genius with himſelf, but Feuds and Diviſions muſt be at laſt compoſed by tho only way, that of reſtoring the Legal Government. The Commonwealth's Men were, if poſſible, more exceeding glad to be rid of him, for they thought him a Traitor to the People of England; and if their Power had ſerved, would have brought him to the ſame Puniſhment to which he had ſo villainouſly brought his Maſter: Even Desborough his Brother-in-Law, and Fleetwood his Son-in-Law, were in Confederacy with Pickering and Sydenham, and others of his Privy-Council (whom he thought ſecureſt to him) to bring back a beloved Commonwealth. And even all the Parties in Religion thought his Death would bring advantage to their ſeveral Cauſes: for he properly eſpouſed none, and kept all under. The Foreign States and Kingdoms did likewiſe all rejoice as in a common Deliverance. The Dutch had loſt Glory to him at Sea, and had found him more imperious in his Treaties and Terms than any Engliſh Monarch. The Portugueſe had been fill'd with Indignation at him; becauſe he had ſolemnly carried their Ambaſſador's Brother to be executed for a Tumult in London, notwithſtanding his Plea of being a Publick Miniſter. The Spaniards above all other Nations were diſpoſed to curſe his Memory, becauſe of their dreadful ſuffering by his Arms at Sea and Land: And even the French Court, who by his Aſſiſtance laid the Foundation of their ſucceeding Greatneſs, envied him as a Friend, and ſuſpected he might one Day prove their Enemy: And it was ſaid, that Cardinal Mazarine would change Countenance whenever he heard him named; ſo that it paſs'd into a Proverb in France, that The Cardinal was not ſo much afraid of the Devil as he was of Oliver Cromwel.

The Character of O. Cromwel.

His Character is thus given by a generous Enemy the Lord Clarendon. " He was one of thoſe Men, " quos vituperare ne inimici quidem poſſunt, niſi ut ſimul " laudent; whom his very Enemies could not con- " demn without commending him at the ſame time: " For he could never have done half that Miſchief " without great parts of Courage, Induſtry and " Judgment. He muſt have had a wonderful Un- " derſtanding in the Natures and Humours of Men, " and as great a dexterity in applying them, who, " from a private and obſcure Birth (tho' of a good " Family) without Intereſt or Eſtate, Alliance or " Friendſhip, could raiſe himſelf to ſuch a Height, " and compound and knead ſuch oppoſite and con- " tradictory Tempers, Humours and Intereſts into a " Conſiſtence that contributed to his Deſigns and to " their own Deſtruction; whilſt himſelf grew inſen- " ſibly powerful enough to cut off thoſe by whom he " had climbed, in the inſtant that they projected to " demoliſh their own Building. What was ſaid of

1658. 10 Car. II.

" Cinna may very justly be said of him, ausum eum, quæ nemo auderet bonus; perficisse quæ a nullo, nisi fortissimo, perfici possent, he attempted those things " which no good Man durst have ventur'd on, " and atchieved those in which none but a valiant " and great Man could have succeeded. Without " doubt no Man with more wickedness ever attempted any thing, or brought to pass what he desired " more wickedly, more in the Face and Contempt " of Religion and Moral Honesty; yet wickedness " as great as his could never have accomplished those " Designs, without the assistance of a great Spirit, " an admirable Circumspection and Sagacity, and a " most magnanimous Resolution.

" When he appeared first in the Parliament, he " seem'd to have a Person in no degree Gracious, no " ornament of Discourse; none of those Talents " which use to conciliate the Affections of the Stander-by: Yet as he grew into Place and Authority, " his Parts seem'd to be raised, as if he had concealed Faculties till he had occasion to use them; " and when he was to act the part of a great Man, " he did it without any indecency, notwithstanding " the want of Custom.

" After he was confirm'd and invested Protector " by the Humble Petition and Advice, he consulted " with very few upon any Action of Importance, " nor communicated any enterprize he resolved upon with more than those who were to have principal Parts in the execution of it; nor with them " sooner than was absolutely necessary. What he " once resolv'd, in which he was not rash, he would " not be diswaded from, nor endure any contradiction of his Power and Authority; but extorted " Obedience from them who were not willing to " yield it.

" One time when he had laid some very extraordinary Tax upon the City, one Cony an eminent " Fanatick, and one who had heretofore serv'd him " very notably, positively refused to pay his part; " and loudly diswaded others from submitting to it, " as an Imposition notoriously against the Law and the Property of the Subject, which all honest Men were bound to defend. Cromwel sent for him, and cajoled him with the Memory of the old Kindness and " Friendship that had been between them; and that " of all Men he did not expect this opposition from " him, in a matter that was so necessary for the good " of the Commonwealth; it had been always his " fortune to meet with the most rude and obstinate " Behaviour from those who had formerly been absolutely govern'd by him, and they commonly put " him in mind of some Expressions and Sayings of " his own in cases of the like Nature: So this Man " remember'd him, how great an Enemy he had expressed himself to such Grievances, and had declared, that all who submitted to them, and paid illegal Taxes were more to blame, and greater Enemies to their Country than they who had imposed them; and that the Tyranny of Princes could never be grievous but by the Tameness and Stupidity of the People. When " Cromwel saw that he could not convert him, he " told him, that he had a Will as stubborn as his, and he would try which of them two should be Master. " Thereupon, with some Expressions of Reproach " and Contempt, he committed the Man to Prison, " whose Courage was nothing abated by it; but as " soon as the Term came, he brought his Habeas Corpus in the King's-Bench, which they then called " the Upper-Bench. Maynard who was of Council " with the Prisoner, demanded his Liberty with " great Confidence, both upon the illegality of the " Commitment, and the illegality of the Imposition, " as being laid without any lawful Authority. The " Judges could not maintain or defend either, and " enough declared what their Sentence would be; " and therefore the Protector's Attorney required a " farther Day to answer what had been urged. Before that Day, Maynard was committed to the " Tower, for presuming to Question or make doubt " of his Authority; and the Judges were sent for, " and severely reprehended for suffering that Licence, when they with all Humility mention'd " the Law and Magna Charta, Cromwel told them " with Terms of Contempt and Derision, their Magna F—— should not controul his Actions, which he knew were for the safety of the Commonwealth. He " ask'd them, Who made them Judges? Whether they had any Authority to sit there but what he gave them? And if his Authority were at an end, they knew well enough what would become of themselves; and therefore advised them to be more tender of that which could only preserve them; and so dismiss'd them with caution, that they should not suffer the Lawyers to prate what it would not become them to hear.

1658. 10 Car. II.

" Thus he subdued a Spirit that had been often " troublesome to the most Soveraign Power, and " made Westminster-Hall as obedient and subservient " to his Commands as any of the rest of his Quarters. " In all other matters, which did not concern the " Life of his Jurisdiction, he seemed to have great " reverence for the Law, rarely interposing between " Party and Party. As he proceeded with this kind " of Indignation and Haughtiness, with those who " were refractory and durst contend with his greatness, so towards all who complied with his good " Pleasure and courted his Protection, he used great " Civility, Generosity and Bounty.

" To reduce three Nations which perfectly hated " him to an entire Obedience to all his Dictates; " to awe and govern those Nations by an Army that " was indevoted to him, and wish'd his ruin, was " an Instance of a very prodigious Address. But his " Greatness at home was but a shadow of the Glory " he had abroad. It was hard to discover which " fear'd him most France, Spain or the Low Countries, " where his Friendship was current at the Value he " put upon it. As they did all sacrifice their Honour and their Interest to his Pleasure, so there is " nothing he could have demanded that either of " them would have denied him. To manifest which, " there needs only two Instances: The first is when " those of the Valley of Lucern had unwarily risen " in Arms against the Duke of Savoy, which gave " occasion to the Pope and the Neighbour Princes of " Italy, to call and sollicite for their extirpation, and " their Prince positively resolved upon it, Cromwel " sent his Agent to the Duke of Savoy, a Prince with " whom he had no Correspondence or Commerce, and " so engaged the Cardinal, and even terrified the " Pope himself, without so much as doing any Grace " to the English Roman Catholicks (nothing being " more usual than his saying, that his Ships in the Mediterranean should visit Civita Vecchia; and that the sound of his Cannon should be heard in Rome) " that the Duke of Savoy thought it necessary to restore all that he had taken from them, and did " renew all those Privileges they had formerly enjoy'd and newly forfeited.

" The other Instance of his Authority was yet " greater and more incredible. In the City of Nismes, " which is one of the fairest in the Province of Languedoc, and where those of the Religion do most " abound, there was a great Faction at that Season " when the Consuls (who are the chief Magistrates) were to be chosen. Those of the Reformed Religion had the confidence to set up one of " themselves for that Magistracy, which they of " the Roman Religion resolv'd to oppose with all their " Power. The Dissention between them made so " much noise, that the Intendant of the Province, " who is the supreme Minister in all Civil Affairs " throughout the whole Province, went thither to " prevent any Disorder that might happen. When " the Day of Election came, those of the Religion " possessed themselves with many arm'd Men of the " Town-House where the Election was to be made. " The Magistrates sent to know what their meaning was; to which they answer'd, They were there " to give their Voices for the choice of the new Consuls,

1658. 12 Car. II.

" and to be ſure that the Election ſhould be fairly made. " The Biſhop of the City, the Intendant of the Pro- " vince, with all the Officers of the Church, and " the preſent Magiſtrates of the Town, went to- " gether in their Robes to be preſent at the Election, " without any ſuſpicion that there would be any " force uſed. When they came near the Gate of " the Town-Houſe, which was ſhut, and they ſup- " poſed would be open'd when they came, they " within pour'd out a Volley of Musket-ſhot upon " them, by which the Dean of the Church, and two " or three of the Magiſtrates of the Town were " kill'd upon the place, and very many others wound- " ded; whereof ſome died ſhortly after. In this " confuſion the Magiſtrates put themſelves into as " good a Poſture to defend themſelves as they could, " without any purpoſe of offending the other, till " they ſhould be better provided; in order to which, " they ſent an Expreſs to the Court, with a plain re- " lation of the whole matter of Fact; and that there " appeared to be no manner of Combination with thoſe " of the Religion in other places of the Province; but " that it was an Inſolence in thoſe of the place, upon the " preſumption of their great Numbers, which were little " inferior to thoſe of the Catholicks. The Court was " glad of the occaſion, and reſolv'd that this Pro- " vocation, in which other places were not involv'd, " and which no body could excuſe, ſhould warrant " all kind of Severity in that City, even to the pul- " ling down their Temples, and expelling many of " them for ever out of the City; which, with the " Execution and Forfeiture of many of the princi- " pal Perſons, would be a general Mortification to " all of the Religion in France, with whom they " were heartily offended, and a part of the Army " was forthwith order'd to march towards Niſmes to " ſee this executed with the utmoſt rigour.

" Thoſe of the Religion in the Town were quick- " ly ſenſible into what condition they had brought " themſelves, and ſent with all poſſible ſubmiſſion " to the Magiſtrates to excuſe themſelves, and to " impute what had been done to the raſhneſs of par- " ticular Men, who had no order for what they did. " The Magiſtrates anſwer'd, That they were glad they " were ſenſible of their Miſcarriage; but they could ſay " nothing upon the Subject till the King's pleaſure ſhould " be known, to whom they had ſent a full Relation of " all that had paſſed. The others very well knew " what the King's Pleaſure would be, and forth- " with ſent an Expreſs, one Moulins, who had liv'd " many Years in that place and in Montpellier, to " Cromwel to deſire his Protection and Interpoſition. " The Expreſs made ſo much haſte, and found ſo " good a reception the firſt Hour he came, that " Cromwel after he had received the whole Account, " bid him refreſh himſelf after ſo long a Journey, and " he would take ſuch care of his Buſineſs, that by the " time he came to Paris he ſhould find it diſpatch'd, and " that Night ſent away another Meſſenger to his " Ambaſſador Lockhart; who by the time Moulins " came thither, had ſo far prevail'd with the Car- " dinal, that Orders were ſent to ſtop the Troops " which were upon their March towards Niſmes; " and within few Days after, Moulins return'd with " a full Pardon and Amneſty from the King, under " the Great-Seal of France, ſo fully confirm'd with " all Circumſtances, that there was never farther " mention made of it, but all things paſſed as if " there had never been any ſuch thing. So that " no body can wonder that his Memory remains " ſtill in thoſe Parts, and with thoſe People in great " Veneration.

" He would never ſuffer himſelf to be denied any " thing he ever asked of the Cardinal, alledging, " that the People would not be otherwiſe ſatisfied, which " the Cardinal bore very heavily, and complain'd " of to thoſe with whom he would be free. One " Day he viſited Madam Turenne, and when he took " his leave of her, ſhe, according to her Cuſtom, " beſought him to continue gracious to the Churches.

" Whereupon the Cardinal told her, That he knew 1658. " not how to behave himſelf; if he adviſed the King to 12 Car. II. " puniſh and ſuppreſs their Inſolence, Cromwel threat- " ned him to join with the Spaniards; and if he ſhew'd " any Favour to them, at Rome they accounted him an " Heretick.

" To conclude his Character, Cromwel was not " ſo far a Man of Blood as to follow Machiavel's " Method, which preſcribes, upon a total alterati- " on of Government, as a thing abſolutely neceſſary, " to cut off all the Heads of thoſe, and extirpate " their Families who are Friends to the old one. " It was confidently reported, that in the Council " of Officers it was more than once propoſed, that " there might be a general Maſſacre of all the Royal Par- " ty, as the only Expedient to ſecure the Government, " but that Cromwel would never conſent to it; it " may be out of too great a contempt of his Enemies. " In a Word, as he was guilty of many Crimes a- " gainſt which Damnation is denounc'd, and for " which Hell-fire is prepared, ſo he had ſome good " Qualities, which have cauſed the Memory of ſome " Men in all Ages to be celebrated; and he will be " look'd upon by Poſterity as a brave wicked Man.

Richard made Protector.

The conſequence of his Death was, that immedi- " ately the Council aſſembled and declared his Son " Richard to be his Succeſſor by this notable Pro- " clamation.

WHereas it hath pleaſed the moſt wiſe God in his Providence to take out of this World the moſt Serene and Renowned Oliver, late Lord Protector of this Commonwealth: And his Highneſs having in his Life-time, according to the Humble Petition and Advice declared and appointed the moſt Noble and Illuſtrious the Lord Richard, eldeſt Son of his ſaid late Highneſs, to ſucceed him in the Government of theſe Nations, We therefore of the Privy Council, together with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of London, the Officers of the Army, and numbers of other Principal Gentlemen, do now hereby with one full Voice and Conſent of Tongue and Heart, Publiſh and Declare the ſaid Noble and Illuſtrious Lord Richard to be rightful Protector of this Commonwealth of England, Scotland and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereto belonging: To whom we do acknowledge all Fidelity and conſtant Obedience, according to Law, and the ſaid Humble Petition and Advice, with all hearty and humble Affections beſeeching the Lord, by whom Princes Rule, to bleſs him with long Life, and theſe Nations with Peace and Happineſs under his Government.

Proceedings of the new Protector.

Then the Council proceeded to give the Oath of Government to the new Protector, who publiſhed a Proclamation for all Officers to continue in their Places; and the Maſter of the Ceremonies was order'd to acquaint all Foreign Miniſters with the Death of the late Protector, and the Succeſſion of his Son Richard; which ſoon brought over many new Ambaſſadors and Envoys from the neighbour Princes and States, all admitted with due Ceremony to a ſolemn Audience given by his Highneſs, to condole 1658. 10 Car. II. the Death of his Father, and to congratulate his Succeſſion to the Government; while infinite Addreſſes came up from all Parts of the three Kingdoms, to complement the new Protector with mighty Profeſſions of publick Joy and Satisfaction, and with ſolemn Reſolutions and Promiſes of adhering to him againſt all his Enemies. And indeed the general Exultation of the People and Armies was ſo very great upon this new Succeſſion, that it muſt be imputed more to the common Senſe of Deliverance from one Tyrant, than to their Hopes or Expectations from this other Protector; who was raiſed to the Government without any Reſpect or good Opinion in the Minds of the People or the Soldiers. For he had been neither a Military Man, nor a Stateſman; rather an honeſt Country Gentleman, bred to Privacy and Sports, and willing to ſerve his Neighbours, and even the Cavaliers, by a little Intereſt he had in his Father's Court. His own Father ſeem'd to have the leaſt Affection and the loweſt Opinion of this Son, among all his other Children: He never truſted him in any Command, nor employ'd him in any true Buſineſs: He made him indeed Chancellour of Oxford, and put him at the Top of the other Houſe in Parliament: but this was rather for the Honour of his Family, than for the Love of his Son. He never let him in to any Secrets of Policy nor any Arts of War; and therefore it is plain, he never deſign'd him for his Succeſſor, becauſe he never train'd him up to it.

Richard a mean Man.

Cromwel's Funeral.

One of the firſt Acts of the new Government, was to order the Funeral of the late Uſurper; and the Council having reſolved that it ſhould be very magnificent, the Care of it was referred to a Committee of them, who ſending for Mr. Kinnerſly, Maſter of the Wardrobe, deſired him to find out ſome Precedent by which they might govern themſelves in this important Affair. After Examination of his Books and Papers, Mr. Kinnerſly, who was ſuſpected to be inclined to Popery, recommended to them the Solemnities uſed upon the like occaſion for Philip II. King of Spain, who had been repreſented to be in Purgatory for about two Months. In the like manner was the Body of this great Reformer laid in Somerſet-Houſe. The Apartment was hung with Black, the Day-light was excluded, and no other but that of Wax-Tapers to be ſeen. This Scene of Purgatory continued till the firſt of November, which being the Day preceding that commonly called All-Souls, he was removed into the Great Hall of the ſaid Houſe, and repreſented in Effigie, as lying on a Bed of Crimſon Velvet, covered with a Gown of the like coloured Velvet, a Sceptre in his Hand, and a Crown on his Head. That part of the Hall wherein the Bed ſtood was railed in, and the Rails and Ground within them covered with Crimſon Velvet: Four or five hundred Candles ſet in flat ſhining Candleſticks, were ſo placed round near the Roof of the Hall, that the Light they gave ſeemed like the Rays of the Sun. By all which he was repreſented to be now in a ſtate of Glory. This Folly and Profuſion ſo far provoked the People, that they threw Dirt in the Night on his Eſcucheon, that was placed over the great Gate of Somerſet-Houſe. I purpoſely omit the reſt of the Pageantry, the great Number of Perſons that attended on the Body, the Proceſſion to Weſtminſter, the vaſt Expence in Mourning, the State and Magnificence of the Monument erected for him, with many other things that I care not to remember. To this Account may be added, That this pompous Funeral of Cromwel was celebrated on Nov. 23. and the exceſſive Charges of it never half paid, as if the very dead Body was to uſurp upon the Rights and Properties of the People. It was Interred in the moſt ſacred and ſolemn Place of the Abbey, above the High Altar, with a Monument excelling that of any Crown'd Head: But within leſs than two Years the Pile was broken down, and the Body cartied to a more proper Place.

A new Parl. call'd

On Dec. 4. the Protector, by Advice of his Council, reſolved to call a Parliament to meet on the 27th Day of January next: And in order to it, theſe three Queſtions were debated. 1658. 10 Car. II.

1. "Whether the Elections ſhould be made by "the Counties, Cities, and chief Towns, according "to the Diſtribution agreed on by the Long Parliament, and practiſed by Cromwel: Or whether "they ſhould be made by the Counties, Cities, and "Boroughs, according to the ancient Law of the "Land? It was determined for the latter way; which broke the Meaſures of the Court, and ſet the People upon Hopes of a Free Parliament, and gave many of the Commonwealth's Men an Opportunity to be elected in private Boroughs, who dared not yet to have appeared in the open Counties and Cities.

2. "How the other Houſe ſhould be ſummoned, "whether by a new general Form, or by particular "Writs of Summons, as antiently uſed to the Peers? It was carried for the latter, under the ſame Pretence of bringing all things back to the ancient Courſe of Law. But this too was a Diſadvantage to the new Government; for when the Houſes met, they quarrell'd upon the Forms of Meeting, and the Commons would not treat with thoſe new Nobles without ſaving the Rights of ancient Peerage.

3. "Concerning the thirty Members to ſerve for "Scotland, and thirty for Ireland, whether or how "they ſhould be choſen? There having been as "yet no Diſtribution of Powers to Elect, as it was "order'd there ſhould be in the humble Petition "and Advice. It was at laſt concluded, that Members ſhould be choſen for Scotland and Ireland, as had been practiſed in the time of Cromwel, with this Proviſo, that they ſhould not be admitted to ſit, till the Conſent of thoſe choſen for England was firſt obtained. And this again occaſion'd a fierce Contention in the Houſe about admitting or rejecting the Scotch and Iriſh Members. —— So as the way of projecting and modelling this Parliament made the very Conſtitution of it to be Strife and Diviſion.

Meeting of the Parl.

When the Parliament met Jan. 27. Mr. Challoner Chute was choſen Speaker of the Commons, who was ſo much indiſpoſed with the Heats and Tumults of the Houſe, that in the beginning of March Sir Lillibone Long was choſen to ſupply his Place, in which he ſoon after died, and Mr. Bamfield was appointed Speaker pro tempore; then Mr. Chute died, and Bamfield was voted to keep his Poſſeſſion: A fatal Parliament, that kill'd two Speakers before it diſpatch'd any Buſineſs. An Oath was required of any ſitting Member, not to act or contrive any thing againſt the Lord Protector: but ſome of the old Republicans declined the Oath, and had Intereſt enough in the Houſe to ſit and vote without it. The only two Parties were thoſe for the preſent Government or new Protector, and thoſe for a Commonwealth. All that were ſuſpected to have been Royaliſts, on which ſide ſoever they voted, were expell'd the Houſe by the Complaint and Clamours of the other ſide. Mr. Secretary Thurlo, Leader of the Court Party, preſented a Declaration ready drawn, as a Bill for the Recognition of Richard Cromwel to be lawful Lord Protector, and the former Petition and Advice to be ſtill the Rule of Government for theſe Nations. Sir Henry Vane and his Commonwealth Party oppos'd this Declaration with great Vehemence, urging, that the Protector's Right ought to be founded on the Conſent of the People; and therefore the Word Recogniſing ought at leaſt to be alter'd into that of Agniſing, to make his Authority ſtand upon the true bottom. And yet the Court-Party did at laſt carry their Queſtion, but by ſo ſmall a majority, that the other Party quickly grew upon them; till the Officers and Army formed themſelves into a third Party, and ſwallowed up both the other.

State of Religion.

Religion had been ſo proſtituted to the moſt vile and wicked Ends, that the Face of it began to be aſhamed. The Presbyterians appeared to be the moſt ſedate

1658. 10 Car. II. The Independents the prevailing Party.

ſedate and ſober Party, but Cromwel thought 'em all Hypocrites toward Heaven, and diſaffected toward his Perſon and Government. The Independents were the Faction by whoſe Intereſt he had raiſed himſelf; and therefore for Gratitude he was expreſly for them, or rather out of Policy, knowing their Tenets to have been born and bred in a Camp, and well ſuited to his Military arbitrary Power, and equally averſe to the old legal Monarchy, and to the new-invented Commonwealth. But the World did not yet know what the Religion of the Independents was; for it had not been drawn into any publick Confeſſion; nor had the Leaders met in any one General Aſſembly. To make up this Defect, Cromwel reſolved upon a Convention or Aſſembly of the Independent Miniſters, whom he called to meet at the Savoy, there to treat with the Presbyterians, and come, if poſſible, to ſome Accommodation with them. They were here Sitting and Debating at the time of Cromwel's Death, and gave him ſome Diſtraction to hear of their Diſputes and Quarrels. After his Death, they publiſh'd a Declaration of the Faith and Order owned and practiſed in the Congregational Churches in England, agreed upon and conſented unto by their Elders and Meſſengers in their Meeting at the Savoy, Octob. 12. 1658.

Aſſembly of them.

Declaration of their Faith and Order.

But it was now too late to paſs their Scheme into a National Religion: for the new Protector not being Heir to his Father's Politicks nor Conſcience, was more inclinable to the Presbyterians, by whom he was ſervilely courted, and eſpecially by Mr. Baxter. This Presbyterian Spirit was got much into the new Houſe of Commons, and ſhew'd it ſelf in their Declaration for a Faſt, wherein they had this Expreſſion, that they ought to take Shame unto themſelves for neglecting to ſettle the Government of the Church, and for having permitted ſo many erroneous and heretical Opinions to be divulged. Tho' Richard, for want of the Arts of Diſſembling, was no Bigot to any of the Ways which they called the Ways of Godlineſs, and therefore was the leſs able to work upon any Party. A Member of his Parliament tells us, "That a certain inferiour Officer having publickly murmur'd "at the Advancement of ſome that had been Cavaliers, to Commands in the Army, he was carried "to Whitehall to anſwer for the ſame: Richard Cromwel, beſides other reproachful Language, asks him "in a deriding manner, whether he would have him "prefer none but thoſe that were godly? Here, "continued he, is Dick Ingoldsby, who can neither "Pray nor Preach, and yet I will truſt him before you "all. Thoſe imprudent as well as irreligious Words, ſo clearly diſcovering the Frame and Temper of his Mind, were ſoon publiſhed in the Army and City of London, to his great Prejudice. And from this time, all Men among them, who made but the leaſt Pretences to Religion and Sobriety, began to think themſelves unſafe whilſt he governed; and thereupon ſoon formed a Reſolution to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to divide the Military from the Civil Power, and to place the Command of the Army in Lieutenant General Fleetwood.

The new Protector inclinable to the Presbyterians.

Richard not a Bigot, nor enough a Hypocrite

1659. The Army againſt the Protector and the Parliament.

While the Sitting Parliament was miſerably divided between the Governing Party and the old Commonwealth's Men; the chief Officers in the Army formed themſelves into a third Party more formidable than both the others, becauſe they had the Sword in their Hand, and wanted Money. Theſe met and conſulted frequently at Wallingford-Houſe, the Dwelling of Fleetwood: and having drawn over ſeveral of the Republican Commoners, Vane, Ludlow, Haſlerig, and others; they at firſt kept fair with the Protector, and upon the Tumults in the two Houſes they wheedled him into an Opinion of the Neceſſity of calling a General Council of Officers, in order to preſent ſomething to the Parliament for the Regulation and Maintenance of the Army. He not ſuſpecting their Deſign, conſented to the Propoſition: and having iſſued out an Order to that purpoſe, this Military General Council met, and quickly aſſumed ſo much Power to themſelves, that on Apr. 20. they preſented a Remonſtrance to the Protector, againſt the Proceedings of the Parliament; who, to be even with them, voted, 1. "That during the Sitting "of this Parliament, there ſhall be no General "Council, or Meeting of the Officers of the Army, "without Direction and Authority of his Highneſs the Lord Protector, and both Houſes of Parliament. 2. That no Perſon ſhall have or continue any Command or Truſt in the Army, who "ſhall refuſe to Subſcribe, That he will not diſturb "or interrupt the free Meetings in Parliament of "any the Members of either Houſe of Parliament, "or their Freedom in their Debates or Counſels. The Protector, a dubious and unskilful Manager, endeavour'd to execute the Parliamentary Votes, and forbid the General Meeting: But the Officers were now too ſtrong to obey. On April 22. Friday Morning, Fleetwood the Protector's Brother, Desborough his Uncle, and other Leaders, brought up their Forces to Whitehall, and forced him, poor Man, to conſent to a Commiſſion and Proclamation ready drawn for Diſſolving the Parliament; which they took care to execute by locking up the Doors, and guarding of them.

1659. 11 Car. II.

Richard terrified into Diſſolving the Parliament.

When the Army had thus deliver'd themſelves from the Parliament, their remaining Grievance was the Protector himſelf, whom they reſolved to lay aſide, and to declare for the Good Old Cauſe, a Commonwealth without a ſingle Perſon or a Houſe of Peers. To purſue this Deſign, they drew up an Inſtrument, intitled, A Declaration of the Officers of the Army, inviting the Members of the Long Parliament, who continued Sitting till the 20th of April 1653, to return to the Exerciſe and Diſcharge of their Truſts. Sign'd May 6. by the Direction of the Lord Fleetwood and the Council of Officers of the Army. Deliver'd to the old Speaker by Lambart and a Train of other Officers. Upon this, many ſecluded Members of the Rump Parliament paid a Viſit to their Speaker, and ſignified to him (as was concerted) their Willingneſs to return to the Diſcharge of their Truſt.

The Rump reſtor'd.

This Rump, violently thruſt out by Cromwel, and now as illegally thruſt in by the Army, met on Saturday May 7. and ſoon agreed on a Declaration, That they were reſolved to ſettle the Commonwealth upon ſuch a Foundation as ſhall aſſert, eſtabliſh, and ſecure the Properties and Liberties of the People in reference to all, both as Men and Chriſtians, and that without a ſingle Perſon, Kingſhip, or Houſe of Peers: and they will vigorouſly endeavour carrying on of the Reformation ſo much deſired and ſo often declared for, to the end there may be a godly and faithful Magiſtracy and Miniſtry upheld and maintained in the Nation, to the Glory and Praiſe of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to the reviving and making glad the hearts of the Upright in the Land. But theſe Gentlemen were to remember, that they were but new Tools in the Hands of the Army, and were to be managed by them.

The Army preſcribe a Commonweal.

Hence the Army brought them their humble Petition and Addreſs, deſiring, that is, preſcribing, 1. The Government of a Free State and Commonwealth, without a ſingle Perſon, Kingſhip, or Houſe of Peers. 2. A juſt and due Regulation of Law, and Courts of Juſtice and Equity. 3. An Act of Oblivion for All that had acted ſince the 9th of Apr. 1653. 4. The Diſcharge of all publick Debts contracted ſince the 20th of April 1653. 5. Liberty of Conſcience not extending to Popery or Prelacy. 6. A godly, faithful, and painful Goſpel-preaching Miniſtry to be countenanc'd and maintain'd. 7. All Perſons adhering to the late King, or to Charles Stuart his Son, to be removed from all Places of Truſt. 8. To prevent the long Sitting of Parliaments, and to provide for a due Succeſſion of 'em. 9. To own and acknowledge the Lord Charles Fleetwood to be General of the Land Forces of this Commonwealth. 10. To put the Adminiſtration of all executive Power of Government in a Council of State. 11. To diſcharge 1659. 11 Car. II. charge all Debts contracted by his Highneſs or his Father ſince the 15th of December 1653. To ſettle 10000 l. per Annum upon Richard Cromwel and his Heirs, and 10000 l. more upon him during Life, and 8000 l. a Year upon his Mother during her Life.

This Inſtrument was deliver'd in the Houſe on the 12th of May by Lambert at the Head of ſeveral Officers, with this Speech:

Mr. Speaker,

Lambert's Speech. WE are commanded, by the Officers of the Army, to preſent before you their humble Petition and Addreſs. There are ſeveral things contained in it, which have been a long time upon their hands; but now finding, to their great Joy and Satisfaction, that you are return'd, in diſcharge of their Truſt they thought it unfit to neglect this Opportunity, but have commanded us to preſent this Petition.

Then they withdrew; and the Houſe, upon debating the Matter, order'd their Speaker to return them this Anſwer:

Speaker's Anſwer. I Am commanded by the Houſe to tell you, they have read the Petition and Addreſs, and that as they found your Affection before they came hither, ſo they find that Affection continuing. The things contained in your Petition are of great weight, and many more things of great weight are laying before the Houſe. And it is concerning the Settlement for which the Divine Providence of God hath brought us hither, who we hope ſhall never depart from us. The Houſe finds in your Advice much of Love and Affection, and have commanded me to acknowledge that Love and Affection you have ſhewn, and to give you Thanks, very hearty Thanks, for your Love and Expreſſions of it; and accordingly, in their Name, I do give you very hearty Thanks.

The Houſe, upon firſt Debate of the Articles, agreed to all of them, excepting that in favour of Richard and his Family; having, as 'tis thought, ſecret Inſtructions from the Army to put ſome Slight and Indignity upon that Cypher of Government. And therefore they appointed a Committee to receive his Submiſſion to their Authority, and to take a ſtate of his Debts, before they would do any thing for him. He was full of Compliance, and gave in his formal Submiſſion, with a Schedule of his Debts annexed. What was contracted for his Father's Funeral (in deſpite to his Memory) they abſolutely rejected, and declined the Settlement of any Revenue upon him or his Mother; only gave him a ſmall Sum to diſcharge part of his private Debts, and required him and all his Dependents to remove from Whitehall in ſix Days time. The next thing they did was to call home Henry Cromwel from his Government in Ireland, where he had been very popular, and had an Army under good Diſcipline: but ſeeing the Tide turn ſtrongly, he would not offer to oppoſe it.

There is a pleaſant Story told by the Lord Clarendon, which may here be inſerted. Says he, "It may "not prove ungrateful to the Reader, in this place, "to entertain him with a very pleaſant Story that "related to this miſerable Richard, tho' it happen'd "long afterwards; becauſe there will be ſcarce again "any occaſion ſo much as to mention him during "the continuance of this Relation. Shortly after "the King's Return, and the manifeſt Joy that poſ-"ſeſſed the whole Kingdom thereupon, this poor "Creature found it neceſſary to tranſport himſelf "into France, more for fear of his Debts than of "the King; who thought it not neceſſary to en-"quire after a Man ſo long forgotten. After he "had lived ſome Years in Paris untaken notice of, "and indeed unknown, living in a moſt obſcure "Condition and Diſguiſe, not owning his own "Name, nor having above one Servant to attend "him; he thought it neceſſary, upon the firſt Ru-"mour and Apprehenſion that there was like to be "a War between England and France, to quit that "Kingdom, and to remove to ſome place that would "be neutral to either Party; and pitch'd upon Ge-"neva. Making his way thither by Bourdeaux, and "through the Province of Languedoc, he paſs'd "through Pezenas, a very pleaſant Town belonging "to the Prince of Conti, who hath a fair Palace "there, and, being then Governour of Languedoc, "made his Reſidence in it. 1659. 11 Car. II.

"In this Place Richard made ſome ſtay; and "walking abroad to entertain himſelf with the "View of the Situation, and of many things worth "the ſeeing, he met with a Perſon who well knew "him, and was well known by him, the other "having always been of his Father's and of his "Party; ſo that they were glad enough to find "themſelves together. The other told him, That "all Strangers who came to that Town uſed to wait up-"on the Prince of Conti, the Governour of the Province, "who expected it, and always treated Strangers, and "particularly the Engliſh, with much Civility: that "he need not be known, but that he himſelf would firſt "go to the Prince and inform him, that another Eng-"liſh Gentleman was paſſing through that Town towards "Italy, who would be glad to have the Honour to kiſs "his Hands. The Prince receiv'd him with great "Civility and Grace, according to his natural Cu-"ſtom, and after few Words, began to diſcourſe of "the Affairs of England, and asked many Queſti-"ons concerning the King, and whether all Men "were quiet, and ſubmitted obediently to him? "Which the other anſwer'd briefly, according to "the Truth. Well, ſaid the Prince, Oliver, tho' he "was a Traytor and a Villain, was a brave Fellow, had "great Parts, great Courage, and was worthy to Com-"mand; but that Richard, that Coxcomb, Coquin, "Poltron, was ſurely the baſeſt Fellow alive: What is "become of that Fool? How was it poſſible he could be "ſuch a Sot? He anſwer'd, That he was betray'd by "thoſe whom he moſt truſted, and who had been moſt "obliged by his Father. So being weary of his Vi-"ſit, quickly took his Leave, and the next Morn-"ing left the Town, out of fear that the Prince "might know that he was the very Fool and Cox-"comb he had mention'd ſo kindly. And within "two Days after, the Prince did come to know "who it was whom he had treated ſo well, and "whom before, by his Behaviour, he had believed "to be a Man not very glad of the King's Reſtora-"tion.

The Royaliſts could not forbear attempting to make ſome advantage of theſe Confuſions, and therefore were now ready to riſe in all parts of the Kingdom; and a Declaration was publiſh'd in the Names of the Lords, Gentlemen and Citizens, Freeholders and Yeomen of this once happy Nation; ſome little Efforts were made to no purpoſe in the South and Weſt parts of England; but the moſt conſiderable Body that got together was in Cheſhire, under the command of Sir George Booth, who with the Earl of Derby, the Lord Kilmurry, and Major General Egerton, met at Warrington in a ſmall Party, and had ſoon an acceſſion of great numbers of the Gentry. Colonel Roger Whitley brought a Meſſage to Sir George Booth from his Majeſty, with an Account of his Majeſty's Preparations beyond Sea, and that he was ready to come over when the firſt opportunity ſhould call him. This being a great ſatisfaction to the Party now encreaſed to 500 Men, they reſolv'd to march to Cheſter, and by the Intereſt of Colonel Worden had the Gates open'd to them; then Egerton was ſent with a Party to Chirk-Caſtle, where Sir Thomas Middleton hearing of his Approach opened the Gates and joyfully receiv'd him. Colonel Whitley put a Garriſon into Harding-Caſtle in Flintſhire, then belonging to Judge Glynne: Colonel Ireton declared for them in Liverpool, and Mr. Brooks and Mr. Dunch, two of the Members of the Houſe, to atone for their former Diſloyalties join'd alſo with them.

The Royaliſts hope for ſome Advantage.

Riſing in Cheſhire.

Upon

1659. Car. II. Upon the noiſe of this Riſing on Aug. 5. Lambert was immediately diſpatched with a good Body of Forces. Sir George Booth hearing that Lambert was drawing near, was retiring into Lancaſhire to gain time, and encreaſe his Numbers; and for better amuſement, he ſends a Trumpeter to Lambert with two Miniſters, to ſhew the cauſe of their appearing in Arms, and to deſire a Treaty for ſaving the effuſion of Engliſh Blood. Lambert would agree to nothing, without firſt laying down their Arms and ſurrendring all their Gariſons. Having no Reply, he preſs'd hard upon them at Winnington-bridge near Northwich in Cheſhire, and gave them an entire Rout. Capt. Morris a gallant Gentleman was kill'd; the Lord Kilmory, Brooks, Egerton, O Neale and others were taken Priſoners: Sir George Booth and Sir Thomas Middleton made their Eſcapes; but Sir George was afterward taken in Diſguiſe at Newport-Paynel in Buckinghamſhire, by the Treachery of one Carter his Hoſt at the George-Inn; and ſoon after the Earl of Derby, Colonel Shawcroſs and others were taken.

Lambert routs 'em.

Sir George Booth taken.

Lambert was ſo fluſh'd with this Victory, that at Derby he conſults with his chief Officers how to reſtore the Military Power to its former Grandeur, and to reform all Miſcarriages in the Civil Adminiſtration; and concluded to draw up their Intentions in the Form of A Petition to the Parliament to redreſs their Grievances. Upon the News of this Project Sir Arthur Haſlerigge in the Houſe exclaim'd againſt it, as a deſign for altering the Government and ſetting up another ſingle Perſon. Under this Jealouſie the Houſe order'd Sept. 22. that Aſhfield, Cobbet and Duckingfield (in whoſe hands it was) ſhould bring the original Paper into the Houſe that Afternoon; and next Day to check the Ambition of Lambert, whom they ſuſpected to be riding over the Head of Fleetwood, they paſſed a Vote, That to have any more General Officers in the Army than are already ſettled by the Parliament, is Uſeleſs, Chargeable and Dangerous to the Commwealth; and ſoon after paſt An Act againſt raiſing any Money without conſent of Parliament; and made Application to General Fleetwood to protect them from his Rival Lambert, and got a Declaration from his part of the Army for adhering to the Parliament. And then the Houſe thought themſelves able to make an Order Octob. 12. that the Commiſſions of Lambert, Desborough, Kelſey, Aſhfield, Cobbet, Packer and Berry ſhould be all void, and they ſhould be ſucceeded by the next Officers in their ſeveral degrees. But then again afraid to truſt themſelves with Fleetwood or any ſingle General, they paſt an Act for putting out Fleetwood from being Lieutenant General of the Army, and to conſtitute him and Ludlow, Monk, Haſlerigge, Walton, Morley and Overton Commiſſioners to govern all the Forces; and then order'd two Regiments to be their Guard, who took their Station in the Palace-Yard and Weſtminſter-Hall.

Lambert exalted with his Victory.

Is turn'd out of his Commiſſion.

Lambert ſcorning to be turn'd out by the Fellovvs he had ſo lately put in, reſolv'd to ſtrike an early blow upon them; and therefore Oct. 13. meeting Evelyn marching his Troop to guard the Parliament, he commanded him to diſmount, and tho' Lambert was on Foot and none with him, yet Evelyn at the Head of his Troop tamely diſmounted at the Word of Command, while Lambert commanded the Troop to follow him, and drawing ſome other Forces together, he march'd into King-ſtreet, and poſſeſſed all the Avenues to the Parliament Houſe. Next Morning the Speaker came in his Coach toward the Houſe, but was ſtop'd at his entry into the Palace-Yard by Colonel Duckenfield, and after ſome Expoſtulation was forc'd to return. The Soldiers on both ſides kept their Stations in a poſture of Hoſtility, till the Council of State meeting at Whitehall order'd them all to draw off to their Quarters, which they agreed to do, upon condition the Parliament ſhould ſit no longer, and the Government ſhould be ſettled by a Council of Officers.

Makes a bold ſtroke upon the Parliament.

A new Council of Officers.

This new Military Council diſſolv'd the Council of State, and appointed ten Perſons to be a ſelect Committee for Adminiſtration of the Government till further Order. Theſe were Fleetwood (whom they had declared to be again General of all the Forces) Lambert (whom they had declar'd Major General) Desborough, Whitlock, Sir Henry Vane, Sir James Harrington, Major Salway, Berry, Sidenham and Archibald Johnſton. But within few Days the General Council of Officers lay aſide the Council of Ten, and ſet up another Committee of twenty three Preſons, who ſhould have the Adminiſtration of the Government, and the ſame Powers with the late Council of State, and ſhould be called the Committee of Safety; theſe were Fleetwood, Lambert, Desborough, Whitlock, Steel, Sir Henry Vane, Ludlow, Sydenham, Salway, Strickland, Berry, Lawrence, Sir James Harrington, Johnſton, Ireton, Tichburn, Hughſon, Clerk, Bennet, Lilburn, Cornelius Holland, Henry Bandriff and Robert Thompſon.

1659. 11 Car. II. Who diſſolve the Council of State.

And ſettle a Committee of Safety.

This new Pack of Governours publiſh'd a Declaration to acquaint the World, " That it was upon " their Hearts to ſettle a due Liberty upon the Free- " born People of theſe Nation to make a thorough " Reformation of the Law, and to eſtabliſh a Pain- " ful, Godly, Faithful, Goſpel-preaching Miniſtry, " and to provide them a Maintenance leſs trouble- " ſome to them, and leſs vexatious to the People " than that of Tythes; and to prepare ſuch a Form " of Government as ſhould beſt ſuit with a Free- " State and Commonwealth, without a ſingle Per- " ſon, Kingſhip or Houſe of Lords. They doubted " not, but ſuch who ſaw the many Temptations be- " ſetting them on every ſide, and the great Diffi- " culties they labour'd under, and knew not what " farther Streights a Day may bring forth, would " ſay on their behalfs, Who is ſufficient for theſe things? " And out of former Experiences being taught, that " the Lord is a preſent help in time of Trouble, " will cry aloud for them before the Throne of " Grace, that the Lord himſelf may appear, and " carry on his own Work in their Hands: And if it " ſhall pleaſe him by his Spirit to ſtir up thoſe that " fear his Name to be inſtant on their behalf, they " ſhall not fear what Evil Man can do unto them.

Their Declaration.

This Committee of Safety were going on in this mad Canting Vein, when they met with a providential Rebuke from General Monk in Scotland, in a Letter to Fleetwood and Lambert, which came to their Hands Octo. 29. wherein he upbraided them with the violation of their Faith to the Parliament, and declared his Reſolution to reſtore the Parliament to a freedom of Sitting and Acting againſt all oppoſition.

A ſtop put to them by Monk.

And this brings us to conſider the Counſels and Steps of General Monk, by which he brought about the happy Reſtauration of the King. It is hard to know how and when this great Man was brought over to the King's Intereſt: It is certain that upon the Abdication of Richard Cromwel, he and his chief Officers in Scotland ſent an Addreſs to the Engliſh Parliament, promiſing all Duty to them, and deſiring them to aſſert the native Rights and Liberties of theſe Nations, in and by the Government of a Free-State and Commonwealth, and to vindicate their Authority againſt the oppoſition of all arbitrary Powers whatſoever. But when he heard of that Parliament curb'd and corrected by the Engliſh Army, he was then prepared to think of interpoſing in the dubious Affairs of England.

The ſteps of General Monk.

Under this diſpoſition Mr. Nicholas Monk, a Reverend Divine of continual Loyalty, only Brother to the General, was ſent up from the Weſt by Sir Hugh Pollard and other Royaliſts to London, to conſult with Mr. Thomas Clarges, whoſe Siſter was his Brother's Wife, and thence to proceed to Scotland, to engage his Brother in the King's Service. He accordingly took his Inſtructions from Mr. Clarges, how to manage his Negotiations with great Secrecy and Caution, and to communicate his Deſigns to none except Dr. Samuel Barrow Phyſician, and Mr. John Price,

Mr. Nicholas Monk ſent to his Brother.

1659. 11 Car. II. Price, Chaplain to General Monk. By their assistance he made a due advantage of the Report of Sir George Booth's Rising, and by degrees brought his Brother to a Resolution of marching into England, in pursuance of Booth's Declaration for a free Parliament. But when all things were ready for his March, he received Intelligence from his Agent Mr. Clarges of Booth's Defeat; at which he was so much concern'd, that he sent a Letter to Lenthal the Speaker to be communicated to the Parliament, desiring to be dismist from his Command, pretending he was infirm in his Health, and had long continued in that remote Country; but now since all Insurrections were appeased, that threaten'd Disturbances to the Peace of the Nation, he hoped he might be permitted to return into his own Country, and to end his Days in Quiet. This Letter whether wrot in earnest, or for a Blind, is said to have been deliver'd by Clarges to the Speaker, under an obligation to suppress the reading of it for ten Days, before which time lapsed, the Parliament was turn'd out of Doors.

General Monk's escape from a Plot to turn him out.

The succeeding Committee of Safety were resolv'd to secure Monk, who kept his ordinary Residence at Dalkeith, some four Miles on this side Edinburgh, the London Packet being there constantly open'd, that the General might have his Letters before any were delivered at Edinburgh. The Committee dispatch'd their secret Orders to Scotland by the ordinary Packet, lest an Express might give Suspicion; and instead of directing the Label for Dalkeith, as was usual, it was order'd strait for Edinburgh. It happen'd that one of Monk's Life-guard met accidentally the Post turning out of the Road that led to Dalkeith, and finding he had not touch'd there, he brought him back, notwithstanding the Direction of the Label. Monk suspecting a trick opened all the Letters that he found directed to the Officers of the Army, among which there was one from the Committee of Safety to Colonel Thomas Wilks, ordering him To use the most effectual, speedy and secret way to secure the Person of General Monk, and to send him up to London under a strong Guard, in a Frigot that lay in Leith Road, and then to take upon him the Command of the Army till further Order. Having taken out this Letter; and what others he thought fit, together with his own from the same Committee, full of high Complements and Expressions of Trust, he sent away the Packet as it was directed. And then communicating the matter to some of his particular Friends, he gave Orders for a General Review of the Army to be made next Morning at Edinburgh, where he arrested Colonel Wilks, and some other Officers he had reason to suspect, and sent them Prisoners to the Castle, filling up their places with those in whom he could confide.

Mr. Nicholas Monk sent back from Scotland.

At the same time The Petition and Propositions of the Army to the Parliament were sent into Scotland to be signed by Monk and his Officers; but he would not suffer it to be handed about: and knowing it was no time to dally, he sent back his Brother Mr. Nicholas Monk to London, with Advice to Mr. Clarges, that he was resolv'd, if the Parliament would be resolute in asserting their own Authority against the Army, he would assist them in it; and if requir'd would march into England in their Defence. Upon Advice of this Resolution communicated by Mr. Clarges to Walton, Haslerig and Scot, they were encourag'd in the House to order the removal of Lambert and his associated Officers, but they prov'd too hard for the Parliament and turn'd them out of Doors, as before related. But Monk not afraid to prosecute his Design, sent upbraiding Letters to Fleetwood and Lambert, as before mention'd, which they receiving Octob. 20. they met at Whitehall in great consternation about twelve at Night, and sent Major Haines to desire Mr. Clarges to come to them; and when he came, they press'd him with great importunity to go into Scotland with Colonel Talbot, to prevail with General Monk to come to a right Understanding with them: Mr. Clarges undertook the Journey, and it seems they did not suspect his Fidelity to them.

Mr. Clarges sent into Scotland.

In the mean time General Monk had dismist the Anabaptist Officers, secured Berwick, and regulated his Army, and then made a Speech to them, That the Army in England had broke up the Parliament, for not honouring them in their Extravagancies, and that he was resolv'd to make the Military Power as it ought to be, subordinate to the Civil: And since they had their Protection and Maintenance from the Parliament, he had no reason to question their joining with him in restoring them to the exercise of their Trust: But if any were dissatisfied with these his Intentions, he desired they would declare it, and they should have free Liberty, without Reflection to leave the Service, and have Passports to return home. Upon which the Officers unanimously declared, That they would live and die with him. 1659. 11 Car. II. Gen. Monk secures his own Army.

Conference between Mr Clarges and General Monk.

Colonel Talbot and Mr. Clarges came to Edinburgh Sept. 2. and were well received by the General, especially Clarges, with whom he had a private Conference that Night, at which Clarges frankly ask'd him, What was the true End he aim'd at in this Enterprize? The General, who was one of the most reserv'd Men living, only answer'd, that he resolved to free his Native Country from the Slavery it was now under, and to that end would restore the Parliament; but in their admission to it he would make no difference between them, but would let in the secluded Members as well as others. But, says he, I must conjure you to secrecy, for the Army are jealous of me, that a King is in the bottom of this Design, and therefore all I can contrive will be little enough to beget a Confidence even in my own Party to engage heartily with me.

Lambert sent with an Army to meet Monk.

The General Council of Officers in London not trusting to their Endeavours of pacifying General Monk, sent away Lambert with an Army of 12000 Men, to meet General Monk who had not above half that number. When Lambert was advanc'd as far as York, he found there Major General Morgan, who kept fair with him, and offer'd to use the Credit he had with Monk, to bring him to an Accommodation, and was thereupon sent on that Errand into Scotland where his Regiment then was. He came to Edinburgh Nov. 8. and upon his first access to the General, ask'd him in a loud merry way, If he would lay down his Arms and be Friends with Fleetwood and Lambert? The General answer'd, If they would restore the Parliament, he had little more to say; and if he pleased he might let them know it. Morgan reply'd, I promised to ask you the Question, but not to return to them that sent me if you denied it. I am glad I am here to assist you, and to follow your Fortunes in all your Undertakings. You know I am no Statesman; but I am sure you are a lover of your Country, and therefore I join with you and submit to your Conduct. This generous Friendship was kindly accepted by the General, and had a great influence in raising the Spirits of his Army.

Morgan joins with Monk.

Ld Fairfax willing t followth Example

In the Evening Morgan was in private with the General, and delivered him a Letter from Mr. Bowles a Minister in York, a considerable Man in those parts, and in great reputation with the Lord Fairfax, and many other Persons of good Quality in that Country: the Letter imported, That the Lord Fairfax, and many others of good Interest were willing to join with the General, but disapproved his Declaration, which was restrained to that part of the Parliament only, which sate after the rest were Secluded, and was filled with Protestations for asserting no other Government but a Commonwealth. To this the General answer'd, "That Clarges "could witness with him his Intentions in those "Particulars; that what was printed in his Name, "as Affairs then stood, was not to be regarded as "the result of his own Reason, and till he had got "more Strength it would be unseasonable and in"discreet to do otherwise.

With this Apology Clarges was sent to the Lord Fairfax, but first to discourse Mr. Bowles, who desired Mr. Clarges to continue private in York, while he for fear of discovery transacted the Affair with the Lord Fairfax; which he did so effectually, that at his return he acquainted Clarges, that the Lord

General Monk received Letters daily from the Commiſſioners of the Militia of London, and from the Officers of the Fleet, and from the Forces in Ireland, all to perſwade him to come to an Accommodation with the General Council of Officers in London. And therefore to ſeem willing to ſatisfie them, and to keep all Parties in Amuſement, he enter'd into a Treaty with Fleetwood to be manag'd by Commiſſioners. In the mean time he marches on to Berwick, and Lambert was advanc'd to Newcaſtle, and both Armies ſeem'd preparing to meet and fight: But the Gariſon of Portſmouth and Admiral Lawſon with his Fleet declaring for a reſtitution of the Parliament, Lambert thought it more adviſeable to march back to aſſiſt his Friends in the South, rather than to hazard a Battle with Monk.

Lambert ins away om eneral Monk's rmy.

Fleetwood and the reſt of the Committee of Safety when they could not evade it, came into the general Cry for reſtoring the Parliament, and ſent to the Speaker, deſiring him to bring the reſt of the Members to re-aſſemble for the exerciſe of their Truſt, acknowledging in the moſt abject manner, that the Lord had blaſted their Counſels and had ſpit in their Faces.

Fleetwood omes into e deſires a free arl.

Decemb. 26. the Speaker and Members of Parliament then in Town met at Whitehall, and from thence walked together to the Parliament Houſe in the Evening. The next Morning, the Speaker ſent a Letter to General Monk, by order of the Houſe, with Thanks for his good Service, and with acknowlegement that the Reſtitution of their Authority was owing to his Fidelity, Care and Courage. Soon after they appointed Commiſſioners to order the Military Affairs, and ſent to Lambert to diſperſe his Forces. But to let the World know that they meant nothing of Monarchy; they provided that none ſhould ſit but ſuch as would take this Oath of Abjuration.

This Oath carried by a Majority was yet refuſed by at leaſt a third part of the Members, who were therefore compelled to leave the Houſe: And two of the moſt zealous for it, Scot and Robinſon, were ſent to meet the General upon the Road, to congratulate his coming, but with private directions to engage him to take the Oath. When the General came to Nottingham, his Brother Clarges met him, and in a private Conference acquainted him with the State of Affairs, and the trueſt way to do his Country Service. At Leiceſter he was met by Scot and Robinſon, who told him, that the Parliament had order'd 1000 l. a Year to be ſettled on him for ever; that they were ſenſible of his Services, were providing Money for his Soldiers, and were glad to hear of his Marching towards London. He then expected to be attack'd about the Oath of Adjuration, and was much troubled to think how to divert it. Clarges told him, he had a plain and full Anſwer to make them, which was, that he heard many Men of undoubted Integrity had refuſed it, and till he came to London to hear the Reaſons on both ſides, he could not in prudence reſolve upon it. This Advice he follow'd and ſucceeded in it.

At Harborough Alderman Fowke, Alderman Vincent and Mr. Bromfield met him as Commiſſioners from the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of London; who, after ſome Reſpects and Civilities, fell upon Particulars, and Mr. Bromfield in a ſet Speech, after enumerating the Calamities the Nation lay under, propoſed the Re-admiſſion of the ſecluded Members, that the Parliament might be full and free. To the ſame purpoſe were the Addreſſes from the Gentlemen of Northamptonſhire, Buckinghamſhire, Oxfordſhire, Norfolk and many other Counties; all which he received in a decent and reſpectful manner, but gave only dubious and ſuſpending Anſwers. By which Policy he merited this Character given of him. " He was a Man of deep Thoughts and few " Words; and what he wanted in Elocution he had " in Judgment; and he had a natural Secrecy in him, " prevalent upon all theſe Qualifications of a Sol- " dier, which made him ſo fit an Inſtrument in the " hand of Divine Providence to work his Majeſty's " Reſtauration. Hence he carried it all ſo cloſely " that I believe no Man to this Day can poſitively " ſay, that he deſigned any more than a general " Quiet of the Land: And ſo he framed his De- " ſigns ſuitable to the Opportunities that were gi- " ven him; but that he wiſh'd that that might be " procured by the means of his Majeſty's happy Re- " turn no Man can rationally doubt.

1659. Car. II.

Character of General Monk given by Sir Philip Warwick.

From St. Albans the General ſent a wiſe Letter to the Parliament, to remove all the Regiments out of London and Weſtminſter, except Colonel Fag's, for he thought it not for their Service, that thoſe Soldiers now in and about London, and lately in Rebellion againſt them, ſhould mingle with thoſe who had approved themſelves faithful to them. The Parliament readily complied with this Advice, but the Soldiers took it for ſuch a hardſhip to be turn'd out of Town, that they fell into a Mutiny, and made a Gariſon of Somerſet-Houſe, but by the aſſurance of a Months pay, and many fine Words, they were brought over, and march'd away on Saturday Morning Feb. 4. and in the ſame Afternoon the General enter'd the City at the head of three Regiments of Horſe, attended by his principal Officers, and many Perſons of Honour and Quality to Whitehall, provided for his Reception.

Gen. Monk writes to the Parl.

Comes to Whitehall.

On Monday Morning Feb. 6. he was invited to the Parliament Houſe, introduc'd by a Serjeant at Arms, and attended by his late Companions and Spies upon him, Scot and Robinſon. A Chair of Velvet was ſet for him on the left Hand within the Bar, and the Speaker deſired him to ſit down; but he excuſed himſelf and ſtood behind the Chair. Whilſt the Speaker in a ſet Speech magnified his Services and Merits, and gave him the Thanks of the Houſe. The General ſedately anſwer'd, " That he could not but extol the " Mercy of their Reſtitution, and acknowle ge the " goodneſs of God in making him Inſtrumental " therein, which was but his Duty, and deſerved not " the Honour they had done to him. That he had " received many Addreſſes in his Journey for a full " and free Parliament, and that this Parliament " would determine their Sitting: that he had an- " ſwer'd them, that as to the ſecluded Members, " this Parliament had already given their Judgment, " in which all ought to acquieſce; and that no Par- " liament had admitted new Members to ſit without " a previous Oath or Engagement: but he muſt " needs ſay to this Aſſembly, that the leſs Oaths " and Engagements are impoſed, the Settlement will " be the ſooner attained. He hop d the Parliament " would be careful that neither the Cavalier nor " Phanatick Party have yet a ſhare in the Civil or " Military Power. He concluded with ſpeaking of " Ireland and Scotland, who feared nothing more " than to be over-run with Phanatick Notions; he " deſired a Settlement there, and their Favour to " that Nation.

Goes to the Parl. Houſe.

Monk's Speech to the Parl.

This Speech had the influence intended by him that ſpoke it, which was to amuſe the Houſe, and to cover his own Deſigns: But a leading Party ſuſpected him, and reſolv'd to try him on this following occaſion. The City in Common-Council reſolved to pay no publick Taxes, till the Houſe was filled up with all legal Repreſentatives: For they

The Speech amuſes the Houſe.

1659. 11 Car. II. might indeed well think it unreasonable to be taxed by a Parliament, wherein they had then no Members sitting. The Council of State were so apprehensive of this beginning of a Rebellion against them, that they came to a Resolution, and sent it to the House, who past it into a Vote, "That the "Commissioners for government of the Army, do "appoint Forces to be in London for preserving the "Peace thereof, and of the Commonwealth, and "for reducing of the City to their Obedience to "Parliament. For executing this Vote, the General was order'd to enter the City next Morning with a sufficient part of the Army; to seize eleven of the most active Common-Council Men and commit them to the Tower; to pull down the City Posts and Chains, take down the Gates and Portcullices, and Quarter his Soldiers in the City till it was reduc'd to due Obedience. This severe Command was very surprizing to the General and his chief Officers, who were very unwilling to make themselves so odious to the City; and therefore Monk writes to the House to mitigate his Orders, or to let him suspend the execution of them; but they the more inflamed make their Directions the more positive. Upon this he advised with some of the most eminent Citizens, and giving secret Assurance that he would protect the City while he seem'd to dispoil it. He did literally execute the Order, but wisely turn'd the Odium of it upon the Parliament that so commanded. And to atone for this Action, he presently after writes a Letter to the House, and boldly complained of a Faction in it manag'd by Lambert, Vane and Ludlow; that they excluded many honest Men from serving the Publick, by tendering them Oaths which they could not take, and were guilty of many other Irregularities; and therefore he desired them by Friday next to issue our Writs to fill up their House, and then to rise at an appointed time May 6. to give place to a full and free Parliament.

Monk is order'd to chastise the City.

Executes the Order very wisely.

Sends to the Parl. to rise.

The Parl. angry.

The House dissembled their resentment of this Letter, and sent Scot to assure him of their high Opinion of his Services, and to recall him to his Lodgings at Whitehal. But he was now resolved to throw himself upon the City, and not yet to trust his Person near Westminster. This so enraged the House that they made an Act to put the Government of the Army into the Hands of new Commissioners, Monk, Hasserigge, Walton, Morley and Alvred, making three a Quorum, but denying a Motion that Monk should be of that Quorum. Upon this the next Day being Feb. 12. Monk drew up all his Forces in Finsbury Fields, met the Lord Mayor and Common-Council at Guild-Hall, went with them to hear a Sermon at Paul's, and dined with them at the Bull-head in Cheapside, the City giving all the Demonstrations of Joy in Bells and Bonfires.

Monk restores the secluded Members.

On Feb. 18 the General appointed a Conference to be held in his Quarters, of the Sitting and Secluded Members to agree upon the Re-admission of the latter. But it being much opposed by a majority of the sitting Party, the General resolved to do it by his own Strength, which he began now to understand: And therefore on the Tuesday following Feb. 21. he gave the Secluded Members a meeting at Whitehall; and in a short Speech recommended to them the Settlement of the Nation, and promised to impose nothing upon them, and then had them conducted to take their places in the House. The sitting Members knew nothing of this, till they saw the Secluded Members enter in and sit down among them; upon which, being much surprized, they demurr'd among themselves, whether they should quit the House or keep their Seats. After some hurry and confusion, the sticklers for a Commonwealth knowing their Cause would be now over-power'd, immediately departed in Spleen and Murmurs, while the more Moderate kept their Seats among the new admitted Members.

The Parl. thus fill'd up agree with Monk.

This new modell'd Parliament pass'd several Votes to expunge out of their Journals all Votes and Orders that disabled them from sitting; to release Mr. Vincent, Mr. Bromfield, and other Citizens who had been lately impriſon'd; to constitute Monk General of all the Forces in England, Scotland and Ireland; to dissolve the Council of State, and erect a new one consisting of one and thirty Persons; to repeal the Oath of Abjuration; to restore the Common-Council of London; to release the imprisoned Apprentices, and to set up again the Posts, Chains, Gates and Portcullices of the City: and finally to take off the File, and make void to all Intents and Purposes the Engagement to be true to the Commonwealth of England without a King or House of Lords; And a new Parliament to be summon'd to meet on Apr. 25. 1660.

1659. 11 Car. II.

Haslerig, Scot and other fierce Republicans, knowing well that these Proceedings tended to the Restoration of the King, had one part more of Hypocrisy and Villainy to Act, that was, to court the General (whom they mortally hated) to take upon himself the Dominion of the three Kingdoms; telling him, that the Parliaments Actions tended to ruin him and all the good People of England: Your destruction, say they, must needs succeed the King's Admission; for a Merit too great to be rewarded can have no Recompence but Death. Remember Stanley, who set the Crown upon Henry VII's Head, he had his own struck off upon frivolous Pretences, when the true Reason was excess of Merit. Nay, and they had drawn in the French Ambassador into this Intrigue, who in a most perfidious manner (as Sir Philip Warwick tells us) "Having "winded this Proposition, finds means for a Con- "ference with Clarges, and to desire by him to as- "sure the General, that if he had any Aim to as- "sume the Government himself, his Master would "be a very steddy Friend to him. But tho' this "wise General admitted a respectful Conference "with him, yet he made him soon perceive he was "not susceptible of French Counsels. To all these Sollicitations the General made Answer, That the Parliament were best Judges of their own Proceedings; and as to taking the Government upon himself, he said, The Experience of Cromwel's Fate gave him sufficient Reasons to shun that Rock on which that Family was Shipwrack'd. They reply'd, That Oliver usurp'd the Government against the Suffrage of the Army, and the Consent of the People, whereas he should have it by an unanimous Submission, and under what Name or Title he would please to accept it: But he had the Honour and the Wit to overcome all Temptation.

Monk now courted to be the single Person in a new Government.

So tempted by the French Ambassador.

But he overcame all Temptations.

And yet tho' all things seem'd thus to concur toward the Restauration of the King, yet the Name of an English Parliament was so terrible abroad, that neither France nor Spain durst venture to give King Charles the least Assistance to regain his Throne; but on the contrary were obliged to treat him in a manner altogether unworthy of a crown'd Head, as appears in the following Instances at the Treaty of the Pyrenees. The King after having in vain sought a Sanctuary in France, was necessitated to throw himself upon the Friendship of Spain: He was at Brussels when he received the News of the Disposition that was in England, just at the time the Conferences were to begin between Cardinal Mazarine and Don Lewis de Haro, the two Plenipotentiaries of France and Spain. This determin'd King Charles to take post from Brussels thro' France to the place of Treaty, that he might in Person represent his Interests to these two Ministers. He judg'd the Spaniards had reason to be Enemies to the then Government in England, for not only having taken Dunkirk and Jamaica from them, and enter'd into a League with Portugal against them, but for endeavouring all that was possible to perswade the French to continue the War. Upon the other hand it was but reasonable to think, that France could not be well pleased to see the English Master of such a Frontier Town as Dunkirk, or that Mazarine, the most Ambitious Man upon Earth, would not be willing to raise his own Glory, by espousing the Cause of an exil'd Prince, especially when there was so great probability of Success. But not-

The poor King could have no assistance from Spain or France.

with-

1659. 11 Car. II. withſtanding all theſe plauſible Appearances, King Charles made this long Journey to no purpoſe; it's true Don Lewis de Haro receiv'd him with all poſſible Marks of Reſpect; but the Cardinal poſitively deny'd him Acceſs. All he could be brought to after ſeveral Meſſages from the King, was to allow the Duke of Ormond to talk to him upon the Road from St. Jean de Luz to the place of Treaty, as if it had been but an accidental Rencounter. Ormond obtained nothing of the Cardinal but general and ambiguous Anſwers, till being preſs'd, he told Ormond plainly, That all his Maſter could do for his Couſin the King of England, was to compaſſionate his Misfortunes, as not being in a Condition himſelf to break with the Government of England, with which his Affairs obliged him to keep a good Correſpondence. Over and above this neglect of Mazarine's, King Charles had the Mortification to ſee Ambaſſador Lockhart received at the ſame time with the greateſt Pomp and Splendor, having the Cardinal's Coaches and Guards ſent a Days Journey to receive him, and the Cardinal giving him the Right-hand, which was a Reſpect he denied the Ambaſſadors of crown'd Heads: Nor was Don Lewis kinder upon the matter to King Charles, notwithſtanding all his Civilities; for having ask'd the Command of the Army in Flanders, which the Prince of Conde was by the Treaty obliged to quit, Don Lewis refuſed it: All which will be a laſting Example to Poſterity, how little truſt is to be repoſed in Foreign Aid when a Prince comes to need it, for recovering his Throne. But indeed it ſeems probable that all theſe Slights put upon King Charles, were a Political Feint to hide the ſecret Intrigue of their mutual Aſſiſtance to be lent to him for Recovery of his Kingdoms, upon Conditions very prejudicial to the Intereſt of the Reformation, as we ſhall have occaſion to obſerve in the view of Religion this Year.

Pyrenean Treaty.

In the mean time it ought to be farther obſerv'd, that this famous Pyrenean Treaty of a Peace between France and Spain, was concluded in a Match between the young French King and the eldeſt Daughter or Infanta of Spain, the younger Siſter being afterward married to Leopold Emperor of Germany, both ſo diſpoſed before the Birth of their Brother, who lived to be the poor weak King of Spain. But as this Treaty was made in the deepeſt Diſſimulation and Treachery, ſo almoſt every Article of it was violated by the French; in reſpect to Portugal, to the Prince of Conde, to the Duke of Lorrain, and in all likelihood in reſpect to England, and with a reference to moſt other Things and Perſons. Even the main Article of all, and without which the Spaniards would never have endur'd the Match, was for the Infanta, before and after Marriage, to diſclaim for herſelf and her Heirs, all manner of Right and Title to the Kingdom of Spain, or any of its Dominions. And yet this that was the Cement of all the other Articles, has been now at laſt moſt ſhamefully broken. Under ſuch a ſcene of perfidiouſneſs it was the leſs wonder, that Mazarine ſhould deal ſo inhumanly by King Charles, and ſhould even inſtruct the French Ambaſſador Bourdeaux in England to hinder the King's return, and even to ſet up another Uſurper againſt him: But French Politicks have been alway falſe and fatal to the true Intereſt of our Engliſh Monarchy. Another Inference is, that the good Providence of God ſo contrived to repair the Honour of this Nation, as to make the King's return be entirely owing to the Hearts of his People, and not at all to any Foreign Aid.

The King ſends Sir John Granville to Monk.

Affairs at home looking favourably upon the King's Intereſt, he ſent Sir John Granville to General Monk, who knowing his wary Temper, made uſe of his Neighbour Mr. William Morris to introduce him; Mr. Morris acquainted the General with it, who made Anſwer, that unleſs he would ſend him Information of his Buſineſs by him, he could not admit of any Interview between them. Mr. Morris told him, he had already propoſed that to him, but he refuſed it. The General approving this Reſervedneſs in Sir John, order'd him to come to him at St. James's, by nine in the Evening. Accordingly Granville came, and begging Pardon for his Importunity, deſired leave to deliver a Meſſage to him from the King. The General ſeem'd ſurpriz'd at this; but being alone, bid him ſay what he pleaſed. Then Sir John preſented a Letter to him from the King, and told him, that his Majeſty had great Confidence in him; and ſince he had ſo far comply'd with the Deſires of the Kingdom, for the admiſſion of the Secluded Members, in order to a free Parliament, the conſequences of it could be no leſs than the Reſtauration of his Majeſty, if he concurr'd with their Councils. The General reply'd, "That he had long "lamented the Miſeries of his Country, and waited "an opportunity to redeem them from Vaſſalage: "And as to the King's Majeſty, none wiſhed him "greater Felicity than he did, or with greater Paſſion deſired his Reſtauration; but if it were not "cautiouſly attempted, it would be out of his Power "to ſerve him in it: And therefore he muſt conjure "him to acquaint no Perſon with it but the King, "and deſire his Majeſty alſo to conceal it. But "above all, he muſt intreat him to deſire the King "to remove out of the King of Spain's Dominions "to Breda; for he had certain Intelligence he would "otherwiſe be detained by the King of Spain's Mi-"niſters. Sir John return'd with this kind Meſſage and good Advice to the King, who accordingly retired to Breda.

1659. 11 Car. II.

State of Religion.

Under all theſe Convulſions in the State, the Affairs of Religion were ſubject to the ſame Diſtemper. The Independents were all zealous for a Commonwealth; but the Presbyterians who had been outwitted and overpower'd by thoſe younger Brethren, were for the Parliament in oppoſition to the Army, and for the Reſtitution of the Secluded Members; and had ſhewn themſelves generally inclined to the Riſing of Sir George Booth, and to all the Meaſures of General Monk, even to the Reſtauration of the King. When the Members of the Long Parliament were reſtored, the Enthuſiaſtick People preferr'd a Petition to them againſt Tythes; but the Houſe calmly voted June 27. That for the Encouragement of a godly Preaching Learned Miniſtry throughout the Nation, the payment of Tythes ſhall continue as now they are, unleſs this Parliament ſhall find out ſome other more equal and comfortable Maintenance, both for the Miniſtry and for the Satisfaction of the People. The Independents to ingratiate themſelves with this Parliament and their Council of State, in the name of the Congregational Churches, deſired leave to raiſe three Regiments for the Parliament againſt Sir George Booth and the Royaliſts then in Arms, and had their willing conſent to it. For which they got a Vote of the Houſe Octob. 10. for Liberty of Conſcience. After the Secluded Members were reſtored by Monk, all things run on the Presbyterian ſide. On March 2. the Confeſſion of Faith of the Aſſembly of Divines was agreed unto by the Houſe, except the 30th and 31ſt Chapters, which are touching Church-Cenſures and Synods; and an Act paſt for the eſtabliſhing that Confeſſion on March 5. and the ſame Day an Order was granted for printing and ſetting up in Churches the Solemn League and Covenant, which did now really conduce to the bringing in the Son, as it had formerly done for driving out the Father: And yet the Act for the Militia was not ſuffered to paſs March 10. without a Clauſe for every Commiſſioner to acknowledge and declare, that the War undertaken by both Houſes of Parliament, in their Defence againſt the Forces raiſed in the name of the late King, was juſt and lawful; and that Magiſtracy and Miniſtry are the Ordinances of God. And to ſhew their diſpleaſure againſt Dr. John Owen, the beloved Chaplain of Cromwel, the Trumpet of his Uſurpation, and the Head of the Independent Party, there was a Vote of the Houſe March 13. to diſcharge the ſaid Dr. Owen from being any longer Dean of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, and for putting Dr. Edward Reynolds a Presbyterian into

Presbyterians beſt diſpoſed to the K.

Independents the greater Rebels.

Presbytery revives.

Dr. Owen turn'd out.

1659. 11 Car. II. into that good place. For the Independents were known to be ſo averſe to Monarchy, and even to a Free Parliament, that they loſt all manner of Intereſt in General Monk, who had the more Experience of their Jealouſies of him, by what he found in Scotland upon his firſt deſign of Marching into England. For then the Army-Party ſent their Commiſſioners to him; and, in the Words of Sir Phil. Warwick, " The Men of God who had decried and out-
Independent Preachers great Incendiaries " ed the Biſhops for meddling with any thing that " was Secular, Civil, or Military, from the very " Beginning of theſe Revolutions, are the active In-" ſtruments in all important Secular or Military " Affairs. And therefore now Mr. Caryl (a great " Independent Miniſter) is principally to manage " this Affair with Monk; and he is to let him " know how fatal ſuch a Breach as was like to be, " would prove to the People of God; that the Inde-" pendent Churches would not interpoſe, or juſtify " the Right of either Party; but they thought fit " to lay before Monk, that his Province was only " to keep Scotland quiet, and not to engage in the " Differences of England; and therefore ſince he " could not have any true Information of the State " of Affairs, and had not any Call thereto, it be-" came him not to interpoſe.

Great Attempts to pervert the King to Popery. There were, undoubtedly, great Endeavours to pervert the King to the Popiſh Religion: And it is much fear'd, that in the great Treaty this Year between the two Crowns of France and Spain, the King was drawn into ſome Articles and Meaſures which were happily broken.

Secret Intrigue in the Pyrenean Treaty. The King's Negotiation in this Treaty was kept a Secret; but there is too much Suſpicion of the Intrigues of it. My Lord Clarendon would let fall no other Intimation than what he gave in theſe Words: It is believ'd by wiſe Men, that in that Treaty ſomewhat was agreed to the Prejudice of the Proteſtant Intereſt. Which could hardly be leſs than a Promiſe of the King to eſtabliſh or at leaſt to tolerate Popery in England, and to ſet the Example of it in his own Perſon, upon condition he ſhould be reſtor'd to his Crowns by the united Powers of France and Spain. The way of my Lord Clarendon's introducing and ſupporting his foreſaid Belief of Wiſe Men, is ſome Key to underſtand the Meaning of what he intended to conceal. Speaking of the King's Journey to the Place of Treaty, where Sir Harry Bennet was preparing Terms for him; he ſays, " When the Marquis " of Ormond diſcover'd, by the Information he re-" ceiv'd at Toulouſe, that the Treaty was ſo near an " end, he made all poſſible haſte to the Place the " King had appointed to meet at, that his Majeſty " might loſe no more time. When he came thither " he found no body; which he imputed to the uſu-" al Delays in their Journey, and ſtay'd one whole " Day in expectation of them; but then concluded, " that they were gone forward ſome other way, and " ſo thought it his Buſineſs to haſten to Fuentarabia, " where he heard nothing of the King. Sir Harry " Bennet was in great perplexity, and complain'd " very reaſonably, that the King neglected his own " Buſineſs in ſuch a Conjuncture; the Benefit where-" of was loſt by his not coming. Don Lewis ſeem'd " to wonder that the King had not come thither, " whilſt the Cardinal and he were together. The " Treaty was now concluded; and though the Car-" dinal remain'd ſtill at his old Quarters on the " French ſide, under ſome Indiſpoſition of the Gout, " yet he and Don Lewis were to meet no more: But " Don Lewis was the leſs troubled that the King " had not come ſooner, becauſe he had found the " Cardinal, as often as he had taken occaſion to " ſpeak of the King, very cold and reſerv'd; and " he had magnify'd the Power of the Parliament, " and ſeem'd to think his Majeſty's Hopes deſpe-" rate; and adviſed Don Lewis, to be wary how " he embarked himſelf in an Affair that had no " Foundation; and, that it was rather time for all " Catholicks to unite to the breaking the Power and " Intereſt of the Heretical Party, where-ever it 1659. " was, than to ſtrengthen it by reſtoring the King, 11 Car. II. " except he would become Catholick. And it is believ'd " by wiſe Men, that in that Treaty ſomewhat was agreed " to the Prejudice of the Proteſtant Intereſt; and that " in a ſhort time there would have been much done " againſt it both in France and Germany, if the Mea-" ſures they had there taken had not been ſhortly " broken, chiefly by the ſurpriſing Revolution in " England (which happen'd the next Year) and al-" ſo by the Death of the two great Favourites of " the two Crowns, Don Lewis de Haro and Cardinal " Mazarin, who both died not very long after it; " the Cardinal probably ſtruck with the Wonder, if " not with the Agony of that undream'd-of Proſpe-" rity of our King's Affairs; as if he had taken it " ill, and laid it to heart, that God Almighty would " bring ſuch a Work to paſs in Europe without his " Concurrence, and even againſt all his Machinati-" ons. From this Relation thus cautiouſly given on purpoſe to cover an invidious Truth, I think it is too plain, that what was agreed to the prejudice of the Proteſtant Religion, was for King Charles to become a Profeſſor, or at leaſt a ſworn Favourer of Popery. That nothing could have broke theſe Meaſures, but the ſurprizing Revolution in England; and that ſuch a providential Reſtoration of the King without the propoſed Terms of bringing in Popery with him, was the great Diſappointment, and almoſt the very Death of Cardinal Mazarin, the ſame Author does a little more explain himſelf, when he ſoon after adds, " That ſome about the King began to think " of providing a Religion, as well as other Conve-" niences, that might be grateful to thoſe People " and Places, where and with whom they were like " to reſide. The Proteſtant Religion was found to " be very unagreeable to their Fortune, and they " exerciſed their Thoughts moſt how to get hand-" ſomly from it; and if it had not been for the " King's own Steadineſs, of which he gave great In-" dications, Men would have been more out of " Countenance to have owned the Faith they were " of; and many made little doubt, but that it " would ſhortly be very manifeſt to the King, that " his Reſtoration depended wholly upon a Conjun-" ction of Catholick Princes, who could never be " united but on the behalf of Catholick Religion. It is matter of Fact, that upon this Peace between France and Spain, both thoſe Crowns did immediately begin to encourage and aſſiſt the King with Money and Men, and advanc'd great Promiſes to him, which ſeems to have been done upon the Foot of ſecret Articles. It is farther certain, that the Earl of Briſtol, who was the King's Companion and Guide to the Place of this Treaty, and Sir Harry Bennet who was the prime Agent for the King, did both of them turn Papiſts about this time; as if they did it upon a Compact then made. And there is a Story to confirm all, which I have reaſon to think true. Sir Harry Bennet was ſoon after ſeen to wait upon the King from Maſs; at which ſight the Lord Culpeper had ſo much Indignation, that he went up to Bennet, and ſpoke to this effect: I ſee what you are at: Is this the way to bring our Maſter home to his three Kingdoms? Well, Sir, if ever you and I live to ſee England together, I will have your Head, or you ſhall have mine. Which Words ſtruck ſuch a Terror upon Sir Harry Bennet, that he never dared to ſet Foot in England till after the Death of the Lord Culpeper, who met with a very abrupt Death within few Months after the King's Return. When he was taken out of the way, Sir Harry Bennet came to Court, and ſoon aroſe into Honours and Prefermets, and was in Diſguiſe a meer Creature of the Papiſts, and had the dying Courage to take off that Diſguiſe.

Lambert, upon the Complaint made againſt him 1660. by General Monk, had for ſome time abſconded; but finding no Hopes in ſtanding out, he ſurrender'd himſelf to the new Council of State: and upon his Refuſal to give Security for his quiet Deportment,

1660. 12 Car. II.

ment, he was by them committed to the Tower; from whence he made his Escape, and in the beginning of April got into Northamptonshire, and pick'd up all the discontented Officers and Soldiers, till he had got together about seven Troops of Horse and a Company of Foot. General Monk, upon Intelligence of his intended Rendezvous at Edgehill, was preparing to march out against him: but when he heard that his Party was but inconsiderable, he sent Colonel Ingoldsby and Streater to Northampton to watch his Motions, and with due Caution to fall upon him. They hearing that Lambert was at Daventry, march'd thither; and there being informed that he lay two Miles off, they hasten'd after him, and came up to him in a plain Field, where a little Brook parted them. The two Parties fac'd one another near four Hours: When they came to advance, and were beginning to charge, Lambert's Men held the Muzzles of their Pistols toward the Ground, and the Troops of Hazlerig and Nelthorp came over to Ingoldsby. Lambert desir'd a Parley, and moved that Richard might be restor'd to the Protectorship: But he was answered, that He himself was one of those who pull'd down Richard, and therefore he was the more unfit to set him up again; however, that they had no Commission to dispute, but to reduce him and his Party. Then Ingoldsby rode up to Lambert, and told him he was his Prisoner; whereupon Major Creed and other Officers intreated him to do what he pleased with them, but to let Lambert escape: which Ingoldsby absolutely refusing, Lambert turned his Horse, and attempted to escape: but Ingoldsby pursu'd him so close, that he quickly came up with him, vowing to pistol him if he did not yield immediately. Lambert, in great dejection of Mind, twice begg'd him to let him escape: but when he saw he could not prevail, he submitted, as all the rest did except Colonel Okey, Colonel Axtel, and Captain Clare, who made their Escapes.

Lambert escapes and takes Arms.

His Party subdu'd.

And he taken.

This Defeat was seconded with the good News of the Submission of the Fleet, brought about by Mountague, who by Monk's Advice had been made one of the Generals at Sea, who wrote an Account to the Council of State, "That Vice-Admiral Lawson and "the whole Navy had received him with great Sa- "tisfaction, and were all peaceably inclin'd, and "resolved to submit to the Determination of the "next Parliament. There was such a general Disposition to the King, as the only Deliverer from Feuds and Wars, that many of the profess'd Royalists were chosen Members of the House of Commons; and the Lords, who had been long deny'd a fundamental Right, met now with a full Sense, that they had not been themselves restored without a prospect of the King's Restoration. And at this same juncture there was publish'd, A Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry that had adhered to the late King; mildly and affectionately worded for composing all Differences, and burying all former Animosities.

Submission of the Fleet.

All things end to the King's Interest.

Under this promising Aspect, the two Houses of Lords and Commons began their Convention on April 25. meeting both at St. Margaret's Westminster, where Dr. Reynolds Preach'd; and after Sermon they went to their several Houses, and the Commons chose Sir Harbottle Grimstone for their Speaker. On the 26th they order'd a Day of solemn Thanksgiving to God for raising up General Monk and other blessed Instruments in the Delivery of this Nation from Thraldom and Misery. And then they order'd their Thanks to be presented in a publick manner to the General, for his great Wisdom and unparallell'd Services to this Nation. On the 27th Sir John Granville attended the General, and presented him with a Letter from his Majesty, to be communicated to the Council of State and the Officers of the Army, with a Commission from his Majesty, constituting him Captain General of all the Armies in England, Scotland, and Ireland. On May 1. Sir John Granville went to the House of Lords, and sent in word, that he had a Letter for their Lordships from the King: which the Earl of Manchester their Speaker, going down to the Clerk, received; and it was read in these Words:

Convention meets Apr. 25.

Letters from the King.

1660. 12 Car. II.

Charles R.

"RIght-trusty and well-beloved Cousins, We "greet you well. We cannot have a better "Reason to promise Ourself an End of our common "Sufferings and Calamities, and that our own just "Power and Authority will, with God's Blessing, "be restored to us; than that we hear you are a- "gain acknowledg'd to have that Authority and "Jurisdiction which hath always belong'd unto you "by your Births, and the fundamental Laws of the "Land. And We have thought it very fit and safe "for Us to call to you for your Help in composing "the Distempers and Distractions of the Kingdom, "in which your Sufferings are next to those we have "undergone Ourselves; and therefore you cannot "but be the most proper Counsellors for removing "these Mischiefs, and for preventing the like for "the future. How great a Trust We repose in you, "for the Restoring and Establishing a blessed Peace "and Security in the Kingdom, will appear to you "by our enclosed Declaration; which Trust, we are "most confident you will discharge with Justice "and Wisdom that becomes you, and must always "be expected from you: And that upon experience, "how one Violation succeeds another when the "known Relations and Rules of Justice are once "transgressed, you will be as zealous for the Rights "of the Crown, and for the Honour of your King, "as for Yourselves. And then you cannot but dis- "charge with good Success, and provide for and "establish the Peace, Happiness, and Honour of "King, Lords, and Commons, upon that Founda- "tion which only can support it; and we shall all "be happy in each other. And as the whole Na- "tion will bless God for you all, so We shall hold "Ourselves obliged, in an especial manner, to "thank you in particular, according to the Affe- "ction you shall express towards us. We need the "less to enlarge upon this Subject, because We have "likewise writ to the House of Commons, which "We suppose they will communicate to you. And "we pray God to bless your joint Endeavours, for "the Good of us all; and so We bid you very hear- "tily farewel.

Given at our Court of Breda this 14*th of* Apr. 1660. in the 12*th Year of our Reign.*

The Declaration enclosed was under this Title and Form.

His Majesty's gracious Declaration to all his Loving Subjects.

Charles R.

"CHarles, by the Grace of God King of England, His Majesty's Declaration. "Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of "the Faith, &c. To all our loving Subjects of what "Degree or Quality soever, greeting. If the gene- "ral Distraction and Confusion which is spread over "the whole Kingdom, doth not awaken all Men to "a Desire and Longing that those Wounds which "have for so many Years together been kept bleed- "ing, may be bound up; all we can say will be to "no purpose. However, after this long Silence, we "have thought it our Duty to declare, how much "we desire to contribute thereunto: And that, as "we can never give over the Hope in good time to "obtain the Possession of that Right which God "and Nature hath made our due; so we do make "it our daily Suit to the Divine Providence, that "he will, in Compassion to us and our Subjects, "after so long Misery and Sufferings, remit and put "us into a quiet and peaceable Possession of that "our Right with as little Blood and Damage to our "People as is possible. Nor do we desire more to "enjoy what is ours, than that all our Subjects may

1660. 12 Car. II. " may enjoy what by Law is theirs, by a full and " entire Adminiſtration of Juſtice throughout the " Land, and by extending our Mercy where it is " wanted and deſerved.

" And to the end that the fear of Puniſhment may " not engage any conſcious to themſelves of what is " paſt, to a Perſeverance in Guilt for the future, by " oppoſing the Quiet and Happineſs of their Coun- " try, in the Reſtoration both of King, Peers and " People, to their juſt, ancient and fundamental " Rights: We do by theſe Preſents declare, that we " do grant a free and general Pardon, which we " are ready upon Demand to paſs under our Great " Seal of England, to all our Subjects of what De- " gree or Quality ſoever, who within forty Days " after the publiſhing hereof, ſhall lay hold upon " this our Grace and Favour, and ſhall by any pub- " lick Act declare their doing ſo, and that they re- " turn to the Loyalty and Obedience of good Sub- " jects, excepting only ſuch Perſons as ſhall hereaf- " ter be excepted by Parliament: thoſe only excep- " ted, let all our Subjects, how faulty ſoever, rely " upon the Word of a King, ſolemnly given by this " preſent Declaration, that no Crime whatſoever, " committed againſt us, or our Royal Father, be- " fore the Publication of this, ſhall ever riſe in " Judgment, or be brought in Queſtion againſt any " of them, to the leaſt endammagement of them, " either in their Lives, Liberties or Eſtates, or as " far forth as lies in our Power, ſo much as to the " prejudice of their Reputations, by any Reproach " or term of Diſtinction from the reſt of our beſt " Subjects: We Deſiring and Ordaining, that hence- " forward all Notes of Diſcord, Separation and dif- " ference of Parties, be utterly aboliſhed among all " our Subjects; whom we invite and conjure to a " perfect Union among themſelves, under our Pro- " tection for the Reſettlement of our juſt Rights " and theirs in a free Parliament, by which, upon the " Word of a King, we will be adviſed.

" And becauſe the Paſſion and Uncharitableneſs " of the Times have produc'd ſeveral Opinions in " Religion, by which Men are engaged in Parties " and Animoſities againſt each other, which when " they ſhall hereafter unite in a freedom of Conver- " ſation, will be compoſed or better underſtood: " We do declare a Liberty to tender Conſciences, " and that no Man ſhall be diſquieted or called in " Queſtion for Differences of Opinion in matter of " Religion, which do not diſturb the Peace of the " Kingdom; and that we ſhall be ready to conſent " to ſuch an Act of Parliament, as upon mature De- " liberation ſhall be offer'd to us, for the full gran- " ting that Indulgence.

" And becauſe in the continued Diſtractions of ſo " many Years, and ſo many and great Revolutions, " many Grants and Purchaſes of Eſtates have been " made to and by many Officers, Soldiers and o- " thers, who are now poſſeſſed of the ſame, and who " may be liable to Actions at Law upon ſeveral Ti- " tles; we are likewiſe willing that all ſuch Dif- " ferences, and all things relating to ſuch Grants, " Sales and Purchaſes, ſhall be determined in Par- " liament, which can beſt provide for the juſt Sa- " tisfaction of all Men who are concered.

" And we do farther declare, that we will be " ready to conſent to any Act or Acts of Parliament " to the purpoſes aforeſaid, and for the full Satis- " faction of all Arrears due to the Officers and Sol- " diers of the Army under the Command of General " Monk, and that they ſhall be received into our " Service, upon as good Pay and Conditions as they " now enjoy. Given under our Sign Manual and " Privy Signet, at our Court of Breda this $\frac{14}{24}$ Day " of April 1660, in the twelfth Year of our Reign.

Votes of the Lords. The Letter and Declaration being read, the Lords order'd Thanks to be given to Sir John Granville for bringing of them, and reſolv'd by Vote, that they do own and declare, that according to the ancient and fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, the Government is, and ought to be by King, Lords and Commons: And therefore they deſired, that ſome way be conſider'd how to make up the Breaches, and to obtain the King's return again unto his People.

1660. 12 Car. II.

Then Sir John Granville went to the Houſe of Commons, and upon notice of his attending at the Door, was called in, and preſented a Letter with a Duplicate of the ſame Declaration encloſed and ſuperſcribed.

K.'s Letter to the Commons

To our Truſty and Well-beloved the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

Charles R.

" TRuſty and well-beloved we Greet you well. " In theſe great and inſupportable Afflictions " and Calamities under which the poor Nation hath " been ſo long exerciſed, and by which it is ſo near " exhauſted, we cannot think of a more natural " and proper Remedy, than to reſort to thoſe for " Counſel and Advice, who have ſeen and obſerv'd " the firſt beginning of our Miſeries, the progreſs " from bad to worſe, and the Miſtakes and Miſun- " derſtandings which have produc'd and contribu- " ted to Inconveniencies which were not intended: " And after ſo many Revolutions, and the obſerva- " tion of what hath attended them, are now truſted " by our good Subjects to repair the Breaches which " are made, and to provide proper Remedies for " thoſe Evils, and for the laſting Peace, Happi- " neſs and Security of the Kingdom. We do aſſure " you upon our Royal Word, that none of our " Predeceſſors have had a greater Eſteem of Parlia- " ments than we have, in our Judgment as well as " from our Obligation. We do believe them to be " ſo vital a part of the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, " and ſo neceſſary for the government of it, that " we well know, neither Prince nor People can be " in any tolerable degree happy without them: And " therefore you may be confident that we ſhall al- " ways look upon their Counſels as the beſt we " can receive; and ſhall be as tender of their Pri- " viledges, and as careful to preſerve and protect " them, as of that which is moſt near to our ſelf, " and moſt neceſſary for our own Preſervation.

" And as this is our Opinion of Parliaments, that " their Authority is moſt neceſſary for the Govern- " ment of the Kingdom, ſo we are moſt confident " that you believe and find, that the preſervation " of the King's Authority is as neceſſary for the pre- " ſervation of Parliaments; and that it is not the " Name but the right Conſtitution of them which " can prepare and apply proper Remedies for thoſe " Evils, which are grievous to the People, and which " can thereby eſtabliſh their Peace and Security. " And therefore we have not the leaſt doubt, but " that you will be as tender in, and as zealous of, " any thing that may infringe our Honour, or im- " pair our Authority, as of your own Liberty and " Property, which is beſt preſerved by preſerving " the other.

" How far we have truſted you in this great Af- " fair, and how much it is in your Power to re- " ſtore the Nation to all that it hath loſt, and to re- " deem it from any infamy it hath undergone, and " to make King and People as Happy as they ought " to be, you will find by our encloſed Declaration " (a Copy of which we have likewiſe ſent to the " Houſe of Peers) and you will eaſily believe, that " we would not voluntarily, and of our ſelf, have " repoſed ſo great a Truſt in you but upon an en- " tire confidence that you will not abuſe it; and " that you will proceed in ſuch a manner, and with " ſuch due conſideration of us who have truſted you, " that we ſhall not be aſhamed of declining other " Aſſiſtance (which we have aſſurance of) and re- " pairing to you for more natural and proper Reme- " dies, for the Evils we would be freed from; nor " ſorry that we have bound up our own Intereſt ſo

" intirely

1660. 12 Car. II.

" intirely with that of our Subjects, as that we refer it to the ſame Perſons to take care of us who " are truſted to provide for them.

" We look upon you as Wiſe and Diſpaſſionate " Men, and good Patriots, who will raiſe up thoſe " Banks and Fences which have been caſt down, " and who will moſt reaſonably hope the ſame Proſperity will again ſpring from thoſe Roots from " which it hath heretofore and always grown. Nor " can we apprehend that you will propoſe any thing " to us, or expect any thing from us, but what we " are as ready to give as you to receive. If you deſire the advancement and propagation of the Proteſtant Religion, we have by our conſtant Profeſſion and Practice of it, given ſufficient teſtimony " to the World, that neither the unkindneſs of thoſe " of the ſame Faith towards us, nor the Civilities " and Obligations of thoſe of a contrary Profeſſion " (of both which we have had abundant Evidence) " could in the leaſt degree ſtartle us, or make us " ſwerve from it: And nothing can be propoſed to " manifeſt our Zeal and Affection for it, to which " we will not readily conſent. And we hope in " due time our ſelf to propoſe ſomewhat to you for " the propagation of it, that will ſatisfie the World " that we have always made it both our Care and " our Study, and have enough obſerv'd, what is " moſt like to bring diſadvantage to it.

" If you deſire ſecurity for thoſe, who in theſe " calamitous times, either wilfully or weakly have " tranſgreſſed thoſe bounds which were preſcrib'd, " and have invaded each others Rights; we have " left to you to provide for their Security and Indemnity, and in ſuch a way as you ſhall think " juſt and reaſonable, and by a juſt computation of " what Men have done and ſuffer'd, as near as is " poſſible, to take care that all Men be ſatisfied, " which is the ſureſt way to ſuppreſs and extirpate " all ſuch Uncharitableneſs and Animoſity, as " might hereafter ſhake and threaten that Peace, " which for the preſent might ſeem eſtabliſhed. If " there be a crying Sin, for which the Nation may " be involved in the Infamy that attends it. We " cannot doubt but that you will be as ſollicitous to " redeem and vindicate the Nation from that Guilt " and Infamy as we can be.

" If you deſire that Reverence and Obedience may " be paid to the fundamental Laws of the Land, " and that Juſtice may be equally and impartially " adminiſter'd to all Men; it is that which we deſire to be ſworn to ourſelf, and that all Perſons " in Power and Authority ſhould be ſo too.

" In a Word, there is nothing that you can propoſe, that may make the Kingdom Happy, which " we will not contend with you to compaſs; and " upon this Confidence and Aſſurance, we have " thought fit to ſend you this Declaration, that " you may, as much as is poſſible, at this diſtance, " ſee our Heart, which when God ſhall bring us " nearer together (as we hope he will do ſhortly) " will appear to you very agreeable to what we " have profeſſed; and we hope that we have made " that right Chriſtian uſe of our Affliction, and that " the Obſervation and Experience we have had in " other Countries, hath been ſuch as that we, and " we hope all our Subjects, ſhall be the better for " we have ſeen and ſuffer'd.

" We ſhall add no more but our Prayers to Almighty God, that he will ſo bleſs your Counſels " and direct your Endeavours, that his Glory and " Worſhip may be provided for, and the Peace, Honour and Happineſs of the Nation may be eſtabliſhed upon thoſe Foundations which can beſt " ſupport it: And ſo we bid you farewel. Given " at our Court at Breda this $\frac{4}{14}$ Day of April 1660. " in the twelfth Year of our Reign.

Votes of the Commons.

After the Reading his Majeſty's Letter and Declaration in the Houſe of Commons Tueſday May 1. they immediately reſolv'd, Nemine contradicente, that a Committee be appointed to prepare an Anſwer to his Majeſty's Letter, expreſſing the great and joyful ſenſe of this Houſe of his gracious Offers, and their humble and hearty Thanks to his Majeſty for the ſame; and with profeſſions of their Loyalty and Duty to his Majeſty; and that this Houſe will give a ſpeedy Anſwer to his Majeſty's gracious Propoſals. Then the Houſe took into conſideration, that the King being long deprived of his Revenue, might be in want of Money, and therefore order'd that fifty thouſand Pounds ſhould be ſpeedily raiſed and preſented to his Majeſty, with ten thouſand to the Duke of York, and five thouſand to the Duke of Glouceſter.

1660. 12 Car. II.

Money given.

Anſwers of the 2 Houſes.

The Lords and Commons appointed their ſeveral Committees to draw up their reſpective Anſwers to his Majeſty's Letters, and reſolv'd that the Superſcription ſhould be, To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty; and order'd that all the Acts and Orders ſhould be raz'd out of the Journals, that were inconſiſtent with the Government of King, Lords and Commons. Both Houſes having drawn up their Anſwers, ſix Lords and twelve Commoners were appointed to attend his Majeſty with them, and to deſire his Majeſty to make a ſpeedy Return to his Parliament, and to his Kingly Office. On Monday May 7. it was reſolv'd by both Houſes that the King be Proclaimed to Morrow, which was done by this Form of Proclamation.

Form of Proclaiming the K.

Altho' it can no way be doubted, but that his Majeſty's Right and Title to theſe Crowns and Kingdoms is and was every way compleat by the Death of his moſt Royal Father of glorious Memory, without the Ceremony or Solemnity of a Proclamation: Yet ſince Proclamations in ſuch Caſes have been always uſed, to the end that all good Subjects might upon this occaſion teſtify their Duty and Reſpect; and ſince the armed Violence, and other the Calamities of many Years laſt paſt, have hitherto depriv'd us of any opportunity, wherein we might expreſs our Loyalty and Allegiance to his Majeſty: We therefore the Lords and Commons now aſſembled in Parliament, together with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of the City of London, and other Freemen of this Kingdom now preſent, do according to our Duty and Allegiance heartily, joyfully and unanimouſly acknowledge and proclaim, that immediately upon the Deceaſe of our late Sovereign King Charles I. the Imperial Crown of the Realm of England, and of all the Kingdoms, Dominions and Rights belonging to the ſame, did by inherent Birthright and lawful undoubted Succeſſion deſcend and come to his moſt excellent Majeſty King Charles II. as being lineally, juſtly and lawfully next Heir of the Blood Royal of this Realm; and that by the Goodneſs and Providence of Almighty God, he is of England, Scotland and Ireland, the moſt Potent, Mighty and Undoubted King. And thereunto we moſt humbly and faithfully do ſubmit and oblige our ſelves our Heirs and Poſterities for ever.

The King leaves Holland.

The King having been thus proclaimed with great Solemnity and inexpreſſible Joy, took his leave of the States of Holland on Tueſday May 22. and after a noble Entertainment, a very endearing Speech, and magnificent Preſents received from them, he took Ship under the Convoy of Mountague on Wedneſday May 23. and on Friday about one landed at the Beach near Dover-Pier, where General Monk ſtood ready to receive him on his Knees, and was raiſed, kiſs'd and embrac'd by his Majeſty. They all walked toward the Town, and were ſoon met by the Mayor and Jurates, and the Miniſter Mr. John Reading, who preſented the King with a Bible, and made a proper Speech at the delivery of it. Then the King took Coach, the Duke of York ſitting next to him; at the other End ſate the Duke of Glouceſter and the General, and the Duke of Buckingham in the Boot. About two Miles from Dover the King took Horſe, his Brothers riding on his Right-Hand, and the General on the Left, follow'd by a gallant Equipage into Canterbury, where he ſtaid on Saturday and Sunday, Lands at Dover.

Comes to Canterbury

1660. 12 Car. II.

Sunday, making there the General Knight of the noble Order of the Garter, and Maſter of his Majeſty's Horſe. On Monday May 28. the King came to Rocheſter, and early next Day went on to Black-Heath, where the Army was drawn up, and his Majeſty having taken a moſt pleaſing view of them, advanced toward London with infinite Crowds and incredible Acclamations: About one he was met at St. George's Fields by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen waiting there in a glorious Tent, the Mayor with a profound Reverence delivered the Sword to his Majeſty, and received it again with great Reſpect and the Honour of being Knighted Sir Thomas Alleyn. From thence the King was conducted thro' London in a very ſplendid manner to his Royal Palace at Whitehall; where he paid his Devotions and Thanks to God on this Day of his Birth and Return in the Preſence-Chamber, becauſe the Chapel was not yet in order.

Enters London.

Privy-Council conſtituted.

His Majeſty's firſt Care was to conſtitute his Privy Council, of which were General Monk, the Duke of Bucks, and Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper; and to fill up the Offices of State, the Duke of Ormond being made Lord High-Steward, the Earl of Southampton Lord High-Treaſurer, and the Earl of Manchester Lord Chamberlain, Sir Frederick Cornwallis Treaſurer of the Houſhold, and Sir John Berkley Comptroller: And then to conferr ſuitable Honours on his principal Servants, General Monk made Duke of Albemarle and Earl of Torrington, Admiral Mountague Earl of Sandwich and Viſcount Hinſtrinbrook, &c.

Officesand Honours.

Bill for general Pardon.

The great Affair that took up the Debates of the two Houſes was A Bill for a general Pardon. The Lords would have excepted all that ſate and acted in any High-Court of Juſtice; the Commons were more tender, and the King was inclin'd to extend his Mercy to all but his Father's Murderers. And therefore on July 13. the King went to the Houſe of Lords, and commanded the Commons to be called up. He made a very Prudent and Pathetick Speech to adviſe their Agreement to a Bill, without too much Limitation of his Royal Clemency and Mercy. And on Aug. 29. he came and paſſed the Act for a general Pardon, that had excepted no Perſon from the Favour of it, but thoſe that acted or ſate as the King's Judges and Sir Henry Vane, Col. Lambert and Hugh Peters, with the two unknown Perſons diſguiſed on the Scaffold; and even in the number of the King's Judges, thoſe who did not ſit in the Day of Sentence, nor ſign the Warrant for Execution, had their Lives ſpared. After paſſing ſome other Acts for diſbanding the Army; for making the 29th of May a perpetual Anniverſary, &c. the two Houſes adjourned themſelves to Nov. 6. following.

The King's Clemency.

Addreſſes and Congratulations.

In the mean time the King was perpetually entertained with the Loyal Addreſſes of his People, and with the ſolemn Congratulations of Foreign Princes and States, who ſeemed all to vie in Haſt and Zeal for ſending over their Ambaſſadors and Agents to complement his Majeſty upon his happy Reſtoration to his Royal Dignity and Government. In the paying of theſe Ceremonies a dreadful Rencounter happen'd on Tower-Hill, in a diſpute of Precedence between the Coaches of the Spaniſh and French Ambaſſadors.

The Princeſs of Orange comes into Engl.

A little after this time, the Princeſs Dowager of Orange, having recommended the Intereſt of her young Son the Prince (born after his Father's Death) to the care of the States-General, who had now at length agreed to inveſt the young Prince with the Dignity and Truſt which his Anceſtors formerly held in that Commonwealth, came into England to viſit her Royal Brother, and once again to ſee her native Country: But the Joy of ſeeing her eldeſt Brother peaceably enthron'd was much allay'd, and in a manner prevented by her Sorrow for the Loſs of her youngeſt Brother, Henry of Oatlands Duke of Glouceſter, who juſt before her landing died of the Small-Pox on Sept. 13. in the twentieth Year of his Age, much lamented by the King, and much beloved by all that knew him, as a Prince excellently qualified, Religious, Learned, Valiant and Wiſe above his Years, an Affectionate Brother, a good Maſter and a true Friend.

Death of the Duke of Glouceſter.

1660. 12 Car. II.

Regicides tried.

On October 10. the Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer for Trial of the Regicides, met at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey, Sir Orlando Bridgman Lord Chief Baron, ſate as principal Judge, the King's Council were Sir Jeffrey Palmer Attorney General, Sir Heneage Finch Solliciter General, Sir Edward Turner the Duke of York's Attorney, Serjeant Keeling, Windham, &c. The Priſoners having been this Day brought from the Tower to Newgate, were thence brought to the Bar, Sir Hardreſs Waller, William Heveningham, Col. Harriſon, Iſaac Pennington, Henry Marten, Gilbert Millingham, Robert Tichburn, Owen Roe, Robert Lilburn, Adrian Scroop, John Carew, John Jones, Thomas Scot, Gregory Clement, John Cook, Edmund Harvey, Henry Smith, John Downs, Vincent Potter, Auguſtine Garland, George Fleetwood, Simon Meyn, James Temple, Peter Temple, Thomas Wait, Hugh Peters, Francis Hacker and Daniel Axtel. Two only pleaded Guilty, Sir Hardreſs Waller and Mr. George Fleetwood. Harry Marten pleaded, "He was not ex- Their odd "cepted out of the Act of Indemnity, the Perſon Behaviour.
"there mention'd being Henry Martin, not Marten, till the Court informed him a Miſnomer in this caſe was not pleadable. Carew put himſelf upon his Trial, with this canting Salvo, Saving to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt his Right to the Government of theſe Nations. Peters would be tried by the Law of God only, which he of all Men had moſt wickedly abuſed. Axtel ſtood long Mute, and the Court had much ado to convince him of the danger of it. The Crimes were ſo very odious, and the Proofs ſo clear, that the Jurors without any Heſitation found them all Guilty: But ten only were Executed, Harriſon, Carew, Scot, Ten only Executed.
Clement, Jones, Scroop, Cook and Peters at Charing-Croſs; Hacker and Axtel at Tyburn. All the reſt were reſpited till the King and Parliament ſhould order their Execution, according to the Tenor of the Act of Indemnity. One William Hewlet was Indicted for being the Man that in a Frock and Vizard cut off the King's Head, and three ſeveral Witneſſes averr'd it was his own Confeſſion; upon which he was found Guilty, and yet had the Favour of the Court to be Repriev'd, and not to ſuffer. Of theſe wretched Criminals ſome pleaded Ignorance, but none betray'd a Repentence. Moſt of them gloried in the Villany, and juſtified the Cauſe and the Authority by which they acted: And ſome of their ſurviving Friends were ſo very inſolent, that they publiſh'd their Pleadings and Prayers and Speeches, to all the Advantage that the Spirit of Hell could invent, with an inſufferable Inſult upon the Civil Government and all Morality and Religion. Without Repentance.

The Queen-Mother came over from France to congratulate her Son, and to bring over her fair Daughter Henrietta Maria, and to adviſe of a Match between her and Monſieur, Brother to the French King; and as generally ſuſpected to draw her Son the King into a Match with Portugal and a League with France, and a Surrendry of Dunkirk. The Queen Mother viſits Engl.

Both Houſes of Parliament met on Nov. 6. and being adviſed to expedite their Buſineſs, an Act was paſſed for ſettling the Exciſe upon Beer and Ale, and other Liquors. Another for taking away the Court of Wards and Liveries; which had been long complained of as an Oppreſſion to the Subject, and accepting the Exciſe in lieu of it, as an Hereditary Duty to the Crown of England for ever. And ſo this Parliament (to which the King from his own Mouth had given the Epithet of the Healing Parliament) was Diſſolved on Decemb. 29. the ſame Day with the Funeral of the excellent Princeſs of Orange, Mary eldeſt Siſter of the King, and Mother of William III. King of England, whom ſhe left with the Title of Prince of Orange, in Minority of ten Years and one Month. Acts of Parliament. Healing-Parl. diſſolv'd.

Immediately after this Calamity, the Government was alarm'd with a deſperate Inſurrection of the Fifth-

1660. Car. II. furre- on of e Fifth- onarchy- n.

Fifth-Monarchy-Men, who being the moſt bold and bloody of all ſort of Enthuſiaſts, had given ſo much Jealouſie of their Madneſs, that Colonel Overton, Cornet Day, Major Allen, and ſome other leading Men of that Party, had been ſeized and impriſoned. Yet the Congregation of them meeting by the King's Indulgence in Coleman-ſtreet, did on Sunday Evening Jan. 6. break into open Rebellion, under the Conduct of their Preacher Thomas Venner, a Cooper. They were not above ſixty in number when they firſt ſallied out of their Meeting-houſe well arm'd, marching to St. Thomas Apoſtles to call in more of their Party, thence into Whitecroſs-ſtreet, coming into the City again at Cripplegate, and going out again at Alderſgate, declaring for King Jeſus, and killing ſeveral People. Sir Richard Brown, then Lord Mayor, having notice of their deſperate Deſign, got together ſome Files of the Train'd-Bands, who were at firſt repuls'd by Venner's Party, who fought with an incredible Impulſe of Infatuation, as making themſelves to believe that One ſhould chaſe a thouſand, and no Weapon formed againſt them ſhould proſper. But finding themſelves harder preſs'd, and being told the Life-guards were coming down upon them, they retired, and under Cover of the dark Evening got into Cane-wood betwixt Highgate and Hampſtead: and a Party of Horſe and Foot being ſent thither to hunt them out, on Wedneſday Morning very early this villainous Crew return'd again to London, dividing themſelves into two Parties, one whereof appear'd about Leaden-hall, and from thence march'd into Little Eaſtcheap, where they fought obſtinately, but were diſpers'd by the Train'd-Bands. Venner, with another Party, came to the Lord Mayor's Houſe, thinking to have ſurpriz'd him; but miſſing their aim, they march'd into Wood-ſtreet, where they were met by Colonel Corbet and about 20 Horſe. Corbet and 9 only of his Horſe-men charg'd through the Rebels, and broke them; and the Train'd-Band Foot fell in and purſued them. They fought with a Courage more bruiſh and deviliſh than was ever ſeen in Men: and if their Numbers had been equal to their Spirits, they would have overturn'd the City, and the Nation, and the World. Venner (who was much wounded before he could be taken) was ſoon after, with about 16 of his Crew, arraign'd in the Old Baily; and being all found Guilty, they were Executed in ſeveral Places in London, moſt of them raving, and threatning Judgment, and calling down Vengeance upon the King, the Judges, and the City.

Upon a View of the King's Return, there began to be a brighter Proſpect of Religion, which for 20 Years together had run into ſuch a variety of Forms and Figures, as to be well aſhamed to appear longer without reaſſuming the good old Habit of a Church of England, as formerly by Law eſtabliſhed: And yet Prejudices were ſo deep, and Parties ſo powerful, that it was the King's Prudence to ſmooth and ſoften the way by his many Expreſſions of Indulgence and Condeſcenſion mention'd in his Letters and Declaration from Breda; and after his Return by this remarkable Declaration to all his loving Subjects of his Kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales, concerning Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

is Decla- tion.

" HOW much the Peace of the State is concerned in the Peace of the Church, and how " difficult a thing it is to preſerve Order and Go- " vernment in Civil, whilſt there is no Order or " Government in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, is evident " to the World: And this little part of the World, " our own Dominions, hath had ſo late Experience " of it, that we may very well acquieſce in the " Concluſion, without enlarging Ourſelf in Diſ- " courſe upon it, it being a Subject we have had " frequent occaſion to contemplate upon, and to " lament abroad as well as at home.

" In our Letter to the Speaker of the Houſe of " Commons from Breda, we declared how much we " deſired the Advancement and Propagation of the " Proteſtant Religion; that neither the Unkindneſs " of thoſe of the ſame Faith towards us, nor the " Civilities and Obligations from thoſe of a con- " trary Profeſſion (of both which we have had a- " bundant Evidence) could in the leaſt Degree " ſtartle us, or make us ſwerve from it; and that " nothing can be propoſed to manifeſt our Zeal and " Affection for it, to which we will not readily " conſent. And we ſaid then, that we did hope in " due time, ourſelf to propoſe ſomewhat for the " Propagation of it, that will ſatisfy the World " that we have always made it both our Care and " our Study, and have enough obſerved what is " moſt like to bring Diſadvantage to it. And the " truth is, we do think ourſelf more competent to " propoſe, and with God's Aſſiſtance to determine " many things now in difference, from the Time " we have ſpent, and the Experience we have had, " in moſt of the Reformed Churches abroad, in " France, in the Low Countries, and in Germany, " where we have had frequent Conferences with the " moſt Learned Men, who have unanimouſly la- " mented the great Reproach the Proteſtant Religi- " on undergoes from the Diſtempers and too noto- " rious Schiſms in Matters of Religion in England. " And as the moſt Learned amongſt them have al- " ways with great Submiſſion and Reverence ac- " knowledged and magnified the eſtabliſhed Govern- " ment of the Church of England, and the great " Countenance and Shelter the Proteſtant Religion " received from it before theſe unhappy times: ſo " many of them have with great Ingenuity and Sor- " row confeſt, that they were too eaſily miſled by " Miſinformation and Prejudice into ſome Diſeſteem " of it, as if it had too much complied with the " Church of Rome; whereas they now acknowledge " it to be the beſt Fence God hath yet raiſed againſt " Popery in the World: And we are perſuaded " they do with great Zeal wiſh it reſtored to its " old Dignity and Veneration.

1660. 12 Car. II.

" When we were in Holland, we were attended " by many grave and learned Miniſters from hence, " who were look'd upon as the moſt able and prin- " cipal Aſſertors of the Presbyterian Opinions; with " whom we had as much Conference as the Multi- " tude of Affairs which were then upon us would " permit us to have; and, to our great Satisfacti- " on and Comfort, found them Perſons full of Af- " fection to us, of Zeal for the Peace of the Church " and State, and neither Enemies (as they have " been given out to be) to Epiſcopacy or Liturgy, " but modeſtly to deſire ſuch Alterations in either, " as, without ſhaking Foundations, might beſt al- " lay the preſent Diſtempers which the Indiſpoſiti- " on of the Time and the Tenderneſs of ſome Mens " Conſciences had contracted. For the better doing " whereof, we did intend, upon our firſt Arrival " in this Kingdom to call a Synod of Divines, as " the moſt proper Expedient to provide a proper " Remedy for all thoſe Differences and Diſſatisfa- " ctions which had or ſhould ariſe in Matters of " Religion. And in the mean time, we publiſhed " in our Declaration from Breda, a Liberty to ten- " der Conſciences, and that no Man ſhould be diſ- " quieted, or called in queſtion for Differences of " Opinion in Matters of Religion, which do not " diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom, and that we " ſhall be ready to conſent to ſuch an Act of Par- " liament as upon mature Deliberation ſhall be of- " fer'd to us, for the full granting that Indul- " gence.

" Whilſt we continued in this Temper of Mind, " and Reſolution, and have ſo far complied with " the Perſuaſion of particular Perſons, and the Di- " ſtemper of the Time, as to be contented with the " Exerciſe of our Religion in our own Chapel, ac- " cording to the conſtant Practice and Laws eſta- " bliſhed, without enjoining that Practice, and the 1660. 12*Car.*II. " Obſervation of thoſe Laws in the Churches of " the Kingdom; in which we have undergone the " Cenſure of many, as if we were without that " Zeal for the Church which we ought to have, and " which, by God's Grace, we ſhall always retain: " We have found ourſelf not ſo candidly dealt with " as we have deſerved, and that there are unquiet " and reſtleſs Spirits, who, without abating any of " their own Diſtemper in recompence of the Mo- " deration they find in us, continue their Bitter- " neſs againſt the Church, and endeavour to raiſe " Jealouſies of us, and to leſſen our Reputation by " their Reproaches, as if we were not true to the " Profeſſions we have made: And in order there- " unto, they have very unſeaſonably cauſed to be " Printed, Publiſhed, and Diſperſed, throughout " the Kingdom, a Declaration heretofore Printed in " our Name in Scotland, of which we ſhall ſay no " more, than that the Circumſtances by which we " were enforced to Sign that Declaration, are enough " known to the World; and that the worthieſt " and greateſt part of that Nation did even then " deteſt and abhor the ill Uſage of us in that Par- " ticular, when the ſame Tyranny was exerciſed " there by the Power of a few ill Men, which at " that time had ſpread itſelf over this Kingdom, " and therefore we had no Reaſon to expect that " we ſhould at this Seaſon, when we are doing all " we can to wipe out the Memory of all that hath " been done amiſs by other Men, and we thank God " have wiped it out of our own Remembrance, have " been ourſelf aſſaulted with thoſe Reproaches, " which we will likewiſe forget.

" Since the Printing this Declaration, ſeveral ſe- " ditious Pamphlets and Queries have been pub- " liſh'd and ſcatter'd abroad to infuſe Diſlike and " Jealouſies into the Hearts of the People, and of " the Army: and ſome, who ought rather to have " repented the former Miſchief they have wrought, " than to have endeavoured to improve it, have " had the Hardineſs to publiſh, That the Doctrine " of the Church, againſt which no Man with whom " we have conferred hath excepted, ought to be re- " formed as well as the Diſcipline.

" This over-paſſionate and turbulent way of Pro- " ceeding, and the Impatience we find in many for " ſome ſpeedy Determination in theſe Matters, " whereby the Minds of Men may be compoſed, " and the Peace of the Church eſtabliſhed, hath " prevailed with us to invert the Method we had " propoſed to ourſelf, and even in order to the " better calling and compoſing a Synod (which the " preſent Jealouſies will hardly agree upon) by the " Aſſiſtance of God's bleſſed Spirit, which we daily " invoke and ſupplicate, to give ſome Determina- " tion ourſelf to the Matters in Difference, until " ſuch a Synod may be called, as may without Paſ- " ſion or Prejudice give us ſuch farther Aſſiſtance " towards a perfect Union of Affections as well as " Submiſſion to Authority, as is neceſſary. And " we are the rather induced to take this upon us, by " finding upon the full Conference we have had " with the Learned Men of ſeveral Perſuaſions, " that the Miſchiefs under which the Church and " State do at preſent ſuffer, do not reſult from any " formed Doctrine or Concluſion which either Par- " ty maintains or avows; but from the Paſſion and " Appetite, and Intereſt of particular Perſons, who " contract greater Prejudice to each other from " thoſe Affections, than would naturally riſe from " their Opinions; and thoſe Diſtempers muſt be in " ſome degree allay'd, before the Meeting in a Sy- " nod can be attended with better Succeſs than their " Meeting in other Places, and their Diſcourſes in " Pulpits, have hitherto been: and till all Thoughts " of Victory are laid aſide, the humble and neceſ- " ſary Thoughts for the Vindication of Truth can- " not be enough entertained.

" We muſt, for the Honour of all thoſe of either " Perſuaſion with whom we have conferr'd, declare, " That the Profeſſions and Deſires of All, for the " Advancement of Piety and true Godlineſs, are " the ſame; their Profeſſions of Zeal for the Peace " of the Church, the ſame; of Affection and Duty " to us, the ſame: They All approve Epiſcopacy; " they All approve a ſet Form of Liturgy; and " they All diſprove and diſlike the Sin of Sacrilege, " and the Alienation of the Revenue of the Church. " And if, upon theſe excellent Foundations, in Sub- " miſſion to which there is ſuch a Harmony of Affe- " ctions, any Superſtructures ſhould be raiſed, to " the ſhaking thoſe Foundations, and to the con- " tracting and leſſening the bleſſed Gift of Charity, " which is a vital part of Chriſtian Religion, we " ſhall think ourſelf very unfortunate, and even " ſuſpect that we are defective in that Adminiſtra- " tion of Government with which God hath in- " truſted us. 1660. 12*Car.*

" We need not profeſs the high Affection and " Eſteem we have for the Church of England, as it is " eſtabliſhed by Law; the Reverence to which hath " ſupported us, by God's Bleſſing, againſt many " Temptations: Nor do we think that Reverence " in the leaſt degree diminiſhed by our Condeſcen- " ſions, not peremptorily to inſiſt on ſome Parti- " culars of Ceremony, which however introduced " by the Piety, and Devotion, and Order of for- " mer Times, may not be ſo agreeable to the pre- " ſent, but may even leſſen that Piety and Devo- " tion for the Improvement whereof they might " happily be firſt introduced, and conſequently may " well be diſpenſed with. And we hope this cha- " ritable Compliance of ours will diſpoſe the Minds " of all Men to a chearful Submiſſion to that Au- " thority, the Preſervation whereof is ſo neceſſary " for the Unity and Peace of the Church; and that " they will acknowledge the Support of the Epiſco- " pal Authority to be the beſt Support of Religion, " by being the beſt means to contain the Minds of " Men within the Rules of Government. And they " who would reſtrain the Exerciſe of that holy Fun- " ction within the Rules which were obſerved in " the primitive Times, muſt remember and conſi- " der, that the Eccleſiaſtical Power being in thoſe " bleſſed Times always ſubordinate and ſubject to " the Civil; it was likewiſe proportion'd to ſuch " an Extent of Juriſdiction, as was moſt agreeable " to that. And as the Sanctity, and Simplicity, " and Reſignation of that Age did then refer ma- " ny things to the Biſhops, which the Policy of ſuc- " ceeding Ages would not admit, at leaſt did o- " therwiſe provide for; ſo it can be no Reproach to " primitive Epiſcopacy, if where there have been " great Alterations in the Civil Government from " what was then, there have been likewiſe ſome " Difference and Alteration in the Eccleſiaſtical, " the Eſſence and Foundation being ſtill preſerved.

" And upon this Ground, without taking upon " us to cenſure the Government of the Church in " other Countries, where the Government of the " State is different from what it is here; or enlar- " ging Ourſelf upon the Reaſons why, whilſt there " was an Imagination of erecting a Democratical " Government here in the State, they ſhould be wil- " ling to continue an Ariſtocratical Government in " the Church: It ſhall ſuffice to ſay, that ſince by " the wonderful Bleſſing of God, the Hearts of this " whole Nation are return'd to an Obedience to " Monarchick Government in the State, it muſt be " very reaſonable to ſupport that Government in " the Church which is eſtabliſhed by Law, and with " which the Monarchy hath flouriſhed through ſo " many Ages, and which is, in truth, as ancient in " this Iſland as the Chriſtian Monarchy thereof; " and which hath always, in ſome Reſpects or De- " grees, been enlarged or reſtrained, as hath been " thought moſt conducing to the Peace and Happi- " neſs of the Kingdom. And therefore we have not " the leaſt doubt, but that the preſent Biſhops will " think the preſent Conceſſions now made by us to allay

1660. 12 Car. II. " allay the preſent Diſtempers, very juſt and reaſonable, and will very cheerfully conform themſelves thereunto.

1. " We do in the firſt place declare our Purpoſe " and Reſolution is, and ſhall be, to promote the " Power of Godlineſs, to encourage the Exerciſes of " Religion both publick and private, and to take " care that the Lord's-Day be applied to Holy Exerciſes, without unneceſſary Divertiſements; and " that inſufficient, negligent and ſcandalous Miniſters be not permitted in the Church. And that " as the preſent Biſhops are known to be Men of " great and exemplary Piety in their Lives, which " they have manifeſted in their notorious and unexampled Sufferings during theſe late Diſtempers, " and of great and known ſufficiency of Learning: " So we ſhall take eſpecial Care to prefer no Man " to that Office and Charge, but Men of Learning, " Virtue and Piety, who may be themſelves the beſt " Examples to thoſe who are to be govern'd by 'em. " And we ſhall expect and provide the beſt we can, " that the Biſhops be frequent Preachers, and that " they do very often Preach themſelves in ſome " Church of their Dioceſs, except they be hinder'd " by Sickneſs or other bodily Infirmities, or ſome " other juſtifiable Occaſion, which ſhall not be " thought juſtifiable if it be frequent.

2. " Becauſe the Dioceſſes, eſpecially ſome of " them, are thought to be of too large Extent, we " will appoint ſuch a number of Suffragan Biſhops " in every Dioceſs, as ſhall be ſufficient for the due " performance of their Work.

3. " No Biſhop ſhall Ordain or Exerciſe any part " of Juriſdiction which appertains to the Cenſures " of the Church, without the Advice and Aſſiſtance " of the Presbyters: And no Chancellours, Commiſſaries or Officials, as ſuch, ſhall execute any " Act of Spiritual Juriſdiction in theſe Caſes, viz. " Excommunication, Abſolution, or wherein any " of the Miniſtry are concerned, with Reference to " their Paſtoral Charge. However our Intent and " Meaning is to uphold and maintain the Profeſſion " of the Civil Law, ſo far and in ſuch matters, as " it hath been of Uſe and Practice within our Kingdoms and Dominions: Albeit, as to Excommunication our Will and Pleaſure is, that no Chancellour, Commiſſary or Official ſhall decree any " Sentence of Excommunication or Abſolution, or " be Judges in thoſe things wherein any of the Miniſtry are concerned as is aforeſaid: Nor ſhall the " Archdeacon exerciſe any Juriſdiction without the " Advice and Aſſiſtance of ſix Miniſters of his Archdeaconry, whereof three to be nominated by the " Biſhop, and three by the Election of the major " part of the Presbyters within the Archdeaconry.

4. " To the end that the Deans and Chapters may " be the better fitted to afford Counſel and Aſſiſtance " to the Biſhops, both in Ordination and the other " Offices mention'd before, we will take care that " thoſe Preferments be given to the moſt Learned " and Pious Presbyters of the Dioceſe. And moreover, that an equal number to thoſe of the Chapter, of the moſt Learned, Pious and Diſcreet Presbyters of the ſame Dioceſe, annually choſen by " the major Vote of all the Presbyters of that Dioceſe preſent at ſuch Elections, ſhall be always adviſing and aſſiſting together with thoſe of the " Chapter, in all Ordinations, and in every part of " Juriſdiction, which appertains to the Cenſures of " the Church, and at all other ſolemn and important Actions in the Exerciſe of the Eccleſiaſtical " Juriſdiction, wherein any of the Miniſtry are concerned; provided that at all ſuch Meetings the " number of the Miniſters ſo Elected, and thoſe " preſent of the Chapter, ſhall be equal, and not " exceed one the other, and that to make the " Numbers equal, the Juniors of the exceeding number be withdrawn, that the moſt ancient may take " place. Nor ſhall any Suffragan Biſhop Ordain " or Exerciſe the forementioned Offices and Acts of " Spiritual Juriſdiction, but with the Advice and " Aſſiſtance of a ſufficient number of the moſt Judicious and Pious Presbyters annually choſen as " aforeſaid within his Precincts. And our Will is, " that the great Work of Ordination be conſtantly " and ſolemnly perform'd by the Biſhop and his aforeſaid Presbytery, at the four ſet Times and " Seaſons appointed by the Church for that purpoſe.

5. " We will take care that Confirmation be " rightly and ſolemnly perform'd, by the Information and with the Conſent of the Miniſter of the " Place, who ſhall admit none to the Lord's-Supper, till they have made a credible Profeſſion of " their Faith, and promiſed Obedience to the Will " of God, according as is expreſſed in the Conſiderations of the Rubrick before the Catechiſm: And " that all poſſible Diligence be uſed for the Inſtruction and Reformation of Scandalous Offendors, " whom the Miniſter ſhall not ſuffer to partake of " the Lord's-Table, until they have openly declared " themſelves to have truly repented and amended " their former naughty Lives, as is partly expreſſed " in the Rubrick and more fully in the Canons; " provided there be place for due Appeals to Superior Power. But beſides the Suffragans and their " Presbytery, every Rural Dean (thoſe Deans, as " heretofore, to be nominated by the Biſhop of the " Dioceſe) together with three or four Miniſters " of that Deanery, choſen by the major part of all " the Miniſters within the ſame, ſhall meet once in " every Month, to receive ſuch Complaints as ſhall " be preſented to them by the Miniſters or Church-" Wardens of the reſpective Pariſhes; and alſo to " compoſe all ſuch Differences betwixt Party and " Party, as ſhall be offer'd to them by way of Arbitration, and to convince Offenders, and reform " all ſuch things as they ſhall find amiſs by their " Paſtoral Reproofs and Admonitions, if they may " be ſo Reformed: And ſuch matters as they cannot by this Paſtoral and Perſwaſive way compoſe " and reform, are by them to be prepared for, and " preſented to the Biſhop; at which meeting any " other Miniſters of that Deanery may, if they " pleaſe, be preſent. Moreover, the Rural Dean " and his Aſſiſtants are in their reſpective Diviſions " to ſee that the Children and the younger ſort be " carefully inſtructed by the reſpective Miniſters of " every Pariſh in the Grounds of Chriſtian Religion, " and be able to give a good Account of their Faith " and Knowledge, and alſo of their Chriſtian Converſation conformable thereunto, before they be " confirmed by the Biſhop, or admitted to the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper.

6. No Biſhop ſhall exerciſe any Arbitrary Power, " or do or impoſe any thing upon the Clergy or the " People, but what is according to the known Law " of the Land.

7. " We are very glad to find, that all with " whom we have conferr'd, do in their Judgments " approve a Liturgy, or Set-Form of Publick Worſhip to be Lawful; which in our Judgment, for " the preſervation of Unity and Uniformity, we conceive to be very neceſſary. And though we do " conceive the Liturgy of the Church of England, " contained in the Book of Common-Prayer, and " by Law eſtabliſhed to be the beſt we have ſeen; " and we believe, that we have ſeen all that are " extant, and uſed in this part of the World, and " well know what Reverence moſt of the Reformed " Churches, or at leaſt the moſt Learned Men in " thoſe Churches have for it; yet ſince we find ſome " Exceptions made againſt ſeveral things therein, " we will appoint an equal number of Learned Divines of both Perſwaſions to review the ſame, and " to make ſuch Alterations as ſhall be thought moſt " neceſſary; and ſome additional Forms (in the " Scripture Phraſe as near as may be) ſuited unto " the ſeveral parts of Worſhip, and that it be left " to the Miniſters choice to uſe one or other at his " dif-

1660. 12 Car. II. " diſcretion. In the mean time, and until this be " done, altho' we do heartily wiſh and deſire, that " the Miniſters in their ſeveral Churches, becauſe " they diſlike ſome Clauſes and Expreſſions, would " not totally lay aſide the uſe of the Book of Com- " mon Prayer, but read thoſe Parts againſt which " there can be no exception, which would be the " beſt Inſtance of declining thoſe marks of diſtinc- " on which we ſo much labour and deſire to re- " move: yet in compaſſion to divers of our good " Subjects, who ſcruple the uſe of it as now it is, " our Will and Pleaſure is, that none be puniſhed " or troubled for not uſing it, until it be review'd " and effectually reformed as aforeſaid.

8. " Laſtly, concerning Ceremonies which have " adminiſter'd ſo much matter of Difference and " Contention, and which have been introduced by " the Wiſdom and Authority of the Church, for E- " dification and the Improvement of Piety: We " ſhall ſay no more, than that we have the more E- " ſteem of all, and Reverence for many of them, " by having been preſent in many of thoſe Churches, " where they are moſt Aboliſhed or Diſcountenanc'd, " and it cannot be doubted, but that, as the Uni- " verſal Church cannot introduce one Ceremony in " the Worſhip of God, that is contrary to God's " Word expreſſed in the Scripture; ſo every Na- " tional Church with the Approbation and Conſent " of the Soveraign Power, may, and hath always " introduc'd ſuch particular Ceremonies, as in that " conjuncture of Time are thought moſt proper for " Edification and the neceſſary improvement of " Piety and Devotion in the People, tho' the neceſ- " ſary practice thereof cannot be deduced from Scrip- " ture; and that which before was, and is in it ſelf " indifferent, ceaſes to be indifferent, after it is e- " ſtabliſhed by Law. And therefore our preſent " Conſideration and Work is, to gratifie the private " Conſciences of thoſe who are grieved with the uſe " of ſome Ceremonies, by indulging to and diſpen- " ſing with their omitting thoſe Ceremonies; not " utterly to aboliſh any which are eſtabliſhed by " Law (if any are practiſed contrary to Law the " ſame ſhall ceaſe) which ſhould be unjuſt and of " ill Example, and to impoſe upon the Conſcience " of ſome, for the ſatisfaction of the Conſcience of " others, which is otherwiſe provided for. As it " could not be reaſonable that ſuch Men ſhould ex- " pect, that we ſhould our ſelf decline, or enjoin " others to do ſo, to receive the bleſſed Sacrament " on our Knees, which in our Conſcience is the moſt " humble, moſt devout and moſt agreeable Poſture " for that holy Duty, becauſe ſome other Men up- " on reaſons beſt, if not only known to themſelves, " chooſe rather to do it Sitting or Standing: We " ſhall leave all Deciſions and Determinations of " that kind, if they ſhall be thought neceſſary for a " perfect and entire Unity and Uniformity through- " out the Nation, to the Advice of a National Sy- " nod, which ſhall be duly called after a little time, " and a mutual Converſation between Perſons of " different Perſwaſions, hath mollified thoſe Diſtem- " pers, abated thoſe Sharpneſſes, and extinguiſhed " thoſe Jealouſies which make us unfit for thoſe " Conſultations. And upon ſuch Advice, we ſhall " uſe our utmoſt Endeavour, that ſuch Laws may " be eſtabliſhed, as may beſt provide for the Peace " of the Church and State; provided that none ſhall " be denied the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, " though they do not uſe the Geſture of kneeling " in the act of receiving.

" In the mean time, out of Compaſſion and Com- " pliance towards thoſe who would forbear the Croſs " in Baptiſm. We are content that no Man ſhall be " compell'd to uſe the ſame, or ſuffer for not doing it. Excellency of this Declaration.

This Declaration tho' very large, cannot be tedious to any good Reader, becauſe it has a Spirit of Truth and Wiſdom and Charity above any one Publick Profeſſion, that was ever yet made in matters of Religion. It ſhews the admirable Temper and Prudence of the King and his Council in that tender Juncture of Affairs: It proves the Charity and Moderation of the ſuffering Biſhops in thinking ſuch Conceſſions to be juſt and reaſonable for Peace and Unity; and it ſhews a diſpoſition in the chief Leaders, of the other Party, to have accepted of Terms of Union conſiſtent with our Epiſcopacy and Liturgy: It condemns the unhappy Ferments that ſoon after followed for want of coming to this Temper; and it may ſtand for a Pattern to Poſterity, whenever they are heartily diſpoſed to reſtore the Diſcipline and heal up the Breaches of the Church. A very Learned Conformiſt Writer has given this Character of it; If ever a divine Sentence was in the Mouth of any King, and his Mouth erred not in Judgment, I verily believe it was thus with our preſent Majeſty, when he compoſed that admirable Declaration; which next to Holy Scripture I adore, and think that the united Judgement of the whole Nation cannot frame a better, or a more unexceptionable Expedient for a firm and laſting Concord of theſe diſtracted Churches.

Speech of Chancellor Hyde.

A little time before this Declaration was publiſhed, Chancellor Hide (whoſe Head and Hand were moſt in it) had given notice of it in a Speech to the Parliament, wherein he tells them, " He was com- " manded to mention to them two things recom- " mended to them by his Majeſty in his Declarati- " on from Breda, the one for compoſing thoſe un- " happy Differences and Diſtempers in Religion, " which had too much diſturbed the Peace of the " Kingdom. This (ſaith he) is a ſad Argument " indeed, it is a Conſideration that muſt make e- " very Religious Heart to bleed, to ſee Religion " which ſhould be the ſtrongeſt Obligation and Ce- " ment of Affection, and brotherly Kindneſs and " Compaſſion, made now by the perverſe Wrang- " lings of paſſionate and froward Men, the ground " of all Animoſity, Hatred, Malice and Revenge; " and this unruly and unmanly Paſſion, I fear, too " frequently tranſports thoſe who are in the right, " as well as thoſe who are in the wrong, and leaves " the latter more excuſable than the former. When " Men who find their Manners and Diſpoſitions very " conformable in all the neceſſary Obligations of " Human Nature, avoid one anothers Converſati- " on, and grow firſt Unſociable and then Uncharі- " table to each other, becauſe one cannot think as " the other doth. ——

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" this diſquiſition hath coſt the King many a Sigh, " many a ſad Hour, when he hath conſidered the " almoſt irreparable Reproach the Proteſtant Reli- " gion hath undergone from the Diviſions and Di- " ſtractions which have been ſo notorious in this " Kingdom. What pains he hath taken to compoſe " them, after ſeveral Diſcourſes with Pious and " Learned Men of different Perſwaſions, you will " ſhortly ſee by a Declaration he will ſhortly pub- " liſh upon that occaſion; by which you will ſee " his great Indulgence to thoſe who can have any " pretenſion from Conſcience to differ from their " Brethren.

1660. 12 Car. II.

The Presbyterians had not been wanting to uſe their Endeavours of preventing the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Church: For as the Lord Clarendon relates, " With the Commiſſioners ſent from the Parliament " and from the City, to wait on the King at the " Hague, in the beginning of May, there came a com- " pany of their Clergymen, to the number of eight " or ten, who would not be look'd upon as Chap- " lains to the reſt, but being the popular Preachers " of the City (Reynolds, Calamy, Caſe, Manton, and " others the moſt eminent of the Presbyterians) de- " ſired to be thought to repreſent that Party. They " intreated to be admitted altogether to have a for- " mal Audience of his Majeſty; where they preſen- " ted their Duties, and magnified the Affections of " themſelves and their Friends; who, they ſaid, " had always, according to the obligation of their " Covenant, wiſhed his Majeſty very well, and had " lately, upon the opportunity that God had put in- " to their Hands, informed the People of their Du- " ty; which, they preſum'd, his Majeſty had heard " had proved effectual, and been of great uſe to him. " They thank'd God for his conſtancy to the Prote- " ſtant Religion; and profeſſed, that they were no " Enemies to moderate Epiſcopacy; only deſired " that ſuch things might not be preſſed upon them " in God's Worſhip, which, in their Judgment, who " uſed them, were acknowledged to be matters in- " different, and by others were held unlawful.

The King ſpoke very kindly to them, and ſaid, " that he had heard of their good Behaviour to- " wards him, and that he had no purpoſe to im- " poſe hard Conditions upon them, with reference " to their Conſciences; that they well knew he had " referr'd the ſettling all Differences of that Nature " to the Wiſdom of the Parliament, which beſt knew " what Indulgence and Toleration was neceſſary for " the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. But his " Majeſty could not be ſo rid of them; they de- " ſired ſeveral private Audiences of him, which he " never denied; wherein they told him, the Book " of Common-Prayer had been long diſcontinued in " England, and the People having been diſuſed to it, " and many of them having never heard it in their " Lives, it would be much wonder'd at, if his Majeſty " ſhould at his firſt landing in the Kingdom, re- " vive the uſe of it in his own Chapel, whither all " Perſons would reſort; and therefore they beſought " him, that he would not uſe it intirely and for- " mally, but have only ſome parts of it read, with " mixture of other good Prayers, which his Chap- " lains might uſe.

" The King told them with ſome warmth, that " whilſt he gave them Liberty, he would not have " his own taken from him; that he had always uſed " that Form of Service, which he thought the beſt " in the World, and had never diſcontinued it in " places where it was more diſliked than he hop'd it " was by them; that when he came into England " he would not ſevetely inquire how it was uſed in " other Churches, though he doubted not he ſhould " find it uſed in many; but he was ſure he would " have no other uſed in his own Chapel. Then they " beſought him with more importunity, that the uſe " of the Surplice might be diſcontinued by his Chap- " lains, becauſe the ſight of it would give great of- " fence and ſcandal to the People. They found the " King as inexorable in that Point as in the other; " he told them plainly, that he would not be re- " ſtrained himſelf when he gave others ſo much " Liberty; that it had been always held a decent " Habit in the Church, conſtantly practic'd in Eng- " land till theſe late ill times; that it had been ſtill " retained by him; and though he was bound for " the preſent to tolerate much Diſorder and Inde-1660. 12 Car. II. "cency in the Exerciſe of God's Worſhip, he would "never, in the leaſt degree, by his own Practice, "diſcountenance the good old Order of the Church, "in which he had been bred. Though they were "very much unſatisfied with him, whom they "thought to have found more flexible, yet they "ceaſed farther troubling him, in Hope and Preſumption, that they ſhould find their Importunity in England more effectual.

" cency

Promotions of Biſhops. Sept. 20. Dr. Juxon Biſhop of London was tranſlated to the See of Canterbury, and Dr. Sheldon was made Biſhop of London, and Dr. Frewen Biſhop of Cov. and Lichf. tranſlated to York, and the other Sees filled with Prelates of eminent Piety and Learning, who yet took not their Seats in the Houſe of Lords, becauſe of the Act —— —— that took away the Biſhops Votes in Parliament, tho' as to their Spiritual Juriſdiction, and all other Rights of Ordination, Inſtitution, Cenſures and even Uniformity of Worſhip, they were now in poſſeſſion of them. For without any new Acts, or Repeal of any aboliſhing Ordinances, by reſtoring the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, the Church of England was by Law Eſtabliſh'd. It ought to be obſerv'd, that the King on the very next Day after he had took poſſeſſion of his Royal Palace, publiſh'd A Proclamation againſt vicious, debauch'd and profane Perſons; given at Whitehall May 30. in the twelfth Year of his Reign. And happy had it been for the Peace and Honour of this Reign, if the Example of the Court had confirmed the Order of it.

Coronation of the King. His Majeſty's Coronation was with great State and Splendor performed on April 23. St. George's Day, his Majeſty the Day before making a ſolemn Proceſſion from the Tower thro' the City, amidſt Triumphal Arches, and all the poſſible Tokens of Reſpect and Joy. At the opening of the new Parliament on May 8. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons made this Speech:

Meeting of the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

King's Speech. "I Will not ſpend the time in telling you why I "called you hither, I am ſure I am very glad "to ſee you here. I do value myſelf much upon keeping my Word, upon making good whatſoever I promiſe to my Subjects: And I well remember, when I was laſt in this place, I promiſed "that I would call a Parliament as ſoon as could be "reaſonably expected or deſired; and truly conſidering the ſeaſon of the Year, and all that hath "been done ſince we parted, you could not reaſonably expect to meet ſooner than now we do: If it "might have been a Week ſooner, you will confeſs "there was ſome reaſon to deferr it to this Day: "For this Day, we may without Superſtition love "one Day, prefer one Day before another, for the "Memory of ſome Bleſſing that befell us that Day; "and then you will not wonder that the Memory "of the great Affliction the whole Kingdom ſhew'd "to me this Day twelve Month, made me deſirous "to meet you again this Day, when I dare ſwear "you are full of the ſame Spirit, and that it will be "laſting in you. I think there are not many of you "who are not particularly known to me; there are "very few of whom I have not heard ſo much good, "that I am as ſure, as I can be of any thing that is "to come, that you will all concurr with me, and "that I ſhall concurr with you in all things which "may advance the Peace, Plenty and Proſperity of "the Nation, I ſhall be exceedingly deceived elſe.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"You will find what Method I think beſt for "your Proceeding, by two Bills which I have cauſed to be prepared for you, which are for confirmation of all that was Enacted at our laſt meeting: And above all, I muſt repeat what I ſaid "when I was laſt here: That next to the miraculous "Bleſſing of God Almighty, and indeed as an immediate "Effect of that Bleſſing, I do impute the good Diſpoſition "and Security we are all in, to the happy Act of Indemnity and Oblivion, that is the principal Corner-Stone 1661. 13 Car. II. "which ſupports this excellent Building, that creates "Kindneſs in us to each other, and Confidence is our "joint and common Security.

"I am ſure I am ſtill of the ſame Opinion, and "more if it be poſſible of that Opinion, than I "was by the Experience I have of the benefit of "it, and from the unreaſonableneſs of what ſome "Men ſay againſt it, tho' I aſſure you not in my "hearing. In God's name provide full Remedies "for any future Miſchiefs; be as ſevere as you will "againſt new Offenders, eſpecially if they be ſo upon old Principles, and pull up thoſe Principles by "the Roots. But I ſhall never think him a wiſe Man "who would endeavour to undermine or ſhake that "Foundation of our publick Peace, by infringing "that Act in the leaſt degree; or that he can be "my Friend, or wiſh me well, who would perſwade "me ever to conſent to the breach of a Promiſe "I ſo ſolemnly made when I was Abroad, and performed with that Solemnity; becauſe, and after "I promiſed it, I cannot ſuſpect any attempts of "that kind by any Men of Merit and Vertue.

I will not conclude without telling you ſome News; News that I think will be very acceptable "to you, and therefore I ſhould think myſelf unkind and ill-natur'd, if I ſhould not impart it to "you. I have been often put in mind by my "Friends, that it was high time to marry; and I "have thought ſo myſelf ever ſince I came into "England: But there appeared difficulties enough "in the Choice, tho' many Overtures have been "made to me; and if I ſhould never marry till I "could make ſuch a Choice, againſt which there "could be no foreſight of any Inconvenience that "may inſue, you would live to ſee me an old Batchellor, which, I think you do not deſire to do. "I can now tell you, not only that I am reſolv'd "to marry, but whom I reſolve to marry if God "pleaſe. And towards my Reſolution, I have uſed "that Deliberation, and taken that Advice, as I "ought to do in an Affair of that Importance; and "truſt me, with a full Conſideration of the good of "my Subjects in general, as of myſelf; it is with "the Daughter of Portugal. When I had, as well "as I could, weighed all that occurred to me, the "firſt Reſolution I took, was to ſtate the whole Overtures which had been made to me, and in "truth, all that had been ſaid againſt it to my Privy "Council; without hearing whoſe Advice I never "did nor ever will reſolve any thing of publick Importance. And I tell you, with great Satisfaction "and Comfort to myſelf, that after many Hours "Debate in a full Council, for I think there was not "above one abſent; and truly I believe upon weighing all that can be ſaid upon that Subject, for or "againſt it, my Lords, without one diſſenting Voice, "yet there were very few that ſate Silent, adviſed "me with all imaginable Cheerfulneſs to this Marriage, which I look'd upon as very wonderful, "and even as ſome Inſtance of the Approbation of "God himſelf, and ſo took my own Reſolution, and "concluded all with the Ambaſſador of Portugal, "who is departing with a whole Treaty ſigned, "which you will find to contain many great Advantages to the Kingdom: And I make all the haſt "I can to fetch you a Queen hither, who I doubt "not will bring great Bleſſings with her to me and "you. I will add no more but refer the reſt to the "Chancellor.

And accordingly the Lord Chancellor told them, "that the King had called them hither by his Writ, "which was the only good and lawful way to "the meeting of a Parliament, they ought to thank "God he had reſerved them to this Day, a Day "that many good Men had died praying for, that "after all the Prodigies in Church and State, they "had lived to ſee the King at the opening of the "Parliament. That the King had cauſed a Bill or "two to be prepared for the Confirmation of all

1661. 13 Car. II. " that was enacted in the laſt Parliament; which " tho' not call'd by the King's Writ, might be rea- " ſonably thought to have been called by God him- " ſelf, upon the Supplication and Prayer of the King " and the whole Nation, as the only means to re- " ſtore the Nation to its Happineſs, to its ſelf, to " its Honour, and even to its Innocence. That for " the King after ſo many Injuries and Loſſes, to " have been not only willing to confirm and to re- " enact the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity, but to " prepare ſuch an Act for them, to conjure them " by all that was precious by their Friendſhip to " him, to diſpatch thoſe Acts with expedition, was " ſuch a piece of fatherly Tenderneſs and Piety, as " could proceed from no Heart, but ſuch a one in " which God had treaſured up a ſtock of Mercy " and Juſtice and Wiſdom to redeem a Nation. " That the laſt Parliament which had done ſo very " much, had ſtill left great things for them to do; " they would find the Revenue the laſt Parliament " intended to raiſe for the King, very much ſhort " of what they promiſed: They would find the pub- " lick Debts for the diſcharge of the Army and the " Navy, which the laſt Parliament thought they " had provided for ſufficiently, to be ſtill in Ar- " rear and unpaid. That they were now the great " Phyſicians of the Kingdom; and God knows had " many wayward and froward and diſtemper'd Pa- " tients, ſome who in truth were very Sick, others " who thought themſelves ſicker than they were, and " ſome who thought themſelves in Health, and were " moſt ſick of all: They were therefore to uſe all " the Diligence, Patience and Compaſſion which " good Phyſicians have for their Patients, all the " Cheerfullneſs and Complacency and Indulgence, " their ſeveral Habits and Conſtitutions and Di- " ſtempers might require. — But there were a " ſort of Patients who deſerved not their Lenity or " Indulgence, thoſe were the ſeditious Preachers, " who could not be contented to be diſpenſed with " for their full Obedience to ſome Laws eſtabliſhed, " without reproaching and inveighing againſt thoſe " Laws how eſtabliſhed ſoever. That when the " King ſpake laſt in this place before this Day, he " ſaid, when he ſhould call the next Parliament, he " ſhould receive their Thanks for what he had done " ſince he had diſſolv'd the laſt Parliament: For, " he ſaid, he ſhould not more propoſe to himſelf any one " Rule in his Actions or Councils, than this, What is a " Parliament like to think of this Action, or of that " Counſel? And that it ſhould be want of Underſtand- " ing in him, if it would not bear that Teſt. That in a " little time after the Diſſolution of that Parliament, " while his Majeſty accompanied his Royal Mo- " ther to the Sea-ſide, the moſt deſperate and pro- " digious Rebellion brake out in this City that had " been heard of in any Age; and by the multitude " of intercepted Letters from and to all the Coun- " ties of England, in which the Time was ſet down " wherein the Work of the Lord was to be done, by " the deſperate Carriage of the Traitors themſelves, " and the bragging of their Friends, it might be " concluded the Combination reached very far; and " if the indefatigable Induſtry of the Lord Mayor " had not prevented it, probably the Fury would " not have been extinguiſh'd, before this famous " City, or a great part of it, had been burnt to " Aſhes: and therefore it would become their Wiſ- " doms to provide new Remedies for new Diſeaſes, " and to ſecure the precious Perſon of our dear So- " veraign from the firſt Approaches of Villainy, and " the Peace of the Kingdom from the firſt overtures " of Sedition. That the King had now told them, " he was reſolv'd to marry, and reſolved whom to " marry; the moſt grateful News that the whole " Kingdom could receive. That it would be judg'd " an irrecoverable Error in Policy, if Portugal ſhould " be ſuffered again to be ſwallow'd up by Spain. " That the Spaniſh Ambaſſador was ſollicitous to ob- " ſtruct this Match; and the King had not conceal- " ed from his Council, what that Ambaſſador had 1661. " offer'd againſt this Marriage; what profers he had 13 Car. II. " made of others, what Threats of War in one caſe, " what Advantage of Dowry in another; nay, that " he had been ſo ſollicitous for the advancement of " the Proteſtant Religion, that he had offer'd ſeve- " ral Proteſtant Princeſſes to whom his Maſter " ſhould give a Portion, as with the Infanta of " Spain; but had withal preſſed very earneſtly the " delivering up of Dunkirk and Jamaica; by which " it was plain the Spaniſh King would have that Re- " compence for the Portion he would give. That " there being a unanimous Advice from his Coun- " cil to his Majeſty to make this Marriage, he had " ſent for the Portugal Ambaſſador, had declared his " Reſolution to him, had writ himſelf to Portugal, " and was preparing his Fleet to fetch home our " Queen. —

The Commons returned to their Houſe, and choſe for their Speaker Sir Edward Turner the Duke of York's Sollicitor General, who in his Speech when preſented excuſed himſelf, and petition'd for the Liberties of the Houſe, and expreſt their hopes, that as his Majeſty had manifeſted his Royal Favours to the late Adopted Parliament, ſo he had a Bleſſing left for this his Natural Parliament. On May 13. both Houſes attended his Majeſty at Whitehall, expreſſing their humble Acknowledgments and Thanks for communicating to them his Royal Intentions to marry with the Infanta of Portugal, which they could not but receive with great Joy and Satisfaction; and with all earneſtneſs ſhould beg a Bleſſing upon it, and a ſpeedy Accompliſhment of it. On May 22. by Order of Parliament, the Solemn League and Covenant was publickly burnt at London and Weſtminſter by the common Hangman, as afterward over all England; and on May 28. the pretended Act for the Trial of King Charles I. was burnt in Weſtminſter-Hall by a like Order of Parliament. The Commons were ſo unanimous and zealous in their Loyalty and Affections to the King, that the Commonwealth Party began to ſuſpect that the late Act of Oblivion and Indemnity would not ſecure them from being called to the old Accounts; they doubted the Validity of that Act might be queſtion'd, unleſs confirmed and expreſly eſtabliſhed by the preſent Parliament: They had ſollicited the King for this new Security, and he had promiſed to procure it for them: but for fear the Inclinations of the Houſe would not ſo readily meet the King's Deſire, upon the importunity of thoſe who were conſcious of their Guilt and Danger, his Majeſty ſent this gracious Letter to the Houſe of Commons, to paſs the Bill for confirming the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity.

Sir Edw. Turner choſen Speaker.

Both Houſes approve the King's Marriage.

A Loyal Parliament.

Charles R.

King's Letter for Indemnity.

TRuſty and Well-beloved we greet you well. At the opening of our Parliament you were told, that we had a great Deſire this Summer to make a Progreſs thro' ſome parts of our Kingdom, which we reſolve to begin in Devotion to our City of Worceſter, that we may pour out our Thanks to God for our Deliverance there; and the Seaſon of the Year quickens us in that Inclination, as we preſume it diſpoſes you to withdraw from this City and to viſit your Counties. But you may remember we told you then, that we had cauſed ſome Bills to be prepared for you, for confirmation of what we enacted at our laſt meeting; and we ſaid all we could to you of the Value we ſet upon the Act of Indemnity (as we have great reaſon to do) and if we could have uſed ſtronger Expreſſions to have conjured you ſpeedily to have diſpatched it, we aſſure you we would have done it. And we did think what we ſaid would have made an Impreſſion in all who profeſs a deſire to ſerve us; and therefore we expected every Day, that the ſame Bill would have been preſented to us for another Aſſent: We confeſs, we hear you have ſhewed great Affection to us, ſince your coming together, and that you have already prepared and paſſed ſome very good Bills (for which we heartily thank you) that are ready for the Roy-

1661. 13 Car. II. al Assent: Yet we cannot but tell you, that though we are enough concerned to expedite those Bills, we have no mind to pass them, till the Act of Indemnity be likewise presented to us, upon which (if you take our Word) most of our Quiet and Good depends, and in which we are sure our Honour is concerned: Therefore we must again, and as earnestly as is possible, conjure you to use all possible Expedition in the passing that Act in the same Terms we already passed it (to which we take ourself obliged) and that you will for the present lay aside all private Business, that so betaking yourselves only to the Publick, you may be ready to Adjourn by the middle of next Month, which will best suit with all our Occasions. And so not doubting of your Readiness to comply with us in these our just and necessary Desires, we bid you heartily Farewel. Given at our Court at Whitehall the two and twentieth Day of June 1661. in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

To our Trusty and Well-belov'd Sir Edward Turner, Kt. Speaker of our House of Commons, to be communicated to the House.

Bills passed.

This Letter had the desired effect of prevailing with the Commons, and of pleasing the People: And so the Bills were dispatch'd and pass'd For Confirmation of the Act of Oblivion, for Regulating Corporations, for Restoring the Bishops to their Privilege of sitting as Peers in the House of Lords, and some other Acts, and then the Houses were adjourn'd to Nov. 20.

King's progress put off.

The King had mention'd in his Letter the design of a Summer Progress, and especially to Worcester, and to that end his Tent-Office was held at Clarkenwell-Green, to prepare all things for his Equipage and Accommodation: But either for Cares and Pleasures intervening, the Progress was deferr'd to another Summer, and not then made.

Several of the Regicides and principal State Criminals had been kept in Custody as reserved, by the Act of Oblivion, to any Punishment that a Parliament should determine to be inflicted on them. Under this Condition the Lord Munson, Sir Henry Mildmay, and Mr. Robert Wallop, had been brought to the Bar of the Lords, the Commons then present, where their Estates were declared confiscate, and they degraded from all Titles and Arms of Gentility, and farther sentenc'd to be drawn from the Tower thro' the City of London to Tyburn on Jan. 30. next, and so back again with Halters about their Necks upon Sledges, and to suffer perpetual Imprisonment. Several others of them were in October sent away from the Tower to remote Prisons in Castles and Islands to continue there for Life.

Mercy to the Regicides.

Success of our Fleet.

The Earl of Sandwich had the command of our Fleet, and set Sail with his Vice-Admiral Sir John Lawson, on June 19. toward the Streights to reduce the Pirates who had very much obstructed our Trade and Navigation. On July 29. he came before the Port of Algier, and sent a Message to the Dey of that place, to come out and confirm the League formerly made with England. A Treaty was begun, but the Algerines appear'd so insolent in their Terms, that the Admiral weigh'd and stood in to their Harbour, but found it so well secur'd in a new manner by a Mole and Forts and Batteries, that after the firing some few Ships, and striking the Town into great Consternation, he found it advisable to bring off the Fleet which had suffer'd extremely in their Sails and Rigging, and leaving Sir John Lawson to block them up, he sailed away with part of the Fleet to the Coast of Spain, then cross to Tangier, and so back by Lisbon, according to his Orders. The old Republicans made their envious and seditious Remarks, that the Naval Force of England would not be so great under Monarchy, as it had been under a Commonwealth.

Among other Branches of the Royal Family that came over to Congratulate the Restauration of the King, was Elizabeth Queen of Bohemia, the King's Aunt, and only surviving Daughter of King James I. the happy Mother of a Protestant Heir to this Crown, the Princess Sophia. She had been married to the unfortunate Elector Palatine on Feb. 14. 1612. and having been out of England forty nine Years, had endured and survived all the possible Misfortunes of her Family, and came now to her Native Country to die in Peace: For she had arrived here on May 17. and departed this Life in Leicester-House the 13th of February following, in the sixty sixth Year of her Age, and was privately buried in the same Vault with Prince Henry her eldest Brother, in the Chapel of Henry VII. 1661. 13 Car. II. Death of the Queen of Bohemia.

Ireland.

The Government of Ireland had been committed to three Justices, the Earl of Orrery, Sir Maurice Eustice, and Sir Charles Coot Earl of Mountrath, of which the latter dying this Year, James Duke of Ormond was by his Majesty appointed Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, where he had before shewn his Loyalty and Wisdom and Valour in a very eminent degree.

Bps restor'd to their Seats in Parl.

According to the Adjournment, the two Houses met Nov. 20. now first in their true Parliamentary Constitution of Lords Spiritual, Temporal and Commons; for the Bishops by Virtue of the Act of Repeal made in the last meeting, did now take their Places; and the King in his Speech congratulated them upon the Restitution of their Rights, and said it was a Felicity which he had much desired to see accomplished, as the only thing wanting to compleat the goodly Fabrick of Church and State.

State of Religion.

Religion was now to undergo the same happy Change with the Civil Government. A new Parliament had met on May 8. and tho' there was no legal Necessity for a Convocation to attend it, yet the latter Custom had prevail'd for the King to send out his Writs to the two Archbishops to summon the Clergy of their respective Provinces to assemble in Convocation much about the same time with the sitting of Parliament, because to treat among themselves of the same Affair in Aiding and Assisting the Crown; and because they may be ready as the Church Representative to consult in any matters of Doctrine or Discipline or Worship, that may happen to come under the Consideration of the whole Legislature. But because the Constitution of the Church was not yet perfectly re-established, and because the King had promised another sort of Synodical meeting of Commissioners, Episcopal and Presbyterian Divines; therefore it was not resolv'd to call a Convocation with this Parliament. While this matter was held in suspence, Dr. Heylyn wrote this Letter to the chief Minister of State.

Parl. intended to be called without a Convocation.

Right Honourable and my very good Lord,

Dr. Heylyn's Letter on that occasion.

" I Cannot tell how welcome or unwelcome this " Address may prove in regard of the greatness " of the Cause, and the low Condition of the Par- " ty. But I am apt enough to perswade myself, " that the honest Zeal which moves me to it, not " only will excuse but endear the Boldness.

" There is, my Lord, a general Speech, but a " more general Fear withal, amongst some of the " Clergy, that there will be no Convocation called " with the following Parliament; which, if it should " be so resolved on, cannot but raise sad Thoughts " in the Hearts of those who wish the Peace and " Happiness of our English Sion. But being the " Bishops are excluded from their Votes in Parlia- " ment, there is no other way to keep up their Ho- " nour and Esteem in the Eyes of the People, but " the retaining of their Places in the Convocation. " Nor have the lower Clergy any other means to " shew their Duty to the King, and keep that little " Freedom which is left unto them, than by assem- " bling in such Meetings where they may exercise " the Power of a Convocation in granting Subsidies " to his Majesty, tho' in nothing else. And should " that Power be taken from them, according to the " constant (but unprecedented) Practice of the " late

1661. 13 Car. II.

" late Long Parliament, and that they muſt be taxed and rated with the reſt of the Subjects without their liking and conſent; I cannot ſee what " will become of the firſt Article of Magna Charta, " ſo ſolemnly, ſo frequently, confirmed in Parliament: or what can poſſibly be left unto them, of " either the Rights or Liberties belonging to an " Engliſh Subject.

" I know 'tis conceived by ſome, that the Diſtruſt " which his Majeſty hath in ſome of the Clergy, " and the Diffidence which the Clergy have of one " another, is look'd on as the principal Cauſe of the " Innovation; for I muſt needs behold it as an Innovation, that any Parliament ſhould be called without a Meeting of the Clergy at the ſame time with " it. The firſt Year of King Edward VI. Queen " Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, were Times of greater Diffidence and Diſtraction than this preſent " Conjuncture; and yet no Parliament was called " in the Beginning of their ſeveral Reigns, without " the Company and Attendance of the Convocation, " tho' the Intendments of the State aimed then at " greater Alterations in the face of the Church, " than are now pretended or deſired. And, to ſay " the truth, there was no Danger to be feared from " a Convocation, tho' the Times were tickliſh and " unſettled, and the Clergy was divided into Sides " and Factions, as the Caſe then ſtood, and ſo ſtands " with us at this preſent time. For, ſince the Clergy in their Convocations are in no Authority to " propound, treat, or conclude any thing (more " than the Paſſing of a Bill of Subſidies for his Majeſty's Uſe) until they are impower'd by the " King's Commiſſion; the King may tye them up " for what time he pleaſes, and give them nothing " but the opportunity of entertaining one another " with the News of the Day.

" But if it be objected, That the Commiſſion now " on foot for altering and explaining certain Paſſages in the publick Liturgy, may either paſs inſtead of a Convocation, or elſe is thought to be " neither competible nor conſiſtent with it; I hope " far better in the one, and muſt profeſs, that I can " ſee no reaſon in the other. For Firſt, I hope that " the ſelecting ſome few Biſhops and other learned " Men of the Lower Clergy to debate on certain " Points contained in the Common Prayer Book, is " not intended for a Repreſentation of the Church of England, which is a Body more diffuſed, and cannot legally ſtand bound by their Acts and Counſels. And if this Conference be for no other purpoſe, but only to prepare Matters for a Convocation (as ſome ſay it is not) why may not ſuch a " Conference and Convocation be held both at once? " For neither the ſelecting of ſome learned Men " out of both the Orders for the Compoſing and Reviewing of the two Liturgies digeſted in the " Reign of King Edward VI. proved any Hindrance " in the calling of thoſe Convocations which were " held both in the ſecond and third, and in the fifth " and ſixth of the ſaid King's Reign. Nor was it " found, that the holding of a Convocation together " with the firſt Parliament under Queen Elizabeth, " proved any Hindrance to that Conference or Diſputation which was deſigned between the Biſhops " and ſome learned Men of the oppoſite Parties. All " which conſidered, I do moſt humbly beg your " Lordſhip to put his Majeſty in mind of ſending " out his Mandates to the two Archbiſhops for " ſummoning a Convocation (according to the uſual Form) in their ſeveral Provinces; that this " poor Church may be held with ſome degree of Veneration, both at home and abroad.

" And, in the next place, I do no leſs humbly " beſeech your Lordſhip to excuſe this Freedom; " which nothing but my Zeal for God's Glory, and " my Affection to this Church, could have forced " from me. I know how ill this preſent Office does " become me, and how much fitter it had been for " ſuch as ſhine in a more eminent Sphere in the holy Hierarchy, to have tendered theſe Particulars " to Conſideration: which ſince they either have " not done, or that no viſible Effect hath appeared " hereof, I could not chuſe but caſt my poor Mite " into the Treaſury; which, if it may conduce to " the Church's Good, I ſhall have my Wiſh; and " howſoever ſhall be ſatisfied, in point of Conſcience, that I have not fail'd of doing my Duty to " this Church, according to the Light of my Underſtanding: and then what happens unto me " ſhall not be material. And thus again, moſt humbly craving Pardon for this Preſumption, I kiſs " your Lordſhip's Hands, and ſubſcribe my ſelf,

My Lord,

Your Lordſhip's moſt humble
Servant to be commanded,

Peter Heylin.

Upon ſuch Reaſons and Application to the Miniſters of State, long after the Writs for Parliament, the King ſent out his Mandates for a Convocation in each Province; that to William Archbiſhop of Canterbury dated Apr. 11. for his Suffragans and Clergy to meet before him in the Church of St. Paul in London on the 8th of May following. At which Time and Place the Convocation was opened by Divine Service, and a Sermon preach'd in Latin by Dr. Thomas Pierce on Acts xv. 28. the Biſhop of London preſiding (inſtead of the Archbiſhop, detained by Age and Infirmities) and by Schedule continuing and proroguing the Convocation unto the 16th of May in the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter: On which Day Dr. Henry Fearne, Dean of Ely, having been in the former Seſſion elected Prolocutor, was now preſented to the Preſident, and confirmed by him. After which, the Lower Clergy being diſmiſs'd, the Preſident and other Biſhops treated of a Form of Prayer to be uſed on the 29th of May, to be obſerved as a ſolemn Thankſgiving for the King's Birth and Reſtoration; and for another ſpecial Form of Prayer to be uſed on the 30th of January. The drawing up theſe Forms was referred to two ſeveral Committees, each conſiſting of four Biſhops and eight of the Inferiour Clergy. And then the Convocation was by Schedule prorogued to May 18. In which third Seſſion, the Preſident delivered the Form of Prayer for May 29. to the Prolocutor, to be conſidered and conſented to by him and the Lower Houſe; and then intimated the want of a particular Form for the Miniſtration of Baptiſm to thoſe of riper Years and referred it to a Committee of three Biſhops, and ſix of the Lower Clergy. In the eighth Seſſion, June 7. Richard Aldworth Eſq; preſented to the Biſhop of London, as Preſident, his Majeſty's Royal Licence under the Great Seal of England for Amending, Reforming, Expounding, and Correcting the Conſtitutions and Canons already made, and for Ordaining and making new Conſtitutions and Ordinances concerning the Peace and Good of the Church of England. After which, the Attorney General brought in a Copy of his Majeſty's Proclamation for a ſolemn Faſt; which being read by the publick Notary, the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about a Form of Prayer for the ſaid Faſt, to be obſerved on the 12th of June, and referred this Matter to a Committee of four Biſhops and eight of the Inferiour Clergy. In the tenth Seſſion, June 19. the Preſident informed the other Biſhops, that (there having been ſome Defect in the former Licence) he had obtained from his Majeſty new Letters Patents for a more effectual Licence to proceed in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: by vertue of which, a Committee of 12 Biſhops and 24 of the Lower Clergy, was appointed to examine the Canons already made, and to conſider of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and the Regulation of Spiritual Courts and Officers. In the next Seſſion, June 21. the Biſhop of London ſitting Preſident, and the Archbiſhop of York, with 1661. 13 Car. II. the Biſhops of Durham and Cheſter appearing there, a Debate was had for the drawing up one uniform Book of Articles of Enquiry to be uſed in the Viſitation of every Biſhop, referred to a Committee of both Houſes, with a Deſire to the Biſhops of the Province of York to be preſent, and to aſſiſt in that Buſineſs. In the 14th Seſſion, July 3. the Preſident and Biſhops treated and conſidered of an Act about Printing, and referred the Matter to another Committee. In the 18th Seſſion, July 17. the Biſhop of Sarum brought in a Draught of ſome Canons, which were read and amended, and recommitted. In the 23d Seſſion, July 27. the Preſident and Biſhops made their Subſcription ſingly for a Royal Benevolence to be preſented to the King. At the ſecond Meeting of the Parliament, Novemb. 20. the Convocation met the Day following, when the King's Letters were read for a Review of the Book of Common Prayer, and a Committee was appointed for that purpoſe. This important Buſineſs took up the Care and Application of both Houſes till the 48th Seſſion, Decemb. 20. when the Book of Common Prayer ſo Reviſed and Amended, was ſolemnly Received, Approved, and Subſcribed, by all the Members of each Houſe. In the 50th Seſſion, Jan. 8. the Preſident and Biſhops treated about Reviſing the Canons and Conſtitutions that were made in 1640. to conſider which of them might be duly and fitly obſerved and uſed; and this Matter, in the 53d Seſſion, was committed to a ſelect Committee. In the 56th Seſſion the Upper Houſe treated and conſulted about the Act for Uniformity of Publick Prayers. And in their next Seſſion, Jan. 31. the Queſtion fell under Debate among the Biſhops, how far it was ſafe or lawful for the Biſhops to ſit or be preſent in the Houſe of Lords in the Trial and Condemnation of Perſons impeach'd of Treaſon: and after many Arguments, it was agreed to take Advice of the beſt common Lawyers and Civilians. The Convocation met again the Day following; and then the ſeveral Lawyers who had been conſulted in this Caſe were admitted into the Upper Houſe, who, after ſeveral Queſtions and Arguments, deliver'd in their Opinion in Writing, That the Biſhops might ſit with the other Peers in Parliament, without any Detriment or Prejudice, during the ſaid Buſineſs of Condemn'd Perſons. In the 62d Seſſion, Feb. 18. the Preſident ſent for the Lower Houſe, and admoniſhed them to chuſe another Prolocutor and Referendary in the Place of Dr. Henry Fearne, promoted to the See of Chicheſter: and they accordingly choſe and preſented Dr. John Barwick, Dean of St. Paul's, accepted and approved by the Preſident with conſent of his Brethren. In the next Seſſion, Feb. 22. the Upper Houſe made ſome farther Progreſs in Reviſing the Canons and Conſtitutions made in 1640. and in drawing up a Book of Articles to be uſed in every Epiſcopal Viſitation. In the 66th Seſſion, March 5. the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about the Amendments and Alterations which had been made by the Parliament in the Book of Common Prayer, and committed the Reviſal of them to George Biſhop of St. Aſaph, Richard Biſhop of Carliſle, and Brian Biſhop of Cheſter, whoſe Report was approved by both Houſes. In the next Seſſion, March 8. John Biſhop of Durham deliver'd into the Hands of the Preſident, a Book of Articles to be uſed in Viſitations; which was order'd to be tranſmitted to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for his Grace's Peruſal and Correction. Then a Debate was held about taking care of the Impreſſion of the Book of Common Prayer; and it was agreed, that Dr. Sancroft ſhould be Superviſor, and Mr. Scattergood and Mr. Dillingham ſhould be Correctors of the Preſs. In the 70th Seſſion, the Preſident ſent for the Prolocutor and Clergy, and told them, that the Book of Common Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the Uſe of the Church of England; together with the Form of Ordaining and Conſecrating Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, as Reviſed by the Convocation, had been well accepted in the Houſe of Lords: and that the Lord Chancellour, as well in his own Name, as in the Name of all the Peers in Parliament, had returned Thanks to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of both Provinces, for their great Care and Induſtry in Reviſing the ſaid Book of Common Prayer: and that the ſaid Lord Chancellour had deſired him to return the like Thanks to the Prolocutor, Prelates, and Clergy, for their reſpective Care and Labour in the ſaid Work. On Saturday, March 22. the 71ſt Seſſion, the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about a publick Form of Conſecration of Pariſh-Churches and Chapels, and committed that Matter to the ſole Care of John Lord Biſhop of Durham.

Alterations in the Liturgy.

Before the opening of this Convocation, a Conference was begun at the Savoy between the Biſhops with their Epiſcopal Clergy, and the Presbyterian Divines, by vertue of a Commiſſion given by his Majeſty to the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhops of London, Durham, Rocheſter, Sarum, Worceſter, Lincoln, Peterborough, Cheſter, Carliſle, Exeter, and Norwich, Dr. Earles, Dr. Heylin, Dr. Hacket, Dr. Barwick, Dr. Gunning, Dr. Pearſon, Dr. Pierce, Dr. Sparrow, Mr. Thorndike, on the one part; Dr. Tuckney, Dr. Conant, Dr. Spurſtow, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Manton, Mr. Calamy, Mr. Baxter, Mr. Jackſon, Mr. Caſe, Mr. Clark, Mr. Newcomen, Dr. Horton, Dr. Jacomb, Dr. Bates, Mr. Rawlinſon, Mr. Cooper, Dr. Lightfoot, Dr. Collins, Mr. Woodbridge, and Mr. Drake, on the other part; to adviſe upon and review the Book of Common Prayer, comparing the ſame with the moſt antient Liturgies which have been uſed in the Church in the primitive and pureſt times —— and to take into their ſerious and grave Conſiderations the ſeveral Directions and Rules, Forms of Prayer, and Things in the ſaid Book of Common Prayer contained; and to adviſe and conſult upon and about the ſame, and the ſeveral Objections and Exceptions which ſhall now be raiſed againſt the ſame; and (if occaſion be) to make ſuch reaſonable and neceſſary Alterations, Corrections, and Amendments, as ſhall be agreed upon to be needful and expedient for the giving Satisfaction to tender Conſciences, and the reſtoring and continuance of Peace and Unity in the Churches under his Majeſty's Protection and Government —— And to certify and preſent to his Majeſty in Writing, under their ſeveral Hands, the Matters and Things whereupon they ſhall ſo determine to be by his Majeſty approved and eſtabliſhed —— As by the Letters Patents dated at Weſtminſter the 25th Day of March in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

The Place of Meeting was the Savoy, in the Lodgings of Dr. Sheldon Maſter of the Savoy and Biſhop of London. When they firſt met, the Biſhop of London, in a Speech, opened the Occaſion of their Meeting; and told the Presbyterian Divines, "That "the King had graciouſly appointed this Conference "at their Requeſt, and for their Satisfaction, they "having been deſirous of ſome Alterations in the "Liturgy: And therefore he propoſed that they "would bring in all their Objections againſt the "Liturgy in Writing, and all the additional Forms "and Alterations which they thought proper to be "made to it. This Method the Presbyterian Divines had before declined when it had been offer'd by the King, and again by the Lord Chancellour, excuſing themſelves by ſaying, They were but few, and had no Commiſſion from their Brethren to expreſs their Minds; and therefore begg'd leave to acquaint their Brethren in the Country, that they might know their Senſe. And when the King again preſs'd them for their Propoſals, they declar'd, That they could not pretend to ſpeak for or oblige others; and that therefore what they did, muſt ſignifie but the Minds of ſo many Men as were preſent. And being farther required to deliver in their Deſires of Alteration, which ſhould be taken as their own Judgment without including the Senſe of their whole Party; they again endeavoured to evade it, by begging of his Majeſty, that if they made their Propoſals, the other ſide might bring in their Conceſſions at the ſame time, containing the utmoſt

Savoy Conference.

1661. 13 Car. II. most of what they could abate and yield in order to Peace; that ſo when both were ſeen and compar'd together, a Judgment might be the better form'd as to the probability of Succeſs. According to this Art of Reſervedneſs, the Presbyterian Commiſſioners objected againſt the Propoſal of the Biſhop of London for ſtating their Caſe in Writing, and moved for an Amicable Conference, according to the intent as they preſumed of the Commiſſion, and which they thought more likely to contribute to a Diſpatch of their great End of meeting; whereas writing would be a tedious, endleſs Buſineſs, and prevent their Familiarity and Acquaintance with each others Minds, which would beſt facilitate Peace and Concord. But the Biſhop of London prudently inſiſted on the ſafer and more certain way of bringing in all their Exceptions, Alterations and Additions in one view in Writing, to which they ſhould receive diſtinct Anſwers likewiſe in Scriptis. After ſome Debate it was agreed, That they ſhould bring all their Exceptions at one time, and all their Additions at another time.

Exceptions of the Presbyterians.

The Exceptions were accordingly drawn up by Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Wallis, Mr. Calamy, Mr. Newcomen, Dr. Bates, Mr. Clark, Dr. Jacomb, &c. and preſented to the Biſhops under this Title, The Exceptions of the Presbyterian Brethren againſt ſome Paſſages in the preſent Liturgy, dated Aug. 30. 1661. In this Paper they propoſed much more than they themſelves could expect to be granted: For they propoſed, that the Prayers and Materials of the Liturgy might have nothing in them Doubtful, or queſtion'd among pious, learned Perſons (a thing impacticable) That the Repetitions and Reſponſals of Clerk and People might be omitted (a pious Cuſtom of the primitive Church, and which Mr. Baxter himſelf had ſaid, was firſt owing to the devout Raptures of the People in breaking in upon the Prieſt, and taking their ſhare in the Holy Offices) that the Petitions of the Litany might be caſt into one ſolemn Prayer to be offer'd up by the Miniſter alone. That there be nothing in the Liturgy countenancing the obſervation of Lent as a Religious Faſt. That the Obſervation of Saints Days be omitted. That the Gift of Prayer be not excluded from being a part of Publick Worſhip. That the new Tranſlation of the Scriptures be every where uſed inſtead of the Old Verſion. That all Apocryphal Leſſons be omitted. That no part of the Liturgy be read at the Communion Table. That the Word Prieſt and Curate be turned into that of Miniſter, and Sunday into Lord's-Day. And finally, that no Ceremonies of Habit or Poſture be impoſed, but thoſe things be left to the liberty of Diſcretion in the Miniſter. After theſe general Propoſals, they added their particular Exceptions to ſeveral Parts and Paſſages of the Liturgy, and expreſs'd or ſuggeſted the Amendmens and Alterations to be made to them. The Epiſcopal Clergy gave in their Anſwer, and accepted of the others Reply. And ſeveral Amendments and Alterations were made in the Publick Liturgy: But, after all, it was an unhappy prejudice to the Peace of the Church and Nation, that the Presbyterian Divines thought theſe Conceſſions and Amendments to be not enough for their own Honour and the general Satisfaction of their Party: And on the other ſide, the Biſhops and Clergy were apt to think that the more they yielded the more importunate Demands would be made upon them, as they ſaw by the Practice of Mr. Baxter: For when the drawing up the Additions or new Supplements to be made to the Liturgy, was by his Brethren committed to him alone, he drew up an abſolute Form of his own, and ſtil'd it The Reformed Liturgy, as if he had the Modeſty to think, that the Old Liturgy compiled by a number of very Learned Confeſſors and Martyrs, muſt now give place to a new Form compoſed by a ſingle Man, and he by Education much inferiour to many of his other Brethren.

No Satisfaction.

The Bps yield to a Conference.

After ſeveral ineffectual Papers of Propoſals, Exceptions, Anſwers, Replies and Rejoinders; when the Commiſſion was within ten Days of expiring, the Presbyterian Divines earneſtly deſired the Biſhops to admit them to a Perſonal Conference upon the Subject Matter of the Papers which had paſs'd between them. And to cut off all occaſion of Complaint, the Biſhops who had all along diſliked this way of Altercation, did now yield to it: And ſo a Diſputation was held for ſeveral Days, wherein the chief and choſen Managers were Dr. Pierſon, Dr. Gunning and Dr. Sparrow on the one ſide, and Dr. Bates, Dr. Jacomb and Mr. Baxter on the other. There was much frivolous Debate in ſettling the Order of Diſputation, which ſide ſhould oppoſe and which ſhould anſwer; the Epiſcopal Party arguing, that they were in Poſſeſſion of the Liturgy and Ceremonies, and therefore were to be only on the defenſive Side, and to anſwer the Objections which the other Party ſhould urge to them. But, however, for greater Condeſcenſion, they agreed to oppoſe and anſwer by turns, the Presbyterians beginning to be the firſt Opponents. After much time ſpent to little purpoſe, Biſhop Coſins produced a Paper as containing a Method to end the Controverſie, by a Motion to put the Complainers upon diſtinguiſhing between the Things they charged as Sinful, and thoſe which they accepted againſt as Inexpedient only. The Presbyterian Miniſters were deſired to draw up an Anſwer to it, which they did the next Morning, and deliver'd it, but in their own Names only. They charg'd eight things in the Liturgy as flatly ſinful and contrary to the Word of God. 1. "That no Miniſter be admitted to bap- "tize without the preſcribed uſe of the tranſient I- "mage of the Croſs. 2. That no Miniſter be per- "mitted to read or pray, or Exerciſe the other parts "of his Office, that dare not wear a Surplice. 3. "That none be admitted to Communion in the "Lord's-Supper, that dare not receive it kneeling. "4. That Miniſters be forced to pronounce all bap- "tiz'd Infants Regenerate by the Holy Ghoſt. 5. That "Miniſters be forc'd to deliver the Sacrament of "the Body and Blood of Chriſt unto the Unfit both "in Health and Sickneſs, and that with perſonal "Application putting it into their Hands. 6. That "Miniſters be forced to abſolve the Unfit, and that "in abſolute Expreſſions. 7. That Miniſters are "forced to give Thanks for all whom they Bury, "as Brethren whom God hath delivered and taken to "himſelf. 8. That none may be a Preacher that "dare not ſubſcribe, that there is nothing in the "Common-Prayer-Book, the Book of Ordination, "and the thirty nine Articles, that is contrary to "the Word of God.

Charge of things unlawful in the Liturgy.

It ſeems very ſtrange, that theſe Men ſhould undertake to mention eight unlawful things in the Liturgy, when they could not affirm any one of thoſe things to be in it ſelf unlawful; but argu'd altogether upon the unlawful Impoſition of them, which they might as well have done by the ſame Argument in eight hundred of other indifferent and moſt innocent Matters. And it muſt be confeſt to be ſtranger ſtill, that of the eight ſinful things which they here enumerate, two of them, the 5th and the 6th, are poſitively falſe in the ſuppoſition of them: For by the Liturgy the Miniſter was not forced either to adminiſter the Sacrament or the Abſolution to unfit Perſons.

Unreaſonableneſs of this Charge.

This Diſingenuity, chiefly owing to Mr. Baxter, had taken away all hopes of Accommodation; but yet they proceeded to diſpute upon the Queſtion, Whether it was Sinful to enjoin Miniſters to deny the Communion to thoſe who would not receive it Kneeling? Where a great many Arguments were warmly urg'd about the making things in their Nature Indifferent to be in their Uſe Neceſſary, by the Command of a lawful Authority. In this Diſpute Mr. Baxter is repreſented as very perverſe in denying every Propoſition when made never ſo plain and evident. For this major Propoſition being laid down by the Epiſcopal Divines, That Command which commanded only an Act in it ſelf Lawful, is not Sinful. Mr. Baxter denied it, becauſe it might include another Act or Circumſtance Diſingenuity of Mr. Baxter.

1661. 13 Car. II. cumſtance unlawful: Whereupon they chang'd it into this Propoſition, That Command which commanded an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act or Circumſtance unlawful, is not ſinful. This Mr. Baxter deny'd, becauſe that may be accidentally a Sin which is not ſo in itſelf, and a lawful Command may be commanded under an unjuſt Penalty: Upon which they thus clear'd up the Propoſition, That Command which commandeth an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act whereby any unjuſt Penalty is enjoyn'd, nor any Circumſtance whence Directly or per Accidens any Sin is conſequent, which the Commander ought to provide againſt, is not ſinful. Mr. Baxter perſiſted in his Denial, giving this Reaſon, "That the firſt Act commanded may "be accidentally unlawful, and the Penalty unjuſt, "tho' no other Act or Circumſtance be ſuch. The Opponents therefore once more advanc'd this Propoſition of Compliance with him, That Command which commandeth an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act whereby any unjuſt Penalty is enjoyn'd, nor any Circumſtance whence directly or per Accidens any Sin is conſequent, which the Commander ought to provide againſt, hath in it all things requiſite to the lawfulneſs of a Command, and particularly cannot be guilty of commanding an Act per Accidens unlawful, nor of commanding an Act under an unjuſt Penalty. Which Propoſition he alſo deny'd, and referr'd only to his foregoing Reaſons. This Behaviour of Mr. Baxter was afterward complain'd of in Print by Biſhop Morley, In a Letter to a Friend for Vindication of himſelf from Mr. Baxter's Calumny; in which the Biſhop obſerv'd, that ſuch a way of Denial was not only frivolous and falſe, but it was deſtructive of all Authority Human and Divine, as not only denying all Power to the Church of making Canons and Conſtitutions for the Peace and Order of it, but alſo taking away all Legiſlative Power from the King and Parliament, and even from God himſelf. And ſo ended this Conference without Union or Accommodation; the Presbyterian Divines depending too much on the Encouragement they had received from the King and his chief Miniſters; on the Aſſurances given them by ſome of the leading Members of the Parliament, and on the Affections of the People: In all which they were miſtaken as much as in the Merit of their Cauſe.

Ill ſucceſs of this Conference.

1662. King's Marriage. The King's Match formerly intimated to his Parliament, was now coming on to a Conſummation. The Princeſs Donna Catherina Infanta of Portugal, was born Nov. 14. 1638. Daughter of Juan Duke of Braganza, reſtored to the Crown of Portugal after that Monarchy had been interrupted for near one hundred Years, and only Siſter of Don Alphonſo VI. and Don Pedro ſucceſſively Kings of Portugal. After the return of the Conde de Mello with the Articles of Treaty and Marriage to Lisbon, ſhe was married by ſolemn Proxy in the Perſon of his Excellency the Earl of Sandwich, and under his Conduct ſhe embark'd for England April 23. attended by a large Squadron of the Royal Navy, and was met at the Iſle of Wight by the Duke of York Lord High Admiral. At Portſmouth ſhe was received by the King, and privately there married by Dr. Gilbert Sheldon Biſhop of London, as was commonly reported, to ſatisfie the People of England. But others knew better, that the Queen refuſed to be married by any but a Prieſt of her own Religion. And therefore the Earl of Briſtol in the very next Year charged the Lord Chancellour Hyde, that he had brought the King and Queen together without any ſettled agreement in what manner the Rites of Marriage ſhould be performed; whereby the Queen refuſing to be married by a Proteſtant Prieſt, in caſe of her being with Child, either the Succeſſion ſhould be made uncertain for want of the due Rites of Matrimony, or elſe his Majeſty to be expoſed to a ſuſpicion of having been married in his own Dominions by a Romiſh Prieſt. The ſame Earl farther charg'd the Lord Chancellour That being intruſted with the Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and his Royal Conſort the Queen, he had concluded it upon Articles Scandalous and Dangerous to the Proteſtant Religion. But to return to Portſmouth, from thence the Royal Pair remov'd to Hampton-Court, and on Aug. 23. to Whitehall in great Pomp and Magnificence, being received at Chelſey by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London. The Portion which the Queen brought with her, was two Millions of Croiſadoes, about 40000 l. Sterling, with the Inheritance of Tangier and the Iſle of Bombay in the Eaſt-Indies; in conſideration whereof a Jointure of thirty thouſand Pounds a Year was ſettled on her. This Match was unhappy in nothing but the want of Royal Iſſue; and ſome People did afterward pretend, that it was a proſpect of this want that induced the Lord Chancellour Hyde to provide this Match, ſo to conſult the Honour and Intereſt of his own Blood, in his only Daughter the Dutcheſs of York. The ſuſpicion of his Policy in this Affair, and of his Corruption in the Sale of Dunkirk, tho' groundleſs or at leaſt uncertain and improbable, loſt him many Friends, and gave his Enemies a great advantage. A late Author who ſeldom ſpared the Character of Courtiers, gives us this Opinion of theſe matters. "Here I take leave ſo well as I can, to vin- "dicate the Memory of my Lord Chancellour Hide "from two Aſperſions (as I conceive) caſt upon "him; one, that he was the Adviſer of giving up "Dunkirk to the French; the other, that he was the "Procurer of the King's Marriage with the Infanta "of Portugal. For the firſt, I was aſſured by a credible Perſon (tho' a Confident of my Lord Chancellour's) that he was ſo far from adviſing the "King to give up Dunkirk to the French, that only "he and my Lord Treaſurer Southampton (upon "whoſe Honour my Lord Chancellour relied more "than on any other) of all the Council, enter'd "their Proteſtations againſt it: The truth of this "may be reſolv'd by inſpecting the Privy Council "Books. It's true, I cannot prove Negatively, that "my Lord Chancellour did not firſt propound the "King's Marriage with the Infanta of Portugal, yet "it ſeems to me reaſonable he did not for theſe "Reaſons. I never heard of any Diſcourſe of this "Match, before the arrival of the Queen-Mother "in England; or if any were, it's probable that "Monſieur Courtin had this in his Inſtructions, as "well as that of moving the King not to abandon "Portugal; for both theſe tend to the ſame End, "and the French King all his Reign after, ſought to "attain his Ends by Women as well as other ways. "Nor can it be believ'd that the Prince of Portugal, "now engaged in War againſt Spain, ſhould pay "the Queen's Portion, 40000 l. I believe he did "what he could, give up Tangier and Bombay to "the King, which laſt place he leaſed to the Eaſt-India Company for 10 l. per Ann. but the Money "was paid by the French King.

Roger Coke Eſq;

Vindication of Chancellor Hide.

On Monday May 19. the King prorogued the Parliament to Feb. 18. having paſſed ſeveral Bills, of which the moſt conſiderable was that for Uniformity, which was found neceſſary for the Peace and Safety of the State, as well as for the Good and Glory of the Church. It was undoubtedly the Faction and Sedition of the ſeveral Sects and Parties that work'd up the Wiſdom of the Nation into this expedient Awe and Reſtraint upon them. The true Reaſon had been given by the Lord Chancellour in his Speech at the opening of this Parliament, when telling the Lords and Commons, they were the great Phyſicians of the Kingdom, he proceeded thus; "There are a ſort "of your Patients that I muſt recommend to your "utmoſt Vigilance, utmoſt Severity, and to no part "of your Lenity or Indulgence; ſuch who are ſo "far from valuing your Preſcriptions, that they "look not upon you as their Phyſicians but their "Patients; ſuch, who inſtead of repenting any "thing that they have done amiſs, repeat every "Day the ſame Crimes, for the Indemnity where- "of the Act of Oblivion was provided. Theſe are "the ſeditious Preachers, who cannot be contented "to be diſpenſed with for their full Obedience to "ſome Laws eſtabliſh'd, without reproaching and inveigh-

Chimney-Money. The other conſiderable Act that now paſs'd was, for ſettling an annual Revenue of two Shillings upon every Fire-hearth in the Nation, upon the Crown for ever. This Duty, commonly called Chimney-money, was a Burden more uneaſie to the People of England than any other ſeems to have been to their Forefathers; and the arbitrary way of Collecting it, made it the more inſufferable. The King himſelf met with a blunt Rebuke for it, when thinking himſelf to be unknown in a Barge, and allowing himſelf and his Company to droll upon the Watermen that paſs'd by, one of them knowing the King's Face, inſtead of other common Ribaldry, cried out only, Chimney-ſweep, Chimney-ſweep. A Burden that lay upon the Minds much heavier than upon the Fortunes of the People: and therefore the Remiſſion of it by King William, was as wiſe a part of Popularity as could well be acted. The Name of Things is often more odious than the Nature of them: the ſame Weight may be tolerable when it is wrapt up in a ſofter Word.

Money given. This Parliament was indeed very ready to ſupply the King with a very large Revenue, and yet hardly equal to his Occaſions: The Debts he had contracted in his Exile, the Returns he was to make to foreign Obligations, the Recompences that many Loyal Sufferers expected, the Gratuities to bold Men, the Rewards to faithful Servants, and, above all, the exceſſive Civilities to Women, made the King continually want even more than this bountiful Parliament could raiſe. We may here take in the Obſervation of a late Writer: Says he, " It James Wellwood M. D. " looks as if Heaven took a more than ordinary
" Care of England, that we did not throw up our " Liberties all at once, upon the Reſtoration of the " King; for, tho' ſome were for bringing him back

" ſigns to pleaſe him, there was one formed at " Court, to ſettle ſuch a Revenue upon him by " Parliament during Life, as ſhould place him be" yond the Neceſſity of asking more, except in the
" caſe of a War, or ſome ſuch extraordinary Occa-
" ſion. The Earl of Southampton, Lord High Trea-
" ſurer, came heartily into it, out of a mere Prin-
" ciple of Honour and Affection to the King; but
" Chancellour Clarendon ſecretly oppos'd it. It hap-
" pen'd, that they two had a private Conference a" bout the Matter; and the Chancellour being ear-
" neſt to bring the Treaſurer to his Opinion, took
" the Freedom to tell him, that he was better ac-
" quainted with the King's Temper and Inclinations
" than Southampton could reaſonably expect to be,
" having had long and intimate Acquaintance with
" his Majeſty abroad; and, that he knew him ſo
" well, that if ſuch a Revenue were once ſettled up-
" on him for Life, Neither of them two would be of
" any further uſe; and that they were not, in probabili-
" ty, to ſee many more Seſſions of Parliament during that
" Reign. Southampton was brought over; but this
" Paſſage could not be kept ſo ſecret, but it came
" to King Charles's Ears: which, together with other " things wherein Clarendon was miſrepreſented to " him, prov'd the true Reaſon why he abandon'd
" him to his Enemies.

Prerogative advanced. This Parliament farther ſhew'd their Loyalty and Affection to the King in all imaginable ways of advancing his Prerogative as well as his Revenue; as by this Declaration or Acknowledgment to be ſubſcribed by every Dignitary, Parſon, Vicar, Curate, and Schoolmaſter, according to the Act of Uniformity: I A. B. do declare, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King; and, that I do abhor that traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are Commiſſioned by him. And farther, by enacting the ſole Right of the Militia to be in the King, with ſuch Reaſons for it, as would not have been given in the brighteſt part of his Father's Reign.

Regicides taken. And to ſhew their greater Zeal for the Safety of his Perſon, they fell again upon enquiring after the Regicides and Traitors excepted from the Act of Oblivion. Several of them had fled beyond the Seas, among whom were Miles Corbet, Colonel Okey, and Colonel Barkſtead; who, having rambled through many Parts of Germany, return'd in the beginning of this Spring to Delft in Holland, having appointed their Wives to meet them there, to underſtand the Condition of Affairs in England: Theſe Letters being intercepted by the Vigilance of Sir George Downing, his Majeſty's Reſident at the Hague, they were all three taken, and by the States Order put on board the Blackmore Frigat, then lying at Helver-Sluce, and ſo brought over and committed to the Tower; from whence, on Apr. 16. they were brought to the Kings-bench Bar, and there demanded what they could ſay for themſelves, why they ſhould not die according to Law, the Act of Attainder being read to them. They put the Court to a Proof that they were the ſame Perſons expreſt in that Act; which Proof being ſoon made by Witneſſes and a Jury, they received their Sentence, and were executed on Saturday Apr. 19. at Tyburn, making a better End than moſt of their other Accomplices; for they acknowledg'd a quiet Submiſſion to the King's Government, as of God, and exhorted others ſo to do; profeſſing they had no Malice to his late Majeſty, and that they had miſtaken the Parliament's Authority for good and ſufficient in that unhappy Act. After this, the Houſe of Commons addreſs'd the King to bring Sir Henry Vane and John Lambert Eſq; to their Trials; who, accordingly, were Arraign'd at the Kings-Bench Bar before Sir Robert Foſter Lord Chief Juſtice: the firſt, for imagining and compaſſing the Death of the late

1662. 14 Car. II. late King; the latter, for levying War against his present Majesty. Sir Henry disown'd his being any way concern'd in the King's Death, but pleaded the Authority of the Long Parliament, and justified that Authority as superiour to any other: And as for his Behaviour in the other Governments in Being after the King's Death, he urged this Pretence of Law, that his present Majesty being at that time but King de jure, and not de facto, he could not be Indicted for Treason committed before his Restoration. He made a great deal of noise, and gave the Court a great deal of Trouble. After a due Sentence, at the Intercession of some of his Friends, who better deserved the King's Favour, he was Beheaded on Tower-Hill June 14. and on the very Scaffold run out into such Lectures of Treason and Enthusiasm, that they were forced to drown him with the Noise of Drums and Trumpets, and were going to take his Papers from him; but with great Indignation he tore them in pieces, and submitted to the Block in a very discompos'd manner.

Trial of Lambert.

Lambert, at his Trial, behav'd himself with very great respect and deference to the Court; as if he had depended on the Royal Mercy he received at the Bar, which was a Reprieve from Death, and a Confinement during Life in the Isle of Guernsey; where he continued above thirty Years a patient and discreet Prisoner. And the better to secure the King and Government against all Attempts and Designs of the old Instruments of Rebellion, a Proclamation was publish'd to command all Officers, under any of the late usurped Powers, that had been disbanded, to depart 20 Miles from the City and Suburbs of London, and not to return within eight Months, unless by express Licence obtained from the Privy Council.

King and Parl. differ only in the Case of Tolerat.

The only Matter wherein the King and his Parliament could seem to differ, was in that of Indulgence and Toleration to the Nonconformists; of whom, the Presbyterians had the best Title to be favourably considered: for, they had generally wish'd for the King's Return, and were eminently instrumental in it; and most of their Divines had appeared in a good Temper for Moderation and Union, declaring for a Regulated Episcopacy, and for a Reformed Liturgy. For which Reasons, the King had been very kind and gracious to them, and had given them great hopes, that he would either not pass the Bill for Uniformity, or get them a Clause of Exception in it: but finding themselves disappointed in both these Hopes, and agreeing generally to be ejected at the Feast of St. Bartholomew; they soon after applied themselves to the King and Council for a Dispensation from the Penalties of that Act. The Council shew'd their Averseness to a dispensing Power in general, and especially to this particular Exercise of it: But the King betray'd a great Inclination for it, and seem'd to labour under a Promise that he would do it. And therefore to make it the less Offence and Surprize, he publish'd a smooth Declaration on the 26th of December, to signifie to all his loving Subjects, "That he would be constant "in the Observation of the Act of Indempnity; "that he would by no Means introduce the way of "Governing by a Military Power; that he should "desire the House of Commons to prepare some "Laws against the Growth and Progress of Popery; that he would likewise recommend to the "Commons, the preparing of Laws against Licentiousness and Impiety; and also to provide sumptuary Laws, and Laws for the Advance of Trade; "and, that he himself would endeavour to retrench "the Charge and Expences in his own Family; and "even that he resolved to maintain the Act of Uniformity; only he should dispense with some Matters in it. And in his Speech at the next Session, he concluded with the gentle Intimation of some Indulgence which he had granted to Dissenters; yet renouncing, in a manner, his Dispensing Power, and saying softly, That if the Dissenters would demean themselves peaceably and modestly, he could heartily wish he had such a Power of Indulgence to use upon occasion.

King's Declaration of Tenderness.

1662. 14 Car. II.

The House of Commons, who were justly apprehensive of the Dangers of a Toleration, because the Papists as well as all other Sectaries, would find their Account in it; appointed Wednesday the 25th of February, to take into Consideration his Majesty's gracious Declaration of the 26th of December last, and his Speech made at the opening this Session: At which time they unanimously resolved, That the Thanks of the House should be returned to the King's Majesty for all the other Parts of his Declaration; but as to the point of Indulgence, they resolved, That it be presented to the King's Majesty, as the humble Advice of this House, that no Indulgence be granted to the Dissenters from the Act of Uniformity. And they ordered, that a Committee be appointed to collect and bring in the Reasons of this House for this Vote upon the present Debate. On the next Day, Feb. 26. a Report was made to the House from the Committee by Sir Heneage Finch, his Majesty's Sollicitor General; and after some Amendments and Additions, the Reasons and Address were agreed to, and presented to his Majesty in the Banqueting-House at Whitehall on Saturday Feb. 17. where Mr. Speaker deliver'd himself in manner following.

The Parl. against Indulgence.

Most Gracious Soveraign,

Speaker's Speech.

THE Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of the Commons House of Parliament, did with great Joy receive your Majesty's most gracious Speech at the opening this Session of Parliament: And being thereby invited to consider of your Declaration of the 26th of December last, they have with all Sobriety, Duty, and Affection, examined the Grounds thereof; and do by me present unto your Majesty their most hearty Thanks for the same, and humble Advice thereupon. Both which, I do beseech your Majesty, that you will vouchsafe me to deliver in their own Words.

May it please your most Excellent Majesty,

Address of the Commons

"WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal "Subjects, the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of the House of Commons in Parliament "assembled, having with all Fidelity and Obedience considered of the several Matters comprised "in your Majesty's late gracious Declaration of "the 26th of December last, and your most gracious "Speech at the Beginning of this present Session:

"Do, in the first place for Ourselves, and in the "Names of all the Commons of England, render to "your sacred Majesty the Tribute of our most "hearty Thanks for that infinite Grace and Goodness wherewith your Majesty hath been pleased "to publish your Royal Intentions of adhering to "your Act of Indempnity and Oblivion, by a constant and religious Observance of it. And our "Hearts are farther enlarged in these Returns of "Thanksgivings, when we consider your Majesty's "most Princely and Heroick Professions of relying "upon the Affections of your People, and abhorring "all sort of Military and Arbitrary Rule. But above all, we can never enough remember, to the "Honour of your Majesty's Piety, and our own "unspeakable Comfort, those solemn and most endearing Invitations of us your Majesty's Subjects, "to prepare Laws to be presented to your Majesty, "against the Growth and Increase of Popery; and "withall, to provide more Laws against Licentiousness and Impiety; at the same time declaring "your own Resolutions for maintaining the Act of "Uniformity. And it becomes us alway to acknowledge and admire your Majesty's Wisdom "in this your Declaration, whereby your Majesty "is pleased to resolve, not only by Sumptuary "Laws, but by your own Royal Example of Frugality, to restrain that Excess in Men's Expences "which is grown so general and so exorbitant; and "to direct our Endeavours to find out fit and proper Laws for Advancement of Trade and Commerce.

After

1662. 14 Car. II.

" After all this, we moſt humbly beſeech your " Majeſty to believe, that it is with extream un- " willingneſs and reluctancy of Heart, that we are " brought to differ from any thing which your Ma- " jeſty hath thought fit to propoſe; and tho' we do " no way doubt, but that the unreaſonable Diſtem- " pers of Men's Spirits, and the many Mutinies and " Conſpiracies which were carried on, during the " late Intervals of Parliament, did reaſonably in- " cline your Majeſty to endeavour by your Decla- " ration to give ſome allay to thoſe ill Humours, " till the Parliament aſſembled; and the hopes of " Indulgence, if the Parliament ſhould conſent to " it; eſpecially ſeeing the Pretenders to this Indul- " gence did ſeem to make ſome Titles to it, by vir- " tue of your Majeſty's Declaration from Breda. " Nevertheleſs, we your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful " and Loyal Subjects, who are now returned to " ſerve in Parliament, from thoſe ſeveral Parts and " Places of your Kingdom, for which we were " choſen, do humbly offer to your Majeſty's great " Wiſdom, that it is in no ſort Adviſable that there " be any Indulgence to ſuch Perſons, who preſume " to diſſent from the Act of Uniformity, and the " Religion eſtabliſhed:

" For theſe Reaſons,

" We have conſider'd the Nature of your Maje- " ſty's Declaration from Breda, and are humbly " of Opinion, that your Majeſty ought not to be " preſs'd with it any farther.

" Becauſe it is not a Promiſe in it ſelf, but only " a Gracious Declaration of your Majeſty's Inten- " tions, to do what in you lay, and what a Parlia- " ment ſhould adviſe your Majeſty to do; and no " ſuch Advice was ever given, or thought fit to be " offer'd; nor could it be otherwiſe underſtood, be- " cauſe there were Laws of Uniformity then in be- " ing, which could not be diſpenſed with but by " Act of Parliament.

" That they who do pretend a Right to that ſup- " poſed Promiſe, put the Right into the Hands of " the Repreſentatives, whom they choſe to ſerve " for them in this Parliament, who have paſs'd, " and your Majeſty conſented to, the Act of Uni- " formity. If any ſhall preſume to ſay, that a " Right to the Benefit of this Declaration doth ſtill " remain after this Act paſſed,

" It tends to diſſolve the very Bonds of Govern- " ment, and to ſuppoſe a Diſability in your Ma- " jeſty and the Houſes of Parliament, to make a " Law contrary to any part of your Majeſty's De- " claration, though both Houſes ſhould adviſe your " Majeſty to it.

" We have alſo conſider'd the Nature of the In- " dulgence propos'd, with reference to thoſe Conſe- " quences which muſt neceſſarily attend it.

" It will eſtabliſh Schiſm by a Law, and make " the whole Government of the Church precarious, " and the Cenſures of it of no Moment or Conſi- " deration at all.

" It will no way become the Gravity or Wiſdom " of a Parliament, to paſs a Law at one Seſſion for " Uniformity, and at the next Seſſion (the Reaſons " of Uniformity continuing ſtill the ſame) to paſs " another Law to fruſtrate or weaken the Executi- " on of it.

" It will expoſe your Majeſty to the reſtleſs Im- " portunity of every Sect or Opinion, and of every " ſingle Perſon alſo, who ſhall preſume to diſſent " from the Church of England.

" It will be a cauſe of encreaſing Sects and Secta- " ries, whoſe Numbers will weaken the true Prote- " ſtant Profeſſion ſo far, that it will leaſt be diffi- " cult for it to defend itſelf againſt them: And " which is yet farther conſiderable, thoſe Numbers, " which by being troubleſome to the Government, " find they can arrive to an Indulgence, will, as " their Numbers encreaſe be yet more troubleſome, " that ſo at length they may arrive to a general " Toleration, which your Majeſty hath declared " againſt; and in time ſome prevalent Sect will at " laſt contend for an Eſtabliſhment, which, for " ought can be foreſeen, may end in Popery.

1662. 14 Car. II.

" It is a thing altogether without Precedent, and " will take away all means of convicting Recu- " ſants, and be inconſiſtent with the Method and " Proceedings of the Laws of England.

" Laſtly, it is humbly conceiv'd, that the Indul- " gence propoſed will be ſo far from tending to the " Peace of the Kingdom, that it is rather likely to " occaſion great Diſturbance. And on the contrary, " that the aſſerting of the Laws and the Religion " eſtabliſhed, according to the Act of Uniformity, " is the moſt probable means to produce a ſettled " Peace and Obedience throughout your Kingdom: " Becauſe the variety of Profeſſions in Religion, " when openly indulg'd, doth directly diſtinguiſh " Men into Parties, and withal gives them oppor- " tunity to count their Numbers; which, conſider- " ing the Animoſities, that out of a Religious Pride " will be kept on foot by the ſeveral Factions, " doth tend directly and inevitably to open Di- " ſturbance.

" Nor can your Majeſty have any ſecurity, that " the Doctrin or Worſhip of the ſeveral Factions, " which are all govern'd by a ſeveral Rule, ſhall " be conſiſtent with the Peace of your Kingdom.

" And if any Perſons ſhall preſume to diſturb the " Peace of the Kingdom, we do in all Humility de- " clare, that we will for ever, and in all occaſions, " be ready with our utmoſt Endeavour and Aſſi- " ſtance, to adhere to and ſerve your Majeſty, ac- " cording to our bounden Duty and Allegiance.

The Speaker's Report of the Subſtance of his Majeſty's Gracious Anſwer.

King's Anſwer.

That his Majeſty gave them hearty Thanks for their many Thanks; that never any King was ſo happy in a Houſe of Commons as he in this; that the Paper and Reaſons were long, and therefore he would take time to conſider of them, and ſend them a Meſſage; that they could never differ but in Judgment, and that muſt be when he did not rightly expreſs himſelf, or they did not rightly underſtand him; but their Intereſt was ſo far link'd together, that they could never diſagree.

Diſſenters greateſt Intereſt in the King and Court.

The King had by this Propoſal of Indulgence ſa- tisfied the more ſober Diſſenters, that he had a ten der Regard for their Eaſe and Indempnity: And they were now made ſenſible, that they had leſs In- tereſt in a Parliament than they had in the Court. It was indeed a great Unhappineſs that they found ſo much Countenance from the King and ſome of his prime Miniſters; for this did but help to har- den them in their Prejudices againſt the Church, and made them leſs and leſs inclinable to Conformi- ty and Union; becauſe they flatter'd themſelves with the continual Hopes of Liberty and Tolerati- on. Whereas if they had loſt all dependence on a Court Intereſt, and had found the King and his Mi- niſtry as intent upon the ſtrict obſervance of the Act of Uniformity, as the Commons of England now were, moſt of the Diſſenters no doubt would at this Juncture have conformed, and brought in a great Strength and Glory to this Church and Na- tion.

Why the King ſo indulgent to Diſſen- ters.

What Motives diſpoſed his Majeſty to be ſo fa- vourable to them, and to encourage their contending with the Laws of the Land, is not ſo eaſie to de- termine. Whether the innate Goodneſs and Clemen- cy of his Majeſty's own Royal Diſpoſition, that na- turally hated all the appearance of Severity and Ri- gour? Or whether a tender Regard of making good the Hopes and Promiſes, which before, and at the time of his Reſtauration, he had been forc'd to ob- lige them with? Or whether a generous Senſe of Ho- nour and Gratitude to the Presbyterian Party, who had moſt of them contributed very much to his eaſie and happy Return? Or whether a real Judg- ment

1662. 14 Car. II. ment and Perſwaſion, that a greater Liberty of Conſcience than the eſtabliſhed Laws allow'd, was the fundamental Right of Chriſtian People? Or whether a Political Opinion, that preſſing a Conformity by the execution of Penal Laws, would alienate the Hearts of his People, and endanger the beloved Peace and Quiet of his Reign? Or whether above or beyond any of theſe Motives, the ſecret and reſerved Reaſon was, under the cover of an Indulgence to Proteſtant Diſſenters, to give the better Protection and Advantages to Popery? To reſolve which of theſe Cauſes had the greateſt Influence upon the Mind of the King, is, I ſay, no eaſie and perhaps no decent matter.

Intereſt and Policy of the Papiſts.

But by the Sequel of Affairs, it ſeems very probable that the laſt Reaſon had not the leaſt weight with it. For the Papiſts in this Reign had alway a conſiderable Intereſt at Court, and uſed all poſſible Intrigues in the management of it: And it was plauſible enough for them to promote an Indulgence toward Proteſtant Diſſenters, to bring on by degrees a general Toleration, that could not fail to give Breath and Life to them and their Religion. There is ſome Evidence of this Artfulneſs, in what was intended to be a part of the King's Declaration, as the Account is thus given by the Diſſenters; "As the Abridgment of Mr. Baxter his Life.

" Lord Chancellor read over the Declaration, each " Party was to ſpeak to what they diſliked, and the " King to determine how it ſhould be as he lik'd " himſelf. There were various Altercations about " Prelacy and Re-ordination, and the Particulars of " the Declaration; and when the whole was perus'd, " the Lord Chancellor drew out another Paper intimating that the King had alſo been petition'd by " the Independents and Anabaptiſts for Liberty, " and therefore he read an additional part of the " Declaration to this purpoſe, that others alſo be permitted to meet for Religious Worſhip, ſo be it they do it not to the diſturbance of the Peace; and that no Juſtice of Peace or Officer diſturb them. This being " deſign'd to ſecure Liberty to the Papiſts, there " was a general Silence upon the reading it. The " Biſhops thought it a nice Point, and therefore " ſaid nothing: The Presbyterians were afraid to " ſpeak againſt it, leaſt all the Sects and Parties " ſhould look upon them as the Cauſers of their " Sufferings; and they ſhould be repreſented as " groſly Partial in deſiring Liberty themſelves, " while they would have no others have it with " them. At length Mr. Baxter fearing their Silence " might be miſinterpreted, ſpake to this purpoſe, " That Dr. Gunning a little before ſpeaking againſt Sects, had named the Papiſts and Socinians, that for their parts, they did not deſire Favour to themſelves alone; and rigorous Severity againſt none; but as they humbly thank'd his Majeſty for his declared Indulgence to themſelves, ſo they diſtinguiſh'd the Tolerable Party from the Intolerable: For the former they humbly crav'd juſt Lenity and Favour; but for the latter, ſuch as the two ſorts mention'd, for their parts they could not make their Toleration their Requeſt. To " which his Majeſty ſaid, that there were Laws ſufficient againſt the Papiſts: And Mr. Baxter reply'd, " that they underſtood the Queſtion to be, Whether thoſe Laws ſhould be executed or not? Upon which the " Matter was dropp'd.

Among the other Occurrences of this Year it may be remember'd, that the Vice-Admiral Sir John Lawſon leaving the Earl of Sandwich to Convoy the Queen from Lisbon, ſailed with a Squadron into the Streights, and there ſtruck ſuch a terror into all the Neſts of Pirates, Tunis, Tripoli and Algiers, that he made them all ſtoop to the Offer of a Treaty, and to the Acceptance of former Articles. Upon the Concluſion of this Peace, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, to their eternal Praiſe, contributed a great Sum of Money, and ſent their Collection by two of their own Number, the Archdeacon of Bath, and a Prebendary, to Argiers, with which they redeem'd above one hundred and fifty Chriſtian Slaves, Engliſh, Scotch and Iriſh, from the Miſeries of a Turkiſh Captivity. We had the better Advantage of keeping the African Parts in awe by our poſſeſſion of Tangier; to which the Lord Rutherford late Governour of Dunkirk, newly made Earl of Tiviot, was ſent to be Governour in the room of the Earl of Peterborough; and the King made it now a free Port, and granted it all the Privileges of a Merchant-City, being ſeated very commodiouſly for Strength and Safety to guard our Ships, and to command thoſe Seas: But the vaſt Expence in Fortifying and Defending, and the Neceſſity at laſt of Demoliſhing that Place, made it more a Burden than a Portion to the Crown of England.

Succeſs of our Fleet.

Poſſeſſion of Tangier.

The Town and Port of Dunkirk might have been another great Advantage to our Trade and to our Power in the Channel; and under this proſpect there had been a Reſolution in the Houſe of Commons to prepare an Act to annex it for ever to the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms; but this not being done, the King with Advice of his Privy-Council, for the Sum of five hundred thouſand Pounds deliver'd it up to the French King, and it was ingloriouſly put into his Poſſeſſion under the Government of the Count d'Eſtrades, and his Deputy the Marquis of Montpear; the Engliſh Governour with two Companies guarding the Gates at their Entrance, and delivering the Keys of them. This Action was very ill reſented by the Body of the People of England, who were apt to think that the Sale of ſuch an Important Place (after the Parliaments giving and applying Money for the maintenance of it) was the deplorable Sign of a weak and mercenary Court.

Dunkirk ſold to the French.

The Lord Clarendon, becauſe the prime Miniſter, was to bear the Odium of it; and therefore his new ſtately Houſe, built oppoſite to the Front of the Palace of St. James, was commonly in Repoach call'd Dunkirk-Houſe: Nay, and in the very next Year, the E. of Briſtol put it into the Articles of High-Treaſon and other Miſdemeanours exhibited againſt him in the Houſe of Lords, That the ſaid Earl of Clarendon had told his Majeſty, that it was better to ſell Dunkirk than to be at the Mercy of the Parliament for want of Money, or Words to that effect. And that he had wickedly and malitiouſly, contrary to his Duty of Counſellor, and to a known Law made laſt Seſſions, by which Money was given and particularly applied for the maintaining of Dunkirk, adviſed and effected the Sale of the ſame to the French King. And in the Articles of Impeachment preferr'd by the Commons in 1667. this was one, That he adviſed and effected the Sale of Dunkirk to the French King, being part of his Majeſty's Dominions, together with the Ammunitions, Artillery and all ſorts of Stores there, and for no greater Value than the ſaid Ammunitions, Artillery and Stores were worth.

The Odium caſt on the L. Chancellor.

William Lenthal, Eſq; Speaker of the Long-Parliament, having by the Mercy of the King and Parliament obtained an Indemnity for his Life, died this Year on Sept. 3. and left this Memorial of his Penitence, or as his Enemies would repreſent it, of his low and timerous Spirit, as extracted out of a Letter written from Oxford, by the Perſon who viſited him in his laſt Sickneſs, Dr. Ralph Brideoak.

ate of eligion. The Church of England was now fully reſtor'd " and happily eſtabliſhed by the Act of Uniformi- " ty, concerning which there were theſe Proceedings in the two Houſes. The Commons, who had brought in the Bill and agreed to it with all imaginable Zeal and Affection, had ſent it up to the Lords, and ſeem'd impatient of any delay in the diſpatch of it; and therefore on Tueſday Jan. 13. they or- der'd that a Meſſage be ſent to the Lords, to de- ſire them to give diſpatch to the Bill of Uniformi- ty. This occaſioned a Conference between the two Houſes, and on Thurſday April 10. a Report was made in the Houſe of Commons from the Conference had with the Lords upon the Bill for Uniformity, that the reaſon of the Delay of the ſaid Bill was, " That the Book of Common-Prayer " had, by Reference from his Majeſty, been under " the Conſideration of the Convocation, who had " made ſome Alterations and Additions thereunto; " and that the Lords had peruſed the ſame, as al- " ſo the Bill ſent from the Houſe, and had re- " turned the ſame, together with the Book of Com- " mon-Prayer, as the ſame is amended, and by " them agreed to, and ſome Amendments and Pro- " viſoes to the Bill. On Saturday April 12. the Commons read the Amendments and Additions ſent from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity; and on Monday April 14. they read the Amendments to the Book of Common-Prayer. On Wedneſday April 16. the Houſe of Commons reſumed the Debate upon the Amendments ſent down from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity. And the Queſtion being propoun- ded, " Whether Debate ſhall be admitted to the A- " mendments made by the Convocation in the Book " of Common-Prayer, and ſent down by the Lords " to this Houſe, it paſs'd in the Negative. And the Queſtion being put, " Whether the Amend- " ments made by the Convocation, and ſent down " by the Lords to this Houſe, might, by the Order " of this Houſe, have been debated? It paſs'd in the Affirmative. Then the Commons for ſeveral Days reſumed the Debate upon the Amendments ſent from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity, and on Monday April 28. a Proviſo for being Uncover'd, and for uſing Reverend Geſtures at the time of Di- vine Service was twice read; but the matter being held proper for Convocation, it was order'd, that ſuch Perſons as ſhall be employ'd to manage the Conference with the Lords, do intimate the Deſire of this Houſe, that it be recommended to the Con- vocation to take Order for reverend and uniform Ge- ſtures and Demeanours to be enjoined at the time of Divine Service and Preaching.

Proceed- ings in the Bill for U- niformity.

The Proceedings in Convocation upon this great buſineſs of Uniformity, were to this effect: On Sa- turday Apr. 12. the Biſhop of London as Preſident, and the Biſhops, conſidered of a Subſcription to be made to the three Articles compriſed in the 36th Ca- non, and referred to a Committee of Biſhops the drawing up a Form and Manner of Subſcription. And they treated farther of fit Perſons to be employ- ed for Correcting the Impreſſion of the Book of Common Prayer, and of a fit Method for procuring printed Copies of the ſaid Book to be diſperſed to all Country Churches. On Monday April 21. the Preſident and Biſhops conferred about Printing the Book of Common Prayer before the 24th of Au- guſt next; and of receiving Directions from the Lord Chancellour of England, how the Word Children in- ſtead of Perſons (not baptized) might be inſerted in the ſaid Book by the Houſe of Commons. Then the Biſhop of London, with Conſent of his Brethren, decreed and ordain'd, that the Biſhop of Durham ſhould be joined to the Commiſſioners for Review and Alteration of the Liturgy appointed by Letters Patents dated March 25. laſt paſt, in the room of the Biſhop of Cheſter deceaſed; and farther decreed, that no Ordination of Clerks ſhould be made by any Biſhop, but only within the four Ember Weeks ſo- lemnly appointed for that holy Office; and, that no Biſhop ſhould ordain beyond the Bounds of his own Dioceſe, but by Letters demiſſory firſt obtained from his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Proceed- ings in Convoca- tion.

1662. 14 Car. II. On Saturday Apr. 26. the three Forms of Prayer, for the 5th of November, the 30th of January, and the 29th of May, were brought into the Upper Houſe, and publickly read, and unanimouſly approv'd. And the Care of Tranſlating the Book of Common Prayer into the Latin Tongue, was committed to Dr. John Earle Dean of Weſtminſter, and Dr. John Pearſon. On Saturday May 10. the Preſident and Biſhops held a Debate upon the Direction receiv'd from the Houſe of Commons about Reverend and Uniform Geſtures and Demeanours at the time of Divine Service; and the Majority agreed, that the Conſtitution in the Book of Canons, made in 1603. intitled, Of ſolemn Reverence to be uſed in time of Divine Service, ſhould be preſented to the Houſe of Commons, after Conſideration firſt had in the Lower Houſe of Convocation. On Monday May 12. the ſaid Canon or Conſtitution was brought up to the Biſhops from the Lower Clergy with ſome Alterations and Amendments, which were agreed to by their Lordſhips. And, without farther Proceeding, on Tueſday May 20. the Convocation, by vertue of the King's Writ, was Prorogued to Thurſday Febr. 19. by the Bp. of Bath and Wells, as Commiſſary of the Bp. of London.

Subſtance of the Act of Uniformity.

In the mean time the Act of Uniformity ordained, "That whereas in the firſt Year of the late "Queen Elizabeth, there was one uniform Order of "Common Service and Prayer, and of the Adminiſtration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies in the Church of England, agreeable to "the Word of God and Uſage of the Primitive "Church —— very comfortable to all good People, "deſirous to live in Chriſtian Converſation, and "moſt profitable to the Eſtate of this Realm, upon which the Mercy, Favour, and Bleſſing of "Almighty God, in no wiſe ſo readily and plentifully praiſed as by Common Prayers —— Yet "notwithſtanding, a great number of People in divers Parts of this Realm, following their own "Senſuality, and living without Knowledge and "due Fear of God, do wilfully and ſchiſmatically "abſtain, and refuſe to come to their Pariſh Churches —— And whereas by the great and ſcandalous "Neglect of Miniſters in the ſaid Order or Liturgy, "great Miſchiefs and Inconveniences, during the "Times of the late unhappy Troubles, have ariſen "and grown; and many People have been led into "Factions and Schiſms, to the great Decay and "Scandal of the Reformed Religion of the Church "of England, and to the hazard of many Souls: "For prevention whereof in time to come, for "ſettling the Peace of the Church, and for allaying the preſent Diſtempers —— the King's Majeſty had granted his Commiſſion to ſeveral Biſhops "and other Divines to review the Book of Common "Prayer, and to prepare ſuch Alterations and Additions, as they thought fit to offer. And afterwards the Convocations of both Provinces, by his "Majeſty called and aſſembled, and by him authorized and required to review the ſaid Book of "Common Prayer, and the Book of the Form and "Manner of the making and conſecrating of Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons —— upon full and "mature Deliberation they had accordingly reviewed the ſaid Books, and had made ſome Alterations which they thought fit to be inſerted to the "ſame, and ſome Additional Prayers, and had preſented the ſame unto his Majeſty in Writing, in "one Book, intitled The Book of Common Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, &c. All which "his Majeſty having duly conſidered, had fully "approved and allowed the ſame, and recommended to this preſent Parliament, to be appointed to "be uſed under ſuch Sanctions and Penalties as the "Houſes of Parliament ſhall think fit. Now in regard that nothing conduceth more to the ſettling "the Peace of this Nation (which is deſired of all "good Men) nor to the Honour of our Religion "and the Propagation thereof, than an univerſal "Agreement in the publick Worſhip of God —— It "was enacted, That all and ſingular Miniſters ſhall "be bound to ſay and uſe the Morning Prayer, Evening Prayer, and all other Common Prayer, in "ſuch Order and Form as is mention'd in the ſaid "Book. And that every Parſon, Vicar, or other "Miniſter, ſhall before the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew "1662, after reading the ſaid Book, declare his "unfeigned Aſſent and Conſent to the Uſe of all "Things in the ſaid Book, contained or preſcribed "in theſe Words.

The Wiſdom and Moderation of this Act.

The World has reaſon to admire not only the Wiſdom of this Act, but even the Moderation of it, as being effectually made for Miniſterial Conformity alone; and leaving the People unable to complain of any Impoſition. It would certainly have had the deſired and moſt happy Effect of Unity and Peace, if the Government had been in Earneſt with the Execution of it; if the Miniſters inclined to Separation had not been encouraged in it by the Connivence of the Court, and the promis'd Indulgence of the King.

Mr. Calamy guilty of the firſt Breach of it.

The firſt open Violation of the Act was committed by Mr. Calamy late Miniſter of Aldermanbury, who being preſent at Church on Dec. 28. this Year, upon the Default of a Preacher there expected, to prevent a Diſappointment, and anſwer the Importunity of the People, he went up into the Pulpit and preached; and had he taken a practical Subject, and kept to it, no notice would have been taken of that one occaſional Neceſſity as it were of preaching: But it look'd like a Plot or formed Deſign, that he choſe a Subject of old Eli's Concern for the Ark of God, and ſo applied the Danger of the Church and Religion to the preſent Times; that he could not be thought leſs than a ſeditious, as well as a diſabled, Preacher. And therefore, by Warrant of the Lord Mayor, he was committed to Newgate, where he lay but few Days, before he was diſcharged by his Majeſty's expreſs Order, without the due manner of a legal Diſcharge: Which brought a Contempt upon the Law and Church eſtabliſh'd, and gave ſuch a juſt Offence to the Houſe of Commons, that they made ſome Enquiry into the Reaſons of it; and ſome Excuſe was made, that the Releaſe of Mr. Calamy from his Impriſonment was not owing to the ſole Command of the King, but to a Deficiency in the Act of Parliament, that had not fully provided for his longer Reſtraint. Upon which we find this Entry in the Journal of the Houſe of Commons: Die Jovis, Febr. 19. 1662. Upon Complaint made to this Houſe, that Mr. Calamy being committed to Priſon upon Breach of the Act of Uniformity, was diſcharged upon pretence of ſome Defect in the Act: Reſolved, That it be referred to a Committee, to look into the Act of Uniformity as to the Matter in queſtion, and to ſee whether the ſame be defective, and wherein. But what Proceedings there were in this Caſe, it does not appear. No doubt, it made the Commons ſenſible, that the King was too much inclined to diſpenſe with the Act of Uniformity, or at leaſt to protect and indemnify the Breakers of it: And this reaſonable Suſpicion made them the more unanimous to appoint a Committee immediately after, to bring in the Reaſons of the Houſe for their Advice to the King againſt a Toleration, with an Addreſs to his Majeſty.

Better Maintenance of the Clergy.

The next Eccleſiaſtical Affair of greateſt importance, was the providing a better Maintenance for the conformable Clergy. The Uſurpation of the Monks and Regulars upon the Parochial Prieſts, in robbing God and them of the better part of Tithes and Offerings; the Heat and Haſte and Self-intereſt of the Governours at the Reformation, in alienating thoſe Tithes to meer Lay-men; and the continued Iniquity of Times and Men, in diveſting and deſpoiling the Patrimony of the Church and Clergy more and more; theſe things had brought a great number of Pariſhes into a very miſerable Deſolation. In many of them, the whole Profits entirely appropriated to ſome other Uſes, and a ſorry Stipend allow'd to ſome officiating Curate: In many others, a Vicarage ordain'd, but ſo very ſlenderly endow'd, that a Vicar (tho' a ſingle Perſon) could not tolerably ſubſiſt upon it. This Defect had been the Burden and the Scandal of the Nation, alway complain'd of, but never ſufficiently redreſt. At the King's firſt coming in, all Men of Senſe and Conſcience ſaw that the Church of England could not be eſtabliſhed with any Honour or Safety, without providing a more competent Maintenance for the Parochial Clergy. And becauſe many of the Impropriate Rectories did belong to Sees, or Cathedral and Collegiate Bodies, or to other Eccleſiaſtical Dignities; therefore it was very proper, that the good Example ſhould begin among the Clergy themſelves, who were then more eſpecially enabled to augment the Cures, becauſe of the very conſiderable Fines received by them. Hence a Bill was depending in Parliament, for Rules and Orders to be obſerved in ſuch Augmentation of poor Vicarages and other inſufficient Cures: But, to prevent the paſſing ſuch a Bill, it was thought more adviſable, to refer the Matter to the King's Inſtructions; who, accordingly, directed his Royal Letters to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, and Chapters, requiring them,

K.'s Letter to Biſhops, Deans and Chapters.

" That forthwith Proviſion be made for the Aug- " mentation of all ſuch Vicarages and Cures where " the Tithes and Profits are appropriated to them " and their Succeſſors in ſuch manner, that they " who immediately attend upon the Performance of " Miniſterial Offices, in every Pariſh, may have a " competent Portion out of every Rectory Impropri- " ate, &c.

1662. 14 Car. II.

Augmentations made by Religious Appropriators.

But tho' a chearful Compliance was generally paid to theſe Letters, and very conſiderable Augmentations were made in moſt of the Rural Churches appropriated to Eccleſiaſtical Bodies; yet this Advice did not reach to the Lay Impropriators, who held many Rectories wherein the Vicar or Curate had not wherewithall to live. There was a pious Diſpoſition in the Commons of England to remedy this Evil, and to make every Benefice or Cure a ſufficient Portion for a Miniſter to ſubſiſt upon it with ſome Comfort and Credit. In order to this excellent End, there were many Votes and Reſolutions, tho', alas! all of them ineffectual.

Nothing done in Lay Impropriations.

On Tueſday Jan. 7. 13 Car. II. " It was order'd " by the Houſe of Commons, that a Committee ap- " pointed for this purpoſe, ſhould call before them " Philip Nye the younger, who was Clerk to the Attempts in the Houſe of Commons.

" late pretended Triers, and to require and receive " from him all Preſentations to any Eccleſiaſtical " Benefices or Promotions made in the time of the " late uſurp'd Powers, and Entries of any Admiſſi- " ons, Inſtitutions, or Inductions thereupon, now " in his Cuſtody. On Monday Jan. 20. it was order'd, " That the ſame Committee have Power to " call before them all other Perſons, and to require " and receive from them all Preſentations, &c. This was chiefly in order to reſtore the Epiſcopal ſequeſtred Clergy, and to eject thoſe who, under the Violence of the late Times, had intruded upon them: but it likewiſe ſerved the good Deſign of coming to the Knowledge of the ſtate of Parochial Cures, and ſo of being the better able to judge of their Neceſſities, and a Relief of them. To this immediate purpoſe, a wholſom Bill was brought in, For increaſing the Maintenance of Miniſters. And on Thurſday Apr. 3. 1662. a Report was made from the Committee, to which the Houſe agreed; that The beſt way to effect what is deſired in the Bill for increaſing the Maintenance of Miniſters, is, That the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes do inquire the Value of all Livings in their ſeveral Precincts contained in the Bill, and that they conſider of the beſt Expedients for the better Maintenance of the Miniſters therein, and to inform the Committee thereof at their next Meeting after their Receſs. But the King's craving Wants of Aid and Supply, and the Jealouſie and Avarice of ſome Lay Patrons and Impropriators, and the Profaneneſs and Irreligion of many of the leading Courtiers, let this Deſign drop into a Forgetfulneſs of God and the Cure of Souls.

Directions for Preachers.

To make as much as poſſible an Uniformity in Preaching as well as in Prayers, his Majeſty ſet forth Directions concerning Preachers, with a Royal Letter prefixed and directed to the moſt Reverend Father in God William Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c. Given at Whitehall Octob. 14. in the 14th Year of our Reign, 1662. Which the ſaid Archbiſhop tranſmitted to the Lords the Biſhops within his own Province, with his Letter of Advice and Monition, to communicate the Copies of his Majeſty's ſaid Directions throughout their reſpective Dioceſes; dated from Lambeth Octob. 23. 1662.

Death of Biſh. Sanderſon.

That pious and judicious Prelate Dr. Robert Sanderſon, Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, died in his Palace at Buckden on Jan. 29. 1662. and within three Weeks before his Death he made his laſt Will and Teſtament; wherein he gave ſuch a ſolemn Account of his Faith and Perſuaſion in Matters of Religion and Church Government, that it well deſerves to be here inſerted. —— " And here I do profeſs, that " as I have lived, ſo I deſire, and (by the Grace " of God) reſolve to die, in the Communion of " the Catholick Church of Chriſt, and a true Son " of the Church of England; which, as it ſtands by " Law eſtabliſhed, to be both in Doctrine and Wor- " ſhip agreeable to the Word of God, and in the " moſt, and moſt material Points of both, confor- " mable to the Faith and Practice of the godly " Churches of Chriſt in the primitive and purer " Times, I do firmly believe: led ſo to do, not ſo " much from the Force of Cuſtom and Education " (to which the greateſt part of Mankind owe their " particular different Perſwaſions in point of Reli- " gion) as upon the clear Evidence of Truth and " Reaſon, after a ſerious and impartial Examinati- " on of the Grounds, as well of Popery as Puritaniſm, according to that meaſure of Underſtanding, and thoſe Opportunities which God hath afforded me: and herein I am abundantly ſatisfied, " that the Schiſm which the Papiſts on the one hand, " and the Superſtition which the Puritan on the other hand, lay to our Charge, are very juſtly " chargeable upon themſelves reſpectively. Wherefore I humbly beſeech Almighty God, the Father " of Mercies, to preſerve the Church by his Power " and Providence, in Peace, Truth, and Godlineſs, " evermore to the World's end: which doubtleſs he " will do, if the Wickedneſs and Security of a ſinful People (and particularly thoſe Sins that are " ſo riſe, and ſeem daily to increaſe among us, of " Unthankfulneſs, Riot, and Sacrilege) do not tempt " his Patience to the contrary. And I alſo farther " humbly beſeech him, that it would pleaſe him " to give unto our gracious Soveraign, the Reverend Biſhops, and the Parliament, timely to conſider the great Danger that viſibly threatens this " Church in point of Religion, by the late great " Increaſe of Popery, and in point of Revenue by " ſacrilegious Incloſures; and to provide ſuch wholſome and effectual Remedies as may prevent the " ſame before it be too late.

1662. 14 Car. II.

Both Houſes of Parliament were highly ſenſible, that the King's Profeſſion of Indulgence toward the Proteſtant Diſſenters did very much encourage the Confidence of Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, and ſeemed to be made in favour of them. And therefore they agreed on, A humble Repreſentation and Petition of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament concerning Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty; Repreſentation of Lords and Commons concerning the Dangers of Popery.

Shewing,

" THat notwithſtanding your Majeſty's unque- " ſtionable Affection and Zeal for the true " Proteſtant Religion, manifeſted in your conſtant " Profeſſion and Practice, againſt all Temptations " whatſoever; yet, by the great Reſort of Jeſuits " and Romiſh Prieſts into this Kingdom, your good " Subjects are generally much affected with Jealouſie and Apprehenſion, that the Popiſh Religion " may much increaſe in this Kingdom (which your " Majeſty hath moſt piouſly deſired may be prevented) and ſo the Peace both in Church and " State may be inſenſibly diſturbed, to the great " Danger of both.

" Your two Houſes of Parliament are therefore " humble Suitors to your Majeſty to iſſue out your " Proclamation, to command all Jeſuits, and all " Engliſh, Iriſh, and Scotiſh Popiſh Prieſts, and all " ſuch other Prieſts as have taken Orders from the " See of Rome, or by Authority thereof (except " ſuch foreign Jeſuits or Prieſts as by Contract of " Marriage are to attend the Perſons of either of " the Queens, or by the Law of Nations to attend " foreign Ambaſſadors) to depart this Kingdom " by a Day, under pain of having the Penalties of " the Law inflicted upon them.

His Majeſty's Speech at the Reception of the Petition.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

His Majeſty's Speech.

Proclamation againſt Prieſts and Jeſuits.

Accordingly his Majeſty did publiſh ſuch a Proclamation, commanding all Jeſuits and Popiſh Prieſts to depart this Kingdom dated April 9. in the 15th Year of his Reign. But it did not ſeem to be much more in the Intentions of the Court than another Popular Proclamation for the better Obſervation of the Lord's-Day, and for renewing a former Proclamation againſt vitious, debauched and profane Perſons, dated Aug. 22. 1663. For notwithſtanding theſe Profeſſions toward pleaſing of the People, it is certain that Popery and Profaneneſs were not altogether out of Favour.

The Court more Poiſh.

Some Advances toward the Intereſt of Rome were thought to appear in the King's change of ſome Miniſters of State. His faithful and wiſe Servant Sir Edward Nicholas was remov'd from his Office of Secretary of State, and Sir Henry Bennet, lately the King's Reſident in Spain, was put into that Station, one who ſecretly eſpouſed the Cauſe of Popery, and died at laſt in the open Profeſſion of it.

The Lord Chancellor Clarendon was ſenſible of this change in his Majeſty's Counſels and Affections; and afterward took occaſion thus to expreſs himſelf in a Petition and Addreſs to the Lords at the time of his departing the Kingdom. For more than two Years I never knew any difference in the Councils. —— But from the time Mr. Secretary Nicholas was removed from his Place there were great Alterations; and whoſoever knew any thing of the Court and Counſels, knew well how much my Credit hath ſince that time been diminiſhed. —— Nor hath there been from that time to this above one or two Perſons brought to the Council, or preferred to any conſiderable Office in the Court, who have been of my intimate Acquaintance, or ſuſpected to have any kindneſs for me, and moſt of them moſt notoriouſly known to have been very long my Enemies, and of different Judgment and Principles from me both in Church and State.

Lord Clarendon out of Favour.

And it was indeed from this Juncture of a Popiſh prevailing Intereſt, that the Lord Chancellor Clarendon began now to decline in his Royal Maſters Favour, and to ſtand ready to be given up to his Enemies, and to bear the Odium of every publick Miſcarriage or Misfortune. And therefore in this Seſſion of Parliament, on July 10. 1663. the Earl of Briſtol exhibited theſe Articles of High-Treaſon and other heinous Misdemeanours againſt Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England in the Houſe of Lords.

Articles preferr'd againſt him.

I. " That being in place of higheſt Truſt and Con" fidence with his Majeſty, and having arrogated a
" ſupreme Direction in all his Majeſty's Affairs,
" both at Home and Abroad, hath wickedly and
" malitiouſly, and with a traiterous Intent to draw
" Scandal and Contempt upon his Majeſty's Perſon,
" and to alienate from him the Affections of his " Subjects, abuſed the ſaid Truſt in manner fol" lowing, viz.

" That he hath traiterouſly and maliciouſly En-
" deavoured to alienate the Hearts of his Majeſty's
" Subjects from him by Words of his own, and by
" artificial Inſinuations of his Creatures and De-
" pendancies, that his Majeſty was inclined to Po-
" pery, and had a Deſign to alter the Religion e-
" ſtabliſhed in this Kingdom.

" That in purſuance of that traiterous Intent,
" he hath to ſeveral Perſons of his Majeſty's Privy
" Council held Diſcourſes to this effect, viz.

" That his Majeſty was dangerouſly corrupted in his
" Religion, and inclined to Popery.

" That Perſons of that Religion had ſuch Acceſs
" and ſuch Credit with him, that unleſs there were a care-

1663. 15 Car. II.

" a careful Eye had unto it, the Proteſtant Religion would be overthrown in this Kingdom; and " in purſuance of the ſaid wicked and traiterous " Intent, upon his Majeſty's admitting Sir Henry Bennet to be principal Secretary of State, in the " Place of Mr. Secretary Nicholas, he hath ſaid theſe " Words or Words to this effect.

" That his Majeſty had given 10000 l. to remove a zealous Proteſtant, that he might bring into that place of High Truſt a concealed Papiſt, notwithſtanding that the ſaid Sir Henry Bennet is known to have ever been, both in his Profeſſion and Practice, conſtant to the Proteſtant Religion.

" That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, ſeveral near Friends and known Dependencies of his, have ſaid aloud, that were it not for my Lord Chancellor's ſtanding in the Gap, Popery would be introduced in this Kingdom; or Words to that effect.

" That in purſuance of the aforeſaid traiterous Deſign he hath not only adviſed and perſwaded the King to do ſuch things, contrary to his own Reaſons and Reſolutions, as might confirm and encreaſe the Scandal, which he had endeavour'd to raiſe upon his Majeſty as aforeſaid, of his Favour to Popery, but more particularly to allow his Name to be uſed to the Pope, and ſeveral Cardinals, in the Sollicitation of a Cardinals Cap for the Lord Aubigney, one of his own Subjects, and great Almoner at preſent to his Royal Conſort the Queen.

" That in purſuance of the ſame wicked and traiterous Deſign, he had recommended to be employ'd to the Pope one of his own Domeſticks Mr. Richard Bealing, a Perſon (tho' an avow'd Papiſt) known to be truſted and employ'd by him in Dipatches and Negotiations concerning Affairs of greateſt concernment to the Nation.

" That in purſuance of the ſaid traiterous Deſign, he being the chief Miniſter of State, did himſelf write by the ſaid Mr. Richard Bealing Letters to ſeveral Cardinals, preſſing them in the King's Name to induce the Pope to confer a Cardinals Cap on the ſaid Lord Aubigney, promiſing, in caſe it ſhould be attained, exemption to the Roman Catholicks of England from the Penal Laws in force againſt them; by which Addreſs unto the Pope for that Eccleſiaſtical Dignity for one of his Majeſty's Subjects and Domeſticks, he hath as far as from one Action can be inferr'd, traiterouſly acknowledged the Pope's Eccleſiaſtical Soveraignty, contrary to the known Laws of this Kingdom.

" That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, he has called unto him ſeveral Prieſts and Jeſuits, whom he knew to be Superiors of Orders here in England, and deſired them to write to their Generals at Rome, to give their help for the obtaining from the Pope the Cardinals Cap for the Lord Aubigney, as aforeſaid, promiſing great Favour to Papiſts here, in caſe it ſhould be effected for him.

" That he hath promiſed to ſeveral Papiſts, he would do his endeavour, and ſaid, he hop'd to compaſs the taking away all Penal Laws againſt them, which he did in purſuance of the traiterous deſign aforeſaid, to the Intent they might preſume and grow vain upon his Patronage, and by their publiſhing their Hopes of a Toleration, encreaſe the Scandal endeavoured by him and by his Emiſſaries to be raiſed upon his Majeſty throughout the Kingdom.

" That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, being intruſted with the Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and his Royal Conſort the Queen, he concluded it upon Articles ſcandalous and dangerous to the Proteſtant Religion.

" That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, he concluded the ſame Marriage, and brought the King and Queen together, without any ſettled Agreement in what manner the Rites of Marriage ſhould be performed, whereby the Queen refuſing to be married by a Proteſtant Prieſt, in caſe of her being with Child, either the Succeſſion ſhould be made uncertain for want of the due Rites of Matrimony, or elſe his Majeſty to be expoſed to a ſuſpicion of having been married in his own Dominions by a Romiſh Prieſt, whereby all the former Scandals endeavour'd to be raiſed upon his Majeſty, by the ſaid Earl, as to Point of Popery, might be confirmed and heightned.

1663. 15 Car. II.

" That having thus traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Majeſty's Subjects from him upon the ſcore of Religion; he hath endeavour'd to make uſe of all the malicious Scandals and Jealouſies, which he and his Emiſſaries had raiſed in his Majeſty's Subjects, to raiſe from them unto himſelf the popular Applauſe of being the zealous Upholder of the Proteſtant Religion, and a Promoter of new Severities againſt Papiſts.

" That he hath traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Majeſty's Subjects from him, by venting in his own Diſcourſe, and by the Speeches of his neareſt Relations and Emiſſaries, opprobrious Scandals againſt his Majeſty's Perſon and courſe of Life, ſuch as are not fit to be mention'd, unleſs Neceſſity in the way of Proof ſhall require it.

" That he hath traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Highneſs the Duke of York from his Majeſty, by ſuggeſting unto him Jealouſies, as far as in him lay, and publiſhing abroad by his Emiſſaries, that his Majeſty intended to legitimate the Duke of Monmouth.

" That he hath wickedly and maliciouſly, contrary to the Duty of a Privy-Counſellor of England, and contrary to the perpetual and moſt important Intereſt of this Nation, perſwaded his Majeſty againſt the Advice of the Lord General, to withdraw the Engliſh Gariſons out of Scotland, and to demoliſh all the Forts built there, at ſo vaſt a Charge to this Kingdom.

" That his Majeſty having been graciouſly pleaſed to communicate the Deſires of the Parliament of Scotland, for the remove of the ſaid Garriſons to the Parliament of England, and to ask their Advice therein, the ſaid Earl of Clarendon not only perſwaded his Majeſty actually to remove thoſe Garriſons, without expecting the Advice of his Parliament of England concerning it, but did by Menaces of his Majeſty's diſpleaſure, deter ſeveral Members of Parliament from moving the Houſe, as they intended to enter upon conſideration of that matter.

" That he had traiterouſly and malitiouſly endeavoured to alienate his Majeſty's Affections and Eſteem from this his Parliament, by telling his Majeſty, That there was never ſo weak and inconſiderable a Houſe of Lords, nor never ſo weak and heady a Houſe of Commons, or Words to that effect, and particularly, that it was better to ſell Dunkirk than to be at their Mercy for want of Mony, or Words to that effect.

" That he hath wickedly and maliciouſly, contrary to his Duty of Counſellor, and to a known Law made laſt Seſſions, by which Money was given, and particularly apply'd for the maintaining of Dunkirk, adviſed and effected the Sale of the ſame to the French King.

" That he hath contrary to Law enriched himſelf and his Treaſures by the Sale of Offices.

" That contrary to his Duty he hath wickedly and corruptly converted to his own uſe, great and vaſt Sums of publick Money raiſed in Ireland by way of Subſidy, private and publick Benevolency, and otherwiſe, given and intended to defray the charge of Government in that Kingdom: by which means a ſupernumetary and diſaffected Army hath been kept up there, for want of Money to pay personal Quarrel and Popish Design.

This Accusation seems rather to have been a Personal Quarrel than any serious Concern for publick Truth and Justice. The Words that are charged as spoken by him, were generally thought to have been the real Expressions or Suggestions of that great Man, and was there not a Cause? They may be taxed for an indecent Freedom, but they can be never imagined to have proceeded from any want of Integrity or Honour. But indeed there seems a perverse Turn in the Articles, first to represent the Lord Chancellor as jealous of Popery, and complaining of the King's Inclination to it, by taking new Ministers Popishly Affected; and yet after all, to make the Chancellor himself the Instrument of those very Designs that were laid for Popery and the profest Promoter of them; which the World did not then believe, and Posterity does less believe.

Proceedings of the Lords.

On the Day these Articles were exhibited, this Order was made by the House of Peers. Die Veneris 10. Julij 1663. Order'd, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, that a Copy of the Articles or Charge of High-Treason, exhibited this Day by the Earl of Bristol against the Lord Chancellor, be delivered to the Lord Chief Justice; who with all the rest of the Judges are to consider, whether the said Charge hath been brought in regularly and legally; and whether it may be proceeded in, and how; and whether there be any Treason in it or no; and make Report thereof to this House on Monday next if they can, or else as soon after as possibly they may.

Whereupon all the Judges met at Serjeants-Inn in Fleetstreet, and did upon Consideration unanimously agree upon this ensuing Answer, which on Monday July 13. the Lord Chief Justice Foster did deliver in, viz.

Answer of the Judges

WE conceive that a Charge of High-Treason cannot, by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, be originally exhibited by one Peer against another unto the House of Peers; and that therefore a Charge of High-Treason by the Earl of Bristol against the Lord Chancellor, mentioned in the Order of Reference to us of the tenth of this instant July, hath not been regularly and legally brought in; and if the Matters alledg'd in the said Charge were admitted to be true, altho' alledg'd to be traiterously done, yet there is no Treason in it.

Ld Chancellor honourably acquitted.

This Answer being read in the House of Peers, the Earl of Bristol took Exceptions at it, and some of their Lordships, who were Friends to the Chancellor, inferr'd, that if it were not a regular and legal Charge it was a Libel, and ought to be condemned and the Author of it censur'd. To satisfie the House, one of the Judges upon Conference with his Brethren, did on Tuesday July 14. deliver the Reasons of the Opinion of the Judges in their said Answer. And the Earl of Bristol a little to excuse himself, said the Articles were not intended by him as a Charge but as an Information. And then their Lordships, after a Debate upon the Question, did unanimously Resolve to declare their Concurrence with the Opinion of the Judges: And so the Plot of running down this great Man fell at present; and yet this early step in it had gained very much of the design'd Effect, which was to make him less Gracious with his Royal Master, and less respected in the Parliament, and less beloved by the People; and so by degrees a more easie Prey, when his Enemies should again meet to hunt him down.

1663. 15 Car. II.

On June 3. his Majesty by Commission under the Great Seal of England, to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, Lord Privy Seal, Duke of Albemarle, Marquis of Dorchester and Lord High Chamberlain, had passed three Publick and seven Private Bills: And now on July 27. his Majesty came to the House of Peers, and sending for the House of Commons to attend him, made a short Speech, wherein "He ex-"prest a great Satisfaction for what the Parliament "had done for him, and how cheerfully he concur-"red with them in all the Bills they had prepared "for the good of the Nation; and had given Di-"rections and Commands to all his Judges, in rela-"tion to those Affairs, which the Season and other "Necessities would not permit to pass into Acts. Then he gave his Royal Assent to An Act for four entire Subsidies granted to his Majesty by the Temporalty. An Act to confirm four Subsidies granted to his Majesty by the Clergy. An Act for the Relief of Indigent Officers. An Act for settling the Profits of the Post-Office and Wine Licenses upon the Duke of York and his Heirs. An Act for better collecting the Duty of Excise, &c. And so Prorogued the Parliament to the 16th of March following.

Plots for Schism and Rebellion.

There was a secret Correspondence carried on between the Bigots for Schism and a Commonwealth, to conspire for the good old Cause, and to take Arms for restoring of it. The place of Plotting was chiefly in the North, because more remote from the Court, and more near to Scotland, where they had their Agitators employ'd among the hotter Kirk Party. They had several meetings in Yorkshire, and a good number of them were actually in Arms at Farnley-Wood. They had an Oath of Secrecy enjoin'd, and had their Agents to sollicite for Assistance in London, and in most of the Counties of England. They had agreed to rise on October 12. and gave assurance to their Friends, that the Insurrection would be general; that Whitehall should be secured; that Nottingham, Glocester and Newcastle should be seiz'd for the most convenient Passes over the Severn, Trent and Tine; and Boston in Lincolnshire for a Sea-port to receive Succours out of Holland and other Foreign Parts. Their Pretences were to redeem themselves from the Excise and all Subsidies; to re-establish a Gospel Magistracy and Ministry; to restore the Long Parliament; and to reform all Orders and Degrees of Men, especially the Lawyers and the Clergy. This Conspiracy being in good time discover'd, a Commission of Oyer and Terminer was sent to York for Trial of the principal Leaders of them. Some at their Arraignment confest, that the Design began in a private Committee at London; that Lambert or Ludlow was proposed and promised to be at the Head of them; that the rising was to have began in Ireland, to have followed in England, and then in Scotland. Others of the Prisoners behaved themselves with most insufferable Insolence, especially Cotton, Denham and Atkins, of whom Cotton protested in the Face of the Court, that in such a Cause he valued his Life no more than the Judge did his Handkerchief. After the Conviction of many of them, they were Executed, some at York, some at Leeds, and others in other Places. They had retained a Printer in London to print for them a sort of Declaration or Call to Rebellion, wherein were these Words; If there be any City, Town or County in the three Nations that will begin this righteous and glorious Work, they may be assured, &c. The Printer being found Guilty was drawn, hang'd and quarter'd: And another Printer, Bookseller and Bookbinder were on the same occasion condemn'd to the Pillory, with their Offence expressed in these Words: For selling and uttering Malicious, Scandalous and Seditious Books, against the King, the State and Peace of the Kingdom.

Insolence of these Traitors.

In the Long Vacation, his Majesty, to divert himself, and to please his People, resolved upon a Progress, and a Visit to the Bath, setting out with 1663. 15 Car. II. the Queen on Aug. 26. and returning to Whitehall Octob. 2. after many ſplendid Entertainments given at Newberry by Sir Thomas Doleman, at Marlborough by the Lord Seymour, at Long-Leet by Sir James Thynne, at Badminton by the Marquis of Worceſter, at Cornbury by the Lord Chancellour Hide, and at Oxford by the Univerſity.

The Parliament, according to Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter on March 16. and their Proceedings will fall in with the following Year.

Death of Abp. Juxon. Dr. William Juxon, Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, died in his Palace of Lambeth on June 4. and was interred in the Chapel of St. John's College in Oxford, to which he was a great Benefactor. His beſt Character was that which his Royal Maſter King Charles I. gave him, that Good Man.

Succeſſion of Dr. Sheldon. Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, Lord Biſhop of London, who (by reaſon of the good Archbiſhop's Age and Infirmities) had manag'd the Affairs of the whole Province ever ſince the King's Return, was now tranſlated to the See of Canterbury with great Solemnity and general Satisfaction. The See of London was filled with Dr. Humphry Henchman, tranſlated from Sarum, a Man of popular Gravity and Temper; and of a Judgment and Wiſdom ſo agreeable to his Aſpect, that he was ſworn one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on Dec. 9.

Death of Archbiſh. Bramhal. Near the ſame time with Archbiſhop Juxon, died another Primate Dr. John Bramhal, Archbiſhop of Armagh, who had gone over into Ireland as Chaplain to the Lord Deputy, the Earl of Strafford; and being there highly ſerviceable to the King and the Church, had been juſtly promoted to the See of Londonderry, and after a long Exile with the King, was, at the Reſtoration, deſervedly advanc'd to the chief See and Primacy of Ireland.

Diſpoſition of the chief Diſſenters. The Church of England was now ſo firmly by Law eſtabliſh'd, that there could have been nothing wanting toward Peace and Conformity, but a ſteady Execution of the Laws, and ſome tender Regard to the ejected Miniſters, who were many of them Men of Piety and Moderation, and did not pretend that the Church Communion was unlawful as to Lay Communion, tho' they thought the Terms of Miniſterial Conformity too hard for them; and therefore after the Exerciſe of their Miniſtry in ſome private Meetings, they uſually came to the publick Offices in their Pariſh-Church, and join'd with the Prieſt and Congregation, not only in Prayers, but in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: ſo beginning the Example of Occaſional Conformity, not for Intereſt, or with any ſecular Intention, but to all appearance for Charity and Brotherly-love. So that at this Juncture, had the State been true to the Laws, and the Church been indulgent to the ejected Miniſters; there muſt have been a general Unity and Peace. It was certainly the Strength of Popery that now chiefly made the Separation of Proteſtants from the Church of England: The Papiſts laboured for a Liberty, which they knew not how to enjoy without a common Relaxation of the Laws againſt all other Diſſenters. It was purely this Deſign, that put the King upon his Declaration on Decemb. 26. 1662. expreſſing his purpoſe to grant ſome Indulgence or Liberty in Religion, not excluding the Papiſts; Many of whom (he ſaid) had deſerved ſo well of him. The Intent of this Declaration was ſo apparently in favour of Popery, that the Proteſtant Diſſenters did but ſuffer by it in their Intereſt and Credit: for, they were ready to catch at any Offer of Liberty and Eaſe, without ſtaying to conſider the Regularity and Validity of the Grant, or the indirect End and Deſign of that Favour to them. This made the Parliament more jealous of them, as now made inſtrumental to Popery and Arbitrary Power; and therefore the Houſe of Commons made their Votes and their Addreſs againſt all ſuch Royal Indulgence, and forc'd the King to retract all Thoughts of it. This made the Biſhops and Clergy more averſe to them, when they ſaw them now capable of becoming the Tools and Engines of the Church of Rome. Nay and this, in the conſequence, made the King and his Court more deſpiſe them, when they were found too weak to defend their own Project of Liberty againſt the Body of the Parliament, and the Weight of the Nation. It may be moſt impartial to repreſent the preſent Caſe of the Diſſenters from one of their own Advocates, who tells us, that after the King's Declaration of Indulgence on Decemb. 26. " Some of the Nonconformiſts were here- " upon much encourag'd, and waiting privately on " the King, were fill'd with Hopes: They would " have perſwaded their Brethren to have thank'd " the King for his Declaration; but they refus'd, " leſt they ſhould make way for the Toleration of " the Papiſts. The Declaration took not at all either with Parliament or People: and ſo the poor " Nonconformiſts were expos'd to great Severities. " They who at the King's coming in were ſo much " careſs'd, were now treated with the utmoſt Contempt. —— About the middle of this Summer, " there was a freſh Diſcourſe raiſed of Liberty deſign'd for the ſilenc'd Miniſters. They were blamed by many for not Petitioning the Parliament, " tho' they had reaſon enough againſt it. Many " Members of Parliament encouraged the Expectation of either an Indulgence, or a Comprehenſion. " And it was thereupon warmly debated, which of " the two would be the more deſirable. Some were " for Petitioning for a General Indulgence, thus " arguing with their Brethren: You are blind, if you " ſee not that the Act of Uniformity was made ſo rigorous, and the Weight of Conformity ſo much increas'd, " that ſo the Number of the ejected Miniſters might be " ſo great, as to force them to be glad of a general " Toleration, which might take in the Papiſts. And if " you think to ſtand it out, they will yet bring you to it " in deſpight of you: They will increaſe your Burdens, " and lay you in Priſons till you are glad to Petition for " ſuch a Toleration. And ſtand it out as long as you " can, you ſhall be forc'd to procure the Papiſts Liberty; " and the Odium of it ſhall not lie on the Biſhops, but " on you that are ſo much againſt it. The Biſhops ſhall " ſpeak againſt it, and they will force you to beg for it " who are againſt it. And if you will not do it now, " you do but ſtay till the Market riſe, and your Suffer- " ings be made greater, and you ſhall be glad to do it at " dearer Rates. To whom others reply'd, that they " would ſuffer any thing rather than promote Po- " pery.

Account given by Mr. Calamy.

" Mr. Baxter was about this time conſulted by a " Perſon of Honour concerning the matter ſo much " talk'd of; he preſs'd him to give him his Judg- " ment whether the way of Indulgence or Compre- " henſion was more deſirable. He freely gave him " his Thoughts to this purpoſe: That he was not " for Comprehenſion without Indulgence, nor for " Indulgence without the Enlargement of the Act " of Uniformity to a greater Comprehenſion; but " for the conjunction of both. He was not for Com- " prehenſion alone, becauſe when they had gone the " fartheſt many worthy Perſons, whoſe Gifts in the " Church might be very uſeful, would be ſtill left " out; and there would be much want when all " were employ'd; and the Loſs by their being ut- " terly ſilenc'd would redound to the Souls of ma- " ny. He was not for Indulgence alone, unleſs the " Law were made more Comprehenſive; becauſe " the Impoſitions and Reſtrictions of the Law were " really unaccountable; becauſe nothing can be " more deſirable than the Strength and Unity of " the eſtabliſh'd Body of the Clergy; and becauſe " a bare Indulgence would be apt to occaſion ſuch " Jealouſies and Animoſities as that it would not " be long enjoy'd in Peace: And therefore he de- " clared, that he was for a Comprehenſion of as " many fit Perſons as might be taken in by Law, " and then a Power reſerv'd to his Majeſty to in- " dulge the Remnant as far as might be conducible " to the Peace and Benefit of Church and State.
